During the two days of the moratorium President Thomas H. Richardson. His statement determined the views of faculty members. It came after a faculty meeting held last week to attend for students and faculty to be voluntary with no penalty for those who decide to absent themselves from classes.

Enrollment during the two days of the moratorium is equally as important as promises much for the future of the faculty and what they thought would result from their classes. The faculty would be doing the students a great disservice if full expression and active participation were not allowed. "It is not enough to simply teach in a classroom."

Before voting on their proposal the faculty expressed their various views concerning the moratorium and what actions should occur then. Dr. Robert Beckwith, history professor, believed "our function as an academic community is to educate." The faculty would be doing the students a great disservice if full expression and active participation were not allowed. "It is not enough to simply teach in a classroom."

Dr. Ernest B. Fincher, political science professor, has "discovered a new climate on campus" and feels that "what will happen Thursday, Friday and Saturday is of great importance to the future of the college and promises much for the future of the nation." He went on to say that "the moratorium is equally as important as what goes on in class."

Mr. Percy Johnston, a member of English dept. was disturbed last month when the faculty could not express its feelings. He continued, "It's the faculty's responsibility not to mislead students into thinking they'll receive amnesty for anarchy."

"The search for truth is our primary reason for existence," according to Dr. Daniel Brower, chairman of the psychology dept. He continued, "Montclair State can't hide from the Vietnam intervention. If U.S. campuses fail to keep open the channels of controversy, the channels will be closed." Regarding Montclair's policy he said, "The issue is not whether, but how to implement the decision."

Last week eight students staged a sit-in in President Richardson's office to express their dissatisfaction with the Board of Trustees policy, "The whole machinery has been by the President and Board of Trustees since they are ignoring student and faculty rights." When asked what they thought would result from their action, Pat O'Keefe, member of Student Peace Union said "no reason for optimism."

Later that day Richardson came out of his office and further clarified the Board of Trustees policy: the students will not be penalized for a cut and will be allowed to make up missed work, including exams; faculty members who wish to observe the moratorium would go to their department chairmen and will be assisted in finding a substitute for or some other method of handling their classes.

Nominations Up for Group On Phys. Ed. - Athletics

By Helene Zuckerbrod

Asst. News Editor

"Complex and involved issues surrounding the health and physical education department and athletic program, are, in the opinion of Dr. Harry H. Hoitsma, assistant professor of health and physical education, the reasons behind the formation of the committee for the study of athletics. "

Hoitsma, chairman of that committee, said the committee for the study of athletics will attempt to deal with the rationale behind both sides in the athletic dispute and will make recommendations regarding a split in athletics at MSC as a result of its findings. In order to have the academic departments represented, Hoitsma continued, a letter stating the purpose and importance according to the four man committee formulated to plan the larger committee — was sent to all department chairmen and to previously interested faculty members.

Two Dozen Enroll
Police Science Course Begins
By Mary Jean Stryczharz
Staff Reporter

Beginning in February, 24 policemen will participate in the police science program, a new series being offered by Montclair State's sociology department, for the purpose of training officers in municipal departments.

The program is in accordance with the Law Enforcement Education Program (LEEP) which has already begun to take effect at Montclair.

LEEP, part of the state's educational plan, offers a full tuition grant from the government for four years to any student planning a career in law enforcement or police sciences. The program is designed to upgrade the officers in municipal departments and provide more experienced and more capable policemen to serve the community.

The two dozen policemen have experienced and more capable officers to serve the community.

Jefferson Sets Cafeteria Aid
By Jeanne Schneider
Staff Reporter

Mr. Dale Jefferson, food service manager at MSC, is well aware of the problems and inconveniences which plague boarding students.

At last week's food committee meeting, Jefferson announced his proposals for making cafeteria dining more enjoyable. Several of the round tables from Freeman cafeteria will be exchanged for oblong tables in Life Hall cafeteria. Jefferson hopes to eliminate the "barracks" atmosphere of the dining area. Before this move is made however, fraternities and sororities will be consulted.

Each fraternity and sorority has its "own" table where brothers and sisters gather. Jefferson does not wish to disrupt this communal atmosphere.

Partitions are expected to be set up to divide the scraping and dish-washing area from the eating area in Life Hall's cafeteria. A vending machine serviceman is expected to arrive on campus within six weeks. These include frozen dessert and combination frozen yogurt and ice cream.

Plans are being made to give TUB a face-lifting in an effort to eliminate what Jefferson considers a "white tower" atmosphere. These plans include softer lighting and personality tables. Jefferson will be recruiting student help in this project.

November's dinner "special" will be an "American Heritage" buffet. Menus will be planned by a student committee. In order to facilitate service and reduce congestion, both the Freeman cafeteria and the Life Hall cafeteria will serve dinner that evening. Students will be asked to state where they wish to eat the night of the special a few days before the special is held.

Help Wanted
For Kennedy

Dropouts and potential dropouts in the Montclair community can now receive counseling, job placement and social work under the Kennedy Human Relations Project for Youth Inc.

Founded by Mrs. Lillie M. Connor, a Montclair resident, the project was expanded to audio-visual activities, arts and crafts, a television program. A nonprofit, nonpolitical organization, the project has met with considerable success.

All members of the project are volunteers and there are no professionals, such as social workers, involved. The project is presently operating from Mrs. Connor's home on Valley road, with a permanent project center can be found.

Foley Leaves For Middlesex
By Barbara Jean Minor
Staff Reporter

"I like MSC very much, but I have been given an opportunity to advance myself," said Mr. Robert J. Foley, assistant registrar at Montclair State College.

At an interview in his office on the second floor of College Hall, Foley explained that his application for the position of registrar at Middlesex County College, Edison, has been accepted. He commented that "lots of jobs come along, but I feel that this one is occurring at a suitable time in my career." Foley will leave MSC Nov. 21 to assume his new duties. He continued, comparing his work at MSC with the work he will undertake at Middlesex, and explained that the new job will involve more responsibilities.

An assistant professor of education, Foley began his work at MSC in September 1965, as assistant director of students and has served as assistant registrar since February, 1967.

Foley stated that some of the duties connected with the office of registration at MSC include registration of students, changes in programs, grade reports, handling of permanent records and transcripts, verification of attendance, giving information pertaining to the Selective Service Board, and collecting pertinent data.

Foley will begin his job as registrar at Middlesex County College on Nov. 24. He explained that though his work there will be basically the same as at MSC it will involve more responsibility. He said that the registrar's office at Middlesex has a larger staff, and is responsible for the master schedule and evaluation for graduation.

He added that he was "very much impressed" by Middlesex, a two-year liberal arts college with approximately 2400 full-time students. "Students who have transferred from Middlesex to MSC have done quite well, and I believe that Middlesex is a very good institution," commented Foley.
Where's the Princeton Plan?

Montclair State faculty members voted 126 to 87 in favor of the Princeton plan regarding a recommended faculty policy that should rule during November's two-day observance of the nationwide moratorium to protest the war in Vietnam.

However, after reviewing the above recommendation made by the Faculty Council, the MSC Board of Trustees chose to institute a less expansive policy. Gone is the do-your-own-thing setup exhibited here on Oct. 15 where both students and faculty members were guided by their consciences as to class attendance.

Rather, November's policy statement reads that faculty are recommended to postpone midterms and "faculty members who feel constrained to absent themselves from classes are requested to discuss this with their department chairman to arrange for coverage of their classes."

How much protection is being given to those students and faculty who wish to protest the war yet remain in classes or to those who do not wish to protest the war at all, the fact remains that the policy which will prevail tomorrow and Friday is not a majority policy. Since approximately 60% of the voting faculty members preferred the Princeton plan as the accepted policy, it seems that this is the policy which should have prevailed.

It is recognized that in its statement, the board has been representative of "the interests of the citizens of New Jersey, the students, and the faculty of Montclair State College." And although the board has apparently set policy as the citizens of New Jersey would want to run the college, we ask who is this college being run for?

Minority Representation

Leaders from black and Puerto Rican communities of Newark will meet this weekend at Clinton Place junior high school to formulate plans for the prospective election of a minority-group candidate as mayor of Newark in 1970.

As far as we understand, the conference will be controlled by capable representatives of Newark's minority communities, therefore, militant factions will probably shun the convention.

Since charges of malfeasance and corruption have been leveled against the current Newark administration, we see a strong need to reorganize and revive Newark's current political machine, especially for the benefit of minority representation.

Typical, Isn't It?

A Great Opportunity

Last week's landslide victory for William T. Cahill brought with it a great opportunity for the state of New Jersey.

The governor-elect wasted little time in calling upon his old friend Richard Nixon for some "new federalism" - a plan aimed at giving the states more control over federal programs. And Cahill has already conferred with Gov. Richard Hughes about future state business.

Seems that with all these factors working out well, plus a Republican-controlled legislature, we can look forward to four progressive years of state leadership under Cahill. Our best wishes are extended to him.

POLICY DISPUTES

The group in charge of the conference is the Newark Convention Planning committee, headed by Rutgers Prof. Robert Curvin. According to Curvin, the intention of the conference is to unite Newark's black and Puerto Rican voters behind a slate of minority candidates picked by delegates to the Newark pow-wow.

The biggest job facing the delegates is the selection of candidates and defining policy. For that purpose, the planning committee has adopted a unit of the American Arbitration Association to resolve any disputes.

There are presently two declared candidates ready to face the minority delegates: Kenneth Gibson, a civil engineer, and Harry Wheeler, a former teacher and community organizer.

The candidates, according to Curvin, must pledge support to the convention and its adopted platform. But there is presently no feedback from certain Newark city factions.
TRIBUTE TO A DECADE

The Spirit Still Lives

By Susan Dominski

The spirit of '63 lives! Though the external aspects may have altered, many of the major problems facing the nation in 1963 are still troubling it today. Civil rights, the Vietnam war, economic instability and the population explosion—all present six years ago—are still erupting in the U.S. today.

1963 was the year for civil rights. A widespread battle against racial discrimination was being fought in Congress and the courts as well as on the streets.

President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, Texas, on November 22. His death was followed by a bombing of a church in Birmingham on May 9; and three young black children were killed by a bomb thrown into a church in that city.

The climax to the racial turmoil came with the Aug. 28 March on Washington led by Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. 200,000 people gathered peacefully to focus attention on Negro job demands.

POSITIVE GAIN

Despite the turbulent activity by blacks and whites that year, a survey published by the American Jewish Council in December concluded “a positive gain in civil rights during '63, primarily because of the determination and dignity of the Negro community.”

Today, in 1969, the black man still does not have racial equality. Civil unrest continues to be a major problem facing the U.S., especially in urban areas. While many of the voting rights withheld from him in '63 have now been granted, in some areas the black man remains a second-class citizen. Desegregation in southern school systems is not enforced and job discrimination has not ended. Demonstrations and ghetto uprisings in 1969 testify to the fact that blacks are still fighting for their basic rights.

PROBLEMS UNRESOLVED

In other areas as well, the problems of '63 are far from resolved. The Vietnam war, a minor problem six years ago, has now assumed paramount importance. To a Senate subcommittee in 1963, Majority Leader Mike Mansfield remarked: “The time has now come for the war to lose their lives in Vietnam since the program of intensified assistance began in 1961. . . . There is no interest of the U.S. in Vietnam which would justify in present circumstances the continuation of the war... primarily into an American war to be fought with American lives.”

This feeling existed when 50 men had been killed in Vietnam. Now when tens of thousands have died, angry voices of outraged citizens have risen in dissent. The Vietnam war and racial tensions, major problems in the country today, are not the only ones that have been around for six years. International birth control studies were launched by the National Academy of Science on April 17, 1963. The report concluded: “Other than the search for peace, no other problem is more urgent than the one of excessive population.”

Another domestic problem in existence during the last six years is that of illegal drug importation and distribution. In 1963 an attack against distributors and importers of narcotics was launched by the Advisory Commission on Narcotics Drug Abuse.

A special task force was set up by the Mexican board in 1969 for a concentrated effort to combat the growing Mexican—U.S. drug traffic.

NUMBER ONE PROBLEM

In the last year of his office, President Kennedy called unemployment “our number one economic problem.” Today, it is widespread inflation that threatens the stability of the nation's economy.

Although there are many similarities between the national conditions then and those of 1969, there exist some events peculiar only to 1963. Some of these singular occurrences of 1963 were:

Negro leader Medgar Evers and President John F. Kennedy were assassinated.

Pope John XXIII, the shortest reigning and most progressive pontiff, died. Earlier that year he had published “Pacem in Terris,” the first of 300 encyclicals since 1749 devoted exclusively to peace.

New York City’s longest newspaper strike ended March 31, 1963 after 113 days. On April 8, of the nine major daily papers published their first addition since Dec. 8. Recreation of the Lord’s Prayer, and the reading of the Bible, were eliminated from schools by the Supreme Court.

While there has been progress in the U.S. in the last six years, notably in the civil rights situation, exploration, most of the major problems have not been solved. They remain in our midst and still affect the lives of millions of Americans. How many of them will still be around in 1975?

November’s Decision

By Maurice Moran

Whilst doing research on the Paul McCartney death rumors, this reporter fell heir to some amazing facts and evidence which would lead one to believe that rock groups of the world are involved in seeking a Utopian society. It has already come to surface in the Stones’ Season’s Greetings Request.

But most of the evidence I discovered was on the Atlanta release of Crosby, Stills and Nash. It is a well-known fact that this group is involved all over the breakup of the Byrds, The Buffalo Springfield and the Hollies. This number three is the mystical Buddhist number symbolizing magic. This is repeated in a song called “Helplessly Hoping,” which is the third cut, followed by the word “together.” This number is also evident in the Beatles’ “Come Together.”

MARCO WELSH

SYMBOLS OF TRAVEL

The second song on the album is “Marrakesh Express.” It is included on the name, according to a generally reliable source, of an alleged amusement park’s train ride in a town near the island which way rumored to have been purchased by the Beatles several months ago. In the song “Guinnesere,” Crosby, Stills and Nash repeat the line “we shall be free” over and over, obviously referring to the disappearance of their Utopia.

These songs of their tour are backed up by the poster which the album contains—all symbols of travel. The first symbol appears to be a boat, but the shape of her eyes give it away as a symbol of a light house, followed by waves of transportation and ships, perhaps used here to indicate the only mode of transportation to the island.

One symbol on the poster is a door that opens to infinity, symbolizing the career of the album into the future. The first song on the album is entitled “49 byes, 49” is seven times seven. This is an obvious biblical reference as Jesus is quoted as equating “seven times seven” with infinity. This number is seven of the many symbols on the album may be taken as meaning “goodbye forever,” a signal that all these groups and rock fans will never again return to the land of hypnosis, of drugs, and the nether world of hate and bigotry.

We must also draw our attention to a phrase which appears to be recorded backwards between two cuts. When slowed down to 16 rpm, there are distinct sounds of crooked words which I thought read “I’ll miss you” being generally

NO ADDRESS

Lastly, let us look at the album itself. The cover photo is that of the Fab Four’s last performance, seated in front of an ostensibly uninhabited, run down home (an Utopia). The photo is of the uninhabited island) with no address. Yet, when we look at the rear photo, we see the house is inhabited by one person, who, when viewed from a few feet away, with a strong light focused on his eyes, appears to be Paul McCartney. This would give way to the ideas that Paul, disguised in an accident, now dwells on the island with his wife. This conclusion is also referred to in the song “Last of the Island,” since Paul’s wife would be the only one there.

T h e r e o f f i c i a l explanations. This reporter is now involved in an extensive search of all rock groups by rock groups of social commentary. Already suspected are: Smith, Pocco, The Beatles, The Byrds, The Band and the 1910 Fruit Gum Co. But what is known is that we can expect rock groups to begin to retire from the scene and begin making their way toward this secret island of happiness. And the uncoverer of this evidence, will be right there with them.
School of Humanities Discusses Governance

By Roberta Kuehl
News Editor

Student and faculty members present at Monday's School of Humanities Congress voted for a dean, along with his duties and a faculty-student Senate as part of the governing structure.

Cheryl Brocking and Martha Henry, members of the committee on governance and administration, presented their tentative plans for organizing the school which were then followed by faculty and student alternate proposals. At this time, after a clear majority vote, the dean "will act as the administrator and the liaison to the Vice-President of Instruction of the college, who in turn is responsible to the state and the Board of Trustees.

Part of the Dean's duties is to meet with department chairmen, organizing the school which were the governing structure. The dean, along with his duties and a part of this time, after a clear majority vote, the dean "will act as the administrator and the liaison to the Vice-President of Instruction of the college, who in turn is responsible to the state and the Board of Trustees.

Math and Science

Prescheduling Is Question

Proposals concerning prescheduling and governance for the School of Mathematics and Sciences were presented Oct. 31 to the Central Planning Committee (CPC) by the faculty member and the governance and administration committee, according to Dr. Samuel Pratt, chairman of the CPC.

Pratt said that the faculty member committee proposed schedules based on the needs of faculty and departments, thus enabling professors to select the hours that they wished to teach. It would also enable students to know before selecting a course who would be teaching it and what time it would be held. Pratt said that this idea of prescheduling would give more information to both professor and student.

Two proposals for the school were made by the governance and administration committee. The first proposal, according to Pratt, stated that the school shall have a dean; the second stated that the primary decision-making apparatus rests with the department. Pratt said that this second proposal would probably rule out any legislation setup such as the executive Senate of the School of Creative Arts.

Pratt emphasized the fact that none of these proposals are final. He stressed that the committees just initiate proposals and that the CPC discussed them. The final decision rests in the Congress, which consists of all students and faculty who are members of the mathematics-department. Pratt said that the Congress will meet in December to decide on the governance proposals.

Social and Behavioral Sciences

Is All-Powerful Dean Wanted?

By Kathy Vargo
Staff Reporter

"Governance is the main problem being discussed right now by the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences," said Samuel Pratt, chairman of the Central Planning Committee and department chairman of French.

He stated that at his Central College Hall, Pratt stated: "The purpose of the governance committee is to work with the structure of the school's central planning committee, so far, Social and Behavioral Sciences is being discussed. Proposals by the Schools in MSC, the School of Fine and Performing Arts, for example, will be presented for discussion to the Central Planning Committee and at a Student-Faculty Congress."

Throughout the interview, Pratt stated that the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences is being discussed. Proposals by the School of Fine and Performing Arts, for example, will be presented for discussion to the Central Planning Committee and at a Student-Faculty Congress.

The Congress of the School of Social and Behavioral Sciences, which consists of all students and students under this school, will hold a meeting Dec. 4 from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. A "preliminary" report from the governance committee will be read and discussed by the Congress. In this way both students and faculty will have a voice in the decision-making process of the school.

"Being compared to the other Schools in MSC, the School of Fine and Performing Arts is second in its amount of progress made in structuring its School," Pratt said. Pratt is the School of Fine and Performing Arts, which has already elected students and faculty of its Senate.

No Limitations Seen For Creative Arts

Giarmo's idea is reflected in the philosophy and decision making of the School of Fine and Performing Arts. Giarmo and Miss Passafiume feel that there is much to be done to unite the three separate departments of speech and theatre arts, fine arts and music into a true school.

Miss Passafiume thinks it is up to the Senate to find a feasible way in which the three departments will be united to afford the most comprehensive and complete training for studies in all areas of the fine and performing arts. She suggested the opening up of more courses and studies in combined fields. While Giarmo sees some value in this he feels that rules and courses are not going to bring the three departments together — "only in working toward a finished product, a performance, will the reality of one school come into being."
Marat/Sade

By Celeste Fasone

Players, Montclair State College’s dramatic organization presents “The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton under the Direction of Marquis De Sade.” The play will be presented Nov. 12 and 15 at 8:30 p.m. with a matinee performance on Nov. 14 at 2:30 in Memorial auditorium.

The play is under the direction of Dr. Jerome Rockwood, professor of speech.

Principal roles in order of importance include Tom Lesko as Sade and Jim Johnson as Marat. Barbara Sholz will portray Simone and Corday is played by Wendy Simon.

Also on stage will be Dumperet-Scott Watson; Roux-Frank Skinner; Herald-Tony Giurmo; Coulnier-Greg Doucette; Kako-hill Higbie.

Polpock is portrayed by Brian Mahoney; Cucurucu by Pat LaCarubba and Ronsignore by Betty Passafiume complete the principal roles of the Players fall production.

Rockwood stressed, however, that Marat/Sade is an “ensemble production in which every member has a vital part.”

Marat/Sade, English version by Geoffrey Skelton with verse adaption by Adrian Mitchell has as its theme revolution. According to its director, “as soon as you begin to explain the theme you lose the groove.”

Drawing personnel for the production from approximately a dozen departments within the college, Rockwood commented that “if you must understand a work of art, it is unfortunate. What you should do, is groove on it.”

Technical Crew Members: Mike Smanko and Jackie Isherwood are both light operators during Marat/Sade.

On Guard: Prepared to stab Marat (Jim Johnson) is asylum inmate Charlette Corday (Wendy Simon).

Special to the Montclairian.

If anyone should see a chariot racing down Fifth avenue one brisk autumn day, carrying a scantily clad muscle man, believe what you see. It is only the filming of "Hercules in New York." Actually, that specific scene has already been shot. Now I'm waiting for my last day of filming, which should include the scene where all the goddesses jump into a fountain with Hercules and bathe him (with all our clothes on, I hope.) I also hope there will be no ice on the water. I'm not too optimistic about the ice problem though, because wearing a thin gown in 40 degree winds was not my idea of Paradise; nor was lying in the wet grass for about an hour very comfortable. Nevertheless, my horoscope predicted strange, but good, things for me.

DO YOU WEAR A MOUSTACHE OF THIS TYPE?: Or do you know someone who does? If you do, you should know that it represents a 'socially acceptable substitute for masturbation.' At least, that's the opinion of two writers in the November issue of "Penthouse, the new international magazine for men."

There were many distractions to slow up schedule. Teachers in nearby schools brought their classes for tours. The children delighted in asking Arnold Schwarzenegger if he was really Hercules. Then these same innocent young boys proceeded to describe the merits, especially physical, of each of the goddesses. Some of the comments heard: "Hey man, I wish I were Hercules. Then I'd pick you for my wife and what fun we'd have... heh, heh, look at that little blonde one over there. . . . I like that one. She got a real sexy look. . . ."

Players proudly presents the debut of "The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat as performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton under the direction of the Marquis deSade," a play by German author Peter Weiss, this evening at 8:30 p.m. PLEASE BE PROMPT. Those arriving late will be seated at the discretion of the management.

Student Attendance Is Documented

Montclair State students, joining with thousands of other students across the country, participated, or perhaps did not participate, in the nation's Oct. 15 moratorium to protest the war in Vietnam.

In an attempt to help MSC students evaluate the effectiveness and personal relevance of the moratorium at this college, Mrs. Helen Olive, assistant professor of psychology, conducted an anonymous student poll on the class session following the moratorium.

Four classes of students were asked to respond as honestly and completely as possible to the following stimulus: "On Wed., Oct. 15, I spent the day doing the moratorium."

The purpose of the poll was threefold: 1) to help assess the degree of participation in the moratorium day among the students; 2) to help the students assess the day's activities on an individual basis by writing about it; and 3) to help the entire student population to discover with some degree of objectivity how a small sample of them spent the day.

The students who were polled are primarily freshmen and sophomores with a sprinkling of juniors. Although the total number of students responding was 218, responses were tallied more than once if the student participated in a variety of activities during the day.

The data was analyzed by Kathy Monaghan, student assistant in the psychology department, and was presented by Mrs. Olive as a reflection of the students to themselves without value decisions or interpretation and in the spirit of scientific inquiry about a current social problem.

The results of the poll are as follows:

   1. on campus 54
   2. off campus 25
   Total 79

B. Participated in a school related activity
   1. went to class 16
   2. did homework 23
   3. studied 13
   Total 52

C. Participated in neither a peace protest nor a school related activity
   1. washed the Mets 33
   2. slept 15
   3. went out with friends 17
   4. worked for money 16
   5. did chores 23
   Total 104

The third feature of the festival will be "Grandeur Illusion," considered by many critics to be one of the all-time classics of motion picture art. To be shown on Jan. 15, this film, while investigating the social barriers which exist among a group of prisoners and their captors during the First World War, develops into an analysis of the nature of man. Produced in 1937 and directed by Jean Renoir, it is highlighted by the acting performances of Jean Gabin, Pierre Fresnay and Erik von Stroheim.

On Feb. 5 an Ingmar Bergman film, "The Magician," will be presented. This 1958 release, starring Max von Sydow and Ingrid Thulin raises many questions familiar in Bergman productions—faith versus belief and art versus science. Fifth in the series is an Italian production, "Nights of Cabiria," directed by Federico Fellini, featuring Giulietta Masina as an aging Roman streetwalker. The film presents various episodes of her life, revealing the sensitive and vulnerable human being hidden behind a hardened exterior.

The third part of this trilogy of World War II is Andrej Wajda's "Ashes and Diamonds," which illustrates the disillusionment of Polish young people of the 1950s. The hero is played by Zbigniew Cybulski in a style reminiscent of James Dean. The final presentation of the festival is "The Exterminating Angel," produced in 1964 and directed by Luis Bunuel. Bunuel's ideas on society are expressed in terms of a group of upper class citizens confined with each other for a long period of time, revealing the true nature lying behind the upper class exterior.
Traynor Says
MAC's Legal

By Michael Traynor
Staff Reporter

"Montclair Athletic Commission (MAC) is a perfectly legal organization," stated Ken Traynor, SGA president.

Concerning the recent controversy which arose at an athletic forum held on Oct. 21 where complaints of MAC's illegality were issued by two SGA representatives, Traynor said, "there was a conflict which still exists, but there is no illegality existing on the MAC." He added in confirmation which is used for all sports including football, basketball, baseball and many others. "With that much money, students need faculty members to advise them. Students lack the expertise," Traynor added.

There have been many complaints in the past about this conflict of the bylaws of SGA and the constitution of MAC. "This apparently stems out of curiosity to see where the budget is being spent," Traynor said. He said that students do not have the time to handle the budget.

When asked what the procedure would be to amend the bylaws to avoid this conflict, Traynor stated that he would have to bring up a bill, read it at the following meeting and then it would be voted on by the legislature. According to Traynor, no such action has been started.

Gymnasts Anticipate Success

Coming off the most successful season in the history of the college — capturing the North Atlantic Gymnastic Conference crown and qualifying for the NCAA College Nationals — the 1968-1969 Indian gymnasts set a precedent which will be very difficult to duplicate or improve.

Coach Terrance Orlick, entering his second season at the helm of the MSC gymnasts, has an optimistic outlook for the 1969-70 season. The team is highly spirited and is determined not only to better last year's record, but to make a good showing in the NCAA College Nationals.

Orlick has expanded his competitive schedule to what is now the largest and toughest schedule the team has ever had. The gymnastics opens against Southern Connecticut, ranked second in the nation last year.

This year's team is well balanced but lacks depth, especially on the high-bar. The loss of an outstanding athlete, Rich Schwarz, will be the biggest gap to fill, but Orlick feels that the addition of Bill Balogh, Ed Kuhn, Tom Fiorentino and Rick Kroon will more than fill this gap. Schwarz will be back as assistant coach.

Senior captain, Dave Green, cowinner of the most valuable gymnast award for 1968, will be heading up the varsity line-up, competing in six events. Soph standout Bill Balogh will also be an all-around performer and will be a big point-getter. Senior Nelson Jensen will be a top notch performer on parallel bars and high-bar, and should go a long way this year.

Ron Poling, also a senior, will be an outstanding competitor on both rings and parallel bars. Senior Bob Day and junior Joe Garreffa will exceed on the side-horse. Junior Roger Brown is developing into a powerful three piece performer, while junior Russ Spencer is strong on two pieces. Sophomore specialist Tom Fiorentino is expected to fill the shoes of last year's standout, Jon Guenther. Up from the freshmen ranks, soph Ed Kuhn has great potential on four pieces of apparatus, and should be a great addition to the team. Freshman Rich Kroon, who will compete in floor exercise and long horse, is expected to be a top-notch performer. Junior John Miller will be working floor exercises and also serving as trainer. Mark Rudnick will be working with the gymnastics exhibitions team, and Rodger Phillips is working to make the varsity line-up in long horse and floor exercises.

Most of the members of the gymnastics team worked out all summer for at least two days a week. As Orlick stated; "If you want to be really good, you have to work-out all year round. We want to be really good, and that's why we had practice during the summer, and that's why we work-out on the weekends. We have a tough schedule this year, and we have to be ready for it." Orlick went on to say that he "has a fine group of individuals on this year's team, and a lot of talent. I enjoy working with these young men, and if they are willing to put out 100%, I think we can go a long way this year."
A crowd of 5413 fans saw the Indians of Montclair State College defeat Jersey City State, 24-2, last Saturday night at Sprague Field. The win was Montclair’s third in a row and brings their over all season record to six wins and two losses. The win assured the Indians of their first winning season since 1964.

In a sloppily played first quarter, neither team’s offense showed much of an attack. Jersey City scored their two lone points early in the first period on a Montclair punt attempt. Tom Kelleher, Montclair’s center on the punting unit, snapped the ball over the head of punter Ken Tezza and the ball rolled out of the end zone for an automatic safety. The first quarter ended with Jersey City on the top end of the scoreboard with a 2-0 score.

In the second quarter Montclair’s offense came to life. The Indians drove 47 yards in nine plays to put their first six points on the score board. The touchdown play was a quarterback keeper, run by Bill Kulikowski around his own right end, from eight yards out.

The next time the Indians got possession of the ball they stunned Jersey City by scoring on the first play. Montclair was 55 yards away from Pay dirt when quarterback Kulikowski pitched the ball to Ron Gara who then fired a deep pass to end Roland Kascher.

Kascher, who had his defender beat by five yards, grabbed the pass and ran in for the score. This was Kascher’s second of three catches allowing him to set a new all-time pass reception record for one season by a Montclair State player. He now has a total of 27 catches thus far in the season topping the old record of 24 set in 1963 by Bob Cannon.

Montclair came back in the third period and Jersey City found they could not stop the now exploding offense. As soon as the Indians got their hands on the ball they drove to within field goal position. Bob Brewster added three points to the Montclair score on a 13 yard field goal.

The next time the Indians got the ball they drove 47 yards in nine plays to put their third six points on the score board. Kascher, third time out in the third quarter, hit the 50 yard line on two occasions. Jersey City, who had to rely on its passing game to win, was greatly humpered by a devastating pass rush led by Isaac McGie and Tom Rothacker and the excellent pass coverage of the Indian defensive backs. The Montclair defense gets credit for its third shutout in a row and fourth of the season since no points were scored by the opposing offense.

Both Kulikowski and Kascher were expected to be better, the schedule is also much tougher. With the addition of NYU, LIU, and Seton Hall, the MSC grapplers will face six universities. Montclair will also have to handle East Stroudsburg, Wilkes, and N.Y. Maritime, teams rated within the top five in the nation.

Montclair opens its season in Panzer Gym on Tues., Dec. 2, at 8 p.m., against a powerful East Stroudsburg squad.

MSC Grapplers Look to Nuzzo in ’70

Wrestling Coach Tim Sullivan looks to Mike Nuzzo, senior physical education major and team captain, to be the nucleus of this year’s squad. Nuzzo, who wrestles in the 177 pound weight class, has more pins than any wrestler in Montclair State history. Nuzzo has gone to the Metropolitan Tournaments in each of his three years, was Met champ during his freshman year and placed second his sophomore and junior years.

Indians Dump JCSC, 24-2

The next time the Indians got the ball they marched 72 yards for six more points. The score came on a two-yard plunge by halfback Glen Morechauser. This drive which consisted of 18 plays used up almost 10 minutes of the third period demonstrating Montclair’s ability to control the ball and wear down the opposing defense.

Montclair’s defense again turned in an outstanding job only allowing Jersey City to cross the 50 yard line on two occasions. Jersey City, who had to rely on its passing game to win, was greatly humpered by a devastating pass rush led by Isaac McGie and Tom Rothacker and the excellent pass coverage of the Indian defensive backs. The Montclair defense gets credit for its third shutout in a row and fourth of the season since no points were scored by the opposing offense.

Coach Leonard Lucenko has once again led the Montclair State soccer team to a bid in the National Championships. The announcement came Monday morning, saying that the MSC booters, number three in the tri-state area (Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey), would play against number two ranked University of Pennsylvania (8-2-0). The game is to be played on the U of P campus, on Tues., Nov. 18, at 2 p.m.

In another tri-state area semi-final game, first ranked Philadelphia Textile (10-0-1) plays fourth ranked Westchester College (8-2-0). The winners of the semi-final matches will play in the finals, to see who will represent the tri-state area against the winner of the Southern region of the National .

Montclair’s opponents, U of P, have been ranked as one of the top seven teams in the nation, and within the top three in the tri-state area.

The MSC booters are led by All-American Arvi Saar. Saar, an outstanding fullback, is cocaptain of the team. He will also have to handle East Stroudsburg, Wilkes, and N.Y. Maritime, teams rated within the top five in the nation.

Nuzzo has gone to the Metropolitan Tournaments in each of his three years, was Met champ during his freshman year and placed second his sophomore and junior years.

Both Nuzzo and Sullivan feel this year’s team will better last year’s due to better and more experienced personnel in the lower weight classes. “Last year we were behind in many meets because of the weak lower weights,” Nuzzo stated. He went on to say, “the middle and heavier weights had to win their matches in order to win the meet.”

Although this year’s team is expected to be better, the schedule is also much tougher. With the addition of NYU, LIU, and Seton Hall, the MSC grapplers will face six universities. Sports Commentary: Super Joe Computerized

Science has developed an IBM computer that can be programmed to give lengthy, multi-language horoscopes. The computer that does this is called Astroflash II.

On its second day of operation, Astroflash II evaluated football's most outstanding quarterback, Joe Namath. The computer was given Namath's day, month, year, time and place of birth, without telling the machine of the subject's famous identity.

Astroflash II produced 17 pages of opinions on the unidentified subject. Some of the opinions are as follows. All quotes are taken from the October, 1969 issue of "Sports" magazine.

"You feel fulfilled in an occupation in which you use your hands, especially those where your hands can improve and enhance an object." The computer was right about the hands, but I don't think Namath would agree with what the computer suggested he do for a living: interior decorator, hairdresser, or magician. Doesn't the computer follow sports?

The computer then went on to state: "You cooperate well with a team and remain faithful to it, though you have your own way of organizing the job. You love to juggle with ideas, and here an inherent danger is to make a wrong assumption to start with and then build an entire intellectual argument based on this false premise... Because of your attitude toward money and possessions, you will be a winner, sometimes bitterly to play in the first half. Bill Kazdoba took a pass from Arvi Snat, and headed the ball in. The goal was Kazdoba's 19th of the season.

Ten minutes after the second half began, Kazdoba took a throw-in that was headed in by George Chapla, a fullback.

The timing on Montclair's last goal of the game was very confusing. A penalty kick was called by the referee, and the LIU coach and players protested the call. By the time the ball had been cleared of the extraneous people, time had expired in the third period. The penalty kick still had to be taken, so Klaus Nemetz took the kick and scored MSC's fourth goal in between the third and fourth periods.

LIU scored its final goal with 2:20 left in the game, after sub-goalie Jimmy Lew had replaced starter Roman Hanycz. The Trenton State game proved to be interesting. The game was tied after the regulation time of 88 minutes, so the teams went into an overtime period of 10 minutes, with each team scoring once in the extra period.

Since only one overtime period is played, the game remained a tie.

MSC scored first, when Tony DeFilippis took a pass from Bill Kazdoba and scored on a penalty kick. John Lukin completed the MSC scoring in regulation time with a goal at 16:00 of the third period.

Within minutes after each of the Montclair goals, Trenton State always seemed to retaliate with a score of its own. Vince Scattarelli, Doug Welsh, and Don Fowler all scored for the Trenton booters. Welsh put in two goals, one in regular time and one in the overtime period.

With the game tied 3-3 after the first eighty-eight minutes, the contest went into a 10 minute overtime to decide the winner. MSC scored first, with Jean Charles putting in a goal at three minutes of the first half of the overtime, but minutes later, DougWelsh of Trenton tied the game at 4-4.

Horn also noted that Rich DeAndrea, an outstanding weightman who just won the discus event at an AAU meet in Rutgers, and a few of his frosh hurlers should round out this year's indoor team.

Horn also mentioned that there will be an organizational meeting for all prospective indoor and outdoor track candidates. The meeting will be held in room P5, tomorrow, Nov. 13 at 4 p.m.
