MSC Joins Nation In Strike

Strikes, Speeches and Songs Are Scheduled for Mall Starting Noon Today

Speeches, singing and silence will highlight today's moratorium activities. Today, Montclair State is taking part in the Vietnam moratorium, a series of protests to the Vietnamese war taking place on college campuses across the country.

Dr. Thomas H. Richardson, MSC President, has announced that any student or faculty members wishing to take part in the day's activities will not be penalized for not attending class.

The Student Peace Union has called for a "general student strike in order to show opposition to the Vietnam war." The SPU has been working in conjunction with the National Student Association and the New Mobilization for Peace in planning today's activities.

At 9 a.m., student picket lines are scheduled to form in the newly-created mall outside Life Hall. The picket lines will continue throughout the day.

Two minutes of silence are planned for 11 a.m. in memory of those New Jersey citizens who have died while serving in the Vietnam war. Following the silence, the three MSC campus chaplains, Fr. Thomas Davis, Rev. Robert W. Castle, and Rabbi Jeshua Schnitzer, plan to read the names of the New Jersey war dead.

A program of speeches, dramatic readings and music is scheduled to take place at noon in the mall, and at 4 p.m., a march to the amphitheatre will begin.

In the amphitheatre at 5 p.m., an evening program, for both day and evening students, will begin. Antiwar poetry readings, speeches and singing are some of the highlights. Throughout the day, a petition opposing the war will be circulated throughout the crowds.

These moratorium activities are not the end of the protest, though. During the day, leaflets will be distributed to all students attending classes, stating the SPU anti-war position and reasons for conducting the student strike. The SPU is also calling for graduate students to join the strike, and not attend classes.

Speakers to be heard during the day include Richardson; Dean Lawton W. Blanton; Mr. Joseph Attansio, Mr. William Ballare, Dr. Robert R. Beckwith, Mr. Leon de Leeuw, Mr. William Dell, Mr. Dannis B. Eaton, Bob Ellis, Mrs. Linda L. Greenberg, Dr. Ronald F. Haas, Miss Ellen Kaufman, Dr. Gilbert Leight, Mr. Richard J. Marcotulli, Mr. Ben Minor, Dr. Sandford R. Radner, Dr. Jerome Rockwood, Peter Sobotka and Kenneth Traynor.

In its quest to convince the federal government to withdraw its troops from Vietnam, student groups similar to SPU across the country will hold future student strikes in the future. Protests paralleling today's will be held every month if there is no action taken on troop withdrawals following this moratorium. However, each month the protest will last for one extra (thus, November may have a two-day moratorium; December, three days, etc.)
At 8 Local Colleges... Teach-Ins, Rallies, Vigils Highlight Viet Moratorium

By Ed Sant'Eufemia Political Reporter

Today will mark a day of national discussion on the Vietnam war as colleges have scheduled teach-ins, rallies, vigils and community campaigns in an attempt to make Vietnam more relevant than it already is. Rutgers Newark has a schedule of various activities to be held throughout the day. Students will go into the downtown areas to publicize and promote the resolution passed by the New Jersey Board of Trustees in observance of the nationwide moratorium to protest to reach Vietnam.

The resolution recommended to Dr. Nathan Weiss, acting president of Newark State, that classes be suspended "in order that the students and faculty may observe a day of solemn commemoration for those who have lost their lives in the Vietnam conflict."

Weiss specified that "no one side of the issue will be forced upon anyone or adopted as an official statement. Free expression of all opinions in keeping with the best academic traditions of the college" will be accepted.

Class cancellation "does not constitute a holiday for the college," he explained, "but will be an academic approach to communication on a most critical event facing contemporary American society."

Prior to the board's resolution to cancel classes, Student Body President Bill Loeffling had recommended to the Faculty Council that classes be cancelled.

According to schedule, the Newark State moratorium program will begin at 9 a.m. and continue until 5:30 p.m. Ken Wilson, Newark State moratorium chairman, said that Sen. Eugene McCarthy is expected to be present at the Newark State campus late this afternoon.

The Newark State newspaper, the Independent, has spoken out against the present U.S. policy in Vietnam, however, the Independent editorial board has not taken a stand either supporting or against the cancellation of classes at NJC.

At Montclair State College needs FUN WORKING IN EUROPE

Jones, director of the Project TRY at Montclair, asked to be reinstated, especially with the urban campus in progress through the day at the urban campus.

Newark State College will hold a memorial service beginning at 9 a.m. at which a reading of the servicemen who've died in action will be given on his condition.

The youth was non caught by the guards. Friskers then discovered silver mace gun being carried by young man, who remained unidentified. At this point, violence erupted. The youth immediately broke away from the guards. Carrying a piece of furniture, the guard chased him around the hall.

The youth was then caught by the guards. He fell to the floor, quite bloody and very shaken. He was then taken from the SDS meeting. From there he went to Beth Israel Hospital for treatment. There was no report given on his condition.

18 Year Old Vote

By Valerie Frager

Three public questions will appear on the Nov. 4 election ballot in New Jersey. Voters will decide if state bonds totaling a debt of $275 million be issued to conserve and develop water resources.

Second on the list of questions is a proposed amendment to the state constitution which, if approved, would lower the voting age from 21 to 18 years. Public question number three concerns amending the constitution to provide for a state lottery.

Both the Democratic and Republican platforms for this year's election support the water conservation bonds. The state's health planning council will use the bond money to reduce and reverse pollution trends in the state.

Since May 16, 1969, when the state legislature approved putting the voting age amendment on the ballot, young people of New Jersey have been working to gain full voting rights. They have the desire, the maturity and the ability to vote. They have the right to vote.

VAC has the support of U.S. Representatives William B. Widnall (R-NJ) and James J. Howard (D-NJ) who are co-chairmen of the New Jersey Age Coalition, and Let Us Vote, known as LUV, merged on August 15 to form VAC.

President Richard M. Nixon's forced early retirement of General Lewis B. Hershey, head of the Selective Service System, last week was seen as an attempt to reduce the effectiveness of today's nationwide moratorium to protest the war in Vietnam.

Although he has stated that college demonstrators will not affect him in their opposition to the war, Nixon apparently wants to tone down as much anti-Viet sentiment as possible. However, the elimination of Hershey as Selective Service head will pacify very few.

The Nixon Administration had previously decided to suspend the November and December draft calls and to spread the 29,000-man October call over a three month period. This decision reveals that draft policies are not formulated by the Selective Service office but merely put into effect by them after receiving the order from the higher-ups.

No one is going to be fooled into thinking that Nixon has taken care of the bad guys by pushing Hershey into a four-star general's uniform. Nixon's recent action has only shown that he might be affected by college demonstrators' a little bit more than he is willing to admit.

What a Lovely War

One of these days there just won't be any more sex. I heard the Nixon Administration is seriously considering junking the whole idea without any explanation.

I'm inclined to agree with the directive issued last week by Wilbur Hanagp, sexual adviser to the Nixon Administration, which called for a complete withdrawal of sex in government (SIG SEX).

SIG SEX is the official title Hanagp gave to the program. "It's designed to keep our country clean and tidy," he explained.

"Well, first thing, we're gonna put every chop suey eatery out of business in the country. That oughta fix em."

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Well, you know. After you get that suey stuff you really get that feeling of power, if you know what I mean."

How the Butcher Got His Mercedes

Copley News Service.

MONTCLAIR, N.J. — Even the most privileged person in a country rich in the luxury of privacy, a private car, even a second-hand one, is a luxury few can afford.

The average car owner has to wait five years to afford even the cheapest model.

So when a special consignment of 30 shiny, brand-new luxury Mercedes limousines arrived in Bratislava the other day, they created a sensation.

Even more sensational, however, was the fact that every one of these prohibitively expensive cars was snapped up within half an hour of their arrival.

From the fact that this war has dragged on for far too long and none of the administrations under which it has been waged seem to have had any intention of winning. Since it is obvious that we are not fighting this war to win the only alternative is to end it.

So we face the people we fought for all this time have to leave gradually and allow them to assume their own protection.

But Nixon refuses to go so far as setting a deadline for our withdrawal. Perhaps he is right when he says such an approach would jeopardize our chances in Paris; but since the peace talks are not going well in any case, the best solution would be to make it clear to Saigon that we will leave them to fight their own war.

Every car had been bought for cash by either a tavern waiter or a butcher. Not one of them could have possibly afforded such a luxury Western car on his regular wages.

How was it, then, that the local butchers and waiters were able to buy them?

The reporter soon put two and two together and came up with the answer: short measure.

Gathering together a team of car-less volunteers, he investigated the purchase of meat at the shops and the ordering of wine and spirits from the owners of the Mercedes made their living.

At the end of a week he and his volunteers found that they had been given short measure each time they bought meat or had a drink.

The police and the public prosecutor’s office then stepped in. Soon the shops that had cheated from the West will be up for sale again.

The Man Is Coming Down

In a very short time James Patrick Hayes Jr., 26, will come to trial on charges that he “willfully, knowingly, and unlawfully attempted to escape and procure” means for an AWOL soldier to desert. This is the first time since World War II that this law has been cited, and previously it was used only in the prosecution of renegades of AWOL soldiers who helped them desert.

Of what importance is this small incident? It is a clear indication that “this man is coming down harder. When your people in the movement participate in a lot of illegal activities. You also might help in organizing a demonstration and be indicted for “crossing a state line to incite a riot” as were the

Of all the enemies which the United States has had to face in its brief life-time, none have been so challenging as the enemy we face today.

Some believe that the enemy is Russia, or China, or communism, or facism, or any number of noms or noms. The real enemy, however, is not external, it is internal.

Whether it manifests itself in the form of retraction, or in the empty slogans of the new left, the enemy is making great strides towards bringing down the American republic.

What, then, is this enemy? It is fear that a blackman may get the vote; it is hate that stirs in the midst of reaction to the idea of progress; it is corrupt ambition and naive delusion; it calls itself anarchy, nihilism, as well as the American republic.

Its greatest allies are ignorance, blinding phrases, disorganization, social disorder, shallow expressions of moralistic idealism, as well as the soothing remarks of racism and hate.

A NOUVEAU RICH

Review By

Buddy Rich, a performer with an ego as big as his band, gave a concert with his 16-piece band here Mon., night, Oct. 6 to an enthusiastic audience in Memorial auditorium. The commercial rock-oriented band provided a fine evening of entertainment.

And entertainment it was. The band drove through a number of popular tunes such as "Up-tight" and "Mercy, Mercy" with top precision and fine arrangements. The apex of enthusiasm for both Rich and the audience (for the rest of the band was only incidental: it was the drummer's show) was the final medley from "Take the Money and Run," it brings the attention of the bank police.

Yes, there is a lustiania to be toppled here. With the sickening stench of ghettos ringing in his ears, whitty has finally discovered that something must be done. But I'd like to think of him as a man that I am, that lustiania can be brought down by understanding of both races. There is something symbolic in that, when lustiania came tumbling down, the most influential person in its destruction was the man who was concealed within.

The drummer milked applause from the audience with his supreme skill. No doubt that Buddy Rich is one of the most skillful and articulate drummers of our time. No doubt also that Rich likes people to know this. Perhaps a more likely place to find Rich as indicative of his showmanship, would be on a network television show. He's not only a one-man rhythm section; he does a pretty neat job of twirling his bass drum, also.

STRONG EGOTISM

However, his egoism had put him so far beyond reality, that he kept the audience in the dark as to whom the members of his band were. We heard two strong reedmen. Introduced to us once, we never heard their names again.

Interview following the film, "you don't want the kids to find out the answer to the question of the fust date?"

"Play It Again, Sam" — and now his film still could not receive a "G" rating (general audiences.) It was originally given and "R" (under 16 not admitted) because of the presence of the line: "He is wanted for murder, arson and committing an unlawful act with a beaver."

While they wouldn't want to corrupt our kids with laughter (with John Wayne who gets a "G" rating for killing & wording in the name of a country, s.o.b., three times, yes, but not with laughter.) Or maybe they just don't want the kids to find out the answer to the question of the ages: "Should a girl pet on the first date?"

The subject was revolution

Theatreally, "Song of the Lustianian Bogey" is an experience. It is a series of emotionally packed vignettes (short scenes) that grab the audience and make them laugh and pull us in. In the introduction to Peter Weiss' other work, "Marat/Sade," a good play is defined as one with strong moments pieced together with a believable, developing plot. In that sense, "Lustianian Bogey" qualifies as a good play.

But there is something stronger—something that caused the black members of the audience to stand in applause with their hands clenched in the fist of black power. Something that had white members of that same audience clutch their stomachs in fear. It was all there in black — "This play took place in Angola, an African colony of Portugal. There was blood shed there when the Lustiania was toppled. Watch it, because we're not too far from that now right here."

Nature screws the born loser

Interview By

Maurice J. Moran

Drama/Arts Editor

Virgil Starkwell is a born loser. You know, he used to make obscene phone calls collect. He played the cello in the high school marching band. He turns to crime when some local thugs break his cello and his glasses. "I have this idea," explains Woody Allen, the creator, star and director of Virgil, "from childhood, that anyone in authority will break your glasses for a reprimand.""

But, even as the harbinger of the underworld, in the pseudo-documentary film of the life of Virgil Starkwell titled "Take the Money and Run," Virgil doesn’t quite make it. His first attempt at theft turns into a major discussion of the proper terminology used in the note ("It is this word 'gub'?" "No, that's gun... I have a gun..."

After some time in prison, he meets his true love while attempting to rob her purse. But when love turns to verse, and a baby (Jona — than Ralph Starkwell, after Virgil's mother) arrives, the life of crime seems the only hope.

CHAPLIN AND MARX

Woody Allen is a very busy fellow these days — what with the successful run on Broadway of "Play It Again, Sam" — and now "Take the Money and Run."

While some critics feel he is the most influential person in its destruction was the man who was concealed within.

ANOTHER VIEW

Dorothy Jones, director of Project TRY, has this reaction to "Lustianian Bogey:"

"I found the presentation by the N.E.C. to be one of many reflective statements on the 'growing awareness' of the young blacks of today. In an artistic and artistic sense, the production was very beautifully done. From an academic standpoint, it unleashed a multitude of historical facts that we were able to view in a dramatic and totally black orientation. I trust this performance will prove a meaningful experience for all who attended."

"Here and Now" — Jazz art jazz what the pictures meant to the performers

SENSUAL CREATIVITY

Most of the performers were prominent jazz musicians. Horace Arnold's is a young, dynamic, and highly adept technician who wove African and Spanish rhythms around his cohorts with supreme sensitivity. Karl Berger, a German musician with the ability to play the vibes with sensual creativity, was a focal point for many interesting solos. Michael Lawrence proved a versatile instrumentalist as well as Carlos Ward, a new musician on the scene from Panama who likewise broke loose with some interesting contributions. Reggie Workman, now the featured bassist with Max Roach, strutted the bass at times like a flamenco guitarist. Certainly it was Sam Rivers who appeared to be the most sensitive to the projected pictures as his bending tones seemed to precisely fit the exact feeling that the art portrayed. Finally, Jeanne Faulkner sang clear, soulful tones that needed no funk to prove her commitment.

States ‘MSC Could Never Become a Football Power’

By Don Pendley
News Editor

"Montclair State could never be a football power," states William P. Dioguardi, MSC’s director of athletics. Dioguardi, as chairman of the Montclair Athletic Commission (MAC), is the center of recent controversy on the activities and budget expenses of MAC.

Responding to a statement by the current athletic chairman, Joseph Macaluso, that MSC should not become a football power, ‘69, Dioguardi says that the ‘dual admissions’ policy (admitting athletes with lower high school academic achievements) practiced at many colleges in an effort to obtain better players, is not used at MSC.

"Our academic admission scale is higher than that of the other state colleges. In addition, MSC offers no special scholastic requirements for athletics, and thus the possibility of becoming a ‘football power’ is lessened," Dioguardi feels that although students should probably be controlling MAC (as stated in the SGA class organization statutes) problems would arise if this were instituted.

Students, says Dioguardi, must get the ‘feel of the thing,’ and that MAC would be difficult to run efficiently if it had a different chairman each year. Also, schedules for the MSC varsity teams are often made years in advance, making the idea of a student chairman less feasible.

Macaluso leveled several charges at the MAC during the SGA Legislature meeting of Oct. 7, including charges of nepotism in granting equipment contracts for MAC, poor budget-handling and the above-mentioned conflict of Dioguardi’s chairmanship of MAC.

To these, Dioguardi replied "I feel that I serve the best interests of the students with the best of my ability," and that "the boy (Macaluso) handled himself in a very businesslike manner" at the Legislature meeting.

Dioguardi also stated that he would attempt to answer any questions that Macaluso and any others raised.

Rutgers vs. Princeton
100 Years of Football

By Michael Traylor
Staff Reporter

1869. Rutgers played Princeton in a game they called football at New Brunswick field. The final score: Rutgers 4, Princeton 0.

1969. Same teams, same place, same spirit and once again it was a Rutgers victory, 240, as the parents of collegiate football gave birth to another football season in this country.

One-hundred years have passed since that first confrontation of these two teams, but it is much more than that has passed. As they have been responsible in the broader spectrum of life itself, generations, legacies and institutions have all been responsible for the evolution of football.

Searching for similarities between these two games is like looking at life, 1869-1969. There are few similarities to the extent to which football has changed can be paralleled with the change of the football field as a round, soccer type ball and now it has its present elongated shape.

In that first game there were 25, somewhat disorganized, men to a team. In the most recent game played, there were 11 very well-mechanized players to a team. To score points in that first game the players had to bat the ball with his hands, face, head, rump or any other way he could to get the ball over the goal, which was guarded by a goal tender.

In scoring points in the game of ‘69, a player had to run with the ball into the end zone or receive a pass in the end zone. He could also kick a field goal or an extra point. Considering the complex defensive units teams have today, points are not easily scored.

Forward passes end sweeps, pitch outs, formations and many other tactics have evolved from that first game, when football was an infant. In the past decade or so, the black man, qualified and victorious in his quest, has finally emerged on the football field which is vivid proof that football has come of age. The game has given birth to the modern day star, "the bonus baby," and "the free soul."

"What is this game of football?" This is a question that many were asking in 1869 as a handful of about 200 spectators gathered around the ball ground to see Rutgers and Princeton play.

The last game had an estimated audience of 20,000 fans and the game was also broadcast on radio where millions could have listened to the play-by-play account. Viewing the audience of the ‘69 Rutgers-Princeton game was a spectacle, with vivid colors flashing from all parts of the stadium. Girls clad in microminis and many male and female spectators, hip to the unique fashions, are evidence of the transition of the football following.

There is, to be sure, an astounding contrast between football then and now. But one thing remains the same – the vital philosophy of the game that was passed down through the years.

The spirit, the sense of fair play and comradeship which have become so relevant to our American tradition have been invaluable in our work and play.

To win is the object of football but the "how" is very important also. There was another game played between Rutgers and Princeton in 1869 which Rutgers lost. The general attitude of the game, according to an article in the Rutgers University paper The Targum, November 1869 was: "If we must be beaten, we are glad to have such conquerors."
Warner Leads Bridgeport
In Crucial EFC Contest

With 29 letterman returning, including four record-breakers, Coach Nick Nicolau has built a powerhouse at the University of Bridgeport, which almost assures the improvement from last year's 4-5 showing.

Heading the record breakers is All-EFC (Eastern Football Conference) senior tailback, Derrick Warner. Warner led the conference in rushing and scoring as he had a season total of 14 touchdowns and 957 yards, averaging better than 40 yards a clip.

Warner gained 129 yards and scored two touchdowns to pace the Purple Knights to a 23-7 victory over CCSC in the EFC opener several weeks ago. He was named to the ECAC all-East team as he had a season total of 14 touchdowns and 957 yards, averaging better than 40 yards a clip.

In the midst of all the pomp and pageantry of the 61st and biggest Homecoming this college has ever seen, Montclair State's gridders crushed the Blue Devils of Central Connecticut State, 23-0, before a near-capacity crowd of 9800.

Tony Valpone, who rushed for 113 yards in 25 carries, won the Most Valuable Player award, sponsored by Psi Chi, as he led the running barrage of 249 yards. The running success allowed MSC to play ball-control-type game.

Once again, defense completely dominated the game. There were no individual standouts and they operated as a unit indigestible to their gang-tackling.

The first period was a defensive duel as the team exchanged punts. Ken Toczka assumed the punting duties for Mike Van Zile and kept the Blue Devils deep in their own territory as he landed CCS's Dale Finch.

Midway through the second period, middle guard Jules Gertl recovered a fumble by halfback Rich Cunningham on the 37 yard line of CCS.

It took seven plays to reach paydirt as quarterback Bill Kulikowski hit back Glen Morschauser with a 16-yard pass to the three. Two plays later, Morschauser crashed in from the one.

Bob Brewster, subbing for the injured Dan Rodgers, battled the extra point.

Kuli, who completed but three passes as the offense relied on the ground game, led another drive this time from MSC's 44.

The drive took seven plays. At the CCS 46, Kulik threw a 14-yard strike to tight end Roland Kascher at the 27 and then unloaded the bomb to a wide open Tim Poor for the touchdown. Brewer's placement was wide. The halftime score was 13-0.

The halftime festivities were very impressive as the big crowd warmly applauded the spectacle of the band and the award-winning Homecoming floats, encircling the field.

The second period was scoreless although MSC threatened numerous times.

Brewster booted a 25-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter. Valpone's running was very instrumental in the driving.

Said Coach Clary Anderson, “I first felt we had the game with the field goal because the opposition had to score three TD’s to overtake us.”

The defense really turned it on in that quarter as it repeatedly beat the Blue Devils back.

The final moments of the game saw linebacker Pete Contaldi intercept a pass and run it back for the final touchdown.

The Montclair State College soccer team, one of the nation's top ranked teams, extended this season's winning streak to five games. The MSC booters are now sporting a record of 5-0.

Sophomores Bill Kazdoba and Jean Charles once again starred for the MSC team. Charles had four goals and one assist in Montclair's triumphs over Jersey City State College and City College of New York. Kazdoba scored only once in the two games, but he also had four very important assists.

Junior John Smith, an outstanding halfback on the team, also helped MSC in extending its winning streak by scoring three goals against Jersey City.

Montclair had very little trouble with Jersey City State College last Wednesday. The booters defeated JCSC 7-0, in MSC's first night game of the season.

Montclair scored early in the game, when Charles took a Kazdoba pass and beat the goalie at 10:25 of the first period.

The Montclair State College soccer team is coached by Len Lucenko, the nation's best record last season (13-2), gained a share of the N.J. State College Conference Championship, and they also took part in the NCAA's College Division Soccer Tournament. The team was an Eastern Coast finalist in this tournament.

This season, Coach Len Lucenko has a wide variety of experienced players on the team as well as having some very promising newcomers.

The talk in the locker room this season appears to be geared towards the team's hopes for this season. They want the N.J. State College Conference Championship for themselves and they are also writing a goal to be the NCAA's College Division Champions.

Many other players and coaches feel that the MSC booters have the personnel to achieve these goals. This was shown in recent soccer polls in which MSC was rated in the top 20 teams in the nation, and ranked number one in the New Jersey-Delaware-Pennsylvania area.

The highly acclaimed personnel on the team consists of three freshman, eight sophomores, four juniors, four seniors, and an exchange student from Austria.

The team and, despite his size, he is one of the most aggressive players on the squad.

Leading Montclair this season is senior captain and All-American Arvi Saar. Saar has a powerful left foot, and plays a tremendous job at center fullback.

George Chapla helped out last year's freshman team, and is the kind of ball player that can help out the varsity. Chapla is a hard-hitting fullback, with a lot of ball sense.

Jean Charles, who had 12 goals with the freshmen team last year, is a big threat on the field. He is highly praised for his passing, dribbling, and scoring.

Junior John Smith is MSC's aggressive center halfback. He is a scoring threat that is far out as well as from in close. Bill Kazdoba, rated as one of the top collegiate booters in the nation, led last year's freshman team with 17 goals in eight games.

Tony DeFilippis, a freshman from North Plainfield, is a big scoring threat from all over the field, and is expected to do big things for the team.

John Lukin, a sophomore, has a tremendous foot and is "tough as nails." John Shumlas appears to be playing very aggressively at his halfback position.

Charge Athletic Commish

Joseph Macaluso, senior class president and star gymnast, told the SGA Legislature last Tuesday that there are "too many unanswered questions" regarding the Montclair Athletic Commission, a class one student-government supported organization.

Macaluso's charges stemmed from Montclair Athletic Commission's request for $88,000 from the SGA as 1969-70 operating costs.

He said that "some people have questions about the way MAC handles things... so let's get them out in the open."

The blond-haired English major called for an open forum for students to know "about the issues" and stated: "The SGA should bring in a certified public accountant to audit the books of MAC." (Mrs. Doris Asdal, director of the Faculty-Student Cooperative Association, told the MONTCLARION that the books of MAC are audited twice each year; the last audit was June 30.)

He said there are questions over the hiring of Coach Clarence Anderson — how he gets paid and from what source — and the costs of maintaining the college's sports information director. Macaluso claimed that Dr. Richard Tews, chairman of the Panzer school, never knew about the hiring of Anderson as coach "until he read about it in the newspapers."

Dawn Sova, student government treasurer, stated at the Tuesday meeting that "we never see how MAC spends its money" and Macaluso added that there should be "more control" over MAC's expenditures.

Macaluso further charged that Coach William Dioguardi's brother-in-law was contracted to install the lights in Sprague field last year. Dioguardi responded by saying: "I don't have a brother-in-law."

Meanwhile the Legislature voted to table MAC's request for $88,000 until an open forum is held on Oct. 21 at 4 p.m. in the studio theatre.

SPEAKS HIS MIND: Joseph Macaluso, senior English major, told the Student Government Association last week that there are too many unanswered questions regarding the budget of the SGA-supported Montclair Athletic Commission. He charges that the SGA doesn't know where the MAC money is going. See "Man in the News," page 9, of today's edition.

DOUCETTE CALLS FOR OPEN FORUM ON SPORTS

Greg Doucette, vice-president of the SGA, called for an open forum on athletics on Oct. 21 at 4 p.m. in studio theatre. Doucette said that Athletics Director William Dioguardi, President Thomas H. Richardson and Panzer school Director Richard Tews will be at the forum. He said the trio will answer questions regarding MAC's budget request, and the athletics program.

Doucette said that the idea for a forum came about because some students feel the college is being turned into a "football machine." The SGA vice-president explained that some people claim that the college is putting more emphasis and money into football in comparison with all other varsity sports offered at the college.

The forum, Doucette said, will act as a fact-finding mission to discuss athletic procedures and find answers to the questions which have evolved. "For Montclair State to be a 'football machine' would be a bad thing," he stated. "A name for the college should be earned in different fields."

Mr. Vincent B. Calabrese, vice-president for business and finance, told the MONTCLARION last Wednesday that the books of the Montclair Athletic Commission are open to "all legitimate groups." He said the books "are currently open and have always been open to interested students and faculty members." He added that the books are currently being audited and copies of the final statement will be released to the SGA Legislature.

Calabrese said that Joseph Macaluso should have "checked his information carefully" before making statements to the SGA Legislature last Tuesday.
