Information Society

By Roberts Koeuhl

According to its constitution, "separating fact from opinion" is one of the primary purposes of the Information Research Society (IRS). This group, which recently received an SGA charter, plans "to function as an objective, independent information service."

This group's membership is limited to 20 students. New members must have a 2.5 cumulative average. The IRS is being composed by a president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer. New members will be introduced by a present member, must appear before the IRS Executive Board for a personal interview at a regular meeting and must receive a three-fourth majority vote of the general membership.

As it reports topics of interest to MSC students, the IRS intends "to research, correlate and disseminate information through research and publication." (Continued on Page 8)

SDS’ Mark Rudd Lectures Tonight

Mark Rudd, former chairman of Columbia University’s Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) will appear tonight at MSC. Rudd led the controversial student strike at Columbia in April and May 1968.

Rudd will be introduced by SGA president Robert Martinez at 8 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium. He will begin his program by showing a film which will inform the audience of the strike. Covered in the film will be views of the buildings which were taken over and the communal life that was established by the striking students in May. The film has been produced and released by "Newsreel," an agency which produces and distributes material about today’s radical groups.

Rudd’s Lecture Free

Rudd will be the first lecturer invited by the Parties Committee branch of the Council of International and National Affairs (CINA). Neither Mark Rudd nor CINA will be gaining monetary value from this lecture (Continued on Page 2)

Webster Adopts Closed Door Plan

For Women Guests

The men of Webster Hall voted to allow women guests in their rooms on a closed door basis on weekends. During the voting, which occurred on Dec. 5, two other proposals which would have restricted the approved closed door policy were soundly defeated. The new policy states that men must "serve" women guests on Fridays and Saturdays from 4:30 p.m. until 12 a.m. On Sundays girls are permitted entry "he hopes the new policy can bring women into their rooms" (Continued on Page 2)

Continent State College President Robert Heussler stated that he and three other presidents have formed an alliance in an effort to get more power for the six state colleges.

The 44-year-old educator said Thomas H. Richardson of Montclair State, James Olsen of Rutgers and James Mullen of Jersey City are the college presidents supporting his stand.

Both Olsen and Mullen are in their first year as presidents of their respective institutions.

Heussler said he plans to meet soon with legislative leaders in an opening move to win passage of a bill giving the colleges the kind of fiscal autonomy now enjoyed by Rutgers.

Wants Resolution Adopted

Heussler said he was prepared to ask the Council of State Colleges, composed of the presidents and chairmen of individual college boards of trustees, to adopt a resolution declaring the state colleges are more capable of running their own affairs than the Department of Higher Education.

Essentially, what Heussler and the three other presidents are seeking is the authority to draw up and administer their own budgets, purchases and appoint their own architects and engineers for construction projects.

Rothman Becomes Third Dining Services Head

By Donna McKee

Seymour Rothman was recently named director of dining services at Montclair State College. The former assistant director becomes the third cafeteria director named this year to head the ABC Gladieux Service.

This turnover in management now places the responsibility for feeding MSC's student body on a man who has been in the food business for the last 28 years. During this time, Rothman has managed several cafeterias and restaurants. He owned and operated four restaurants in Florida.

"The largest difference," according to Rothman, "between restaurants or cafeteria management and campus food service is the necessary lack of variety." Rothman was referring to the limited menu which offers only two main choices at each meal.

Before entering the food service profession, Rothman attended New York University where he majored in business administration.

He also served in the U.S. Army from 1943-46 and received a Presidential citation. Rothman is the former food production manager of the American Retailing Association at MSC.

Information Center Formed To Coordinate Student Help

A Community Services Information Center has been established at MSC to coordinate requests for volunteer and paid student help. Under the auspices of the Student Personnel Division, the center will be directed by Curtis Jackson, a counselor in the division.

Mr. Jackson will be in contact with local communities and will post information about job opportunities and requests for services on a bulletin board in College Hall, the administration building.

Better Public Relations

"We feel very strongly the need for our students to become involved with surrounding communities," he said. "We hope that this center will provide the opportunity to build solid public relations between the college and the communities it serves."

Requests for student services have already been received: one from Kean Public Schools for counselors for an elementary school camping experience; one from East Orange for tutors to work with a VISTA program; one from Paterson for volunteer teachers for a Community Action Agency adult basic education program and one from Bureau of Children's Services in Paterson for a student to drive a child from the agency to the college for speech therapy.

All interested students should contact Mr. Jackson in the Student Personnel Division, Room 215 B, College Hall, 746-9500, extension 223.

'Quarterly'

According to newly-elected editor Ron Mucci, QUARTERLY will continue to search for new writers on the MSC campus and will publish more unpublished writers. Throughout the year, QUARTERLY will commission certain students to write special material for the magazine. Also, QUARTERLY intends to expand from its usual format, consisting mainly of poetry, and publish short stories, critiques, drama and other genres of literary work.

Are You Interested In a Psych Major?

By CHRIS MAC MURRAY

The MONTCLARI OUT is running a poll to ascertain the number of upperclassmen at Montclair State College who would like to major in the field of psychology.

Dr. Daniel Brower, head of the psychology department, has indicated that if enough students make known their desire to major in psychology, more professors will be procured to teach psychology courses in order to provide for such students. However, such a desire must be communicated to the administration.

According to Dr. Brower, the psychology department can be expanded in two ways: by state appropriation, and by a redistribution of professors. The latter involves taking teachers out of one department and putting them in another, thus expanding the department whose courses are in demand by the students.

Please indicate your desire to major in psychology by filling out this coupon and returning it to the MONTCLARI OUT office.

Student Choice of Professors

By Chris MacMurray

The question of MSC students having choice of professor for their classes has been a topic of conversation on campus for quite some time. Mr. Robert Foley, associate registrar, has offered his opinions concerning this possible future facet of registration.

Mr. Foley has met with an SGA committee twice to discuss the new possibility. This committee is composed of students Stefanik and Rosanne Bostonian. Any student assistance is welcomed by this committee.

According to Mr. Foley, few colleges the size of MSC have student choice of professor. "Students talk about this or that registration at these particular schools, but it is not free choice at all," Mr. Foley added. "This is true of Rutgers. Regardless of what the MSC students have in mind, they do not have complete control over their registration."

However, Mr. Foley put it, "If 80 students sign up for a class that holds 30 people, 50 students would have to be relocated." Obviously, free choice registration carries its disadvantages just as every system of registration does. Should the students voice their desire for free registration, then the registration office will start working toward this goal. However, many problems would arise.

Registration is like an iceberg," asserted Mr. Foley. The students are one-tenth of it. The other nine-tenths are happening all year long but the students are essentially unaware of this. They are predominantly concerned with their own immediate needs."

No 'Utopian' Registration

Mr. Foley also affirmed that there are 4,400 students and 300 faculty members to satisfy. A "utopian" registration is virtually impossible. "Registration with free choice of time and professor would be ideal. Upon word from the administration, we would start to work on a plan including free choice. But the students must realize that there would be endless problems to resolve and this would take time." Mr. Foley concluded by adding that registration procedures are formulated so as to cause a minimum amount of inconvenience to the entire college. "Our minds are open to any suggestion that will improve the present registration."

The first step towards the institution of a free choice registration is to determine whether or not a majority of students really want it. For this purpose, the MONTCLARION is taking a poll in this issue to elicit student opinion concerning this subject.

I feel that free choice of professor during registration would benefit MSC. Yes; No; I PREFER: choice of professor (check one).

One Cut Per Credit

The general opinion of those faculty members interviewed was "one cut per credit." This is up to the individual departments.

Mr. Robert Foley

An SGA cut policy review committee is trying to discover the amount of college support for a free cut system.

The purpose of the committee is to set up a standard cut policy but to determine if there is a need for one and what type of policy both students and faculty would agree upon. They have planned to distribute questionnaires, one for students, the other for faculty, to determine the college opinion concerning a cut policy.

The questions hope to discover what the college believes the present cut policy is, if any; if professors subscribe to one "policy" over another; what students believe to be a fair policy, and if instructors considered class attendance important in their grading systems.

The questionnaires will be distributed by SGA members in the near future.

Career Conference for Seniors

By Don Pendley

The Student Teaching and Placement Office, until recently mainly concerned with placing new teachers, has learned of a series of Career Opportunity Conferences to be held in nearby communities during Christmas week.

These conferences are sponsored by the local and national Chambers of Commerce in an effort to keep college graduates in their local communities by offering them job opportunities.

According to Mr. Norman E. Lange, director of the Student Teaching and Placement Office, approximately four per cent of the 1968 MSC graduating class took jobs in private industry, and he expects this number to increase. For this reason the Student Teaching and Placement Office must be prepared to assist students in obtaining jobs in industry.

At the conferences, any senior in college may attend and be interviewed for job placement in any of the numerous companies that attend the conference. These conferences are to be held in Newark, Morristown and Saddle Brook on Dec. 26 and 27. In Plainfield on Dec. 27 and 28 at the Hotel Commodore, and 28 at the Hotel Commodore in New York City. To be held in New York City, the students must register in advance. The conferences hope to discover any suggestions that will improve the present cut registration system.

The purpose of the committee is not to set up a standard cut policy but to determine if there is a need for one and what type of policy both students and faculty would agree upon. They have planned to distribute questionnaires, one for students, the other for faculty, to determine the college opinion concerning a cut policy.

The questions hope to discover what the college believes the present cut policy is, if any; if professors subscribe to one "policy" over another; what students believe to be a fair policy, and if instructors considered class attendance important in their grading systems.

The questionnaires will be distributed by SGA members in the near future.

Mr. Richard Taubald, director of men's housing, is now in the process of officially finalizing the policy by checking on the legal aspects involved in the dorm rule changes. Outside: it's softer and silky (not cardboard). Inside: it's so extra absorbent...it even protects on your first day. Your worst day! In every lab test against the old cardboard kind... the Playtex tampon was always more absorbent. It actually held more than the average than the leading regular tampon.

Because it's different. Actually adjusts to you. It flowers out. Fluff's out. Designed to protect every inside inch of you. So the chance of a mishap is almost zero!

The State of the Montclarion

Present:
Every year as the change in editorial board positions become effective, it is customary that the outgoing editor-in-chief give a report of the present state of the newspaper, and therefore, the purpose of this editorial address.

The past year has definitely been a progressive one in the history of the MONTCLARION. Not only have we expanded the number of staff members, but also the caliber of our journalistic attempts, to quote a recent "Letter to the Editor." We have become a topic of conversation everywhere from cafeteria tables to fraternity meetings to administrative council meetings. People await the MONTCLARION's arrival eagerly - what they do with it after its arrival is an individual matter. We have also received so many "Letters to the Editor" - another indication of reader interest.

However, these are not reasons to arrest progress; on the contrary, increased readership requires more innovative techniques to continue support for the newspaper. The MONTCLARION will continue to provide a comprehensive and reliable account of campus developments with special features on local and national issues; of this, I am confident.

With best wishes for the future success of the newspaper and my special thanks to all individuals for their cooperation in the past, I congratulate the new editors and remind them of this progress.

Sincerely,
Janet Caruso
MONTCLARION editor-in-chief, 1968

Future:
Just 40 years ago this month the MONTCLARION began publication. Today the MONTCLARION is moving; it is progressing and expanding. In 1968 we have become a 12-page weekly newspaper considered the best publication of the state colleges.

The weekly publication is perhaps the most important level the MONTCLARION has achieved. We hope to continue in this direction, perhaps publishing twice a week, before the coming year. With adequate funds and facilities, including a new office, we may be able to do this.

The MONTCLARION will endeavor to continue to be an effective media for campus communication. As always we strive for objective coverage in campus and local news.

Commentary

An Information Research Society has been organized for the purpose of "functioning as an objective, independent information service providing the student body of Montclair State College with extensive information concerning current issues of interest to the campus."

The MONTCLARION welcomes this service to the student body.

The objectivity of the SGA has allowed the Information Research Society to receive a class II charter. However, this new organization has not been objective in its requirements for membership. If this group is a public information society student body, the MONTCLARION will have to take a "sit" anyway. Please be assured that he did not say, "...I have to take a shit anyway." If this incident of pledge class antics is indicative of the "individual characteristics" of Agora members, they would be wise to choose their individuals with greater care.

And that the "men" of Agora do many things that infringe upon the rights of the mature students of Montclair State College.

WHAT CAUSES STUDENTS TO REVOlT? by Michael Henney Features Staff Reporter The air was crisp and clean and the sun was peering from behind its cumulus friend. There were students who wore hornrimmed glasses, button-down collar shirts and levis while other were wearing bell-bottoms and shoulder length hair. The atmosphere appeared very relaxed as they walked on discussing themselves, others and society.

The causes of violent revolt are both psychological and social. The social milieu apparently affects the individual's perception of himself, others and society because we often hear a statement like, "He looks like a typical...." because we often hear a statement like, "He looks like a typical...." because we often hear a statement like, "He looks like a typical...." because we often hear a statement like, "He looks like a typical...."

Too many of the rebels," he says, "are member of the first category - members of the 'spoiled generation.' He feels that this indifference to consequences is a direct result of a lack of discipline training.

However, the difficulty of accepting authority is not the only factor. "The period of adolescence," Dr. Gelfond said, "has been extended. They don't usually have to work to help out the family and this relieves them of responsibility. They have reached mental and physical maturity but, after placing them in a sex-stimulated culture, we tell them they're not ready.

As society increases in complexity there seems to come with it an increase in confusion. Great technological advances have caused a shift in values, attitudes and spiritual commitment. Perhaps, Dr. Gelfond sugests, the real revolt is a philosophical one: What is the purpose of man's existence and is it worth the pain?

NEW YORK: A demonstrator is hustled away by plainclothes detectives after police flushed 150 rebel students from a barricaded building at Columbia University early May 22 and then swept across the campus, forcibly clearing out 2,000 more students who milled about angrily denouncing the initial police action.

What happened to Columbia? by Jean Tait Features Staff Reporter

Student unrest on campuses throughout America has been undeniable attention getting during the year of 1968. The riots at Columbia were the most outstanding and long lasting compared to the demonstrations at New York University, University of Michigan and University of California at Berkeley and Santa Barbara.

The Columbia turmoil, scene of continual student dissatisfaction with their quite limited participation in the running of their school, started to boil when the students gave massive support to Harlem sympathizers protesting the building of a gymnasium on the Morningside Park site at the lower end of the campus. The Columbia SDS, headed by Mark Rudd, agitated and a crisis ensued when 720 students seized four buildings plus the office of president Grayson Kirk.

After five days of deliberation, Kirk finally submitted to calling the police. One thousand policemen came in and all 720 students were arrested.

The students won their cause, of continual student dissatisfaction with their quite limited participation in the running of their school, started to boil when the students gave massive support to Harlem sympathizers protesting the building of a gymnasiu
Death of the fuhrer

In my initial column I stated that MSC need fear no Mark Rudd. I would like to add that Montclarians in general need not fear Richard Insley. This columnist is appearing for the last time as a student at Montclair State school is dead, expectedly after a long illness—quite dead. No one wants to destroy this school (sorry, facists) because there simply isn't anything here worth destroying. Not a damn thing.

If Montclarians isn't about to allow the world to affect the campus (and it isn't) it becomes irane to remain here.

One of the problems in being openminded is the necessity to stop doing things when there is sufficient evidence to the contrary. The first course of action. Hence, now that I have become convinced that my continued enrollment at this school will do nothing to further my interests or development, I am forced to leave. It would be too easy to say that I have already meant this long here and I might as well finish. The fact that I have wasted this much time is the worst possible argument to waste more.

"Little Boxes"

It is not possible to keep people from being forced into the "little boxes" which society has prepared for them by allowing them to participate in one of these boxes. Revolution is not going to be easily accomplished and it will take force to bring about these changes. It must be done by example. Beliefs are only valid if one is willing to live them out and not just talk about them. This is what I intend to do.

If this be student power...

A few days ago South Vietnamese ambassodor Nguyen Huu Chi, about to address a New York University audience, was called "pig" and decorated with a Nazi flag by a mob of 200 students, SDS members.

Journalist James Reston cut short a speech at the University of Pennsylvania, the same mob of 200 students broke into NYU and took photographs of the body, yellow-oldestai, tore up Reston's notes and wrecked the meeting. Daan Martin Meade was held prisoner in his Fordham University office by six students; several members of the Society for African-American Advancements. Dr. Meade, 27, had a heart attack the next day.

Three spectators of student power reported in the Fri., Dec. 6 edition of the STAR-LEDGER. And while the same day.

Misnomer

Student power, as exemplified by these events coupled with riots at Columbia, Boston and Berkeley, is a misnomer. It's a euphemism for immaturity and gullibility on the part of students involved in militant organizations such as the SDS movement.

The techniques employed by this organization are likened to methods employed by a gangster, according to a recent editorial in the Clinton (Mo.) Daily Democrat.

"This leader is isolated from the Negro, the poor, the worker—intellectually and financially." SDS leaders are like "the bureaucrats...daintily walking into the slums, handkerchief over nose, handing out charity." The leaders, both men and women, wear the attire of the day, talk sex, play guitars and use four-letter words. Their ambition is to incite their gullible followers, the back their gang and move on.

In short, these leaders are playing the game of revolution—their game as long as they don't get hurt.

Case Test

Card (A) was unfortunately the test case for SDS. And while matters at Columbia were quite complex, the significant reason for student rioting was an administration isolated from present-day educational needs. Hence, concessions had to be made.

But back in 1966, members of a 35-man seized administrative offices at the University of Chicago. Five days passed, students remained and the administration merely punished the ringleaders—no concession were granted.

Reevaluation

In all, 1968 proved the need for a reevaluation of American education. Organizations such as the SDS seize upon issues which lead to anesthetized destruction. If education can be revived to meet the needs of a changing social structure, militancy may be eliminated. And Montclarians is proving it now.

$q$ for Montclair

Take 4,500 college students with money and put a town nearby. What do you have? A multi-million dollar contribution to local business by MSC students. Start with the 10 dollars a week paid by the estimated 1,000 MSC of-campus students for the 32 weeks of the college calendar. Total $320,000 directly paid by MSC students to their landlords. This money is then spent by the landlords in Montclair.

Then, consider the purchases made by the dormitory, off-campus students. 1,000 students in this area. The purchases vary from supplies to furniture to car payments. Add to this the amount spent in such eateries as Bond's, Louvis', etc.

According to Mr. Vincent Calabrese, the total is estimable. However, it is safe to say at least $5 million spent by the landlords in Montclair.

Student power the issue at Upsala

by Gary P. Novoseliski

Student power became an immediate issue on the campus of Upsala College. A group of 200 students gathered before the steps of Kenbrook Hall in a "unified student action." The demonstration began at 10 a.m. on Wed., Dec. 11, and continued throughout the week as the students stood in the cold outside the offices of Dean Perkins while he made his rounds.

The Senate has passed a resolution the day before, protesting the failure of the administration to renew the contract of Mr. Daniel Goldman of the Upsala psychology department. College officials announced that this action had been taken for "economic reasons" accompanying recent curriculum changes. Mr. Goldman said, "I was the first of what I thought would be a series of faculty cutbacks."

The students felt that this indicates a questionable set of economic priorities, or that they are supporting three proposals made to the administration: that the various department heads be forced to hold meetings with the students to discuss the changes in depth, that the Student Senate be given an itemized budget of the college, since the students furnish 87 percent of the support of the college and that the college suspend no professors at this time.

I would be Leonard Biersten, one of the leaders of the student action, was pleased with the turnout, and with the fact the police force was not a problem circulated among the students, which received 750 signatures. "This shows excellent support, considering that 50 percent of our students are commuters."

The sun dropped lower, and one incident of violence had occurred. Biersten said, "I have nothing but praise for the campus security police." No uniformed policemen were visible.

Director of Security Edward Leuchs returned the compliment, saying, "We expect no trouble. There are really respectable people here.

Results began to be seen late in the day when the announcement was made that the second proposals had been approved. The crowd cheered, and economic priorities, and are considering that their efforts at song, though their fingers were numb. At this writing, the students propose indefinite strike. The proposal is still in doubt but the vigil will continue.

Compromise is not likely.

Study finds history books 'misleading,' 'distorted'

What do professional historians think of the treatment minority groups receive in standard history textbooks? They're "sharply critical, even to the point of condemnation." The textbooks "idealize the past," are "historically inaccurate," and "fail to communicate any real enthusiasm for a single Negro in the century and the last 350 years of the American past."

One of the historians reports "shockingly casual" references to events in his history — the establishment of slavery in the English colonies. Another complains: "In the few paragraphs describing slavery, the student never learns that slaves were bought and sold like cattle, that they often suffered corporal punishment. Three paragraphs on Harriet Tubman and Frederick Douglass show that at least these two opposed slavery, but one wonders what it was they objected to."

One text cites Negro spirituals as "to illustrate one of the happier aspects of plantation life," complains one historian. Another text describes slaves as "shouting and singing at work." Comments one professor: "That they may be shouting with pain is not noted."

A recurring complaint is that the texts avoid anything controversial. Also largely ignored is "the shabby treatment" given to many groups of immigrants in the century and the last.

SDS member James Rotonda, MSC sophomore, voices his anti-Vietnam opinion to two Marine recruiters on campus last week. Crowds soon gathered to join in.

School's end may be near.

by Martin J. Fucio
Staff Reporter

College High, which has been in existence at Montclair State since 1929, may be in danger of ending. A movement to discuss the closing was reported at an open meeting of the Montclair State Board of Trustees on April 8. Those who favor closing the school, which was originally started as an "observation" school for future teachers, feel that College High no longer fulfills that purpose.

Those who want to keep the school feel that, for all its weaknesses, College High can still be an effective part of the College.

"Not typical"

William Cuff of the education Department, while not openly favoring a closing, feels that College High is "not a typical high school scene for our students to view." He cited the small number of College High students at each grade level, while a typical high school may have over 100. Mr. Cuff also pointed out that the school has a limited amount of course offerings. Only college prep courses are offered. There are no business or industrial arts curriculums. College High students, especially in the upper grades, were selected, which is another typical aspect of the school. Finally, College High students leave the building for other parts of the campus, and college students enter the building. This situation is not found in any regular high school.

Paul Clifford, chairman of the Math department, feels that College High is important to traditional college courses such as mathematics and English. The mathematics department has six professors teaching in College High. College juniors and seniors observe these classes, which are taught by the same professors who teach junior and senior methods courses. In a sense, team teaching takes place. The college students, working with their professors, are able to observe and work on lesson plans. Each student is able to teach a class for 15 minutes at least once. Mr. Clifford stated that without College High it would be difficult to have the methods courses "as realistic as they are."

Strong feelings

Both Mr. Cuff and Mr. Clifford spoke at the June 8 meeting. Although Dr. Harold C. Bohn, chairman of the English department, was not at the meeting, he does have very strong feelings about College High. Dr. Bohn feels that the school should not only be continued, but expanded. Dr. Bohn challenged the view that College High's students are exceptionally bright.

Decision by end of year.

College High has been considered for closing since 1952. In 1964 a closing was narrowly averted by the strong protest of parents, College High alumni, and instructors.

Dr. Ann Castens, director of College High, states that students at the school are taught to become self-motivated. Students have to give oral and written reports which require in-depth research. This policy starts in grade seven.

Dr. Castens declined to comment on her views on the proposed closing until the board of trustees had announced a decision.

The board of trustees of Montclair State is now collecting information on College High. A decision will be made before the end of the current school year.

Dr. W. Lincoln Hawkins, chairman of the board, states that one factor being considered is how well College High will fit into MSC's expanded budget. However, this is not the primary factor. "A decision that is reached will be based on the current role of College High in Montclair State College's program," states Dr. Hawkins.

TIRED? Here’s how to fight it

New ways to solve an old problem: fatigue, keep coming to the fore.

Foods that fill you up, but don’t nourish you properly, are one cause of many people feeling tired. But from breakfast foods to snacks at a bedtime snack, a variety of new foods – if you look for them – can help you avoid nutritionally caused fatigue.

It’s even less costly, and surprisingly effective, to follow a strange-sounding piece of advice offered by authorities: breathe enough! Oddly, many people don’t. They close their eyes when they have to work or are trying to relax. The lungs, they feel, get enough oxygen, then they wonder why they are so tired!

Controlling your weight, sleep habits and even your room color may be effective fatigue fighters.

The importance of foods in avoiding fatigue were illustrated by Dr. Albert Spare, director of school planning at Montreal General Hospital. He found that sugars appear in the blood stream in as little as two minutes after they are eaten. Because a rise in the blood sugar level is a condition widely associated with freedom from fatigue, a mid-afternoon sweet is valuable for many a good people.

So are vitamin loaded cereals, many of which are at least as tasty as other kinds. Some kinds of spaghetti and macaroni have extra protein, yet cost nothing extra. Want to lose calories without losing muscle? Try skim milk or powdered milk. The key word, in proper nutrition, is “try.”

Fatigue – fighters

Right at home, right now, you can resolve to take these additional fatigue-fighting measures.

Buy a bottle of vitamins—any brand is good—and take one every day. If you can’t sleep, remember that relaxing completely with your eyes closed is said to provide about 80% as much rest as you’d get if you were actually sleeping.

Sweets helpful

Remember that not only coffee and (to a lesser extent) tea contain caffeine, but also cola drinks – not the best choice for bedtime. If you must get rid of fatigue in a hurry, one of the quickest and surest ways is easy: take a cold shower. And go to your doctor at least once a year; not only may he spot a problem causing fatigue, but he may alternatively tell you you’re fine.

How’s your entertaining etiquette?

Do you panic at the mere idea of entertaining? Get stage fright waiting for those first guests to arrive? Chew your fingernails while trying to choose the right forks, spoons, knives, napkins, time schedules, fun-formulas and go-well-together guests?

Throw away the aspirin and relax. These timely tips from entertaining expert Charlotte Adams can solve your party problems and help you become the “hostess with the mostest” whether your next gathering is a backyard barbecue, a wedding breakfast, or that special dinner for the boss.

R.S.V.P. rapport

For any party other than a formal dinner, you can invite guests either via telephone or the mails—depending on which is more convenient.

Table setting tactics

Service plates, matching china and sterling silver once considered essential—are no longer required in today’s informal entertaining. Stainless steel, if it’s shining, and non-matching plates, when necessary, are good enough for any type of festivity, large or small. If you lack after-dinner coffee cups, don’t panic. Regular cups are acceptable as long as the brew’s first rate. But cloth—not paper—napkins are still a “must” for every table setting, except cocktails and outdoor parties.

Preventing the bomb

If nuclear bombs ever hit, millions of Americans will die from the explosion and radiation. Millicent would also survive, if fallout shelters were available. Some of those saved should be school children.

No building can protect its occupants if a bomb explodes nearby. But buildings can be built to provide protection from the gamma radiation that rains down in deadly fallout on areas untouched by the explosion.

Few schools have a really safe “protected core”—even the most modern. But this protection can be achieved at reasonable cost, says Dr. Edward A. Spare, the State Department of Education’s director of school planning services.

“Some architects and school boards have the mistaken idea that protecting schools from radiation would sharply increase construction costs,” he reports. “This is not the case when established safeguards are incorporated into the original school design. A high degree of safety can be achieved for a small percentage of the cost without restricting the school’s primary function.”

There are many inexpensive techniques. A pitched roof or special shielding in the ceiling reduces rooftop radiation. An overhanging roof cuts the amount of radiation falling close to the building, as does a downhill grade around the school. Glass offers little resistance to radiation but, conversely, a cinder-block wall filled with sand shields out huge amounts of radioactivity.

“It is comparatively easy to provide substantial fallout protection at minimum expense,” says Dr. Spare.

SMOKER’S SURVEY

A smoker’s habits survey will be conducted by the MONTCLARION for the purpose of comparison with both national and collegiate statistics. Forms will be available today through Friday at the Fishbowl and dorm desks. Smokers, non-smokers, and ex-smokers will be questioned on the habits of their present habitats.
Aspirations for Local Autonomy

The situation in the Oceanehill-Brownsville dispute has much interest for the student of education and the student of government. To control the intricacies of this dispute are complicated, but as you know, Montclair State College has both the personal visit and a detailed statement from both Mr. Shunker and Mr. Barratt. From that information or the inclination to comment here on who did what in the struggle, but I do want to react to what I believe is the basic philosophic question underlying the dispute.

Our society, because of a dramatic growth in population and technology, has become a complicated organization. The problems which have resulted from this growth are of such magnitude it is evident in large city and state governmental agencies. Having worked for a number of years for the New York City Board of Education, I am personally convinced that some type of decentralization in education, and indeed in other agencies, is essential if there is to be any real solution to the problems which have resulted from the bureaucracy of Livingston and New York City certainly does not have the best conditions, the City did not have serious economic and racial problems, the New York City Board of Education, I am personally convinced that some type of decentralization in education, and indeed in other agencies, is essential if there is to be any real solution to the problems which have resulted from the bureaucracy of Livingston and New York City certainly does not have the best conditions, the City did not have serious economic and racial problems, the

A state college will always have certain overall fiscal limitations and restrictions made necessary by the requirements of state-wide planning. But there are many decisions which, if made by the Trustees, faculty, and students at Montclair, would be superior to decisions made by agencies which are geographically and politically distant from the college. The maximum local autonomy for the institution, in my opinion, will produce the maximum in quality of education. Ultimately, what we do here at Montclair must be justified to the taxpayers of New York City by the result and whether in no sense recommend a lessening of fiscal responsibility or educational validity in our activities. What I am suggesting is that there is a time in the growth of public agencies when quality is improved by having decisions made closer to the actual process which the agency (in this case Montclair State College) is set up to perform.

'Extra Library Hours Not Needed'

To the Editor:

In a recent editorial the MONTCLARION urged that the library be open to the students for a greater number of hours. There are several problems involved, but the most important is personnel. Some librarians are working 12 hours a day. It has been suggested that reference librarians be hired specifically for the evening and weekend hours. But what professional librarian would work those hours at the pay offered? Problems in circulation are similar. The library staff is composed of one professional librarian, three clerks (one who works at night) and one graduate student who works at night and weekends and a clerk operate the circulation desk. If more hours were added, it would be necessary to increase the staff. Are students anyone willing to work three hours those are professionals?

Likewise, the maintenance staff must be considered. Their working day ends at 11, and approximately an hour is needed to clean the library. Are you going to hire more maintenance people or pay them overtime?

Examining the situation, we find that the existing staff is unable to cope with extra hours. To find the needed professional staff is almost impossible, especially at those hours and for the pay offered. There is the always present problem of funds. Consider the facts, do we really need those extra hours?

Editor's Note: We recognize that the library hours may be limited by a lack of staff due to lack of funds. If, the students need the library facilities, this college should promptly assure those persons that the library will be open at ANY time.

The Birthday Party

At the Coronet in N.Y.C.

The Birthday Party, a movie based on a play of the same name by Harold Pinter, is a frightening exposé of man’s fears and guilt and of his inability to exist free from influence of his environment.

The title conversation and polite manners of the characters are carried to extremes and borders on the absurd. But the absurd soon turns into the horrible in a manic birthday party where the well-wishers indulge in insane and vacuous chatter until they drive their guest of honor crazy.

The setting of the story is a shabby boarding house owned by Meg (Dandy Nichols) and Peter (Mouttie Kehall) where Stanley, a recluse, lives and where his birthday party takes place.

Stanley’s party is joined by Goldberg, a Jewish businessman, and McCann, a neurotic Irishman, and what they do together is a discourse soon erupts into a terrifying barrage of fatuous clichés like, "Did the chicken cross the street?" and "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?"

Now that Stanley has lost all control over his behavior and is quite completely absurd, the property of Goldberg and McCann, he is dressed in a business suit andTedder and gowned Conformity.

Robert Shaw as Stanley is excellent; he neither overplays his role. Patrick Mc Gee (McCann) and Sydney Teller (Goldberg) are effective in their stereotyped roles. The direction of William Friedkin is terse and greatly adds to the sterility of the characters.

Faces

at Little Carnegie

Conceived, directed and written by Bruce Michael Kalnitsky. Professional critics have acclaimed Faces as "one of the most controversial and important cinematic entries this year. The fact that Faces was independently made on a small budget, has no stars and defies all the odds of commercial cinema, creates importance. The fact that middle class humanity is exposed as never before creates controversy. Nevertheless, America’s journalistic censors of the motion picture have gone wobbly with apprehension in their search for order.

Faces concerns the discontent of the middle aged living in an experimental commune, Cassavetes sees it. In short, a dissatisfied husband announces divorce, seeks a captainship of a prostitute and returns to his wife who has just attempted suicide after submitting to a young stud. They are all miserable, and each has spent all hours of pure misery, the audience, if they haven’t walked out during the excruciatingly drained and equally miserable.

The script is juvenile and the acting is that of Grade B productions. Cassavetes seems to use "artiness" as an excuse for relentlessly filming the camera so that we are forced to believe that it is more realistic, the acting is often so expressionless that much of the needed sentiment is lost. It’s too bad Faces has these.

It would have been a perfect commentary of life’s confined complexities.

Big Time Buck White

at Village South

Though at times screamingly funny Big Time Buck White for the most part, a cliché-ridden play about the blacks and their problems is not an entertainment, to the first half is an inside look on the Black Organization Man. Five men went the arrival of their leader Big Time Buck White who will speak at a meeting of B (Beautiful Alleluia Days). The whole scene is too long, overwhelming with words, noise, pushing and shoving. Finally, Big Time Buck White in boring and fruitless manner he attempts to "explain" the black man as an improvidential audience questioning period. The only thing that makes the evening worthwhile is a line spoken by Big Time in one of his less pathetic moments. After philosophizing about all the love, hope, power and goodness in man he says: "Why, with all that power, did a man kill a man?" Until that line, I’ve lost the play. Big Time Buck White was beginning to look like a 1969 version of SIX CHARACTERS IN SEARCH OF AN AUTHOR.

MESSIAH PERFORMED TODAY

A sign that Christmas is not very far away is the strains of George Frederick Handel’s "Messiah" drifting by from the direction of Memorial Auditorium.

Today at 12 and 1 p.m. the music department will again add to the holiday spirit by performing portions from this masterpiece.

A new innovation this year will be the use of students in the solo roles. Auditions were held and four students were chosen. They are: Bruce Michael Kalnitsky, Flora Smelkinson, alto; Michael Sikiszko, tenor; and Michael Drewno, bass. W. Moore will be the conductor for today’s performance.

"Photographs of Iran" by Dr. Charles Martens are now on view in Sprague Library. The photographs were taken last year while Dr. Martens was on leave from the fine arts faculty at Montclair State.
THE BRIG
‘A waste of talent’

Reviewed by HW Hutchinson III

The MSC production of The Brig challenged and proved the talents of its directors, Steve Keitz and Richard Halpin, and those of its cast.

Of the latter none was out of character for an instant. Rehearsal had conditioned them for the strain of an almost athletic performance. Under the sweat, the blows and the lights, not one slipped or fell with the load.

The directors exploited every theatrical device that the play offered them. The action began in the lobby when one of the guards lined up the audience four at a time as if they were prisoners, to be led to seats by guards who carried billy clubs and shotguns.

The arena-like set was suitable to the square, enclosed quarters of a prison ward. The banks were set in two rows inside a chicken wire fence. Action took place in all available parts of the theatre, including the aisles.

Lighting and set design were simple, and achieved a greater effect than would more detailed designs. Action was blocked to utilize the whole theatre and to involve the audience. Direction and acting were superb.

Unfortunately, any ingenious production of The Brig is a waste of good talent and effort. The play cannot rise to the level of art. Its statement is social: the Marines are a social disease. Its effect relies on audience torture. Any 10 minute segment of the action would suffice.

The dialogue consisted of guards insulting prisoners and prisoners requesting permission to cross white lines. There was no psychological probing, no intellectualization. There was no identification, no plot and no climax. There was no motivation, no character development. There was little besides screaming and violence. In short, there was no play.

HUMAN BEINGS
‘Fresh and imaginative’

Reviewed by Bruce Michael Katalinsky

It is difficult to find a play that delves into specific truths, leaving everlasting impressions of the playwright’s basic intent.

Human Beings, which made its debut on Dec. 5 at the MSC Studio Theatre, does this. Written by Tony Girmo with music by Tony DeBoy and directed by Patrick Reaves, the presentation of Human Beings, a completely student created experience, is a milestone in theatre arts at MSC.

Human Beings is a fresh, original and imaginative study of the problems of people. A boy and a girl try to love and are stopped by adult societal pressures as they are forced to don masks of pretense and falsity. Frozen smiles, heavy makeup and all the convention that has helped humanity evade reality taunts the couple in plasticized mocking.

The young lovers are pulled into the confines of cultural effrontery finding it difficult to “take off their masks.” It is realized that they have learned... but knowledge wasn’t good enough. “Our bodies are filled with knowledge... but are still hollow.” The human beings then put thought and education to use to annihilate the conformist pressures of society, and rip off their masks and give all they can. Technically excellent, with magnetic graphs and lighting design, Human Beings had one major fault — it could have been longer. If each thought had been developed rather than abruptly presented and left, this might have been accomplished. After all, life’s precious moments are hard to come by... they should be savored, nurtured and given a chance to grow.
Montclair State's high scoring basketball team continued to roll in recent action, maintaining its undefeated record by routing Region 3 powerhouse Bloomfield College (109-79) and Paterson State (100-86).

The Indians record to 3-0 for the season and by scoring over 100 points in both contests, the Indians have now equaled or topped the century mark in every contest. The Bloomfield name was over shortly after the opening tip. Henry James' fine defense and scoring (25 points) and Mike Oakes' fine inside shooting never let the Deacons in the game, the Indians emptied their bench near the end of the first half and substituted heavily in the second, coasting to the 109-79 win.

Bob Sienkiewicz scored two quick second half baskets to ignite the Indians and set off a 14 point spurt which blurred the MSC margin to 95-84.

The Indians led by the second half scoring of Bowin (31 for the game) held a 20 point lead and by as many as 23 points at one time, 72-49.

Monmouth then turned the game back in the but the best the Pioneers could manage was to cut the 95-88-78, with three minutes left.

The Indians then increased their margin with Luther Bowen's jumper with three seconds left putting the score in triple figures.

Monclair State's team ACT also turned in its third straight win by trouncing the Pioneers junior varsity, 96-76.
