CEASEFIRE DRAWS
SKEPTIC RESPONSE

By Carol Anne Sakowitz
Staff Writer

President Richard M. Nixon's announcement Tuesday night of an end to the American involvement in Vietnam has been received with a surprising display of unemotion by a war-weary United States. Americans whose anti-war convictions were strong enough to initiate a Counter Inauguration last Saturday responded to the news without the enthusiasm which followed similar disclosures concerning World Wars I and II.

General student reaction will not become fully known until the bulk of the student body returns in February. Of those who remained to take courses, the termination of US involvement invoked a somber tone mixed with slight skepticism.

John McGorty, senior psychology major, said, "I'm glad it's finally over, but I'm waiting to see what's going to happen. I mean, I'd like to see if he'll get the prisoners of war free in 60 days."

Junior mathematics major Felix Nord confesses to a feeling of disbelief. "I don't believe that it's really ended. I won't believe it until I see proof." Proof, added Nord, would be the complete return to the US of soldiers now stationed in Vietnam.

Nixon said Tuesday that the pact, to be formally signed on Saturday, will bring "peace with honor." Responses from various Montclair State students and graduates differ as to the verity of the Nixon's statement.

"It's an empty peace-I wouldn't call it an honorable peace," Steve Bogart, co-coordinator of Students for McGovern, stated. "Succeeding presidents will have to bury it (conditions surrounding the signing of the pact)." The Marine veteran added, "What's honorable about what we've done in Vietnam? We can never repay the Vietnamese for what we've done to them."

Ted Olde sits on the opposite side of the political coin. Olde, who graduated from MSC this month, was an active member of the Republican Club. Like Bogart, Olde believes that the US should never have entered into the Vietnamese conflict. However, once involved, Olde thinks that the US should have utilized its full militaristic powers against the North Vietnamese.

For him the peace was honorable. "Nixon has the guarantee of getting all our men back, which McGovern didn't want to obtain. I'm sure that this peace pact makes McGovern and other liberals look like fools."

"I wish that it (the peace) had come sooner, but I don't think it came too late," Olde added.

Dave Cornelisse, a 1972 graduate now working in the Student Center, doesn't believe that the peace agreement was timely enough for him.

"If this had happened two years ago I would never had had to go into the National Guard. I wouldn't be wasting $600 of the taxpayers' money a year or one month a year of my time for the next six years."

"In high school I was convinced like everyone else from my area that our country was doing a good deed-Big Brother helping out," he added.

Cornelisse has since changed his position on the Vietnam issue. Faced with the prospect of being drafted, he elected to enter the Guard.

"I never considered leaving the country; I never got that far," he said. "I think I would have maimed myself first," Cornelisse added soberly.

In 1969, freshman Tom Benn chose to enlist in the Army rather than wait to be drafted. The decision allowed him to select, rather than be given, a position. A major photojournalist, Benn was gifted with a tour in Vietnam as an assignment.

"Before going into the Army, I felt like the typical flagwaving, red-white-and-blue All-American boy," he said. "Then I got there and saw what we were doing to Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos and I became disillusioned with any type of government. Looking back on it, my though haven't changed. In fact, recent activities have only reinforced them."

We have had so many disappointments, it is now hard to believe that the war in Vietnam may be over. One is almost afraid to be happy, afraid to celebrate for fear that our hopes for peace will again be dashed on the rocks of international power politics.

Peace will be wonderful and it will mean more to those of us who work with young people than it will mean to the man on the street. Working with college students through the years, we have observed up close the effect of the war in Vietnam. Some of our students were taken to Vietnam and wounded and killed, but all young people, whether they went to Vietnam or not, were in some way wounded by this war.

The number of social attitudes and psychological effects which Vietnam is responsible for creating is hard to measure. College campuses are certainly different places as a result of the war in Vietnam.

I am convinced that our motives as a nation, although terribly misguided, are generally pure when we initially became involved in Southeast Asia. Our military leaders and American investors may have had an excessive influence on some governmental decisions along the way, but I am confident that our country's goal was not an evil one. Regardless of intention, however, the effect of the war on our country has been disastrous.

AMERICA LOST ITS position of moral leadership in a large part of the world as a result of its actions in Vietnam. We ended up alone, criticized by nearly every country in the world. The nations who were previously our staunchest allies have heaped scathing criticism upon us. Perhaps the greatest tragedy to come from the war, however, has to do with what we did to ourselves in the process of fighting it. We have developed into a country divided, a country no longer sure of its own values. We became a country reviled of a kind of innocent self-confidence about our mission in the world but unable to face up to some of the social and psychological realities of the modern scene.

I have said on many occasions that I felt Vietnam was a mistake and a disaster for our country and that we must remove ourselves from it as soon as some way could be devised for freeing the American prisoners. The way now seems to have been found and I join others in rejoicing. I hope that we will emerge from Vietnam with a new maturity in our view of the rest of the world, with a new commitment to solve some of our pressing domestic problems and with a firm determination to return to Congress the power and responsibility for declaring war.
Today, Thursday, January 25
Droop Center. Meeting from 1 pm to 5 pm in the fourth floor meeting room of the Student Center.

Basketball. Brooklyn College at MSC, 6 pm

Fencing. MSC at Rutgers Newark, 7 pm.

Friday, January 26
Droop Center. Meeting from 1 pm to 5 pm in the fourth floor meeting room of the Student Center.

Saturday, January 27
Basketball. MSC at Mt. St. Mary’s, 8 pm; MSC at Central Connecticut, 1 pm

Wrestling. City College of N. Y. and Fairleigh Dickinson Univ. at MSC, 1 pm.

Fencing. MSC at Central Conn., 1 pm.

Monday, January 29
Student Teaching. Scheduled interviews in Alumni Lounge, Life Hall, beginning at 9:30 am.

Folk Dancing. International folk dancing at 7 pm in life hall cafe

Tuesday, January 30
SGA. Meeting at 7 pm in the fourth floor meeting room of the Student Center.

Basketball. Caldwell at MSC, 6 pm

Wednesday, January 31

Basketball. MSC at St. John’s, 7 pm.

Gymnastics. Stony Brook State U. at MSC, 7 pm.

Thursday, February 1

Electronics exhibit. From 10 am to 6 pm in ballrooms B and C of the Student Center.

Basketball. MSC at Monmouth College, 8 pm.

Program Changes

The registrar’s office has announced that Feb. 5, 6, and 7 have been designated as change of program days for spring semester schedules.

Seniors should report on Feb. 5 at the following times:

IL-K) 1 pm, (F-K) 1:30 pm,
(D2) 2 pm, and (A-E) 2:30 pm.

Students who requested a full schedule and received 11 or less semester hours should report on this day between 9:15 and 11:30 am.

Sophomores and juniors should report on Feb. 6. Juniors should report at the following times:

(T-Z) 9 am, (C-D) 9:30 am, (A-B) 10 am, (PS-2) 10:30 am,
(J-O) 11 am, and (E-I) 11:30 am.

Sophomores should report at:

(A-D) 1 pm, (L-P) 1:30 pm,
(O-Z) 2 pm, and (E-K) 2:30 pm.

Freshmen are asked to report on Feb. 7. All uncommitted students and majors in the School of Professional Arts and Sciences should come between 9:10 am and 11:30 am. All remaining majors are asked to report between 10 am and noon.

The program change will be held in Panzer gymnasium. Students will not be admitted without a copy of their spring schedule and the tuition receipt from the business office.

We need representatives for a special insurance program for students. Opportunity to earn in your spare time.

Mony Mutual of New York is offering an outstanding lifelong insurance program for college and graduate students and young professionals. It’s called Prime, and we’re looking for students to explain and sell it to their contemporaries. You’ll be on commission, so there’s no ceiling on your earnings. You’ll be working in your spare time. And you’ll be learning while you’re earning, gaining business experience and knowledge of financial planning—things that are bound to prove useful whether or not you continue in the life insurance business. If interested, write or phone Val Ciullo, CLU, Manager, The Mony East Orange Agency, 715 Park Ave., East Orange, N. J. 07017. Phone: 074-67FF.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York

Bill Gibson
Manager, Orange Agency

Art editor
Assignment editor
Copy editors

Photo editor
Advertising manager
Business manager

Men of APO

Bill Gibson
Manager, Orange Agency

You are on your way to the top.

If you keep saying you want to do something with your life—here’s your chance to prove it.
Order Prevails

Thousands Protest Nixon Inaugural

By Tom Benn
Staff Writer

Units, every four years, activity in Washington stops and the city takes some time to celebrate the ceremonial installation of America's President into his office, an affair with all the grandeur and pomp of a coronation.

Such was situation Saturday, but with an added twist that has marked only the most recent inaugurations. Distince and separate from Richard Nixon's installation was a gathering of people almost as large. They were not celebrating however. They had gathered in anger to protest the recent actions of Nixon's Administration.

Three demonstrations were planned, one in Arlington Cemetery by the Vietnam Veterans Against the War, one by the National Peace Action Coalition at the Washington Monument and a third by the Students for a Democratic Society.

At an intersection in Washington's predominately black Northeast quarter, the SDS rallied. Several hundred persons were gathered, some carrying blue, red and gold banners. A folk singer was performing, misplaced persons were searching for their friends and the bulk of the crowd was growing restless in anticipation of the march. At about 11:30, banners were raised into the chilli wind, slogans were half-heartedly chanted and the march began behind an escort of a dozen or so helmeted policemen on motor scooters and past the area's residents, few of whom bothered to interrupt their daily routines to stop and watch.

SUDDENLY, THE march was halted after less than a block. The police appeared to be trying to slow the march to a snail's pace. Some marchers speculated that they were giving Nixon time enough to finish his ceremony and get away from the Capitol. One policeman, as he passed me on his motor scooter, turned to his partner beside him and said, "Go slow. Go as slow as you possibly can."

At 12:40, while the official ceremonies were concluding at the Capitol, the marchers reached Union Station for a second rally. There the demonstration seemed to fizzle as marchers departed in small groups for the parade a few blocks away. If there was to be a confrontation, the chances seemed slimmer with the group fragmenting. Many headed for the Washington Monument.

At the Monument, there were already more people gathered near the speaker's platform than had been in the entire SDS march and the line of marchers extended far as far as the eye could see along Constitution Avenue toward the Lincoln Memorial. Ten of thousands had gathered at the Lincoln Monument to stage a Counter Inauguration. They were joined there by the Viet Vets, who had rallied at Arlington, signed their own peace treaty and marched across the bridge to the JFK peace march. From there, they all marched and chanted their way to the Ellipse, stopping in the shadow of Washington's monolithic shaft.

While Nixon was reviewing the legions of spangled, colorful high school and military bands and floats passing a few blocks away, a group of some 26 guests began making speeches to the Counter Inaugural throng, estimated to be as little as 25,000 and as high as 200,000. The true number was probably near 100,000; and they kept coming.

PEACE AND ORDER were prevalent and incidents were few. In mid-afternoon, with the sun making only sporadic but welcome appearances, the core of the SDS march, thwarted in its attempt to join Nixon's parade, came marching in behind a yellow flatbed truck. The truck was moving toward the speaker's platform, but was halted when a cord of ad hoc marchals sat down in front of it. At the monument itself, the American flag that ringed it were systematically taken down and either replaced by the flat of the National Liberation Front, turned upside down in the universal distress signal, or tossed into a fire. Some scuffling ensued, but order was quickly restored.

The crowd gathered, it listened and as the afternoon grew late, began dissipating as the charter buses and trains that had brought it prepared to leave. Their point apparently made, the marchers slowly made their way home.

---

Notes

European Counselling

The Office of International and Off-Campus Learning is distributing applications to students interested in serving as counselors at summer camps for children in France, Spain and Sweden. A knowledge of the language of the country is required.

Students are asked to contact the office in Life Hall for applications. The application deadline is Feb. 15.

English Manual

Dr. Sanford Radner, chairman of the English department, has announced that course descriptions of the department's spring offerings are now available.

The manual includes for each course a description, a listing of the class requirements and a description of the classroom method and techniques and a listing of the course readings.

Radner explained that the manual was not ready in time for registration for spring semester but expressed hope that it would prove useful during the change of course period.

The information is available in the English office in Partridge Hall.

---

Panzer Hosts Seminar

The conference was slated to be a study for "meeting the challenges and opportunities of urban recreation" and brought together recreation leaders from various parts of the country.

AMONG THE guest speakers were Joseph Curtis, commissioner of parks and recreation in Boston, Mass., and Dr. Roscoe Brown, director of Afro-American Studies at New York University. Curtis spoke at the Thursday luncheon on the topic of organizing and revitalizing urban recreation. Brown was the dinner speaker and discussed "The Black Urbanist - A Forgotten Man?"

Seminars were conducted throughout the two-day discussion concerning various aspects of urban recreation. Among the topics discussed were the legislation and funding of recreation programs, environmental education and urban recreation and the changing role of county parts in urban recreation.

Among those conducting the seminars were Dr. Edward Ambry, executive director of the N.J. Council of Environmental Education; Thomas Guida, director of the N.J. Recreation Bureau; and Dr. Charles Hartsoe, chairman of the recreation education program of Temple University.

DURING COFFEE breaks, Byron McGill and John C. Murphy of the Recreation School of Clowing out of Southern Illinois University, presented demonstrations on shaping balloons and discussed the art and history of clowning. McGill is the parks and recreation commissioner in Paducah, Kentucky, while Murphy is superintendent of recreation and parks in Blue Island, Illinois.

The conference was organized by Dr. William Ridinger, of Southern Illinois University and MSC professors Dr. Hazel Wacker, Dr. George Pearson, Dr. Richard Tews and Dr. Leonard Lucenko.

A recreation major of MSC is presently awaiting approval in Trenton. The decision might be affected by the success of the conference which had such a favorable response that most seminars were full to capacity.

AN URBAN Recreation Conference, sponsored by the School of Professional Arts and Sciences, the Panzer School Council and Physical Education majors organization, was held at the Student Center on Thurs., Jan. 11 and Fri., Jan. 12.
The War Is Finally Over

The longest war in the history of the United States will end on Sat., Jan. 27, 11 years after the first American died in South Vietnam. After the deaths of hundreds of thousands of men, women and children, after the expenditure of billions of dollars in defense, after years of protest by American citizens—the war is over.

Was it worth it? The United States has supposedly obtained the long awaited “peace with honor.” It cannot be said, however, that this country has made South Vietnam safe against North Vietnamese aggression—the expressed reason for our involvement in Asia.

The result of the years of fighting is the scheduling of an election to determine the makeup of the government or negotiations between Saigon and the Viet Cong. In all probability, this will strengthen North Vietnamese control in that country.

After World War II, the announcement of a peace settlement met with joy and wild celebration by the people. Just as the tone of that war differed from that of this war, so did the reaction to the peace announcement. After President Richard Nixon’s announcement over radio and television Tuesday night, the national reaction was one of apathy, a cynicism attitude towards the long-heralded peace that has finally come. The war is over. It ended without accomplishing its expressed purpose, at the loss of thousands of American men. Rather than being a great moment in history, Nixon’s peace announcement marks the end of a tragic waste of human life.

LBJ’s Death—A Sad Irony

This past week has been an historic one in which the presidential inauguration took place, the Vietnamese peace settlement was announced and Lyndon Baines Johnson, the 36th president of the United States, died.

Johnson left office four years ago a very unpopular president, being held responsible by many for the escalation of the war in Vietnam. His image did not improve with the passage of several years and it was not until his death that public figures spoke favorably of him.

It is ironic that the former president died the day before the announcement of the peace settlement of the war for which he was held so much responsible. Public opposition to his policies regarding the Vietnamese war cast a shadow over any other accomplishments of his administration—it is very sad that Johnson so nearly missed seeing its end.

Soapbox

Dem Seizure Welcome Relief

To the Editor:
In disagreement with Mike Lynch’s “Weenwood Dumping Pleasures Writer” (Dec. 15, 1972 issue):
“The Democratic Party can’t afford another spectacle like 1972, which means it will have to be rescued from that strange crew which seized control at the July convention.” In this quote, the “strange crew” Lynch speaks of is the most representative body of Americans (young, blacks, women, etc.) this country has ever assembled in a convention.

What Lynch calls for is not progress but regression as occurring under the present administration. Furthermore, Lynch’s comment on the “proper reply” from the Democratic governor is indicative of the attitude which discriminates against women, the young, blacks and other minorities.

Norman Beebe
Class of 1974

War Not Christian

To the Editor:
I would like to inform you of a mistake made in your December 20, 1972 issue which states “In Northern Ireland Protestants and Catholics killed each other in the best Christian tradition.” A person who is truly born-again Christian, who has accepted Christ as their personal savior, has no room for hate or for killing. It might better have been said that they killed each other in the best religious tradition, since religions had a bad reputation for hating people who don’t subscribe to their doctrines.

If both the Catholics and Protestants would just look at each other as Christians, not Catholics or Protestants, there would be no need for killing.

The Bible says “And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment and the second is like, namely, this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is no other commandment greater than these.” The Gospel according to Mark 12:30.

This is the Christian tradition, not killing and hatred but love. Killing and hating comes from saying my religion is best. If one says my Lord is best, that brings love for all people.

Allison Morgan
Montclair Christian Fellowship
Class of 1974

Letters to the editor should be sent to the MONTCLARION office, fourth floor, Student Center and must be received by 4 pm, Friday for publication in the following Thursday issue. Letters should be signed with the writer’s name, major and year. The MONTCLARION reserves the right to edit letters for style and brevity.

MSC’s ‘Backwoods’ Start

Since Montclair State’s beginning years, the MSC Alumnae Association has served as a link between the college and its former students. The following is an excerpt from a letter by an alumnae of MSC’s first class to the Association.

On September 15, 1908, the first class of 187 students entered Montclair State Normal School. After a welcoming talk by our much-liked and respected president, Dr. Charles S. Chapin, we were treated to ice cream by Mr. Edward Ross of Hoboken. The ice cream was brought into the auditorium in big tubs of ice and served by the few boys of our class under the supervision of Mr. Ross.

Mr. Ross had been greatly interested in the building of the school and later bequeathed funds for the dormitory which bears his name.

The school (consisting solely of College Hall) was not entirely finished and workmen were still busy in the basement. The grounds were not landscaped and some of girls used to eat lunch in near weather under the trees where the amphitheatre is now.

There were no dormitories, so most of the students commuted via D.L.R.W., the Erie or by the old Valley Rd. trolley. Some of the girls walked from Little Falls.

A board walk extended from the edge of Normal Avenue to the school.

There were very few social activities in 1908. We played baseball in the gym and had occasional plays at holiday time in the auditorium. Also, there was a literary society called the Alpha.

At the time of Montclair’s opening, some skeptical educators prophesied that the so-called “institution in the backwoods” would never be a success.
The National Anthem Has Seen Stars

By M. J. Smith

Staff Writer

The Star-Spangled Banner was inspired by a two-day siege. Throughout its 159-year existence, the American national anthem has been in the center of a number of heated battles. This summer's Olympic Games at Munich were not without their anthem-battles. Two black athletes did not stand at attention during the flag-raising ceremony. The audience took their stance as disrespectful and began to boo. Although Dave Wottle, a member of the US track team, stood rigidly at attention during the ceremony, he forgot to remove his cap. The cap, Wottle's trademark, has almost become part of his head but the ever-vigilant networks picked up the item and flashed it across the nation. Wottle expressed his remorse and protested his innocence to sportswriters for weeks afterwards.

Yet for all the controversy, "The Star-Spangled Banner" is part of American tradition and folklore and the public shows no signs of letting the song slip into obscurity.

BIT OF HISTORY

The words to the song were inspired by the British assault on Fort McHenry during the War of 1812. Francis Scott Key, a journalist or forest ranger, was views differently then. All we had to do was get a college education and the world would be ours. I found out both had dropped out of school. Why? Well, perhaps it was to sort themselves out -- to get a bearing on their futures. But what happened next really saddened me.

DECLINED

These guys, my best friends, smoke marijuana. It was very hard to understand their reasoning. Logic had always been their hallmark but now they smoked grass. They even offered me some. I declined the invitation.

One of them tried to rationalize it, saying he had "researched" the subject quite extensively and that grass wasn't harmful. He even went further, stating marijuana makes a person mature. My other friend was more frank and honest to himself. He simply likes the high himself. He simply likes the high and, as has been proven in some cases, marijuana makes a person more mature. My other friend was more frank and honest to himself. He simply likes the high and, as has been proven in some cases, marijuana makes a person more mature.

J. D. Hile

Holiday Cheer Was Missing

Holidays can be the most depressing time of the year, especially Christmas when old friends come home. It's then we find how much things have changed and that the "good old days" are gone for good.

Just this past season two of my high school buddies dropped by to say hello. They were the type of guys who would stick up for you when things got rough. The ones you could plan futures with -- like becoming a weatherman, journalist or forest ranger. Things were viewed differently then. All we had to do was get a college education and the world would be ours.

In 1939, Ripley's Believe It or Not, a Hearst Syndicate feature that stories all of its bizarre sensationalism, revealed that the anthem is sung to the tune of an English drinking song. Yet saying "America the Beautiful" or "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" should be the anthem is frequently considered tantamount to treason.

EVEKDOY"S CRITIC

Ranking "The Star Spangled Banner alongside of God, motherhood and apple pie, much of the American public has felt it's duty to criticize the anthem is frequently considered tantamount to treason.

In 1939, Ripley's Believe It or Not, a Hearst Syndicate feature that stories all of its bizarre sensationalism, revealed that the anthem is sung to the tune of an English drinking song. Yet saying "America the Beautiful" or "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" should be the anthem is frequently considered tantamount to treason.

The news prompted over 5 million people to write their congressmen. In 1931, Congress relented and the song was officially ratified.

There are several groups that have felt it their duty to criticize the anthem. Yet the network of flag-raising ceremonies. The audience took their stance as disrespectful and began to boo. Although Dave Wottle, a member of the US track team, stood rigidly at attention during the ceremony, he forgot to remove his cap. The cap, Wottle's trademark, has almost become part of his head but the ever-vigilant networks picked up the item and flashed it across the nation. Wottle expressed his remorse and protested his innocence to sportswriters for weeks afterwards.

Yet for all the controversy, "The Star-Spangled Banner" is part of American tradition and folklore and the public shows no signs of letting the song slip into obscurity.

BIT OF HISTORY

The words to the song were inspired by the British assault on Fort McHenry during the War of 1812. Francis Scott Key, a journalist or forest ranger, was views differently then. All we had to do was get a college education and the world would be ours. I found out both had dropped out of school. Why? Well, perhaps it was to sort themselves out -- to get a bearing on their futures. But what happened next really saddened me.

DECLINED

These guys, my best friends, smoke marijuana. It was very hard to understand their reasoning. Logic had always been their hallmark but now they smoked grass. They even offered me some. I declined the invitation.

One of them tried to rationalize it, saying he had "researched" the subject quite extensively and that grass wasn't harmful. He even went further, stating marijuana makes a person mature. My other friend was more frank and honest to himself. He simply likes the high and, as has been proven in some cases, marijuana makes a person more mature.

J. D. Hile

Holiday Cheer Was Missing

Holidays can be the most depressing time of the year, especially Christmas when old friends come home. It's then we find how much things have changed and that the "good old days" are gone for good.

Just this past season two of my high school buddies dropped by to say hello. They were the type of guys who would stick up for you when things got rough. The ones you could plan futures with -- like becoming a weatherman, journalist or forest ranger. Things were viewed differently then. All we had to do was get a college education and the world would be ours. I found out both had dropped out of school. Why? Well, perhaps it was to sort themselves out -- to get a bearing on their futures. But what happened next really saddened me.

DECLINED

These guys, my best friends, smoke marijuana. It was very hard to understand their reasoning. Logic had always been their hallmark but now they smoked grass. They even offered me some. I declined the invitation.

One of them tried to rationalize it, saying he had "researched" the subject quite extensively and that grass wasn't harmful. He even went further, stating marijuana makes a person mature. My other friend was more frank and honest to himself. He simply likes the high and, as has been proven in some cases, marijuana makes a person more mature.

J. D. Hile

Holiday Cheer Was Missing

Holidays can be the most depressing time of the year, especially Christmas when old friends come home. It's then we find how much things have changed and that the "good old days" are gone for good.

Just this past season two of my high school buddies dropped by to say hello. They were the type of guys who would stick up for you when things got rough. The ones you could plan futures with -- like becoming a weatherman, journalist or forest ranger. Things were viewed differently then. All we had to do was get a college education and the world would be ours. I found out both had dropped out of school. Why? Well, perhaps it was to sort themselves out -- to get a bearing on their futures. But what happened next really saddened me.

DECLINED

These guys, my best friends, smoke marijuana. It was very hard to understand their reasoning. Logic had always been their hallmark but now they smoked grass. They even offered me some. I declined the invitation.

One of them tried to rationalize it, saying he had "researched" the subject quite extensively and that grass wasn't harmful. He even went further, stating marijuana makes a person mature. My other friend was more frank and honest to himself. He simply likes the high and, as has been proven in some cases, marijuana makes a person more mature.
'What Can You Do With A Four Minute Play?'

"Over the years I've run over a lot of little pieces, like a four minute play by Harold Pinter. What can you do with a four minute play? "Well, you can get many little plays, patch them together and make an evening out of it."

Dr. Jerome Rockwood, speech and theater professor, thus explained the idea behind "Patches," the independent study project sponsored by the speech and theater department which will be staged Feb. 8, 9 and 10 at studio theater.

Rockwood, the project director, described "Patches" as being a collection of 30 short plays ranging in time from 30 seconds to 18 minutes. The students are performing the works of such playwrights as Harold Pinter, John Guare, Jules Pfeiffer and Jerome Cass.

LITTLE RESPONSE

Several students works are included in the collection. However, Rockwood said that there had been little response to a request for student contributions.

A cast of six women and six men will perform the works. Donna Galla, Chris Benge, Chris Ball, Mary Brul in, Rosie El and Gissela Garcia compose the female half. Steve Black, Joe Scarcelli, Ron Getto, Steve Insiders, Tony Salerno and Stuart Zagnit complete the cast.

The admission price for "Patches" is one dollar, but Rockwood said that there will be no profits from the performance. He explained that the royalty cost for the works is very high.

Rockwood believes that students will enjoy "Patches."
"It's light stuff — humor and sex," he laughed.

Bill Gibson

Groups Turn To Nostalgia

In the past few months, rock has started on a road back to its roots and early days. This can probably be attributed to the lack of any prime mover like the Beatles were in the 60s.

With the release of the second "Hot Rocks" oldies album, the Rolling Stones have reconfirmed many people's belief that they are basically a commercial group. Their almost total lack of creativity since the break-up of the Beatles seems to indicate they were followers rather than innovators.

Elton John has burst onto the charts with his rocking, doo-wopping "Crocodile Rock." With their absolutely flawless arrangement, the team of John and Bernie Taupin, have resurrected the soul of Del Shannon on the airwaves... Despite their almost total lack of direction, Paul McCartney and Wings have created a hollow shell of the freedom of early rock with their newest single "Hi, Hi, Hi." Even without profound lyrics of or innovative style, the song evokes memories of the Cavern-day Beatles. Perhaps what's McCartney needs - to start at the beginning.

STARR or NOVELTY?

Former Beatles director Hurricane Smith has topped the charts with a nostalgic 20s-like number, "Oh, Babe, What Would you Say?" Whether he remains a star or will just be remembered as the '73 novelty remains to be seen.

With a quick follow-up to their first hit, Raspberries have again proved that pure, hard driving rock and roll is as popular as ever. It looks like "Just Wanna Be With You" will be their second gold record in a row.

With the current trend toward the basics of rock going strong, it will be interesting to see what direction music will take during the course of the year. One thing is for sure - the supergroups have nowhere to go but up.

Your Scene

- dusty desert endurance
- cool midnight concrete
- country trails to nowhere
- highways to where it's at whenever turns you on

- INSURE YOUR FREEDOM.
- Take Us Along

*INTERNATIONAL SERVICES

Plum, Inc.
253 Bloomfield Avenue
Caldwell, New Jersey

COMPULSORY cycle insurance in New Jersey! Please send me an application showing your unique package plans and 10% special discount.

Name
Street Address
City State Zip
*201-228-4005

CLINTON THEATER

(corner of Main & Clinton Aves.)
Dustin Hoffman as
THE GRADUATE
plus
WHERE'S POPPA
starring George Segal

NOW SHOWING!

PARK THEATER

NEW PRICE POLICY

Adults $1.50 at the Box Office

265 Bloomfield Ave., Caldwell 226-0678

REPELION

MACBETH

STANCRS JAN. 31!

2 MARSH BROTHERS

HITS!

HORSEFEATHERS

MONKEY BUSINESS

Your Scene

- gifts
- crafts
- clothes
- pipes
- incense

317 Glenwood Avenue, Bloomfield, N. J.
748-1117
If last year's 10-1 regular season version of Montclair State women's basketball team was considered good, this year's might be even better, warns coach Cathy Paskert. The squad started out on the right foot by scoring more than twice as many points as St. Peter's College, as they won their first game of the season on Wed., Jan. 17 (67-31).

Paskert has her reasons for being so optimistic. One of them is the loss of only two players through graduation. The other is an experienced squad, headed by captain Debbie Schoen, the team's lone senior.

If last year's 10-1 regular season version of Montclair State women's basketball team was considered good, this year's might be even better, warns coach Cathy Paskert. The squad started out on the right foot by scoring more than twice as many points as St. Peter's College, as they won their first game of the season on Wed., Jan. 17 (67-31).

Paskert has her reasons for being so optimistic. One of them is the loss of only two players through graduation. The other is an experienced squad, headed by captain Debbie Schoen, the team's lone senior.

The thermometer may say that it's a little nippy out for hot pants, but for Montclair State's Senior Greg Weiss placed third in the invitational 600 at the Knights of Columbus Games which were held Sat., Jan 13 at the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island.

The thermometer may say that it's a little nippy out for hot pants, but for Montclair State's Senior Greg Weiss placed third in the invitational 600 at the Knights of Columbus Games which were held Sat., Jan 13 at the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island.

Senior Greg Weiss placed third in the invitational 600 at the Knights of Columbus Games which were held Sat., Jan 13 at the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island.

Senior Greg Weiss placed third in the invitational 600 at the Knights of Columbus Games which were held Sat., Jan 13 at the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island.

Senior Greg Weiss placed third in the invitational 600 at the Knights of Columbus Games which were held Sat., Jan 13 at the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island.
When they finally arose, what unconscious state. To cause a relapse of their the Profs still ahead. From that Glassboro's Wilson put in a string of 14 points (Larry followed, they broke loose with swear MSC was playing the game point on, you could almost went into a collective coma. Glassboro's tight, collapsing zone sealed up the middle, preventing any inside penetration. The Indians were forced to shoot from the outside with far from incredible accuracy.

MSC led on the first point of the game, a free throw by Jeff MacAuley. Glassboro's Dom Carrers immediately responded with a layup, making the score, 2-1, in the Profs favor, with the game only 42 seconds old.

THE INDIANS never did see the better half of the score in the remaining 19 minutes and 18 seconds. What they did see was themselves fall behind by 15 points after Glassboro's Bruce Wilson hit a jumper with 7:50 to play in the first half, putting his team ahead, 26-11.

MSC managed to fight back to within eight when the half ended with the score, 37-29.

When the game resumed, the Indians suddenly became hotter from the outside while their opponents' shooting would've given a polar bear frostbite.

WITH 16:39 left in the game, Glassboro's Wilson put in a layup, making the score, 43-34, the Pros still ahead. From that point on, you could almost swear MSC was playing the game by themselves. In the 12:35 that followed, they broke loose with a string of 14 points (Larry Hughes and Chuck Holland with 10 of the 14) while the Pros went into a collective coma. When they finally arose, what they saw should've been enough to cause a relapse of their unconscious state.

Somewhere they were trailing by six, 48-42, with only 4:44 to play, Glassboro's John McGorkle made the score, 48-44, with a quick jumper but the game was as good as over. Give the Indians an inch and they take a mile. They also took the game.

COACH OLLIE Gelston summarized: "Our trouble is that we can never put two good halves together. Against Trenton and Pace we played great in the second half, but, like tonight, our first halves were horrendous. Our defense kept us in the game tonight. If we could play more consistently on offense, we'd have some ball clubs," he concluded.

In Saturday night's contest, the Indians played more consistently. Both halves were equally bad.

The Warriors came out in a 2-3 zone, remaining with it throughout the game. It seems to be a well known fact that breaking up a zone isn't one of the Indians' strong points.

MSC's overall record is now 7-6. The Glassboro triumph gives them a 3-2 league mark.