Imagination, Memory, and Mythology of the 20th Century

It all started with a question: How would we write a mythology for our time? We began with the recent past—the 20th century—and the paintings of Marc Chagall.

We encountered a brutal and chaotic century, one in which cataclysm and destruction branded the times. This is how we chose to walk alongside Chagall. For the better part of the 20th century, he chose the flight of the imagination, folk tradition, and the collision of dreams as his portal of memory, as a means of passage through the war and revolution and exile that he painted.

In Chagall, the bride flies over the ravaged village, the rooster and cow play their cellos, and masses of people flee or dance. As we confronted the extreme conflicts of the century, we understood that vivid imagination must be at the crux of building a mythology for our time. How do we dream, how do we dance, how do we invent, and how do we love? For Chagall, “color is love”—what is it for us?

Memory, as an essential component of our lives, seems to have faded. We cling to a limited sense of reality (whether “reality TV” or mundane materialism) and have exiled memory and imagination. Dreams are things of the past, beauty is seen from the media’s vantage point, quiet is drowned out by insistent sound and the seduction of belongings. We lose ourselves amid accumulating piles of bodies and trash.

How, then, will we write our future? We offer intimacy and the sounds and dances and inventions of history, the beauty of flight, the choice of a forgotten world of dreams. The dialogue with the future is simple yet profound—a choice between destruction and creation.

—Stacy Klein, Artistic Director, Double Edge Theatre
The Grand Parade depicts major events of the 20th century in a theatrical style inspired by Chagall’s kaleidoscopic vision of humanity at play, at war, and at rest. Trapeze, circus, dance, projections, and popular culture fill the height and breadth of the stage in a spectacle of history populated by people and animals in acts of grace and destruction. Time both shrinks and expands as the 20th century unfolds in a dreamlike rush of juxtapositions that include the ecstasy of landing on the moon, the frenzy of war, the skilled escapes of Houdini, the atomic bomb, Kennedy’s assassination, the AIDS epidemic, and Hitler’s brutalization of Europe, among others. The Grand Parade is about individual and collective experience of a period of history in which people developed knowledge that produced both great development and massive destruction. It is a work of memory, memorial, and celebration that shows us to ourselves and makes us consider where we are now by examining where we have come from.

—Carol Martin, Professor of Drama, NYU Tisch School of the Arts

About the Company

Double Edge Theatre, an artist-owned organization, was founded in 1982 by Stacy Klein. The company applies vigorous physical training and the principle of an artist’s autonomy to create work in an ensemble setting intimately woven with the community. The Double Edge ensemble creates performance cycles that tour internationally, including The Women’s Cycle, The Song Trilogy, and The Garden of Intimacy and Desire. The Chagall Cycle, which includes The Odyssey, Shahrazad, and The Grand Parade, responds to the life, work, and indomitable imagination of Russian-Jewish artist Marc Chagall while engaging with international collaborators in music, design, and dramaturgy. In 1994, Double Edge moved from Boston to a 105-acre former dairy farm in rural Ashfield, MA, to create a sustainable artistic home. Today, the Farm is an International Center of Living Culture, a base for the ensemble’s extensive international touring, with year-round theater training, conversations and convenings, greening and farming initiatives, and a popular indoor-outdoor traveling spectacle that takes place alongside the hills, pastures, river, and gardens of the Center. The 2016 Summer Spectacle is the Latin American–based Once a Blue Moon (Cada Luna Azul).

About the Artists

Stacy Klein (Conception/Designer/Director) is Double Edge’s artistic director. She founded the company in 1982, in Boston, and moved the theater and her family to the Farm in 1994. Klein’s two current projects, The Grand Parade and the Once a Blue Moon Spectacle (and its touring version), are at the forefront of her creative vision. Klein was mentored by Rena Mirecka and has a PhD in Theory and Criticism. In 2013, she received the Doris Duke Performing Artist Award recognizing exemplary artists in the field. She is currently writing her first book.

Carlos Uriona (Performer) is co-artistic director of Double Edge and has been with the company since 1996. He is ensemble leader, actors’ coach, and trainer. Some of his favorite roles with Double Edge are the Stranger in Once a Blue Moon, Don Quixote in the UnPOSSESSED, and Odysseus in The Odyssey. Uriona is from Argentina and, in 1985, he co-founded Grupo de Teatro Diablomundo, a puppet theater in Buenos Aires that was recognized as one of “The Ten Most Important Argentine Theaters of the 20th Century” by the Association of Argentinean Critics.

Matthew Glassman (Performer) is co-artistic director of Double Edge and has been with the ensemble since 2000. He created the roles of Sancho Panza and Bruno Schulz and is a writer (Shahrazad and Once a Blue Moon) and director (Total Verruckt! and The Oven). He serves on the advisory council of HowlRound, initiated the National Rural Arts & Culture Working Group, and served as a grant panelist for the National Endowment for the Arts.

Hayley Brown (Performer) has been with Double Edge since 2003, creating roles in both company and summer spectacle performances. She completed the Intensive Program at the New England Center for Circus Arts, with a focus on aerial fabric and duo trapeze. She is a native of Western Massachusetts.

Jeremy Louise Eaton (Performer) is associate director at Double Edge and has been with the ensemble since 2004. She has developed numerous roles with the company, including Nimue in Magician of Avalon, Shahrazad, and Bella Chagall in The Grand Parade. Adam Bright (Performer/Technical Design and Direction) is co-producer at Double Edge and has been with the ensemble since 2005. Originally from Kent, England, Bright received his Honors BA at University of Hull and worked with the National Youth Theatre of England and the Stephen Joseph Theatre. He is an actor, rigger, set builder, and project director for all major performance projects at Double Edge.

Milena Dabova (Performer/Dance Coach) has been with the ensemble since 2009 and is also the company’s marketing director. She has a special interest in dance and researches and choreographs Double Edge’s performances, including The Grand Parade and Shahrazad. Dabova was born and raised in Plovdiv, Bulgaria, and holds a BA summa cum laude in Theater and Dance and Psychology from Amherst College.

Alexander Bakshi (Composer) is a laureate of the Russian State Prize. Bakshi’s music has been performed in major concert halls and festivals in Europe and America. He has written music for over 50 dramatic productions.

Brian Fairley (Sound and Projection Design/Musician/Dramaturg) is a musician, director, and dramaturg who has worked with Double Edge since 2006. She has staged a dozen musical-theatrical productions in Russia, Poland, China, and the US. In her work, musical forms are transformed into dramatic scenes in which musicians and actors become sound characters acting in a theatrical environment that is brought to life by the interaction of sound, space, and images.

Beckie Kravetz (Mask Design) studied mask making at the Yale School of Drama and trained with master craftsmen in Italy, Guatemala, and Spain. Her masks have been seen in theater, film, galleries, and museums across the country. From 1984 to 2006 she was resident mask maker and principal makeup artist at the Los Angeles Opera.
