New Committee Considers
Phys. Ed. - Athletics Split

By Helene Zuckerbrod

Definition of the role of athletics and the relationship between the health and physical education dept. and the athletic program will be the goals of a committee to be developed to investigate the alleged separation between those two elements of MSC.

At the present time, a newly-appointed committee is working "to establish a larger committee truly representative of the college community, faculty, and students," according to Dr. Harry H. Hoitsma, assistant professor of health and physical education and chairman of the infant committee. Other committee members include Mr. William P. Dioguardi, director of athletics; Dr. Richard W. Tews, physical education dept. chairman; and Dr. Hazel M. Wacker, professor of health and physical education.

Much of the controversy surrounding recent activities of the Montclair Athletic Commission (MAC) centers around the hiring of Mr. Clary Anderson, former Montclair High School football coach, as assistant athletic director, football, basketball, and baseball coach, and supervisor for summer maintenance of Sprague field.

In the past, a screening committee under the direction of Tews appraised all candidates. Candidates also had to have teaching positions under the physical education dept. As a result of the circumstances surrounding the Anderson affair, disagreements over the hiring of coaches has arisen.

In order to insure the educational values of coaching, Tews feels the hiring of coaches should come under the auspices of the physical education dept. On the other hand, Dioguardi favors hiring through the athletic dept. to alleviate the tenure aspect of the professor-coach situation in firing said coaches. This change in policy has prompted many people to believe that the two departments have split.

In a recent article in the MONTCLARION, Tews emphasized that "while legally there is no separation between the physical education and athletic departments, the hiring of Anderson as a full time coach without (his) knowledge or consent forms an automatic separation between the two departments."

According to Dr. T. Richardson, "the question raised is how to organize a good physical education program and a successful athletic program." Adding "that in order to have good athletics, the program must combine the educational value with the competitive value." Richardson feels that the sustenance of hiring coaches to do a job that includes teaching and coaching could be questioned.

In regard to questions charging the "loading" of the future committee, Hoitsma stressed the "we can assure (that the committee) will be fairly representative of all sides," by approaching the question as objectively as possible, welcoming all ideas, and by considering all organizations in regards to membership. Final proposals will be sent to the coordinating committee – the main student-faculty-administrative committee – for study and recommendations following discussion in an open forum. Final action on all decisions will be taken by the Board of Trustees.

"The above approach," according to Richardson, "provides for a full review of goals, organizations, and responsibility and then the development of a plan that will serve Montclair not only for the moment but also will take into account future growth and development."
MSC Courses Study Black World

By Roberta Kosch

The poetry of Senghor, the Rast Commission Report, Swahili, the art of Sub-Saharan Africa, the family of Man, the drums of Olatunji. A long-neglected study is finally becoming a reality at Montclair State — the study of the Negro. Increased understanding of and appreciation for the black culture and heritage are the objectives most often mentioned by the faculty members presently teaching these courses.

"A stranger comes from some distant corner of Europe... he observes carefully... his mentality is such that he cannot always understand the rich but complex soul of Africa..."

Mrs. Jeanne Barrett, assistant professor of English, has chosen this quote by Thiam to illustrate her reasons for teaching African Myth and Literature. Through a perusal of selected African myths and literary selections she hopes to enable her students to grasp the real spirit of African culture and civilization that existed before the coming of the Europeans, to explore the universality of African motifs in literature, to understand the complexity of what formerly seemed simple.

The rejection of imposed European values and the search for identity by Africans, known as Negritude, is another concept Mrs. Barrett wishes to investigate. A specialist in mythology, Mrs. Barrett states, "This course is a confrontation for me through literature with bits of the past unconsciously rejected. For others, it is a confrontation with a culture, a way of thinking, which seems so extremely different in thought and temperament. For all, it is a discovery of fragments of civilization...."

Mr. Walter Kops, associate professor of history, life-long interest in minorities has prompted him to teach about the Negro in U.S. History. Prior to World War II, Kops has been interested in the aspirations of students "tools with which to evaluate contemporary problems..." He describes his course as "a historical discipline that is not directed to present problems, but stems from them..." "Hamamba, rafiki zangu?", or, "Hello, my friend!" is Mr. Samuel Ngari's Swahililian greeting to Montclair State. The language which Ngari teaches is correctly known as Kikwahili and is composed of 65-70% African, 20-25% Arabic, and a mixture of Portuguese, Indian, and English. By teaching this language, which is one of the seven international languages, Ngari wants to give his students an idea of the language in both its written and spoken forms through the use of texts and tapes. He plans to expand the course in the future.

To the suggestion that perhaps Swahili is a little-used language, Ngari replied that is "inclusiveness of any language," with a great demand for teachers in the New York area. Originally from Kenya, Ngari points out that Zanzibar is the birthplace of Kikwahili and the people of Tanzania consider it their national language. He finds that many Africans are reacting to imposed European tongues and are now eager to learn Kikwahili.

"To appreciate, rather than develop an expertise" on the Arts of Africa is what Dr. Gordon S. Plummer, chairman of the fine arts dept., intends for his students. A native of England and recent doctoral graduate from Indiana University, Plummer presents a "highly student-oriented approach, but rather a media-involved experience in which the students can heighten their awareness of the art of Sub-Saharan Africa by carving, mask-making, and, possibly, making slides of African works."

Plummer further states, "It is hoped that both black and white students will together develop an appreciation, one might say, even an empathy for the traditional art of black Africa. In this respect it is akin to the WAPPAC program and establish his ancestors' European clan relationships."

"I don't want my students to categorize and label instead of understanding." In his course on the black family Mr. Howard C. Seely aims to show his students "only one family - Mankind."

With a diversified background in major training in psychology and philosophy and minor in education, Dr. Seely feels that by pointing these things out he will "give the students an honest, realistic appreciation in light of the facts." He also intends to explore the relationships among slavery in U.S., racism, and our present prejudices, and to encourage his students "to make valid judgments."

Mrs. Emily Waters teaches the course Influence of Afro-American Culture on Music and Literature. Mrs. Waters states, "A positive goal is to generate this kind of excitement in students."

"Army's role in the Reconstruction of Urban Education Corps at Detroit was the only one of the 30-plus that is going strong," Pete Applegate says, "we should use this kind of excitement in favor of giving the vote to 18, 19 and 20-year-olds."

Mrs. Emily Waters states, "I don't feel our youth fully understand the American political process by the time they have finished high school," says Lewis R. Applegate, director of public relations for the New Jersey Education Association.

"Our 18-year-olds are as ready to vote as our 21-year-olds. If the minimum voting age remains 21, they needlessly have to wait three years to put classroom theory into practice."

The premise that a person becomes an adult at age 21 is based on medieval warfare, the NJEA reports. The ancient English considered 21 the age when a man became strong and experienced enough to bear the weight of armor in battle.

"If we are going to base adulthood on the age of battle, Applegate says, "we should use today's American draft age, not Old England's minimum age for Knighthood."

The federal constitution lets each state set its own minimum voting age. Two states have already lowered voting age to 18. Georgia made the change in 1943, Kentucky in 1955.
Urban Study Starts

In an attempt to establish better communications among different groups on campus, in the community and industries, an Urban Awareness Workshop was recently organized by the MSC Urban Institute. It held its first meetings on the evenings of Oct. 10 and 11 in College Hall.

Mr. James Harris, MSC academic counselor, stated that the Urban Awareness Workshop "will help clarify the college's role in urban programs, by promoting an open arena of discussions among faculty, students, community and industrial representatives." He also commented that he expects the program to be very successful because "people are showing an interest in it."

Harris, a 1968 graduate of MSC who worked last year with the Urban Institute, was asked to recruit participants for the workshop. Explaining the significance of the new program, he said, "The college can no longer live in a vacuum, surrounded by urban groups." He added that he believes "better communication" can be achieved at the workshop meetings, where participants form several groups, choose topics which are of particular interest to them, and are given a chance to express themselves and their ideas.

Harris also explained that professional leaders guide the discussions within the groups. Student assistants also help direct the discussions, but the participants decide on the subjects to be discussed. Harris stated that some of the topics which should aid communication include "the pros and cons of urban studies, the presence of blacks on campus, and how the college can respond to the needs of both urban and non-urban students."

When asked if he felt that the Urban Awareness Workshop will be successful in accomplishing its aims, Harris replied that the first meetings showed this. He explained that there was a "crowded situation" at these meetings, indicating a real interest in the program.

He said that because the workshop provides an opportunity for all people on campus and in the community to share their feelings and opinions, the program should prove quite valuable in promoting communication and understanding among all groups. He feels that this will greatly benefit the college.

Mall Petition Underway

By Patricia M. Romanish

Chains still block the road in front of Life Hall, currently known as the pedestrian mall, while petitions calling for the reopening of the road still circulate.

The eight copies of a petition originated by senior chemistry major Ward Nelson warn commuters that the two remaining entrances to parking areas will be either "impassable during bad weather or will remain inadequate."

"Unless the mall road is opened," Nelson said, "these access roads will be even more congested than at present and will be extremely hazardous under icy conditions."

Harrington, who originated and circulated the petitions, Nelson also hopes to collect them and submit the lists to Mr. Vincent B. Calabrese, vice-president of business and financial services at MSC. However, Nelson expressed disappointment that, "many commuters who I know are dissatisfied with the barricade will not sign the petition. He added, "They just don't want to get involved."

In spite of the slow movement of the petitions, Nelson said, "I hope to see the mall opened to commuters before the snow falls."

It’s Cahill for Governor

With today's edition of the MONTCLARION, we break a long-standing policy of keeping mum about endorsing political candidates. It is our view that when candidates make statements regarding our interests, we cannot be content to sit on the sidelines just to watch the game go on. Therefore, we feel compelled to register a few remarks about the current gubernatorial stakes.

Generally, the campaign for Jersey Governor has been based on the personal lives of the two key men running for office, rather than concentrating on basic issues. Both Democrat Robert B. Meyner and Republican William T. Cahill have been issuing low-keyed, lukewarm position papers regarding today's main issues: education, personal income, campaign expenses and other trivia. These types of diversionary tactics are certainly resentful. But at the same time Cahill and Meyner are ill-prepared to govern today's state in the 1970s.

On the other hand, Cahill has recognized many of the important state problems, and he plans to do something about them. Cahill called existing higher education conditions an "outrage," and said a thorough reorganization was mandatory.

Meyner, while a capable establishment-oriented former governor, is a relic of a bygone political era. His energies and efforts were made in the 1950s. And even the Democratic-controlled boss-machine of Hudson county has turned against him. Significantly, the former governor, in our opinion, is ill-prepared to govern this state in the 1970s.

Cahill called existing higher education conditions an "outrage," and said a thorough reorganization was mandatory. He has called for a complete overhaul of the state's draft board system because of "discriminatory conditions." The GOP contender said the black population of New Jersey is 8.5%, yet there are no black members of the state's 176 draft boards.

He is supporting low-income housing in urban areas; broadened technical planning on the urban level to attract more industry; and wider planning assistance to counties and municipalities.

Finally, Cahill has recommended that policemen receive training in constitutional law, sociology and neighborhood relations. We think William T. Cahill should be the next governor of New Jersey.

Vote 18

There is no doubt that today's 18-year-old is acutely aware of the political, social and economic crises afflicting New Jersey. Especially, today, with the great effect that mass media has on elections and basic issues. Both candidates Cahill has been taking a sensible approach to the situation. The GOP contender has opened his private and business records to public examination, while former Gov. Meyner has kept the lid sealed on what he calls his "private business."

Meyner, while a capable establishment-oriented former governor, is a relic of a bygone political era. His energies and efforts were made in the 1950s. And even the Democratic-controlled boss-machine of Hudson county has turned against him. Significantly, the former governor, in our opinion, is ill-prepared to govern this state in the 1970s.

They Disagree on The Drug Problem

By Janice Salerno

New Jersey gubernatorial hopefuls Cahill and Meyner disagree in their approach to solving existing problems of narcotics addiction in the state.

Cahill believes the addicts should be confined in treatment centers until cured. The program he would institute would be similar to the one in New York City. "If any other course is not provided for properly. Treatment centers, he believes, would enable an addict to obtain professional help in seeking a cure from narcotics addiction."

Cahill said the penalties for the use of marijuana by young first offenders should be lightened. He said these young people should not be saddled with a criminal record after their first offense. He did add, however, that he would not go so far as to pardon any other offenders, to lighten the laws or penalties concerned with marijuana.

Meyner sees no reason for any change in the law. He believes that education about drugs can help in the decrease of narcotic addiction.

The way to cure addicts is another area that came under discussion by both candidates. Cahill believes methadone, a drug used to treat addicts as a heroin substitute, proves itself. It says it is an effective and inexpensive way to combat drug addiction. He believes that methadone checks addiction, which would check the crime rate; crimes are often committed by addicts needing money to support their habits.

DRUG SUBSTITUTION

Meyner prefers to give this drug a further testing. Experimention is being done on it and he would like to see it continue. He questions the efficacy of the treatment. Meyner believes the methadone treatment is simply the substitution of one addictive drug for another. He would prefer to see a method initiated which required complete abstinence from drugs.

Cahill said he never would have invented the program if he had not made the decision. He feels there should be a greater emphasis on education and the counter-narcotics field and less on border checks. He did say the program dramatized the fight against marijuana.

Meyner believes the program was established with an earnest desire to cut down the available supply of marijuana. He hopes it does not harm U.S. relations with Mexico, since that country is not the sole source of the marijuana supply.

Cahill Charges

Dem. Neglect in Urban Housing

NEWARK Republican candidate William T. Cahill said today that the crises plaguing New Jersey's major cities point to a lack of effective and continuing commitment of addicts. He says that, until now, no one realized the extent of the narcotics problem; therefore, it wasn't provided for properly. Treatment centers, he believes, would enable an addict to obtain professional help in seeking a cure from narcotics addiction.

Lack of money for urban aid is considered by the two New Jersey candidates for governor to be the biggest problem of the cities.

In a recent article appearing in the Newark Star-Ledger, William T. Cahill, the Republican candidate for governor, and Robert B. Meyner, the Democratic candidate, discussed the need for massive urban aid.

In an article, both candidates agreed on the need for massive reconstruction programs.

Cahill told the Ledger that he feels fault with the federal government for not supplying the cities with enough money for urban programs. But he does feel that President Richard M. Nixon's concept of urban aid is good and will greatly help the cities once the Vietnamese war is ended.

FEDERAL TROUBLES

Meyner also sees the federal government's the cause for much of the cities' troubles according to a recent article in the Newark Evening News. He said that much of the decay of the cities is due to cutbacks by the Nixon administration. He remarked that Nixon was standing back on urban renewal programs such as "Model Cities" in favor of funds for the Vietnam war and defense projects such as ABM.

Cahill also told reporters from the Ledger that many of the cities' problems are due to misuse of federal urban renewal funds. Most funds, according to Cahill, are being used to tear down the cities without allowing enough money for new construction. He said his plans for urban aid include the construction of more low income housing.

Meyner told reporters from the Star-Ledger that in order to aid the federal agencies aware of the threat that the decaying conditions of the cities have upon the country. He added that "New Jersey would be sadly penalized in favor of rural areas."

Concerning the effect that new federal welfare program will have on New Jersey, Cahill said that an influx of population into New Jersey from other states will be discouraged since the welfare programs of the other states will have a larger allotment.

It is almost impossible to forget, whether from abject fear or its first cousin, sensible prudence, of the voices of sanity and moderation, to the forces of either military or militant extremism couched in pseudo-moralistic terms. It is the sad history, not of an admirable "children's crusade," but of the Crucifixion, stages: a group of "afflicted children" guided and encouraged by fanatic adults both within and without the Church. The few years have not dimmed the significance of Miss Starkey's book any more than the few years have altered the importance of her subject.

Almost three centuries have eroded the Satanic superstitions of Salem into the childishly simple threat of "trick or treat." On Halloween, the phrase seems especially appropriate.

Committee on Committees

Participation Aids Operation

By Helene Zuckerbrod
Asst. News Editor

Student equity student-faculty participation sharing responsibilities These, according to Dr. Samson McDowell, vice-president of instruction and chairman of the Committee on Committees, are the purposes of that and other student-faculty committees.

"In order to have an effective, operating college, the college requires the active participation of all faculty members and students in order to keep the college and its operation cooperative," said McDowell.

The Committee on Committees, said McDowell, is composed of administrative, faculty, and student representatives. This year's members include: McDowell; Mr. Anthony R. Kuo, associate dean of instruction; Dr. Hugh Allen, professor of physics and science education; Dr. Leonard J. Buchner, director of psychological services and professor of psychology; Dr. Earl E. Mosler, professor of education; Kenneth Traynor, SGA president; and Greg Doucette, SGA vice-president.

A committee on committees is frequently referred to in universities and colleges to fill in the numerous committees necessary to keep the ever-expanding enterprise rolling," stressed McDowell.

Although having no legislative power, the committee on Committees chooses the chairman of the various committees.

"We take great care to be reasonably sure that a responsive and conscientious person heads (each committee)," he added.

Membership on all committees, said McDowell, is on a voluntary basis. Faculty and students request to be placed on specific committees. Each roster of committees, he explained, is then presented for faculty-student consultation in an executive meeting of the Committee on Committees.

"It's a matter of choice," added McDowell. "We just put it together.

While the various committees cover all aspects of campus operation, the Committee on Committees reviews and firsts the faculty and administrative councils for study. If considered feasible and necessary, the student members will attempt to implement them.

Speech Therapy Clinic

Aids Local Youngsters

With the split in the speech dept., this year into speech pathology and audiology, and speech and theatre arts, the speech pathology and audiology dept. now occupies the new wing of Life Hall. Its speech therapy clinic, headed by Dr. Gilbert Leight, will now be held for those children and students in need of language, hearing, and speech therapy.

This September a new section of the therapy clinic, the communication clinic, was added. This involves only preschoolers aged three to five who come to the clinic five days a week for ½ hours every day. There is also a new audiometric suite that contains soundproof booths and new audiological machinery. Mr. Joseph Attanasi, assistant professor of speech pathology and audiology stated: "Montclair has one of the finest clinical facilities on campus that one can find."

Communication disorders, stuttering, cleft palate and voice problems are just a few of the disorders handled by both the staff and students in the clinic.

Anti-semitism and race prejudice were charged against the Gothic Times, student newspaper at Jersey City State College. The charges were leveled by Morris J. Janoff, publisher of the Jewish Standard, a metropolitan newspaper.

Entitled "Golda Lox and the Three Blacks" the story is an even for a few minutes he might call it his own. A new report prepared by Wayne State University faculty and students after a year's research provides some possible solutions.

The report, entitled "The Commuter Student," was written by Prof. Richard E. Ward, geology, and Theodore E. Kurth, a consulting architect. It was financed by a 1967 grant from the National Science Foundation.

"The Urban Collegiate Unit, is an initial facility to the Education, this continuum of relationships embraces all of the activities normal to the student day -- from active to passive."

The Urban Collegiate Unit, therefore, is not a center or building as such for commuter students. It is a way of relating facilities so that the student's daily life is focused more consistently on an emphasis of learning, with an effort to improve himself and his company.

Classrooms, faculty and counseling offices, study lounges, and carrels, recreation and eating, clusters of students could naturally form and support the interest and motivation essential to an education. Glassboro's VAC Stages Voting

Glassboro State College students who support the 18 year old vote stage a rally at the GSC gymnasium at 8 p.m. tonight.

While such a set of relationships is appropriate to normal student groups and honors colleges, it is of special advantage for the groups of inner city districts, minority students, who require a more insular and academic climate in order to sustain their desire for an education.

An initial facility to accommodate 1000 students is proposed. The groups would use the half of the course work here and up to one-half of the faculty teaching in the program would have "full status." Graduate assistants could have quarters in this facility, adding to the security and providing guidance.

Hockey Team Faces 4-0 Loss

By Patricia Simpson

With 11 girls on the field, "things are kind of rough with only 12 out for the team," sighed Pam Clause, left fullback on Montclair's varsity field hockey team, after Friday's loss against undefeated Trenton State.

In a fast-moving, mostly defensive game, Montclair held the score to 4-0.

"We were at our first disadvantage," said Miss Clause of the Oct. 17 game at Douglass College, "when we lost our goalie, Ellen John, on a knee injury and had to play the game one short."

In that game, center forward Barbara Crane made a solid shot to the upper right corner of the goal for Montclair's only point for the season thus far.

Optimistic despite their lack of bench strength, the girls are looking forward to a victory on Nov. 3 against Paterson State. The game will be played at Kimberly, a local private girls' school, due to lack of facilities at the Montclair campus. Marilyn Burke, former halfback, will take over as goalie.

A student-run organization, the WRA also handles such activities as cheerleading, color guard and workshop programs.

A Ph.D. is not the only title available from Langdon's mail-order school. Also listed are master's degrees, bachelor's degrees, associate degrees, honorary degrees, and a number of theological degrees.

"People always want to emphasize the bad things -- like my prison record. That was 30 years ago, and I haven't had so much as a parking ticket since."

Langdon's operations caused a stir recently when the Pennsylvania State Department of Education refused to recognize degrees that 12 Pennsylvania school administrators had received from Ohio Christian College. The refusals were based on the fact that Ohio Christian "is not accredited by any recognized agency," says OEA. Langdon threatened suit to compel Pennsylvania to recognize their degrees.

Ohio Christian is one of a national chain of colleges affiliated with the Calvary Grace Christian Churches of Faith, led by OEA. The "international general superintendent" for Calvary Grace Christian Churches of Faith, says OEA, is Herman Keck of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

The only organizations which accredit Ohio Christian College are the National Commission on Accrediting Association and the Association of Fundamental Institutions of Religious Education. The first organization reports OEA, is run by Langdon, the second by Keck. The OEA report adds, "The certificate of accreditation from the NEAA hanging in his front hall is signed by 19-year-old Gene Thompson, who lives in a boys' home which Langdon also runs. Thompson is listed as registrar of Ohio Christian College."

All Out for Soccer

Anyone who attended the night soccer game at Sprague field against Paterson State will agree that the Montclair State College soccer team has displayed its worth of being an integral part of the athletic department. Everyone who turned out to view the tremendous game should be commended on its interest and active participation.

Mr. Walter Shields should also be thanked for his excellent announcing job. He not only served as an announcer of the standard procedures that are expected of this position, but also explained certain key situations which were helpful to the spectators, most of whom knew nothing about the game.

I think that the players and coaches should be acknowledged as a highly respected group, and the athletic department give deep thought to bringing our soccer team back to the campus.

The future of soccer at Montclair State College is up and coming and I sincerely hope that the team has continued success. Let's get out there and support them.

Gymnast Gail Bakker

By Patricia Simpson

Canadian representative in the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo, Mrs. Gail Bakker is here at Montclair State as a graduate assistant in the women's gymnastic team. Using her experience as a competitive gymnast, Mrs. Bakker introduces the members of the team to the techniques of her field. Straying feminine grace at all times, Mrs. Bakker explains that gymnastic ability is "not so much a matter of strength as it is coordination and timing. The trick is not to look muscular but to have body control and endurance. This is important in competition where you are judged on precision to the finest detail. Keeping trim is half the battle." To prove her point, she has put the whole team on a diet.

Mrs. Bakker entered the 1962 World Games in Czechoslovakia at the tender age of 16. She now coaches the MSC women's gymnastic team.

MSC Breezes Past Upsala, 21-0

By Al Shipley

Staff Reporter

The Indians of Montclair State, behind a strong passing attack led by quarterback Bill Kulikowski, defeated Upsala, 21-0, at Viking Field last Saturday. Montclair posted its second shutout of the season and boosted its won-lost record to 4-2.

Kulikowski, greatly aided by a strong pass blocking offense, has plenty of time to locate Glen Morschauser and Roland Kascher six times for 67 yards. In the second period Montclair sustained a drive which brought them within field goal position. Bob Brewster's three point attempt, however, was wide to the right.

Montclair's final score came as a gift when the Upsala center snapped the ball over the head of their punter and the Indians took possession on the four yard line. Two plays later Kulikowski dove over the goal line to add six points to the Indian score.

MSC vs. UPSALA

MSC 7 7 0 7 1 1
Upsala 0 0 0 0 0 0

Scoring

MSC Morschauser, 30 yard pass from Kulikowski (Brewster kick)
MSC Kulikowski, 1 yard run (Brewster kick)

The Indian offense looked strong, rushing for 191 yards and passing for 151. Kulikowski ran for 64 yards in 12 carries, Cooper 56 yards in 14, and Morschauser 42 yards in 15 carries.

On defense the Indians looked just as strong, intercepting 4 Upsala passes (Bob Jensen, Joe Kostecki, Al Kaplanovich, and John Brunetti) and recovering a fumble, while shutting out the Vikings.

We'd really like to belt you one.

One belt is the lightly shaped Norfolk, in English corduray lined with wool. Or in wool twills lined with Orinon* pyle. 36 to 46. $37.50

The other belt is the bush coat, also shaped, in pure wool plaid, or pure wool twills and two bellows and two muff pockets. S.M.L.XL.
P.S. The belt detaches for those who'd rather not be belted constantly.

Harriers Place Top 3
Runners in Quad Meet

The Montclair State College cross-country team just completed a very successful week of running, in this season's running. The Harriers won a 3000 meter, three-man AAU cross-country race, and also won four regular season meets.

Sophomore Vic Mizzone has been leading the team so far, by finishing first in all of last week's races.

MSC won the 3000 meter, three-man AAU race last week by placing runners first, second and sixth. Kevin McGrath and Dale Rodgers came in second and sixth respectively, with Vic Mizzone winning out all his competitors.

Last Wed., Oct. 22, the Montclair State harriers ran a home cross-country meet against Monmouth College. Montclair won by a score of 23-35.

Vic Mizzone, Dale Rodgers, and Kevin McGrath all finished in a three-way tie for first place.

Freshmen Phil O'Connell and John Schwarz also finished in the MSC top five.

On Saturday, the Montclair won the overall honors in a quadrangular meet against Jersey City State College, St. Peter's, and City College of New York. MSC placed its first three runners as one, two and three. Mizzone ran very well, and had a very commanding lead over the rest of the field. McGrath finished second and Rodgers finished third.

Joe Freeman and Phil O'Connell, both freshmen, finished up as the MSC fourth and fifth men.

Montclair beat St. Peter's by a score of 22-24, and they beat CCNY by a score of 25-35. Jersey City State was shut-out by the MSC harriers by the score of 15-50.

Dr. George Horn, the cross-country coach, commented that "the team has rounded into good shape, and they should run well in the big meets."

The varsity cross-country team now has a record of 5-6.

Winning four straight games is no trick of fate or unusual luck. "The Mets have a great team, with a lot of talent, and if you aren't big enough to admit it, maybe you had better find someone who is to write for you." The above letter was one of many that were sent to me as a result of last week's commentary on the Amazing Mets. I would like to take apart this letter, and try to express my views a little bit better than I did in last week's article.

The following letter was sent to the sports editor of the MONTCLARION, in regard to last week's commentary "Mets Win in Series MiMatch." The letter is dated Oct. 22, and reads:

"If you can't admit defeat gracefully, then don't bother to admit it at all. A newspaper is supposedly objective, but your article on the Mets was far from this standard." As in any editorial, it is the editor's prerogative to write what he wants to and what he feels. No editorial or commentary can please everyone.

The letter began "if you can't admit defeat gracefully, then don't bother to admit it at all." The article was not meant for Montclair, when at 7:00 of the second period, he put a shot past the NSC goalie. Klaus Nemetz, an Austrian exchange student, assisted on Lukin's goal. MSC's next two goals, both scored by sophomore Kevin Kearns, came within 22 seconds of each other. Kearns' first goal, at 14:06 of the second period, was scored after he had taken a cornerkick from Arvi Saar. The next goal was Kearns' second game was on an 18 yard head shot that came just 22 seconds after his first goal.

The Montclair scoring attack was stopped by the Newark defense, until 8:30 into the fourth period. At that time, Bill Kazdoba took a pass from John Smith and scored his 14th goal of the season. The Montclair's next MSC soccer game was against Monmouth College goalie.

John Lukin, the Montclair's next MSC soccer game was against Monmouth College goalie.
