Again September

for Kevin Horn

by Edwin Romond

Again September arrives shedding stubborn heat of a summer already in our museum of memory. Again we note darkness sneaking in earlier and earlier, maybe we're caught by surprise as we were last year and will be again next year. Strange how each September seems a beginning even as leaves die in shrouds of color, the earth turning orange and red after months of solitary green. Good teachers consider the coming fall a mystery to unfold with students starting as strangers on a class list but blooming into learners after weeks turn to months in the enriching, fulfilling, sometimes exasperating, one of a kind story of a school year that begins again in September.

Edwin Romond is the author of eight collections of poetry and has been awarded writing fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and from both the New Jersey and Pennsylvania State Councils on the Arts. In 2013 he received the New Jersey Poetry Prize for his poem, "Champion." Garrison Keillor has twice featured Romond's poetry on National Public Radio and his memoir, "The Ticket," appears in Tim Russert's New York Times bestseller, Wisdom of Our Fathers.

Now retired, Romond taught English at Metuchen High School and Warren Hills Regional High School, Washington, New Jersey. A native of Woodbridge, New Jersey, he now lives in Wind Gap, Pennsylvania, with his wife and son.
