Profs OK Contract Proposals

A minimum of resistance on the part of the Montclair State College faculty toward state contract proposals was the forecast of associate speech professor Karl Moll, Faculty Association president.

The contract, the first of its kind between the state and its employees, was scheduled to come up for approval at an emergency faculty meeting yesterday.

AREAS COVERED in the contract include salary and employment conditions, tenure, reappointment and promotion regulations. It establishes a 24-hour counseling procedure, and a specific grievance procedure.

The contract also mandates the state to collect dues from professional organization members on a voluntary basis for the following organizations: the Campus Faculty Association; the Association of New Jersey State College Faculties, Inc.; the Association of New Jersey College and University Professors; and the National Society of Professors.

The chief advantage to this system, according to Moll, is that faculty members could pay their organization dues in a form of installment system spaced out during the year, instead of paying the fee in one lump sum, as is done presently. Moll feels that this system would encourage more faculty members to join the professional associations.

THE FIVE-STEP grievance procedure provision is the first system of registering grievances ever established on paper for faculty members. A faculty member with a grievance (in accordance with the contract's definition) can appeal his case to the appropriate vice-president. If his complaint is still unresolved, he can then go to his dean, or to the immediate supervisor. If he is still unsatisfied, he can appeal to the president. Finally, the grievant can take his case to the chancellor of higher education. If he is still unsatisfied with the handling of his grievance, he can, with representation of the Faculty Association, appeal to the Governor's Employee Relations Policy Council.

If he receives no satisfaction, he can then go to his dean, or to the appropriate vice-president. If his complaint is still unresolved, he can then go to his dean, or to the immediate supervisor. If he is still unsatisfied, he can appeal to the president. Finally, the grievant can take his case to the chancellor of higher education. If he is still unsatisfied with the handling of his grievance, he can, with representation of the Faculty Association, appeal to the Governor's Employee Relations Policy Council.

Altho this is an innovative step and, according to Moll, a welcome one, he anticipated some discussion on the exact wording of the section.

TWO OTHER points of contention among faculty were expected to be the absence of a state commitment on summer school salaries and some points of the sabbatical leave program.

The terms of the two-year contract have been under negotiation for approximately 20 months by a Faculty Association committee comprised of representatives from all state colleges.

In order for the contract to be officially accepted, it has to be agreed upon by a majority of the combined Faculty Association members from all of the state colleges. The contract is the same for each individual college.

State Master Plan for Higher Education as 'Unrealistic'; Could Stifle Colleges

By D.M. Levine

Staff Writer

MSC President Thomas H. Richardson has labeled Phase Two of the state master plan for higher education as an "unrealistic" and "self-contradicting" document that could possibly stifle the growth of New Jersey colleges.

The document, drawn up by Higher Education Chancellor Ralph Dunson, and his staff, is a seven-chapter working projection for state-run public colleges. It took 11 months to complete.

Under Phase Two, the higher education department plans to:

1. Limit enrollments at the six state colleges to 7500 students each;
2. "Strip away graduate programs at Rutgers/Newark and Newark College of Engineering to about 45,000 students;
3. Develop six other state colleges by 1985; and
4. Aid in the development of educational television, evaluation techniques, and community college expansion.

The development plan has met with harsh reaction from state college officials who are planning to air their views at Trenton hearings later next month. Many are claiming that higher education department officials did not consult with local college administrators before the document was released.

According to James Cottingham, administrative assistant to the MSC president, Montclair State -- under its own projections -- will have nearly 7500 undergraduate students on campus next year. If the Higher Education Department's projection is accepted as it stands, serious conflicts could develop between state policy and the college's ability to grow.

"A college," points out President Richardson, "is like an organism with a natural growth. You just can't slap an artificial ceiling on the state colleges."

MEANWHILE, the state colleges will continue along their own admissions policies unless an official directive is received from the state. Glassboro State College currently has 5300 undergraduate fulltime students. John Davies, GSC's admissions director, said that the college expects to attain 7500 students by 1975, in accordance with its own master plan. Essex County Community College has about 5200 students and anticipates a larger student body by the ime the Montclair's ever morning's blackout. It's the first surprise, but the biggies in getting rid of those excess students. I mean, take a look at what happened during the FDU-MSC basketball game Monday night. They played the freshest game -- fine. Two-thirds of the lights went out. Now... the logical thing would be to let the spectators leave the gym before the other third of the lights went, right?

NATURAL CAUSES

Elsewhere in the "Boo, Hiss!" department...we've got a story on top of this page on how Chancellors King Ralph Dunson and all his merrymen are trying to limit the size of MSC. Unfortunately, things keep up at their current rate, they won't have to do a thing. All MSC students will have died of natural causes.

If I ever get a hold of Lassie. Boo, Hiss.

Our first annual "Boo, Hiss!" award goes to this week...in general.

I mean, what else can you say about a week that begins with a TV blackout. No boob tube on Southern California a disaster area earlier this week. One wonders if it was done before or after the lights came back on. (Where two fevered students were spending the night) stayed in Monday night — Tuesday morning's blackout. It's the first time the MONTCLARION's ever been put out by candlelight.

TRULY AMAZING

It's truly amazing...the first thing they did after the lights went out was to start College Hall's emergency generators. But the infantry in Russ Hall (where two fewer students were spending the night) stayed cold for quite a while. So did the dorms.

The Projection

THE PROJECTION, however, has some good points, say some college officials. The document calls for constant evaluation of its proposals and aims to accommodate as many students as possible in New Jersey higher education—either through the "open college" concept or two-year community colleges.

Along these lines, the master plan is also calling for massive occupational training programs at community colleges and asks for the implementation of educational television (MSC has been given the green light in this area and will operate an educational TV station by the end of the year).

Despite the good and bad points of Phase Two, college officials will be able to let their voice be heard at March's hearings. For higher education board members, it may be the first time qualified local opinion will be received.

Jane Fonda, the bone-slimmed actress-daughter of Henry and self-appointed social critic, may be speaking in Memorial auditorium Mon., Feb. 15 — if she isn't in jail.

Miss Fonda, who has been touring the college circuit in support of her antiwar feelings, is on charges for allegedly kicking a policeman and allegedly smuggling drugs into the United States. She could face an eight-year jail term if found guilty.

The COLLEGE Life Union Board (CLUB) has signed the necessary contracts with the actress' New York agents, according to a group spokesman. She will get a standard speaker's fee of $1500 for her talk, which will focus on the Vietnam war.

Apathy

Marching Band Cancels Shows

Marching Band will no longer perform at Montclair State football games, Homecoming parades and other special events, according to a notice submitted to the Student Government Association last week by Marching Band members.

"In protest to student wide apathy toward the cultural life of our campus, particularly as reflected by the SGA," the members of the marching band, have agreed to discontinue all performances, beginning with the fall 1971 season.

RICHARD OSIN, sophomore music major and Music Organizations Commission (MOC) president, pointed out that because of this year's budget cut, MOC needed to borrow $6600 to meet its contract obligations.

"Along with the cancellation of marching band, there will be no outside concerts next year unless there is a raise in the MOC budget."

The original charter of MOC stipulates that the organization should receive $4.20 per student. This year we requested a budget of $3.90 and we were given $2.26." Osin went on to explain "Altho the budget has been cut in half, student attendance at the concerts has increased by 25-30% each semester for the past two years."

SGA's rejection of certain restructuring proposals, Players hopes for expansion of its organization and extension of its services to the entire college community, according to junior Joe Black, recently-elected Players president.

Black Plans Players Expansion

Despite SGA's rejection of certain restructuring proposals, Players hopes for expansion of its organization and extension of its services to the entire college community, according to Joseph Black, student activities director late Sunday night or early Monday morning after the Winter Weekend concert.

"The money was mostly door receipts from the concert," Stepnowski explained. "Usually we rely on advance sales, but there were an unusual number of tickets sold at the door."

STEPNOWSKI BROUGHT A cash box containing approximately $1700 to his apartment Sunday night at 11 p.m., hid the money and returned to the concert. Arriving back at 2:45 a.m., he discovered the livingroom window smashed, the floor sprinkled with glass and the kitchen ransacked.

"Every corner of every room had been searched," he surmised. The thief left with $500 from Winter Weekend receipts as well as the contents of the cashbox.

After notification of the theft, the campus security police stopped the remaining cars on campus to check identification. The Little Falls Police Department advised that the entry had been made from the roof over the Snack Bar. It appeared that the thief had climbed out from the Davella Mills room, after forcing that room's door open.

Stepnowski is thankful that no one was injured, but expressed regret "because we are working in a community atmosphere. It could have been someone I know." As a result of the theft, the security system of the student life building is being reexamined. Plans call for the locks to be entirely changed.

TRENTON—Jersey's 18-year-olds may soon get a second chance to vote in local elections. State senators Richard J. Coffee (D-Mercer) and Fairleigh Dickinson (R-Bergen) are working to put the question of the 18-year-old vote on the ballot in the November 1971 elections.

THEY ARE also attempting to lower the state voter residency requirements from six months to 30 days and the county residency requirements from 40 to 30 days.

Coffee explained that the referendum, defeated in the 1968 election, would not normally be resubmitted until three general elections had passed. But, by slightly varying the question's wording and adding the residency reform, it can be legally placed before the voters this November.

According to Coffee, the new bill has several advantages. First, the 18-year-old voter provision will allow young citizens to "take part in government at all levels, not just at the federal level."
Girls' Dorms Robbed In Monday's Darkness

By Jo-Ellen Scudese Staff Writer

Some enterprising burglars made the best of an unfortunate situation Monday night when electrical power was temporarily out on the Montclair State campus.

Two males were sighted by dorm residents in Chapin Hall shortly after 11:30 p.m. Monday. Residents had started to notice things missing around 11 p.m. when most were returning from meetings and other activities.

POWER ON campus had gone off shortly after 7 p.m. Under instructions from MSC vice-president for business and finance Vincent Calabrese, dorms were locked up by security around 10:30. Only one of the main doors in each dorm was left open until midnight to assure that all residents were in.

Mrs. Joan Bakum, Chapin Hall resident director, assisted by campus security, systematically checked and locked all possible exits. Despite precautions, the burglars escaped with watches, radios and money, mostly taken from the first and third floors. Wallets were 'left behind—after being emptied.

Mrs. Jeanie Marshall, Russ Hall resident director reported no stolen items. The MSC security department, working most of the night alongside administrators, was able to lock up the building before any burglaries took place.

Freeman Hall was not as lucky. A color tv was spotted, uprooted from the lower lounge, hastily deposited near one of the 6:00 exits. Apparently the burglars tried to steal the tv, but found it too hefty.

No definite description of the two burglars was available.
Montclair State College, it is said, is breaking the image of a state teacher's college and is moving toward a liberal arts institution with the hope of eventually gaining university status. This movement appears to be seriously impeded by the implementation of a report issued by the Hay Associates to the governor and state legislators.

By Andy McIntyre

One result of this report, implemented last September was to strip New Jersey college librarians of faculty status. The rights revoked include: 10 month work year versus 12 month; sabbatical leaves; tenure (for those who have not yet obtained it); and all rights and privileges given to faculty members.

Dr. John R. Beard, head librarian at Sprague library, said that the senate is doing what the students want. Mr. students who have not yet obtained it); and all rights and privileges given to faculty members. In 1968, during the Richard J. Hughes administration, the Hay Associates were commissioned, thru Public Law 304, to analyze all state service jobs in New Jersey. Vincent Calabrese, MSC vice-president for business and finance, stated: "The philosophy of the Hay report was to establish a relationship for all jobs - janitor to president, and further, to ascertain an equitable range of moneys paid."

Mrs. Blanche Hailer, associate librarian at Sprague library, displayed disillusionment and at times anger in discussing the issue. "The Hay Associates never spoke to a librarian or any other "faculty" member on this campus," she said. She added: "We were hired with the identical contract of any teacher on this campus and suddenly it is now retracted, we have then been unilaterally changed to unclassified civil servants."

Mrs. Hailer's statements intoned a view that the Hay Associates were unqualified to judge this situation. This view is shared and supported by many members of the academic community - at MSC, at the state level, and by national library associations.

Dr. John R. Beard, head librarian at Sprague and chairman of the college and university section of the New Jersey Library Association (NJLA), wrote an article entitled "A Regressive Step in New Jersey Higher Education." In it he discusses the role of librarians in education and the repercussions that might be felt as a result of the Hay report.

Beard cites four major reasons for the NJLA's opposition to the Hay report. They include:

1. "Faculty status for librarians in the New Jersey state colleges was acquired only after a long struggle. This attainment reflects a great advance in academic librarianship, and is the goal of college and university librarians in all parts of the country. All professional associations concerned with higher education strongly advocate faculty status for librarians.

2. "Faculty status enables the librarian to function as a colleague with the academic community, and thus to contribute in greater measure to college affairs.

3. "Loss of faculty status would tend to diminish the stature of the library, not only within the college community, but with all accrediting agencies - a severe problem during a period of expansion of programs, curricula, student body, etc. This diminished stature would reflect itself in a drastic lowering of staff morale.

4. "Faculty status has been an important factor in attracting highly qualified and scholarly staff. The recruitment of superior staff would suffer if such rank were withheld."

For a long time New Jersey has maintained a low ranking in national higher education. Members of the academic community have predicted that this move will in no way enhance our chances for improvement. It has been said that the center of the college or university structure is the library. With the "core" of the structure disturbed, what then are the chances for the structure itself to make advances?

How to Make SGA More 'Humane'

By Kathy Flynn

Staff Writer

The Student Government Association is not usually considered to be an inhumane organization, but in some ways it can be. It is evident that the SGA does not reach everyone on campus. That's the opinion of Jack Wilkie, SGA representative from the School of Professional Arts and Sciences. He considers it to be a fault in the basic structure of the organization itself.

A member of SGA since October, he has viewed its workings closely and believes that student power is needed, as well as a means of reaching and acquiring the views of more students.

CLEARLY-DEFINED POWERS

Wilkie has drawn up a plan (currently in the "Committee to Define Duties and Responsibilities of a Legislature") to restructure SGA in a way that each legislator will have his powers clearly defined. Wilkie states that the purpose of the change is to reinforce the "legitimacy of the SGA."

Under the "Wilkie plan" a school manager would be added, similar to the position of a city manager, to the structure disturbed, what then are the chances for the structure itself to make advances?

"Under the 'Wilkie plan,' a school manager would be added, similar to the position of a city manager . . . he would make sure the system is functioning properly . . ."
Dungan’s Document: A Lack of Insight

The slow-paced growth of higher education in New Jersey has largely been the result of constant battling and bickering between the state higher education board and local college administrators.

The state in some way or other has always sought to impose its will upon their state colleges. And quite justifiably. The colleges are creatures of the state, created and funded by them.

The problem, tho, is that the state of New Jersey oft-times seeks to impose its centralizing force upon the colleges without due respect to the officials who run them. After all, an administrator is well aware of the needs of his own institution.

Such is the case with Phase Two of the higher education master plan released last week by Chancellor Ralph Dungan’s office. It took 11 months to formulate the goals and definitions stated in Phase Two. The news contained in its pages is shocking to the administrators who weren’t consulted.

Phase Two is basically seeking to stifle the natural growth of its state colleges by limiting enrollments to 7500 students at each of the six state institutions. Montclair State College will have that many students in a couple of years at the present rate of growth, administrators are saying. And in view of the current population trends, the college will have an obligation to accept a higher proportion of applicants than ever before.

The document is self-contradictory in that graduates of two-year schools will be expected to be accepted at one of the six state institutions. Montclair State College will have that many students in a couple of years at the present rate of growth, administrators are saying. And in view of the current population trends, the college will have an obligation to accept a higher proportion of applicants than ever before.

The document is obviously of little value and shows a remarkable lack of insight. If the state is willing to listen, many college administrators can provide the proper information which can gear education to the needs of the 70s.

Help for the 2-Year College

When it comes to governmental spending, channels must be opened wide enough to help community colleges in their current fiscal dilemma.

For some, the community college is the last hope for students seeking to gain a higher education. Too often, politicians pay the concept lip service without offering any concrete plans for their development.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D-N.J.) is introducing legislation aimed at beefing up the colleges which are already operating on shaky financial ground. It also provides revenue directly to states who may want to chart a master plan for the two-year colleges.

Feb. 7--a Day in Infamy

By Maurice J. Moran Jr.

Sun., Feb. 7, 1971 is a day that will live in infamy. The time was 7:22 p.m., and the television viewers of "Wild Kingdom" watched the luxurious coral reef of Australia turn to "snow." With the snow gone, the terror struck. American family members had to discover one another.

With all VHF channels obscured by a power failure in mid-Manhattan, families were forced to find new means of pacification. A typical — albeit fictional — Sunday evening went like this.

"Daddy," the mother said to her sleepy-eyed husband, jolted out of dreamland by the blaring silence of the 26-inch screen. "What do we do now?"

"We don't need that boobo-the," he replied. "We, uh, can play cards, cards, instead. How about a game of cards?" A quick game of gin rummy ensues. As they begin to play, the phone rings. It's Kathy's boyfriend.

"Got homework. "Where are you going?"" quires his mother.

"Don't talk to your mother that way," interrupts Dad, suddenly appearing at the cellular phone. "I was asking a simple question."

"Are you yelling at your father?"

"Kathy, turn that down!" "Katherine, are you deaf?"

"Now listen, young man . . . Suddenly there was a crackle from the living room. A zap. "And now a voice announced, "we are able to resume our regular broadcasting schedule."

It's cheaper.

Desire Reports, MSC Students are Educuble

To the Editor:

While sitting recently in Dr. Ronald F. Haas' education class, I was told by this department chairman that if the class he was teaching were at Harvard or Amherst, he could teach on the assumption that the students were more self-motivated and more intelligent than those of Montclair State. His latter was presumably determined within due results of the college-board scores on which he seemed to place so much emphasis.

I believe that this kind of condescending attitude on the part of some of our professors is serious enough to warrant challenge. I admit that there exists in every school those students who are interested more in social activities than in intellectual matters, but that is not the point. The point is that when a professor, and a department chairman at that, honestly believes that the student body of this school is academically inferior to the money-oriented Ivy league schools, he should attempt to rectify the situation, either by leaving this school to teach in one that would make better use of his talents, or by trying to bring MSC up to the standards which he obviously feels we lack.

For my part, I have confidence that even Montclair State students are educable, and that perhaps someday we can be sufficiently intellectually independent to 'speak' in the dark world without the light of these revered professors to guide us.

MiniReview

Without doubt, "Thumb Tripping" is the formula for youth-cult books. Drawn from the author's experiences, the plot revolves around the various people he and his girl encountered hitch-hiking down the Pacific coast one summer. "Dissuaded" as the two main characters, Gary and Chay, they meet a gay warlock, petty hoods, and a couple who are unhappy because their nine-year-old doesn't speak without regard to everyday people. The "hip" words, communities, drugs — it's all there. Perhaps the only outstanding thing about this book was the author's rare feat of selling excerpts to Esquire, The Atlantic and Harper's. They must have been stunned.

PRODUCING a movie of a Shakespearean play is sometimes a risky business. Directors tend to either stick so closely to the legitimate theater concept that the finished movie looks like a photographed stage production or they get so carried away by the possibilities of the film medium that the real value of the play is totally lost amid a welter of realism.

American International Pictures' release "Julius Caesar" avoids both these pitfalls. The director, Stuart Birge, has retained all the original language and imagination of Shakespeare's play while adding the visual possibilities of the motion picture. The bard's words take on new meaning as you see the action unfold on the screen.

The movie is graced with an outstanding cast. Sir John Gielgud is excellent as Caesar aitho perhaps a little old and fragile looking for the part now. Charlton Heston portrays Mark Antony with great depth and understanding. Just after Caesar is assassinated, Mark Antony returns to the senate chamber to convince the conspirators that he should be allowed to speak at Caesar's funeral. Heston is magnificently grim as he shakes the bloody hand of each conspirator. His funeral oration is truly magnificent.

The intent of Shakespeare's words is made clearer than ever before. Rounding out the cast are Richard Johnson, Robert Vaughn, Robert Walker, Jr, Richard Chamberlain and Diana Rigg.

IS WELL DONE
All is not, the movie is well done. It is paced well and the suspense builds swiftly to the climax of the funeral oration. The scenes which follow are somewhat anticlimatic even in the stage play. The director uses his medium well in fleshing out the final battle scene. There is also a defiance in the sparse dialogue provided by Shakespeare.

The production is British and the acting is excellent as well. "Julius Caesar" is a Normal Person. "It lives out our fantasies by projecting himself into the film he screens. When he isn't on the job, he also engages in a running mind-movie starring as the invisible Captain Flash. Also on hand in the film (and in the inter-film movies) are comed Rodny Dennis (the villain/thrater manager), Ina Balin (heroin/girl in the park), and veteran European star Jara Khan (kindly scientist/refrenshmen seller). Of very special note is the exquisite editing done by the director, Harry Hurwitz. For the fantasy sequences he has taken clips from hundreds of films ("Maltese Falcon," "Citizen Kane") and beautifully matched them to his new footage. The result is funny, nostalgic, and inventive.

The "Projectionist," then, can be said to be a kind of "Walter Mitty Meets the Movies." Walter Mitty never had it as good.

Chuck Ward.

Words and images spell success

"David Steinberg, Disguised as a Normal Person." is not a normal album. Neither is Steinberg's comedy near normal. But that doesn't make it bad.

As evidenced in this, his most recent release from Elektra records, Steinberg's brand of humor is highly individualistic. Be assured, he has punchlines — but they're of a wildly intelligent nature, and his routines aren't as strongly structured as those of most comics.

He rambles self-degradingly about his life, his girls, his education, his girls, the Bible and, occasionally, his girls. Meandering melodically with his Maxwell Smart-ish voice, Steinberg describes some of his dates. "She was a Vogue magazine type — cheek-bones two feet above her head." He dreams of going on the "Dating Game". He owns a red Volkswagen. He feels guilty about masturbation, "because I'm so bad at it."

NEVER A NORMAL PERSON
This kid, no matter what he does, could never be mistaken for a "normal person." Steinberg uses his crazy inventiveness in a telephone conversation sketch in which a fan (bounding strangely like JoAnne Worley) calls up to say she's enjoying the album. "Where are you?" asks Steinberg. "About halfway thru the first side," she replies.

Another really fine piece is "The Coast." Yes, Steinberg talks about that great American dreamland — the coast. "The coast is to the William Morris Agency what Martin Luther is to the rest of the world." And then he meets it — the coast — in person. Uh, huh.

One of those responsible for the cancellation of "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" a few tv seasons back, Steinberg is a talented young satirist who has the sense to steer clear of the topical material that, because it's handled by too many comics, is often handled poorly. But he does share with the audience one astute observation. "President Nixon has a face that looks like a foot."

Steinberg is an extremely talented guy who can superbly relate to his urbane, intellectual audience. No wonder he cancelled his appearance at MSC last weekend.

The Projectionist
Thinking back to the 60s

One of the major contributions given to the world of filmmaking by proponents of the "New Wave" is the unquestionable belief that film is the director's medium. This truism is accepted throughout Europe and can be seen in the films of Godard, Truffaut, Bergman and Fellini. Finally an American director has caught on.

Paul Mazursky, who made his mark at the boxoffice with "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice," has gone on to better things with his latest film, M-G-M's "Alex in Wonderland."

Mazursky's talents go beyond the pseudo-hip sold-out producer who tries to entice Alex into directing some of the "pottent" films imaginable. One gets the idea that Mazursky's knowledge of this type of character is painfully firsthand.

Alex amalgus thrul the wonderland of Hollywood, and (in one of the finest moments of the film), the Vietnam war taking place on the corner of Hollywood and Vine.

POLITELY EGOISTIC
Mazursky, in his politely egotistical way, has lifted whole scenes from another film about a director's problems in the world of filmmaking. It is good clean honest fun to see pieces of Federico Fellini's "8 1/2" redone in glorious technicolour. The culmination of all of this copying is a remarkable encounter where Alex actually meets the great director. Fellini treats his young fan to a reception as warm as an arctic sleighride.

Mazursky's talents go beyond those of actor and director. The man must have a flair for the art of persuasion, for he not only got Fellini to appear in a brief segment of his film but also acquired the services of French actress Jeanne Moreau, who joins Sutherland in a carriage ride down Hollywood boulevard.
More MSC Construction Is Waiting in the Wings

Good news for those anxiously awaiting completion of MSC's building projects—constructions now underway are soon to be completed.

But more are on the way. ACCORDING to facilities director Jerry Quinn, Bohn Hall is two-thirds completed, and will be finished by the end of May. The supervisors for the complex have been set up furniture and add finishing touches. Bohn Hall will open its doors to 600 residents at the start of the fall semester.

The Student Union Building, 29% completed, has been refitted to "better serve the needs of the students," Quinn said. At the request of a student committee, a bowling alley planned for the building will be replaced by an ice cream parlor and an arcade. The interest in the arcades, Quinn explained.

Completion of the union is scheduled for November 1971. Campus organizations will move into the structure at the start of the spring semester, 1972.

Construction crews have faced several problems during the past months, Quinn said. Heat had to be installed in Bohn Hall to protect the workers there from freezing temperatures.

ALSO, THE installation of the utility lines near Stone Hall have created parking problems in the lot between the recreation lodge and Stone Hall. Quinn remarked that requests to eliminate use of the lot had not been fulfilled as well as expected, but he feels that the situation there has improved, "thanks to students who now park their cars elsewhere."

In the future, MSC will remain the center of construction projects, endowed by state grants, loans and bond issues. The new math-science building, scheduled for completion in September 1972, will be constructed on the LAST OF THE LOTS: The parking area adjacent to Partridge Hall and Sprague Library may be the last convenient lot when more construction takes place on campus next fall.

CLUB's Cinema Plans Newsflicks

With the aim of increasing student interest in campus film presentations, the Cinema committee of CLUB is planning several innovations in its programming, according to Jerry King, a member of the committee.

One of Cinema's greatest problems, said King, has been getting students to return to the campus at night for the shows. A plan to generate more interest is the production of short newreels based on the life and events around the campus: concerts, speakers, and students. "The student will then become the actors, and we hope they'll come to see themselves, and consequently, the rest of the films," said King.

HE STATED that the films would probably be shown on Saturday and Sunday nights, in accordance with plans made by the committee, which includes chairman Kathy Kopecky, Michael Quick, and King. Tentative feature plans include such films as "M*A*S*H," and "Joe." Possibilities also include film festivals featuring "the films of Paul Newman, Laurel and Hardy, or whatever the students want," King said.

He added that program advertising would also be improved. Plans call for posters to be placed around the campus weeks before the films are to appear. The advertising campaign will also venture off campus to include the community's high school students and townpeople.

KING EXPLAINED that Cinema operates on a fixed budget each semester. "We try to charge as low an admission fee as possible," he said. He added that Cinema is a non-profit organization, and that any extra funds go back into the program. The During Tuesday night's power blackout, Cinema (who had planned to show "Boys in the Band") quickly planned to show three films to dorm students: "Pit and the Pendulum," "A Big Band for the Little Lady," and "1 Spy.

STUDENT UNION—GOING UP: The new student union building, housing organization offices and an arcade, should be completed by 1972's spring semester.
This Parking Lot Really Isn’t Mud Flats

The area between Mallory Hall and the fine arts building accommodates 300-400 cars on a normal MSC weekday. But it’s not a parking lot. “That area is not an official parking area, but a ‘road closed area,’” said Joseph Daly, MSC security chief and parking director. And students who park in the unlined area are not fined for blocking other cars in – they’re towed away.

“I HAD to make the decision to tow,” said Daly. “I don’t like to, but I want to bring it to the attention of the students that any cars that are obstructing another vehicle will be towed away.”

On one recent day, Daly remarked, 12 cars were towed because they were blocking roadways and other cars. “Several students had part-time jobs to get to, but were blocked in – so we had to tow.”

But eight of the 12 cars that were towed did not have decals and two belonged to visitors. “That one thing we have to worry about,” stated Daly. “We don’t want to create bad public relations, and these two cars were mistakenly towed.”

BLOCKING-IN by visitors seems a sore point to many owners of obstructed cars. “Just because they’re visitors,” said an angry sophomore who came to the MONTCLAIR to use the phone when she was blocked in, “why should they get away with blocking students from leaving?”

“That day,” said Daly, “we could have towed 200 cars because they were blocking other cars. The one solution to the parking problem is regularly ignored by MSC students, Daly said. “We have more than enough parking spaces not being used in the quarry area and the lower lots. If students would utilize these spaces, a lot of time, money and aggravation would be avoided.”

So You Still Don’t Have Those Texts?
MSC's Bookstore Hassles May Be 'No One's Fault'

"The bookstore has no more copies of... Sound familiar? The complete absence of certain texts—or enough copies of them—at the College High gym bookstore generally results in four-letter epithets concerning the bookstore's efficiency. BUT THE complete fault doesn't lie with the bookstore, says its director, Mrs. Bertha Faber. "Our biggest problem is not receiving book requests from the instructors on time." She added that the bookstore received some orders for this semester on the first day of classes. (Mon., Feb. 11). "These books couldn't possibly arrive until a week or two after the semester begins." One faculty member explained this problem as "no one's fault." Professors often cannot estimate the size of their classes until several days before the classes meet." Also, sections may greatly increase in size as the first week progresses, he explained.

Accusations of profiteering by the bookstore are not accurate, said Mrs. Faber. "The little profit that we do make goes toward postage" for returning books to publishers and payment for book packaging. "Most of the bookstore's profits come from selling novelty items, rather than textbooks," she explained.

RETURNING BOOKS to publishers also causes problems. One policy of the bookstore, said Mrs. Faber, is to return unsold texts to the publishers early in the semester. Thus, texts assigned for use toward the end of the semester might be unavailable in the closing weeks. According to associate English professor Dr. Douglas M. Schwegel, a lack of space is probably responsible for the need to return books to publishers. He suggests a larger bookstore in the new student union building would allow MSC to keep in stock "books that all college bookstores should have."

Here's a government position with a real future for both men and women. An officer's job in the Air Force—a management level job in anybody's book. Certainly, there's no better way to get the experience and training needed for executive responsibility. If you have two years of college remaining, you could find yourself earning an Air Force commission while you learn, through the Air Force ROTC two-year program. Along with college credits and a commission, you'll receive $50 each month as a student. And upon graduation, that management position promised will be waiting for you. If an advanced degree is in your plans, you'll be happy to learn that the Air Force has a number of outstanding programs to help you further your education. If you're in your final year of college, you can get your commission through the Air Force Officer Training Program. It's open to all college grads, both men and women, who qualify.

Check it out. You'll find that the Air Force is one career that offers something for everyone. Nearly 430 different jobs, ranging from aeronautical engineering to zoology, with almost everything else, including flying, in between. But whatever your duties, you'll soon discover that the Air Force will let you move just as far and as fast as your talents can take you.

So look ahead and let your college years pay off for you with a managerial position in the U.S. Air Force. Just send in this coupon or write to USAF Military Personnel Center, Dept. A, Randolph AFB, Texas 78148, and get your postgraduate career off the ground. Find yourself in the United States Air Force.
Monmouth Sinks MSC
For 1st Season Loss

The Women’s Recreation Association swim team began the second half of their schedule with a loss against powerful Monmouth College, 63-32. The defeat, their first of the year, came after December victories against Lehman College, Newark State and Queens College.

MSC mermaids scored only one first and one second in the meet. Nancy Relling capped first place in the 50-yard breaststroke with a :36.6. The WRA’s freestyler, Sue Sampson, still rings in the meet against Cortland State. MSC lost a heartbreaker evacuation.

ONE GENERATOR WORKED

Several generators provided MSC’s electricity, but only one was in operation at the time of the final blackout. Various stories circulated concerning the shutdown of the third generator and one person working in the electrical office stated that the final shutdown was done on the assumption that the game had been cancelled and the gym in process of evacuation.

For the fans who packed the stands and the lobby of Panzer gym, the lights were supposed to be out for only two minutes, just long enough to repair the damage. (Believe that and I’ll tell you some programs from the Knute Rockne Bowl cheap.)

QUEENS, N.Y. — Montclair State College’s freshman swimmers ran rings around other competition in the Queens Relay Carnival last Saturday. MSC’s little Indians took 3 out of 4 events in the swimming—JV category.

Not to be undone, the varsity won the distance medley, but was disqualified in the 2-mile relay.

MIKE SINOYOTT, Bill Terrell, Tom Scanlon and Jim Hemmel combined to win the sprint medley with a 3:49.6. Pete Winnicki took Terrell’s place in the mile relay, but the outcome was the same. The freshman won the gold medal in a mile with a time of 4:30.6.

The freshman teamed with JV to win the 2-mile relay, With Winnicki as anchor. MSC earned the first leg of the relay, followed by Ed O’Connor, Frank Winkelman and John Fisher, the quartet picked up a first with an 8:38.6.

The varsity team of Steve Schappert, Greg Weiss, Vic Mizzoni and Kevin McGrath won the distance medley for MSC with a time of 10:32.5.

WRA Classic: Routes Five

The Women’s Recreation Association basketball team overwhelmed Hunter College’s quintet, 75-23, for their second win of the season.

In A GAME that was no contest for MSC, three players scored in double figures. Mary Hayek was high scorer for the Indians with 7 buckets and two free throws for a total of 16 points.

Denise Wood and Belinda Venancio both had 6 baskets and a foul shot, tallying 13 points each.

Moss Returns
To MSC Five
By Brendan Suhr
Sports Writer
The patented cry of "Moss is boss," will again ring thru Panzer gym, as Willie Moss returns to action for the high-flying Montclair State College basketball team. He was ineligible for the fall semester.
Moss, a 6'4"., 210-lb. senior from Newark Central high school, was a valuable member of the last two NCAA tournament teams.
WILLIE WAS declared ineligible for one semester by the NCAA rules committee for violating its bylaws. The violation occurred when he played in a benefit game for the widow of Drayton Bembry, a former high school teammate.
Moss violated the NCAA's eligibility rule on all four counts;
the game was posted in advance, it was officiated, the final score was posted and recorded and the participating team was uniformed.
Ollie Gelston, upon hearing of the occurrence, notified the NCAA so that the team would not be jeopardized.
THE USUAL penalty for violating a rule is complete ineligibility for the entire season, but because of the nature of the game and the innocence in which the violation was committed, a lesser penalty was handed down.
Harry James, captain of the Big Red Machine, said, "Willie will give us a great deal of help up front, especially with his rebounding and defense. I think that Willie's biggest asset for us down the stretch this season will be his experience."
Willie was a valuable sixth man on the 24-3, NCAA tournament team of two years ago. Last year, he was a starter on the 23-3,
Eastern Regional finalists team.
He averaged 8.2 points per game and grabbed 250 rebounds for the season.
MSC STATED "I will be happy to contribute in any way to help this team, because we all have one common goal-the NCAA
