Nixon Speech Provokes Meetings

By Donna Lee Goldberg

"What are we going to do?" junior Phil Vivenzio demanded of the 100 students at Tuesday's emergency meeting to plan action on US President Richard M. Nixon's recent decision to mine South Vietnam's Hai Phong harbor.

Participants struggled into the lower lounge of the student life building with soggy rain coats and umbrellas, soaked from the heavy rain. Some of the organizers of the meeting apparently had worked on last week's memorial to Kent State and Jackson State. They commented to each other, "This is really sad." "People would rather sleep." "It's the old gang."

Jill Rifkin, a senior, began the meeting by reading an excerpt from an article in Tuesday's New York Times. The article discussed Nixon's potential for using nuclear power. Rifkin then turned the meeting over to Vivenzio. By now the size of the group had swelled to about 80 people.

Various people offered ideas, among them: seeing congressmen, and picketing their homes and planning another meeting. Julie Vega, a junior, moderated the discussion until Vivenzio spoke again. He called for action and said that efforts had been made through the system and it was now a question of campus power.

Larry Bishop, junior class president, said, "70 was a flop at Montclair State College. We need a coalition to get out and work. People are scared and that's to our advantage."

Vivenzio inflamed the meeting again by asking if the students would have to do something drastic. Vega tried to calm things down by saying, "Let's decide what we'll do on campus." The suggestion that seemed to receive the greatest approval was offered by John Proter. He asserted, "The campus must be used as a communication tool. Everyone can use their expertise, whether it be doing publicity or research."

Shortly thereafter, the meeting grew to at least 100 people and confusion prevailed while students talked loudly to one another.

Student Government Association president-elect Sam Crane was called upon to speak. He announced that he thought organization was a viable means for the group's effort.

The meeting, which has been an exchange of thoughts, became a high-pressure situation when a brown-haired girl expressed her opinion about many of the participants' appearances and their success in their efforts in the community. She said, "Just look at how you're dressed."

At least 25 irritated people, mainly long-haired boys and girls dressed in army jackets, peasant and workshirts and jeans, stood up. Hot arguments and shouting followed as to who was open-minded and the importance of dress.

Vega, who had been a moderator earlier, now was practically a mediator. She again calmed down the group and concluded the meeting after 55 minutes after it began by reiterating the coalition's goals.

Students Lobby

For Lower Hike

In a surprise action Monday, the New Jersey state Senate passed Governor William T. Cahill's fiscal budget which includes a $185 tuition increase for the state colleges.

The budget goes before the state assembly for a vote today and students will be meeting in Trenton to lobby against its passage, according to Sam Crane, SGA public relations officer and president-elect.

A small group of Montclair State students are going to Trenton to work against the increase which Crane called worse than the original proposal of a $250 increase. Along with the reduced increase came a cut in the higher education budget, according to Crane.

Crane called the increase regressive and said that it conflicts with the state's master plan which assures "quality education for all." He expressed amazement that the Board of Higher Education proposed an increase without carefully investigating alternatives.

The students intend to confront the legislature with the issues, said Crane. He hopes that they may be able to obtain a one year "moratorium" during which time the students could further investigate alternatives to a tuition increase.

Crane stated, however, that "it doesn't look good." If they succeed in bringing about the rejection of the budget, it will return to the appropriations committee for revision.

Crane went on to explain, though, that the Democrats, who supply more of the opponents of the increase, are not united on this issue.

If the state assembly passes Cahill's budget, tuition for state colleges and universities will increase in September.
Scholarships Set

By Joanne Surovicz
Staff Writer

Twelve Montclair State students are receiving scholarships from the SGA International Scholarship Program for experimental living in foreign countries this summer.

The ISP was coordinated by Peter Balsamo and Lynn Maltkinthin after Balsamo received approval from the SGA in November. It is in operation with the International Off-Campus Learning Programs Office and the Council of International and Educational Exchange in New York. Formerly this program was organized under the Experiment in International Living. Balsamo stated that the change in programs allows "a more flexible policy which is less costly to the students." Also, the students can choose from a greater range of countries and freshmen, who were excluded in the Experiment, can apply for the ISP.

Allotment from the SGA totaled $5779 which was differentially divided among the 12 students. The allotments are never used for travel from the US to the foreign country, but are applied only toward tuition or expenses within the country. The students can travel on their own or through programs sponsored by other agencies.

Lobbyists Rebuffed

By Diane Forden
Staff Writer

“We went to Washington to speak personally with our Congressmen and we couldn’t even get five minutes of their time.” So stated Daphne Engle, one of four students from the Montclair State College Student Peace Coalition who accompanied a group of 30 students from NJ colleges on a trip sponsored by Seton Hall University to lobby against the war in Vietnam.

The group spent May 8 in Washington, DC and, according to Engle, were “given the run around” when they tried to solicit support for an anti-war bill sponsored by Congressman Joseph Minish from the Montclair-West Orange district. The bill’s intention is “to provide for the cessation of bombing in Indochina and for the withdrawal of U.S. military personnel from the Republic of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.”

The bill is now before the Committee of Foreign Affairs and according to Engle, Pennsylvania Congressman Thomas E. Morgan, chairman of the committee, is “sitting on the bill so it can’t get to the House.”

“We went to Morgan’s office we found students from the University of Maryland sitting in front of his door,” Engle said. “They had been there for five days in shifts but Morgan refuses to see anyone, talk to anyone or let his administrative aid see anyone.”

Similarly, in other offices visited the students could only talk with aids. “They gave us mimeographed sheets of the congressman’s activities,” Engle said wryly. “And any appointments we had made to see congressmen would be broken when we returned.”

Dear President Nixon,

I am no longer on your side.

God

A vehement denunciation of the recall was given by Tom Cupples, music rep. “It’s ridiculous to make the election too easy for students—they should expect to wait in lines,” he exclaimed.

WHEN THE bill was called up for vote, the legislature lacked quorum and adjourned. King expressed anger, stating, “This is an overwhelming abuse of student power.” Despite the setback, his group intends to continue the fight.

With the petition submitted, Lee has 10 days in which to validate the signatures on it. After he does, publicity must occur over a four-day period before the actual election. Then 30% of the student body, approximately 1800 persons, must vote for the ballotting to be valid. All this, according to Axal, can happen no sooner than May 26, in the midst of the final exam period.

If an election is held, all four of the winners in the April 28 contest will run. However, the obstacles to such an occurrence appear great.

Jan Snyder, chairman of the Elections Committee, has resigned to run for class office. The other members, Vic DeLuca and Rich Davison, have vowed to quit if the special elections are approved. If this occurs, a new committee will have to be appointed by Lee.

“I doubt you’d get a fair election then,” DeLuca commented.

Spanish Field Work Available

By Carla Capizzi Staff Writer

An unusual "alternative to purely academic learning" will become available to Montclair State students this fall, according to Dr. Ana Rambaldo of the Spanish-Italian department.

Through an innovative new department program, MSC students can do field work in Spanish-speaking communities for college credit, Rambaldo stated.

Individual students would work for 12 hours a week, with a sponsor of their choice from the community, actually assisting them at their jobs. Sponsors are involved in a variety of areas, such as social work and city government, in the cities of Newark, Passaic and Paterson.

The plan, known as the Spanish-Speaking Communities Program, is open to all students, regardless of major or class, Rambaldo stressed. The main prerequisite is that the student feels he can communicate fairly well in Spanish, she said.

Rambaldo, originator and coordinator of the program, describes it as "progressive" and a "concrete experience." She pointed out that the program is advantageous both to the student, in terms of experience and contact with the Spanish community and to the communities, which need someone to help them with their problems.

While helping in the community, the student would use his field work and additional research as the basis of two independent study projects. Thus, Rambaldo explained, participants would receive a total of nine credits for the program, three from the Spanish-Italian department and three each from the two departments in which they choose to do independent studies.

About a dozen students have already applied to the program.

Over the summer vacation the MONTCLARION will be moving its offices to the fourth floor of the new Student Center.
'Sisterhood is Powerful'

by Cathy Jacob and Morey Antebi

"The strongest bond is the love of man for man: the mutual regard and affection of men who live by a code and die together fighting odds." American literature and art will testify to the truth of Celestine Ware's observation in her book, Woman Power. However, one cannot discover a parallel condition in female relationships, for there are obstacles for the woman trying to cultivate a deep relationship with another woman. She has been led to believe that her only destiny is to be a wife and mother. With this objective in mind, she must necessarily spend time and effort to attract a man. For the duration of this dubious process the woman, she is likely to see her female counterparts as competitors rather than comrades. This competition for male attention and approval leads to an atmosphere of mistrust and general uneasiness in many female relationships.

While women do spend much time in each other's company, it is usually not for the purpose of discovering each other's personalities and forging lasting friendships. Rather it is for the purpose of companionship in situations where the ultimate goal is man baiting. WOMEN ARE led to believe that their valid and rewarding relationships are the ones they share with men. If a woman believes that her only fulfillment lies in being a wife and mother, she will consider her relationships with women as secondary.

In a previous column it was shown that at the root of sexism is the societal structure that defines women in terms of men. In other words a woman's worth is determined not by her personal worth but rather by her value to the man she is attached to.

In an effort to reorient women so that their first priority is to the development of an independent identity, feminists have attempted to create an alternate environment—the consciousness raising session. The purpose of these sessions is to add a new dimension to women's relation with each other. For the first time women are free to speak intimately with other women about their lives. Sessions center on specific topics such as marriage, mothers, masturbation, etc. Each woman has the opportunity to discuss how the topics relate to her and in turn she can compare her situation with the other woman. It is hoped that this new avenue of communication, previously closed by mutual alienation, will aid women in discovering themselves as individuals with significance in their own right.

A CORRECTION: In last week's column, "Feminism Part 111—Is there Sex After Orgasm?" it was stated that the situation described in Larry McMurtry's, The Last Picture Show was a result of two concepts, the implied sexual nature of the female coupled with an extreme but not uncommon interpretation of orgasm-oriented sex. The line should have read: "... the implied a sexual nature of the female..."
Vietnam And...

For the last seven years the Army of the Republic of Vietnam has been hiding behind the lives of American GI’s. Since 1968 this crutch for the South Vietnamese has been gradually removed under Vietnamization until early in 1971 when they were fully responsible for the ground combat role.

In short the war was being fought by the participants–as Lyndon Johnson would say “Asian boys fighting an Asian war.” They had the best equipment and training in the world, yet they were unable to halt an inferior force of Communists who mauled them for the past several weeks.

President Richard M. Nixon is now trying to restore the crutch of American armed might. His actions of intercepting North Vietnam’s supply routes and mining Haiphong harbor are irrational and irresponsible. The South Vietnamese have more than demonstrated their lack of will and incompetence to fight. It can only be surmised that they do not wish to support their “elected” government and wish to go Communist.

We wholeheartedly support the Student Government’s condemnation of what can only be construed as United States aggression. We further believe that President Nixon is going against the beliefs of the American people and ought to be severely censored by that seemingly forgotten body, Congress—if not impeached.

Rights Are Long Overdue

It isn’t often the state assembly does anything which would warrant our praise. But last week’s approval of a bill lowering the “legal age” for adult responsibilities to 18 is a long overdue measure.

For too long now, persons under 21 have been caught in a twilight zone–having adult responsibilities in some areas while at the same time being treated like children. It is an absurd situation which allows men to be drafted but denies them the right to marry or contract financial transactions without parental consent.

A bill sponsored by Thomas Deverin (D-Middlesex), would change this. All legal rights, from buying a home to drinking, would be given to 18 year olds. However, the bill faces a tough fight in the senate over the perennial evil–drinking.

Reports indicate the majority of senators agree with Deverin’s measure but object to allowing drinking privileges. If we are “adult” enough to handle such diverse activities as financing businesses, homes, getting married, drafted, drive and being elected to public office, why aren’t we “adult” enough to drink?

Progress Is Our Benefit

Well, the SGA Elections are over and despite all the newly born promises, black students, we’re still not free. We still have quite a few hassles and obstacles ahead of us in the coming school year which we will have to contend with so that they will not contend with us.

But there’s no problem there. We know what we want and we know what we will have or else no one will enjoy it.

In case someone should ask, let it be known that we the black members of this college have made many significant gains throughout this school year. We have moved on many issues which were never moved on before. Black students have unified to such a great extent that many of the things that black students on this campus were in need of, came through. Progress has been our total benefit.

OPPRESSIVE FORCES

However, we need more because we must be able to do more. We need more money, first of all, in our budget so that we will have more to offer this campus.

What we also need is for all the organizations, offices and personnel of this institution to withdraw their oppressive forces.

We need to be able to deal with the academics without some old, crazy instructor telling us that he can’t give us the grade we deserve because we don’t act like we deserve it.

We need to be able to live like black people without all the fictions and all the sub-standard conditions, without people telling us we have to think white.

RIGHT DIRECTION

Moving in the right direction is what it’s all about. We will move in that direction because we now have the power necessary to move. If you think about it, demands aren’t really going to be all that great. We ask only that this college deal with all our demands. Allowing us to live and work on this campus without any hassle will mean a great deal to all the black students and to the entire community of Montclair State.

Whose Food Tastes Worse?

“There is a place called Chanda, Where the women are all free. Aieeeee!” –Playboy Magazine

Going into Bohn Hall with a tight heart and a willing air is fairly easy. Coming out in the same condition is not so easy at all, or even possible. For instance, the other day I sauntered into the cafeteria and sat down with a young lady I knew slightly. I was shortly in the process of being called a male chauvinist pig for some testing comment or other I had made, little knowing my peril.

A SEXIST

Another male chauvinist pig seated at the table attempted to come to my aid, but was promptly rebuked by the information that he, unfortunately, was in the doghouse as I. It seemed that both of us had been going about giving girls the impression that “they needed us, but we didn’t need them”. Our impressive young lady, after having purged her soul for the day, went off to a class. I couldn’t help remarking a change in her character after she told us what we were. She looked like a feline that had swallowed a sweet mouse.

“Hrm,” I thought to myself, peering out of my doghouse at my companion pig. “I always thought that chastity was in the eye of the beholder.” Obviously, the girl had called me a male, sexist, chauvinist (hereafter abbreviated to MSC) pig, Bohn Hall is a paradise. It’s the only dorm on campus with a red light on top (a great excuse for justifying raids) and Saga Foods lasagna. “I don’t know about you, but I definitely need girls. It’s hard without them.”

SALAD BOWL

“What’s hard?” I asked, in ignorance of my own ignorance. But it was too late. He had gone back to rooting again, this time in the Saga Foods salad bowl. I really couldn’t blame him. To a pig, Bohn Hall is a paradise. It’s the only dorm on campus with a red light on top (a great excuse for justifying raids) and Saga Foods lasagna.

“After all,” I rationalized, “feminists will be girls.” For a reason. I wondered what had given the female in question the notion that I was what she thought I was: a person who didn’t need girls.

“Wait a minute,” said the other pig, who had been rooting with his nose through Saga Foods lasagna. “I don’t know about you, but I definitely need girls. It’s hard without them.”

Resigning myself to my fate, I trudged off to Sprague Library. Even if I was unable to find a decent cookbook there, I was sure to run into a few old fashioned girls. However, I bore no grudge against the movement.

“After all,” I rationalized daily, “feminists will be girls.”

"Brothers and sisters, remember the dead at Jackson State," intoned a black-robed demonstrator as he marched near the front of a group of students in a mock funeral in memory of the students who were killed at Kent State and Jackson State in May, 1970.

Approximately 200 students watched as the coffin burned, but a heavy downpour dispersed the crowd.

Vic DeLuca, SGA history department rep, said that the march was organized by the Montclair State Peace Coalition. One of the demonstrators added that the purpose of the march "speaks for itself." Both said they did not know how the junior high school students got to MSC.

One student apparently did not approve the protest as he walked past the burning coffin and said, "You have no right smoking up the campus like this."

"Plastic Noses" Distort All

By Pat Bocola

A recent article on pledging in last week's MONTCLARION drew my attention to the plastic noses on campus. The author was referring to those worn in fun by pledges. Unfortunately the plastic noses that I've seen lately are permanently attached.

The altitude of these noses are doing enough in their own defensive manner. They seem people are surprised when there would be a new search for someone to pin the blame on in a morgue which they created. Strangely enough Provo and Chapin Hall would be the likely successors. An interesting thought to say the least.

A Mission

The very reason that pledging attracts attacks from within "mature" individuals who think it too childish and too immature. This is not a tradition based on resentment, nor is it friendship can not be meaningly and misinformed, but 1 just wanted to set the record straight. I go into every Greek function, complimentry, but I just wanted to say the least. I am truly sorry for their loss.

The very reason that pledging does not humiditate and degrade is that it is hard work and at the same it is fun, experiences that can never be forgotten. Pledging is not a tradition based on resentment, nor is it irrelevant. Certainly the pledging of fraternal organizations is a search for belonging, no different than those who sit in the same corner of the coffee shop or the library day after day.

In addition it is a valuable preparation for the work that goes into every Greek function, which do not go unattended by the lounge warmers. Most important, pledging is getting to know the members of the organization as brothers and sisters as well as members of the other Greek organizations as co-workers. This kind of comradeship cannot be experienced by those who choose their belonging in one sacred corner of the lounge from 8 to 5 only to go home to the warmth of their term papers. I am truly sorry for their loss.

Scotching at pledging is not the answer to the problem of apathy on campus. Ask the so-called "mature" individuals who think they know, they're sitting on it.

Strike Accomplishes Unity

"What did you accomplish with your strike?" This question has been asked of the Montclair Faculty Association condemnation of the United States on five counts of aggression.

"The altitude of these noses are doing enough in their own defensive manner. They seem people are surprised when there would be a new search for someone to pin the blame on in a morgue which they created. Strangely enough Provo and Chapin Hall would be the likely successors. An interesting thought to say the least."

I can not bring myself to understand how we attempted to get around as to the purpose of our activities.

I hope I can clear the air by explaining what we attempted to get across. First, I must say that our anti-war activities, although lacking thongs of support, was quite successful. The main theme throughout the strike was awareness. We attempted to make people aware of the war. I think we accomplished that. We wanted the people to get involved in stopping the war. I say we accomplished that. We wanted the outside communities to hear our protest of this war. I say we accomplished that.

ACTIVITIES

We never wanted to close the school forthwith. We attempted to stir mass support in a reviewing of conscience. We wanted each student to decide on the right course of action in stopping this war. I think we accomplished major goals in establishing a need to think about the war. We got people to come to our rallies, we got people to register to vote, we got people to march in Montclair, we got people to work for their presidential candidate and we got people to mourn the killings at Kent and Jackson States.

We got all these things by starting a small fire that eventually turned into a blaze. We changed the thinking of people from papers and mixers to rallies and marches. We received the support of many students, administrators and faculty in our efforts to rally mass opposition to the war. The Faculty Association and the Student Government both passed resolutions opposing the war and the renewal of the bombing. We received the support of our two Senators, Case and Williams, in our protest of the war. We did all this with a small cohesive group of twenty-five people. People might laugh at the small number, but these people had strong convictions.

A MISSION

We all had a mission to accomplish and can proudly say we did. This small group of people put in much time and effort in rallying not only the college, but the surrounding towns. We got people aware of this war and how the President is prolonging it. This was our primary goal and this goal was accomplished.

We didn't stop the war. We didn't stop the bombing. We didn't bring our soldiers home. But we got people thinking in this direction. We brought the war back as an issue that should be first in everyone's mind. We boycotted classes and that hurt us. But it was entirely worth it. Our suffering is nothing compared to the wounded and refugees. We did something and we did it at Montclair State.

This article might seem overly complimentary, but I just wanted to set the record straight. I believed we did something. I only hope we can continue.

We got people aware of this war and how the President is prolonging it. This was our primary goal and this goal was accomplished.

A MISSION

We all had a mission to accomplish and can proudly say we did. This small group of people put in much time and effort in rallying not only the college, but the surrounding towns. We got people aware of this war and how the President is prolonging it. This was our primary goal and this goal was accomplished.
Sculptor Uses Environment

"It's really beautiful outside, even the garbage," according to senior Glen "J.C." Kowalik. To prove his theory, Kowalik will conduct a sculpture show this week entitled "I am curious pink." The show will feature Kowalik's work, sculpture constructed from "found objects."

Sitting in his cluttered room amidst his art work, "J.C." explained that his show is an "invitation for people to experience what happens in my mind every day."

On the walls of his room hung weavings made with a variety of material such as can tops, wood, string, stockings and wool. Furniture was cluttered with sculptures made of wood and metal. Old shoes became objects of art as well children's old toys, rocks and beer cans.

KOWALIK EXPLAINED that his art consisted of "taking something out of the environment and changing it in some way." He explained that he is always picking up materials during walks and along roads and assorted that garbage can be recycled into art work.

Refusing to explain the meaning of the show's title, Kowalik said that it is "a secret." He stated that his show, which will be open to MSC students on May 13 and 14 from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Webster Hall, will be "a lot of fun."

The viewers of the exhibit will take an active part in the show. They will be ushered around by students costumed as "Fellini-type" characters and will be given bubbles to blow. The participants will also be given cards on which to comment on each art piece for the artist's benefit.

Kowalik explained that he wants his show to be somewhere that people can "touch things and laugh." Pieces of costumes will be available for people to rent so that they can become a piece of sculpture themselves.

WHILE HE called the show "a goof," the soft-spoken artist expressed hope that people will question the reason behind "the goof." He said that his art is simple but has a "heavy" philosophy behind it.

Kowalik made his film debut last year when he produced a film entitled "I am curious yellow jello." Students have asked him to show it again this year but he has not as of yet. He indicated that the title of this sculpture show derived from the film title.

After explaining his intentions of audience participation in his show, Kowalik smiled and said that he wants to show people the unexpected that life has to offer.

The Show Must Go On...And On...

"And do we work our asses off? Applause!" That's what the gypsies say. The gypsies are those dancers who work 14 weeks a year and camp from show to show in the hit musical "Applause," one of Broadway's long-runners. The Betty Comden-Adolph Green-Charles Strouse-Leo Adams musical, running since 1970, is housed at the Palace Theatre on 45th street.

Fashion designer-beauty consultant Arlene Dahl took "Applause" in her hands on the first of the month, replacing Anne Baxter. Although her debut was somewhat lacking on her opening night, her delivery of the Comden-Green book was impeccable. And, of course, she cuts a startling figure. Although she handles the part of Margo Channing differently than Baxter or the first Margo, Lauren Bacall, her interpretation is equally valid.

"Applause" is based on the 50s film "All About Eve," which starred Bette Davis as Margo and the same Anne Baxter as Eve Harrington. In both the film and the play, Eve plots to enter the world of show business by becoming Margo's the dear friend and assistant of Margo Channing, superstar. Janice Lynde handles the Eve-task well, and John Gabriel effects a three-dimensional star. Along with his wife, Eve-task well, and John Gabriel effects a three-dimensional star. He's MSC's Consistent Performer

"I'm not the greatest in form and style," stated senior Rich Davison, "but I get the job done."

Doing just that has also meant a great deal this year to Montclair State's tennis team. Davison plays fifth singles and team with his co-captain, sophomore Kim Marchese, for the second doubles. So far this season, the blond, blue-eyed athlete boasts a 9-1 record in the singles and with Marchese is 7-4 in doubles.

Playing so far down in the lineup might tend to annoy other tennis players, but the opposite is true for Davison. Davison believes his strength is his net game, trying to get his opponent off-guard. "I run and hustle a lot," he stated, "and I try to get up to the net."

The physical education major has achieved some form of notoriety for his tactics at the net. Davison's pet peeve is against his opposing players. "Staying back affects my game," he stated. "I've no chance to put the ball away."

This year is Davison's second on the MSC varsity. In his junior varsity year, he was undefeated until the final match. LAST YEAR Davison managed to reach the semifinals of the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference meet. He lost to John Dichter of Glassboro State in three sets, 8-6, 4-6 and 2-6. In the morning, however, Davison defeated the top-seeded Andy Bach, 8-6, 0-6 and 6-4.

Not bad for a guy whose first serve is "half-way decent" and his second "nothing to talk about."
Montclair State golfers climbed out of their slump last week, routing Bloomfield College, 15-2, in a road match and clubbing Newark with a 7-5 record.

TOMORROW FOUR of the MSC six will be teaming up to test their skills against 40 colleges and universities from the area in the Metropolitan Tournament at Richmond Hills Country Club in Staten Island. In the MSC entry will be juniors Asdal, John Jones, Bob Watson and Alan Hyers.

Again scoring low was Asdal with a 36-40-76. It was, MSC’s lowest season score. Assisting Asdal in the win were Hyers, Jones and Weber with three points each. Bill Paul, Weiss with two points. The contest closed MSC’s state college play at 2-2.

Two weeks ago the local six rebounded for two lessons to ease past Bloomfield at the Knoll Country Club in Boonton. Gathering three points each for the Indians were Asdal, Watson, Jones and Weber. Adding to the victory were Kushner with two and one-half points and Hyers with one and one-half. Low score for the round was Asdal’s 40-39-78.

On Bloomfield College today at 1:30, the Indians will provide the scoring power.

Asdal Places 5th in States

Last Friday, the Indians unleashed their bows, arrows and bats on Trenton State, 10-4. As if that wasn’t enough, MSC took the Lions the next day, 11-3.

If the Indians try hard enough, they can remember what it’s like to lose a baseball game, something they haven’t done since April 26, more than two weeks ago.

Since their 5-0 loss to Adelphi University, MSC has put together nine straight wins, five of them coming in New Jersey State College Conference games to give them the title, their first in three seasons.

According to a release by MSC’s athletic department, the Indians are under consideration for a berth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association’s (NCAA) College Division baseball tournament.”

THINGS GOT sticky on Sunday as MSC had to come from behind to overtake Fairleigh Dickinson University, 4-3. And the bubblegum-chewers were in full force in a 14-inning contest Monday with East Stroudsburg that the Indians took, 6-5.

Sunday’s victory over Fairleigh Dickinson was MSC’s third over a university division team, the other wins coming in games with Long Island University and Rider.

Sophomore Bill Collins, who leads the team in the earned run average category with a tidy 1.07, went the distance. Collins allowed only three hits in the contest and upped his record to 3-0.

LOU RECCIA’s fourth home run of the season in the eighth inning and Tony Scarletelli’s circuit on the first pitch of the ninth inning provided the scoring power.

Scarletelli’s blast ties him with a school record of eight home runs in a season. Frank Rossi set the standard in 1969. The team has cleared the wall 40 times thus far, a rate of more than two homers per game.

WEISS COPS First

At Quantico, Va.

Greg Weiss took the 880 yard run at the Quantico Relays, Saturday in Quantico, Va., but the team failed to follow suit Monday as they lost to East Stroudsburg State, Pa., in a dual meet, 83-61.

Weiss came in with a time of 1:50.1 on the cinder track. “I think it was the fastest half-mile of the day,” attested Coach George Horn. THE JUNIOR runner finished ahead of eight others, the field including “runners of national caliber,” said Horn.

Last year the Indian mile relay team topped second place in the event at Quantico with Vic Mizzone, Bill Lowing, Weiss and Steve Schappett doing the running for MSC. This year the Indians moved down a notch as Mizzone, who has been ill for the most part of the season, clocked in at 1:56.5, Kevin McGrath at 1:57 and anchorman Weiss at 1:50.6.

Greg Weiss:

Half-mile.

About the loss in the dual meet of the season, Horn analyzed, “We were weak in hurdles, discus and shot, but we did well in running again.”
For the past three years Bruce Davis has been tearing up the courts for Montclair State's basketball team. Last Saturday, Davis found a team of intramural players no real obstacle as he led the Destroyers to a 77-75 come-from-behind victory over the Top Guns for the Black Weekend Basketball Tournament championship.

Davis pumped in 29 points, 13 in the third period, to net the tournament's most valuable player award. He also led the choices for the All-Tournament team. Others included teammate Charles Talley and Top Guns Al Thompson, Henley Black and Darrell Gregory.

SPARKED BY Thompson and Gregory, the Top Guns took a one-point lead in the first period which widened into four points at the half. But Davis' fatal jumpers turned the tables on the Guns and put the Destroyers up by seven in the third.

Talley picked up where Davis left off in the fourth, scoring 11 points, to keep the Destroyers just ahead enough to insure the win. Talley had to be the number one defensive man for the Destroyers, he held opponent Sandy Hunter to two points in the entire contest. Marv Byers and Bob Martin were non-tournament team choices who scored in double figures.

The Destroyers had beaten the Lakers last Wednesday, 94-71, to reach the finals. The Lakers boasted of four MSC varsity players on the squad, Cal Blue, Scott Riley, Jeff Brown and Jeff Boyd. The Top Guns moved into the final round by virtue of a 78-77 victory over the Blankers on Thursday.

DON STEWART and Joe Dickerson directed the tournament this year. Frank Walker, Arnell Jenkins, Ed Prather and Doug Goullete aided in the tourney.
