New Committee Considers Phys. Ed. - Athletics Split

By Helene Zuckerbrod and John Aneson

Definition of the role of athletics and the relationship between the health and physical education dept. and the athletic program will be the goals of a committee to be developed to investigate the alleged separation between those two elements of MSC.

At the present time, a newly-appointed committee is working "to establish a larger committee truly representative of the college community, faculty, and students," according to Dr. Harry H. Hoitsma, assistant professor of health and physical education and chairman of the infant committee. Other committee members include Mr. William P. Dioguardi, director of athletics; Dr. Richard W. Tews, physical education dept. chairman; and Dr. Hazel M. Wacker, professor of health and physical education.

Much of the controversy surrounding recent activities of the Montclair Athletic Commission (MAC) centers around the hiring of Mr. Clay Anderson, former Montclair High School football coach, as assistant athletic director, football, basketball, and baseball coach, and supervisor for summer maintenance of Sprague field.

In the past, a screening committee under the direction of Tews appraised all candidates. Candidates also had to have teaching positions under the physical education dept. As a result of the circumstances surrounding the Anderson affair, disagreements over the hiring of coaches has arisen.

In order to insure the educational values of coaching, Tews feels the hiring of coaches should come under the auspices of the physical education dept. On the other hand, Dioguardi favors hiring through the athletic dept. to alleviate the tenure aspect of the professor-coach situation in firing said coaches. This change in policy has prompted many people to believe that the two departments have split.

In a recent article in the MONTCLARION, Tews emphasized that "while legally there is no separation between the physical education and athletic departments, the hiring of Anderson as a full-time coach without (his) knowledge or consent forms an automatic separation between the two departments."

According to Dr. T. Richardson, "the question raised is how to organize a good physical education program and a successful athletic program." Adding "that in order to have good athletics, the program must combine the educational value with the competitive value." Richardson feels that the sustenance of hiring coaches to do a job that includes teaching and coaching could be questioned.

In regard to questions charging the "loading" of the future committee, Hoitsma stressed the "we can assure (that the committee) will be fairly representative of all sides," by approaching the question as objectively as possible, welcoming all ideas, and by considering all organizations in regards to membership. Final proposals will be sent to the coordinating committee — the main student-faculty-administrative committee — for study and recommendations following discussion in an open forum. Final action on all decisions will be taken by the Board of Trustees.

"The above approach," according to Richardson, "provides for a full review of goals, organizations, and responsibility and then the development of a plan that will serve Montclair not only for the moment but also will take into account future growth and development."
Eugene Kops, associate professor of history, pursued black studies on her own through high school and college and wrote her senior thesis at Columbia University on the Reconstruction Period. Presently she teaches the Negro in American History, a "survey course that functions well for those who are ignorant of this topic, but a more in-depth analysis is needed."

To meet this need Mrs. Moore suggests more courses, which would also include smaller classes and better discussions. She also wonders whether a black studies major or department is being formed. Befitting that "the black man's contribution to U.S. war is continuous criquitte on American ideals," Mrs. Moore gives her course a more "humanistic approach, but rather a media-involved experience in which the students can heighten their awareness of the art of Sub-Saharan Africa by carving, mask-making, and, possibly, making slides of African works.

Plummer further states, "It is hoped that both black and white students will together develop an appreciation, one might say, an empathy for the traditional art of black Africa. In this respect it is akin to the WASP in that they establish their ancestors' European clan relationships." "I don't want my students to categorize and label instead of understanding." In his course on the black family Mr. Howard Newby also wanted his students to "make valid judgments."

Mrs. Emily Waters teaches the course Influence of Afro-American Culture on Music, to a class that refuses to leave at the end of the period. Recordings of jazz, calypso, bapousa nova, and spirituals combined with live performances by a steel drum band, Faye Witcher, an MSC student who demonstrated an interest in music as an intercultural discipline. She plans to "get young blacks and whites to see, by historical and sociological means, the social illusions under which the black man has been forced to struggle for equality, freedom, and dignity," his course is "not a course on the role of the black American in contemporary society," but a "positive goal is to generate the kind of excitement in students."
Urban Study Starts

In an attempt to establish better communications among different groups on campus, in the community and industries, an Urban Awareness Workshop was recently organized by the MSC Urban Institute. It held its first meetings on the evenings of Oct. 10 and 11 in College Hall.

Mr. James Harris, MSC academic counselor, stated that the Urban Awareness Workshop "will help clarify the college's role in urban programs, by promoting an open arena of discussions among faculty, students, community and industrial representatives." He also commented that he expects the program to be very successful because "people are showing an interest in it."

Harris, a 1968 graduate of MSC who worked last year with the Urban Institute, was asked to recruit participants for the workshop. Explaining the significance of the new program, he said, "The college can no longer live in a vacuum, surrounded by urban groups." He added that he believes "better communication" can be achieved at the workshop meetings, where participants form several groups, choose topics which are of particular interest to them, and are given a chance to express themselves and their ideas.

Harris also explained that professional leaders guide the discussions within the groups. Student assistants also help direct the discussions, but the participants decide on the subjects to be discussed. Harris stated that some of the topics which should aid communication include "the pros and cons of urban studies, the presence of blacks on campus, and how the college can respond to the needs of both urban and non-urban students."

When asked if he felt that the Urban Awareness Workshop will be successful in accomplishing its aims, Harris replied that the first meetings showed this. He explained that there was a "crowded situation" at these meetings, indicating a real interest in the program.

He said that because the workshop provides an opportunity for all people on campus and in the community to share their feelings and opinions, the program should prove quite valuable in promoting communication and understanding among all groups. He feels that this will greatly benefit the college.

Mall Petition Underway

By Patricia M. Romanish

Chains still block the road in front of Life Hall, currently known as the pedestrian mall, while petitions calling for the reopening of the road still circulate.

The eight copies of a petition originated by senior chemistry major Ward Nelson warn commuters that the two remaining entrances to parking areas "will be either impassable during bad weather or will remain inadequate."

The commuters' only access to the parking lots now is either by a road past the gym to the rear of the library and Mallory hall or through the freshman parking lot and up a steeply inclined "s" curved road.

"Unless the mall road is opened," Nelson said, "these access roads will be even more congested than at present and will be extremely hazardous under icy conditions."

Having originated and circulated the petitions, Nelson also hopes to collect them and submit the lists to Mr. Vincent B. Calabrese, vice-president of business and financial services at MSC. However, Nelson expressed disappointment that, "many commuters who I know are dissatisfied with the barricade will not sign the petition. He added, "They just don't want to get involved."

In spite of the slow movement of the petitions, Nelson said, "I hope to see the mall opened to commuters before the snow falls."

It's Cahill for Governor

With today's edition of the MONTCLARION, we break a long-standing policy of keeping mum about endorsing political candidates.

It is our view that when candidates make statements regarding our interests, we cannot be content to sit on the sidelines just to watch the game go on. Therefore, we feel compelled to register a few remarks about the current gubernatorial stakes.

Generally, the campaign for Jersey Governor has been based on the personal lives of the two key men running for office, rather than concentrating on basic issues. Both Democrat Robert B. Meyner and Republican William T. Cahill have been issuing low-keyed, lukewarm position papers regarding today's main issues: education, urban aid, statewide crime, ad infinitum.

Both, however, squawk about sources of personal income, campaign expenses, and other trivia.

These types of diver-jonary tactics are certainly resentful. But at the same time candidate Cahill has been taking a sensible approach to the situation. The GOP contender has opened his private and business records to public examination, while former Gov. Meyner has kept the lid sealed on what he calls his "private business."

Meyner, while a capable establishment-oriented former governor, is a relic of a bygone political era. His enemies and errors were made in the 1950s. And even the Democratic-controlled boss-machine of Hudson county has turned against him. Significantly, the former governor, in our opinion, is ill-prepared to govern this state in the 1970s.

On the other hand, Cahill has recognized many of the important state problems, and he plans to do something about them.

Cahill called existing higher education conditions an "outrage," and said a thorough reorganization was mandatory.

He has called for a complete overhaul of the state's draft board system because of "discriminatory conditions." The GOP contender said the black population of New Jersey is 8.5%, yet there are no black members of the state's 176 draft boards.

He is supporting low-income housing in urban areas; broadened technical planning on the urban level to attract more industry; and wider planning assistance to counties and municipalities.

Finally, Cahill has recommended that policemen receive training in constitutional law, sociology and neighborhood relations.

We think William T. Cahill should be the next governor of New Jersey.

Vote 18

There is no doubt that today's 18-year-old is acutely aware of the political, social and economic crises afflicting New Jersey. Especially, today, with the great effect that mass media has on elections and politics, and the exposure to mass media that today's young people have had, the 18-through-21 age group is more greatly involved in campaigns and other political fields than his parents were in their youth.

The amount of effort that the 18-to-21 group have put into obtaining the power to vote is evidence enough of their honest desire to take a part in this nation's legislative process. We believe that their efforts should receive the support of all New Jersey citizens.

New Jersey gubernatorial hopefuls Cahill and Meyner disagree in their approach to solving existing problems of narcotics addiction in the state.

Cahill believes the addicts should be confined in treatment centers until cured. The program he would institute would be similar to the one in New York City and consist of holding addicts under criminal commitment of addicts. He says that, until now, no one realized the extent of the narcotics problem: therefore, it wasn't provided for properly. Treatment centers, he believes, would enable an addict to obtain professional help in seeking a cure from narcotics addiction.

Cahill said the penalties for the use of marijuana by young first offenders should be lightened. He said these young people should not be saddled with a criminal record after their first offense. He did say, however, that he would not go to any other extreme to lighten the laws or penalties concerning marijuana.

Meyner sees no reason for any change in the law. He believes that education about drugs can help in the decrease of narcotic addiction.

The way to cure addicts is another subject that came under discussion by both candidates. Cahill believes methadone, a drug used to cure addicts as a heroin substitute, has proven itself. He says it is an effective and inexpensive way to combat drug addiction. He believes that methadone checks addiction, which would check the crime rate; crimes are often committed by addicts needing money to support their habits.

"There is no responsibility facing the next governor of New Jersey more grave than the field of education." This statement by William T. Cahill, Republican candidate for governor, appeared in an article published in the September 1969 issue of NIEA Review. Robert E. Meyner exhibited a similar viewpoint when he said, "support and development of public education has been and will continue to be the most important function of state government."

Meyner recalls that, during his administration, state aid to education more than tripled. Also, a program for aid to school building was established, the teachers' pension and annuity fund was revived to yield greater benefits, a teacher life insurance program was begun, and the first minimum wage law for teachers was established. In addition, the community college system for New Jersey was proposed, and the first state colleges were vastly expanded in the areas of enrollment and curriculum.

In addressing the matter of elementary and secondary education, Cahill stated that the 1966-69 Republican majority as the state Legislature has taken great steps toward solving mainly existing problems. Among the most important measures enacted were a $90 million emergency school building program, $27.5 million in educational television network, an urban education corps. Neighborhood centers and an incentive program for teachers to reward innovation. Responding, Meyner says that the next governor must increase the state's role in the financing of elementary and secondary education. "It must be clear that no New Jersey community can bear by itself the rapidly increasing costs of quality education." He also proposes to increase the amount of emergency building aid available to New Jersey's expending suburbs and large cities. Meyner also advocates expansion of the educational system for those not planning to attend college. Cahill applauds the accomplishments of the '68-'69 on public education grave concern.

Lack of money for urban aid is considered by the two New Jersey candidates for governor to be the biggest problem of the cities.

In a recent article appearing in the Newark Star-Ledger, William T. Cahill, the Republican candidate for governor, and Robert B. Meyner, the Democratic candidate, both expressed their views on urban programs. In the article, both candidates agreed on the need for massive reconstruction programs.

Cahill told the Ledger that he finds fault with the federal government for not supplying the cities with enough money for urban programs. He does feel the plan proposed by Richard M. Nixon's concept of urban aid is good and will greatly help the cities once the Vietnamese war is ended.

Meyner also sees the federal government in the cause for much of the cities' troubles according to a recent article in the Newark Evening News. He said that much of the decay of the cities is due to cutbacks by the Nixon administration. He remarked that Nixon was using back on urban renewal programs such as "Model Cities" in favor of funds for the nation's war and defense projects such as ABM.

Cahill also told reporters from the Ledger that many of the city's problems are due to misuse of the federal urban renewal funds. Most funds, according to Cahill, are being used to tear down the cities without allowing enough money for new construction. He said his plans for urban aid include the construction of more low income housing.

Meyner told reporters from the Star-Ledger that in order to aid the cities he will keep the federal agencies aware of the threat that the decaying conditions of the cities have upon the country. He added that "New Jersey would be sadly penalized in favor of rural areas." Concerning the effect that the new federal welfare program will have on New Jersey, Cahill said that an influx of population into New Jersey from other states will be discouraged since the welfare programs of the other states will have a larger allotment.

Theater at Millburn is "Cabaret," old chum

Review by

Drama/Arts Editor

"Willkommen... Sogez bienvenues... Welcome to Berlin. Sit back, enjoy, enjoy... " and so the audience in Millburn sits back and enjoys the fun and frolic of "Cabaret," the Tony Award-Winning Broadway musical of a few seasons back. It is a play full of song, all of which have made some impact. Throughout the first act, one can comprehend the forces which drove the tragedy's principal characters to destroy themselves. The play evolved as a total endeavor that is a typical deviation of most jazzmen.

"Cabaret" is a stunning show that makes one think that hope people will learn and change. But it is a theatrical history that plays do not change people. Time magazine points out that if this were true, wars would have ended 3,000 years ago with "The Trojan Women." Thus, in all probability, neither are they unnecessary, for the tragic impact of Miss Starkey's book is inherent in the naked facts of the Salem madness.

Media Courses Popular with Students

After 24 years as a research engineer, Mr. Bernard Kahn - member of the MSC fine arts department, decided he needed a change so he switched to a career in art.

Seeing an article in The New York Times offering a New Careers Program at Columbia University, Kahn took the entrance exams and was awarded a fellowship grant. He received his M.A. in fine arts, and recently he became a member of the faculty at Montclair State.

His most recent creative endeavor was a presentation on Sept. 17 at Ridgewood High School in Ridgewood, N.J., entitled "Art and Technology - A Multi-Media Happening."

Kahn set the stage with colored lights, films, slides and props while Frances Alenkoff, avant-garde dancer, performed "Health Notes, Skin Layers, Body Bits, and Spaces Between the Spokes of the Wheel" to a slide, dance - lights and effects - kinetic sculpture to create happenings, events and productions. We try to improve and bring together materials and equipment to engage in a multi-media art experience.

Plans for the course include an outdoor happening in the spring, in which Kahn hopes to see his students come alive to the possibilities of various media. Exploring these possibilities further, a graduate course in multi-media is also offered by the college. Taught by Mr. Peter Barnett, the course includes projects in environments and light shows.

Asked if he was unhappy with his work as an engineer, Kahn remarked that he just "needed something different."

"I want to bring a young art to this school," he added. "That's what multi-media is. It's a fun thing for young people to get involved in. We make our own entertainment."

New Home Ec. Prof.
Is Richard Bullock

By Valerie Frager
Staff Reporter

The only male member of the home economics department faculty, Dick L. Bullock, is new to Montclair State this semester.

Bullock believes that, "the great imbalance of the sexes in the department is unfortunate, as it would be in any situation where there is an imbalance," he said. This is not new to him; he formerly taught at Northern Illinois University in the home economics department - there he was the only male instructor.

Bullock is replacing David Balderston who left Montclair State last year. Balderston, who taught here for five years, developed the family life program in home economics including such courses as psychology of family relations and workshop in sex education.

Both these courses are humanities electives, open to all students. Bullock expressed regret that home economics courses "often carry a Mickey Mouse connotation." In other words, some students consider them an easy way to earn two or three credits. His job, he said, is "to help the student learn from the course regardless of what his motivation was in choosing it."

Students at MSC have impressed Bullock as "more conservative than expected. Generally they are first-generation college people from middle-class homes and not as intellectually aggressive as the type of student found at Columbia, for example."

Bullock is very pleased with the Montclair community, and New Jersey. Only one thing bothers him, the large size of his classes. "A class of 38 doesn't function well with my style of teaching," he said. "I am almost forced to make it a lecture-type thing, which I don't care for." He prefers student discussion and interaction in the classroom.

As an instructor of psychology and family relations, what does he think of the sex education controversy in the nation? "Unbelievable!" he said. "I don't deny that there are some bad sex ed. programs, but to damn the whole for a few defective parts is absurd.

Black Students Help
In Choosing President

By Michael Traylor
Staff Reporter

SOUTH ORANGE - Dennis O'Keefe, student government president of Seton Hall University and Vice-President Rick Spera met Monday with representatives of the Black Students League to discuss demands of the BSL after they disrupted a Student Senate meeting on Oct. 13.

BSL, which represents 75% of the black student body, has demanded a seat on a screening committee to select a new university president. The committee will be composed of three students, three faculty members, three alumni and three administrators.

The procedure for picking the student delegate, according to O'Keefe, is that they are picked by the Student Senate from nominations made by him. "I asked BSL to submit names to me but they never did."

BSL wants its delegate to be a member of a black person filling a seat. He states that "considering the area the school is in, the college could possibly by 50% black in the future."

O'Keefe places much importance on a black person filling a seat. He states that "considering the area the school is in, the college could possibly by 50% black in the future."

O'Keefe is mainly concerned with the second paragraph of the demands, namely that "there are problems in this campus that white students don't concern themselves with." O'Keefe feels that "if we don't point it out, they would not be wise to have the entire Student Senate meet with the BSL."

WHY'S A NICE GIRL LIKE YOU FEELING

Every month? That's prehistoric!

You're not as mini as usual! It's only temporary, you know. A monthly problem. But who cares when you have that puffy, bloated, OB, I'm so fat feeling? TRENDAR helps keep you slim as you are all month long. Its modern discreet, water-reducing action controls temporary premenstrual weight gain. (That can be up to 7 pounds!) Start taking TRENDAR 10 days before that time. It'll help you look better and feel better. TRENDAR. It makes you glad you're a girl!
Women dorm residents are now considering a closed door policy. According to Alice Gertz, vice-president of the dorm council, too many students and visitors have been allowed in the dorms. Freeman and Russ halls have voted to institute this policy, allowing only those with special permission into the girls' rooms at specified hours.

"It seems almost unanimous that the girls are in favor of the new policy," said Mrs. Gertz. The policy was initiated last spring in the men's dorms. However, dorm committee composed of the three dorm representatives, desk girls and other students is studying brochures of other colleges which have instituted this policy.

If passed, the resolution must be presented to President Thomas H. Richardson and coordinators of the residence halls.

Previously, men have been allowed in female rooms during an open house held in the spring and fall. Last year, the curfew was extended to 2 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights, and during Homecoming '69, there was an unlimited curfew. Mrs. Gertz feels that "each step has been a step towards independence, the girls have to learn to handle their own affairs."

The questionnaire, written by Belinda Balentine and Valerie Pennington, was circulated among the women residents. It concerns questions on the open door policy about hours, dress code, and signing-in.

Votes are still in the process of being tallied; if it is passed, the dorm route plan will go into effect next semester.

Committee on Committees
Participation Aids Operation

Student equality student-faculty participation sharing responsibilities. These, according to Dr. Samson McDowell, vice-president of instruction and chairman of the Committee on Committees, are the purposes of that and other 'wide committees.'

"In order to have an effective, operating college, the college requires the active participation of all faculty members and students in order to go the extra mile," said McDowell.

The Committee on Committees, said McDowell, is composed of administrative, faculty, and student representatives. This year's members include: McDowell; Mr. Anthony R. Kuoit, associate dean of instruction; Dr. Hugh Allen, professor of physics and science education; Dr. Leonard J. Buchner, director of psychological services and professor of psychology; Dr. Earl E. Mosier, professor of education; Kenneth Traynor, SGA president; and Greg Ducotte, SGA vice-president.

A committee on committees is frequently used by universities and colleges to fill in the numerous committees necessary to keep the university or college enterprise rolling," stressed McDowell.

Though having no legislative power, the committee on committees chooses the chairmen of the various committees. "We take great care to be reasonably sure that a responsive person heads (each) committee," he added.

Membership on all committees, said McDowell, is on a voluntary basis. Faculty and students request to be placed on specific committees. Each roster of committees, he explained, is then presented for student-faculty consultation in an executive meeting of the Committee on Committees.

"It's a matter of choice," added McDowell. "We just put it together.

While the various committees cover all areas of campus operation, the committee on committees strives that they do not make policy. Instead, committee recommendations are forwarded to the Committee on Committees at the end of the year, which, in turn, refers them to the faculty and administrative councils for study. If considered feasible and necessary, the recommendations will attempt to implement them.

Jersey City State President Installed

By Katherine Vargo
Staff Reporter

JERSEY CITY — Dr. James H. Mullen took the oath of office as the 19th president of Jersey City State College, compared the college campuses metaphorically to a "small society."

In his inauguration speech, Mullen called on students of the college to come "together" and attempt to solve existing problems. Acting administrator since Aug. 1, he was formally installed on Oct. 8. He feels that if the conflicts on the campuses can be worked out by the joint efforts of students and faculty, then society as a whole will benefit from one group's progress.

Amidst racial tension on the college campuses, colleges and universities throughout the nation are instituting racial studies in their curricula. However, Mullen said in his speech that this is only a step in attempting to study minority groups. In the future, he added, he wants to institute courses on Spanish-speaking and other minority factions. By studying the history of other peoples, he feels a deeper insight will be gained into existing differences.

Before coming to JSCC two years ago, Mullen was the former vice-president for academic affairs and professor of economics at Rider College, Trenton. Earlier he worked in the admission office at the University of Pennsylvania. His degrees include a B.A., M.B.A., and a Ph.D., all from the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Edward J. Meade Jr., chairman of the board of trustees at JSCC, installed Mullen as the eighth president. Mullen, at 44, became the youngest president since the founding of the college in 1927.

Ralph A. Dungan, chancellor of higher education in New Jersey, was the chief guest speaker at the installation. In greeting Mullen on his new office, Dungan stressed what the duty of a college president should be. He said "the college president should work towards peace between black and white students by not favoring one group over the other."

President Thomas H. Richardson of Montclair State College was among the 35 college presidents and representatives dressed in flowing black robes who attended the ceremony consisting of speeches and singing by the college choir.

Anti-semitism and race prejudice were charged against the Gothic Times, student newspaper at Jersey City State College. The charges were levied by Morris J. Janoff, publisher of the Jewish Standard, a metropolitan newspaper.

Entitled "Golda Lox and the Three Blacks" the story is modeled after the Goldilocks legend, according to the editor of the Gothic Times, Edward Kleinman, intended as a "social commentary." Janoff's objections to the article were specifically directed against the obscenities within the article and what he felt was inference to Jewish slum owners' exploitation of black occupants.

Speaking of the charge of anti-semitic overtones, Kleinman commented that he "never expected that (anti-semitism) would be picked out of the article." He also stated, "I'm a Jew myself' and suggested that the inference to Jewish slum owners' was intended as a "putdown" of the students involved.

Janoff feels that "its contents are excessive. It is very abusive. It is very offensive. It is very inappropriate," and his company. The report, entitled "The Glassboro's VAC" Buildngs Include Home for Commuters

DETROIT (IP) — Can the commuting student ever have a home away from home, some small corner of the campus that even for a few minutes he might call his own? A new report prepared by Wayne State University students after a year's research provides some possible solutions.

The report, entitled "The Commuter Student," was written by Prof. Richard F. Ward, geology, and Theodore E. Kurz, a consulting architect. It was financed by a 1967 grant from the Urban Institute, is A subsidiary of Cowles Book Company, Inc.

The college editor further stated that the language which triggers obscenities obviates four letter words should not have been censored, especially in the context in which they were used. Kleinman insisted that, "its use was for shock value, and it was used in the makeup of the stereotype." He also stated, "I'm a Jew myself' and suggested that the inference to Jewish slum owners' was intended as a "putdown" of the students involved.

While such a set of relationships is appropriate to normal student groups and honors colleges, it is of special advantage for the groups of inner city disadvantaged students, who require a more extended academic climate in order to sustain their desire for an education.

An initial facility to accommodate 1000 students is proposed. The groups would be made up of one-half of the courses that the students are following at the other school unless both he AND his department come to an exchange agreement. Such an agreement would have to take into consideration salary rates, and the number of semesters during which a faculty member would be performing dual tasks. Another item brought out by Mrs. Steinbach is that in actuality, the special TRY adviser working with the guidance department in order to make a more effective use of the counseling services offered to not only TRY students but to all students.

The Urban Collegiate Unit, therefore, is not a center or building as such for commuter students. It is a way of organizing the facilities so that the student's daily life is focused more consistently on an emphasis on his campus in his effort to improve himself and his company.

Hockey Team Faces 4-0 Loss

By Patricia Simpson

With 11 girls on the field, "things are kind of rough with only 12 out for the team," sighed Pam Clause, left fullback on Montclair's varsity field hockey team, after Friday's 4-0 loss against undefeated Trenton State.

In a fast-moving, mostly defensive game, Montclair held the score to 4-0.

"We were at our first disadvantage," said Miss Clause of the Oct. 17 game at Douglass College, "when we lost our goalie, Ellen Johns, on a knee injury and had to play the game one short."

In that game, center forward Barbara Crane made a solid shot at the right upper corner of the goal for Montclair's only point for the season, and is affiliated with the New Jersey Athletic Association.

Besides field hockey, programs in gymnastics, track and field, modern dance, basketball, volleyball, fencing, archery, tennis, swimming, and softball are available.

A student-run organization, the Women's Recreation Association (WRA) also handles such activities as cheerleading, color guard and��和 swimming. The WRA is a division of the Montclair Athletic Commission and is affiliated with the New Jersey Athletic Association.

Besides field hockey, programs in gymnastics, track and field, modern dance, basketball, volleyball, fencing, archery, tennis, swimming, and softball are available.

Dr. Donald G. Langdon, home team coach, expressed her disappointment in the turnout for the game at Kimberly, a local private girls' school, due to lack of facilities at the Montclair campus. Marilyn Burk, former halfback, will take over as goalie.

"I am not surprised at all to see someone try to get me. All my life, everything I've published has been done under all kinds of strife because I made some mistakes many years ago."

Langdon pictured the OEA: "I'm not surprised at all to see someone try to get me. All my life, everything I've published has been done under all kinds of strife because I made some mistakes many years ago."

People always want to emphasize the bad things — like my prison record. That was 30 years ago, and I haven't had so much as a parking ticket since."

Langdon's operations caused a stir recently when the Pennsylvania State Department of Education refused to recognize degrees that 12 Pennsylvania school administrators had received from Ohio Christian. The refusal was based on the fact that Ohio Christian "is not accredited by any national recognition agency," says OEA. Langdon threatened suit to compel Pennsylvania to recognize the degree.

Ohio Christian is one of a national chain of colleges affiliated with the Calvary Grace Christian Churches of Faith, leaders of which claim the "international general superintendent" for Calvary Grace Christian Churches of Faith, says OEA, is Herman Keck of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

The only organizations which accredit Ohio Christian College are the National Christian Accrediting Association and the Association of Fundamental Institutions of Education. The first organization, reports OEA, is run by Langdon, the second by Keck. The OEA report adds, "The certificate of accreditation from the NEAA hanging in his front hall is signed by 19-year-old Gene Thompson, who lives in a boys' home which Langdon also runs. Thompson is listed as registrar of Ohio Christian College."

Special to the Montclarion

State certification of teachers or schools periodically enrages some critics. The latest to launch a salvo is Alvin O. Langdon, who runs a mail-order college from his Columbus, Ohio, home.

Langdon's school is called Ohio Christian College. "For $350," reports the Ohio Education Association, (OEA) "it's possible to get a Ph.D. in a matter of weeks."

Langdon complained: "This whole matter of accreditation is a real problem. It's an old, archaic, outmoded system."

Langdon formerly operated Central Christian College, but in 1965 the State of West Virginia refused to give his school a license. That's when Langdon moved to Ohio, which has no state certification law.

Now, however, the Ohio Legislature is considering a bill which would establish a state licensing board for private colleges. Any institution not licensed by the board could not operate in Ohio.

Langdon told the OEA: "I'm not surprised at all to see someone try to get me. All my life, everything I've published has been done under all kinds of strife because I made some mistakes many years ago."

People always want to emphasize the bad things — like my prison record. That was 30 years ago, and I haven't had so much as a parking ticket since."

A Ph.D. is not the only title available from Langdon's mail-order school. Also listed are master's degrees, bachelor's degrees, associate degrees, honorary degrees, and a number of theological degrees.

Upon reflection, most critics of certification realize that what they oppose is a particular standard, policy, or rule — but not the principle of state certification over an important public service. Generally, only critics with very special interests oppose the principle.

All Out for Soccer

Anyone who attended the night soccer game at Sprague field against Paterson State will agree that the Montclair State College soccer team has displayed its worth of being an outmoded system.

Mr. Walter Shields should also be thanked for his excellent announcing job. He not only served as an announcer during home games, but also explained certain key situations which was helpful to the spectators, most of whom knew nothing about the game.

I think that the players and coaches should be acknowledged as a highly respected group, and the athletic department give deep thought to bringing our soccer team back to the campus.

The future of soccer at Montclair State College is up and coming and I sincerely hope that the team has continued success. Let's get out there and support them.

OLYMPIC GYMNAST: Mrs. Gail Bakker, now a graduate assistant in the physical education dept. had entered the 1962 games at the age of 16. She now coaches the MSC women's gymnastic team.
The Montclair State College soccer team, rated eighth of the top 10 soccer teams in the nation, extended its winning streak to nine games. The varsity booters are now 10-2-1.

During the past week, the soccer team defeated Newark State College by a score of 4-0, and they defeated Monmouth College by a score of 6-0. Kevin Kearns, John Lukin, and John Smith provided MSC’s main scoring output.

The game against Newark State College, now 3-5, proved to be a very interesting game, due to the fact that a 20 MPH wind was blowing throughout most of the game.

John Lukin, a powerful sophomore forward, started off the scoring for Montclair, when at 7:00 of the second period, he put a shot past the MSC goalie. Klaus Nemetz, an Austrian exchange student, assisted on Lukin’s goal.

MSC’s next two goals, both scored by sophomore Kevin Kearns, came within 22 seconds of each other. Kearns’ first goal, at 14:08 of the second period, was scored after he had taken a corner kick from Arvi Saar. The next goal shot by Kearns was on an 18 yard head shot that came just 22 seconds after his first goal.

The Montclair scoring attack was stopped by the Newark defense, until 8:30 into the fourth period. At that time, Bill Kazdoba took a pass from John Smith and scored on a leftfooted shot from about 20 yards out, and beat the Monmouth goalie.

The Montclair goal was assisted by George Chapla, an MSC fullback. Thirty seconds later, John Millar, another fullback, took a pass from Bill Kazdoba and scored from about 18 yards out.

At 13:00 of the third period, junior John Smith took a leftfooted shot from about 20 yards out, and beat the Monmouth goalie.

John Lukin continued the MSC scoring at the 16:00 minute mark of the third period. The shot was from close in, after Kevin Kearns had taken the initial shot. MSC outshot Monmouth College by a margin of 33 to seven, while the Montclair goals posted six saves.

The Montclair State College soccer team has received permission to play its two remaining home soccer games, against C.W. Post and Adelphi, on Sprague field.

The first game to be played on campus is on Nov. 1, at 1 p.m. against C.W. Post. The game against Adelphi is to be played on Tues., Nov. 4 at 2 p.m.

In Rebuttal to the ‘Amazing Mets’

The following letter was sent to the sports editor of the MONTCLARION, in regard to last week’s commentary “Mets Win in Series MisMatch.” The letter is dated Oct. 22, and reads:

“’If you can’t admit defeat gracefully, then don’t bother to admit it at all.” A newspaper is supposedly objective, but your article on the Mets was far from this standard.”

But let someone else write an article which would at least give the Mets the credit they deserve.

The letter began “if you can’t admit defeat gracefully, don’t bother to admit it at all.” The article was meant to admit defeat to or to laud victory. It gave credit to the Mets, the underdogs in the World Series.

“A newspaper is supposedly objective, but your article on the Mets was far from this standard.” As in any editorial, it is the editor’s prerogative to write what he wants to and what he feels. No editorial or commentary can please everyone.

Also, I have no “prejudices” toward the Mets, and I give them all the credit in the world for winning the World Series and winning four straight games. They are a talented team. If they weren’t they would have never been in the World Series.

I would like to say that I appreciate the interest on the part of our readers, and anyone who in any way objects, or agrees, with what I say in these commentaries, is free to write to me, in care of the MONTCLARION.

The defense has allowed only six goals to be scored against them, in the past nine games. Goalie Roman Hancyz, a freshman, has posted five shut-outs so far this season, while the Montclair offensive team has helped by scoring 45 goals in nine games.

Arvi Saar, MSC’s All-American fullback, leads the Montclair defense this season. George Chapla, a promising sophomore fullback, has already boosted the MSC defense by his splendid playing so far this season.

The Montclair State College soccer team has received permission to play its two remaining home soccer games, against C.W. Post and Adelphi, on Sprague field.

The first game to be played on campus is on Nov. 1, at 1 p.m. against C.W. Post. The game against Adelphi is to be played on Tues., Nov. 4 at 2 p.m.
