Montclair police have charged MSC freshman class president Andre Nixon with "obtaining worthless checks." The monies involved allegedly are SGA funds which may range as high as $500.

The Detective Division of the Montclair Police Department reported that charges were brought against Nixon by the American National Bank & Trust Company in Montclair. American National handles the SGA account.

A police spokesman stated that Nixon issued two worthless checks on Jan. 12. He was arrested and released on $250 bail on Feb. 9. His hearing is scheduled for Feb. 26.

SGA president Sam Crane verified that SGA money was involved, although he would not disclose the exact amount. Crane also indicated that funds from the Faculty-Student Co-op and the college itself were connected with the situation.

Although Crane acknowledged that an arrest warrant had been issued, he would not give any further details.

CRANE WISHED to wait until he had more complete details and was sure of his legal grounds before he would divulge any further information.

Vincent Calabrese, vice-president of business and finance, was aware of the situation, but in his opinion, college money was not involved. Using a hypothetical situation, he said that if one of his personal checks was stolen, his signature forged and the check cashed, the bank would be responsible for the loss. His account would not be affected since it was the bank’s responsibility to compare the check’s signature with that on its filed signature card.

To Calabrese’s knowledge, neither the college nor the SGA has filed charges against anyone concerning the situation.

Calabrese would not release any other information.

Doris Asdal, director of the Faculty-Student Co-op, also could not comment on the situation. However, she confirmed Crane’s comment that Co-op funds were involved. A speaker for American National said that bank policy would not allow him to release any information about SGA accounts without written permission from the SGA.

A police spokesman classified Nixon’s charge as a misdemeanor. A misdemeanor is an indictable offense that can carry up to a $1,000 fine and a three year jail term.

In a move apparently related to the discovery of discrepancies in SGA funds, Vincent Calabrese, vice-president of business and finance, intends to keep a closer watch on SGA financial procedures.

Calabrese said he will "take a look at procedures as they're written and implemented" to ensure that there is "no possibility of errors escalating into irregularities."

EXPANDING ON a statement he had made some weeks earlier, Calabrese said that if procedures are not followed, control of SGA funds would go to a more college-controlled account."

According to Calabrese, this does not mean the college would regulate SGA funds. "At the present time, I can emphatically state that we will not administratively take over or control SGA funds," he said.

Calabrese added, "For the foreseeable future, control of student funds will remain in student hands."

At present, SGA financial procedures allow SGA-funded organizations to receive checks for expenses directly from the SGA. The organization’s check must first be submitted to the SGA, for the treasurer’s signature. It is then sent to either Dean of Student Lawton Blanton; Ulrich Neuner, director of financial aid; or Calabrese, to be co-signed. It is then returned to the SGA.

In a more college-controlled procedure, Calabrese said, the checks would be issued directly from the college. The SGA would no longer issue checks itself but would instead use the college as a "check-writing function."

ACCORDING TO Calabrese, a more college-controlled procedure would "interrupt a disinterested party in the middle." He stated that the college would show no direct interest unless "there was an illegality."

However, Calabrese pointed out, the fact that the SGA discovered the discrepancy proves that the present system is working.

Calabrese commented that he is "satisfied with the way the SGA is moving" on the current problem.

When Gawley takes over his new post on Sept. 1, he will be faced with several problems.
"This will be the first year for the general education program. We will have to 'tool up' to handle this as well as handle the distribution of students in the program. Although we expect no major problems, anything new is bound to run into a few hitches," explained Gawley.
"Another area of concern will be the development of a closer liaison between academic registration and scheduling so that the overall operation will be smoother and more efficient," Gawley continued. He added, "We need greater cooperation from all the parties involved in the process."
"In order to better fit the number of spaces in the different course offerings to the number of student requests, we will continue to use the computer printout information concerning the number of requests for each section," Gawley explained. "Although the course choices are up to us, the faculty lines are paid by the state. The funds are divided among instruction, research, public service and educational development," explained Gawley. "With the number of students and courses, the individual schools will have to decide whether or not they can afford to allocate 5% of their faculty line to research," continued Gawley.
"Unless something drastic happens in the next year or two, the college will begin to level off. This in itself will create problems," Gawley said. "We will have to put some type of restrictions on the number of faculty promotions as well as the percentage of faculty tenure," he concluded.
Gawley, a 1949 graduate of MSC, has been a member of the faculty for 18 years. He served as chairman of the science department before the different disciplines separated. He then served as chairman of the chemistry department until his selection as dean of the School of Mathematics and Science.

A World Of Make Believe

By Rosemary Morra

Spring fever will soon be striking MSC, beckoning students to the new Student Center. Imagine walking to the mall outside the Student Center. MSC, beckoning students to the new atmosphere during the first week of May. For Carnival '73 become a reality, a sophomore English major, Carnival recapture the mood of the "rah-rah" Make-Believe. "College is a world of conglomeration of individuals with no sense of community. "College students are not so preoccupied with personal problems that they are unwilling to reach out to other individuals. They want to share their internal happy moments, like Carnival, which make college life worthwhile," said Ruiz. CLUB will accomplish its goals by providing pony rides, a folk concert (presently, the artists are unknown) and bicycle race. Added attraction will be a "space walk," similar to a huge balloon shaped trampoline, allowing all ages to join in the fun. For the first time, Carnival will have a small zoo, perhaps, even including lions and tigers and bears. The highlight of Carnival will be hay rides, taking students to a carefree past before their own.

With the variety of activities provided by CLUB, Carnival hopefully will attract a diversity of individuals. "I doubt if CLUB will neglect anyone's interest with our wide range agenda," stated Ruiz. However, with hopscotch spreading like wild fire on college campuses, it is impossible to predict what the outcome will be.

By using ambitious student leaders with "their own personal gains at heart," Rachel A. Dungan, NJ Chancellor of Higher Education and the state's top education town is attempting to "hoodwink" the legislature may pass the tenure bill currently under consideration, according to MarcolinwnoLaCarrina, president of MSC, American Federation of Teachers.

The bill, which proposes a five year probationary period and a twice yearly reevaluation for every faculty member, would allow only 60% of the faculty members to receive tenure.

At the present time, 80% of those seeking tenure receive it without increasing the college's overall ratio. However, according to James W. Cottingham, administrator assistant to MSC's President Thomas H. Richardson, as the college's growth levels off, the percentage must decrease.

As of September 1972, the percentage of full-time tenured faculty members at MSC stood at 50%. The projected percentage for September 1973 will increase to 57%. Yet, as of September 1972, 47.3% of the entire faculty, full and part-time, were tenure. Despite the increase in full time employees each year, the overall percentage for full and part-time faculty with tenure decreases to 15.7%.

SIXTEEN EYEO'S were eligible for tenure this year. Twelve members of the group resigned, some in favor of higher salaried positions. Of the remaining 48, 36 received tenure. Only 12 faculty members were released.

Ruth LaCarrina stated that the MSC Board of Trustees does not consider the 60% fixed ratio as an acceptable idea.

Reports that WVMS, Montclair State's radio station, would move to the Student Center have soured out of its office like a skipping record since May. According to Charlie Hecht, the station's manager, a new facility is far from reality. "I wonder if moving into the Center isn't just a dream," said Hecht.

The problem stemmed from a failure to acquire a station in the College's plan. Jerry Quinn, director of instructional planning, stated the decision to exclude WVMS from the Center was made before his time. He speculated that the station may have had an integral relationship with the audio-visual center in College Hall and could not be moved.

Both Quinn and Mike Lowenthal, director of the Student Center, stated that they acted with Hecht to include the station when they learned it was omitted.

The COLLEGE'S department management is completing the station's construction. Quinn said the decision to use the maintenance crew was made after the college received "improved prices and improved charges" from outside contractors.

Hecht stated that the crew was not working around the clock, but believed the work was progressing steadily and being done well.

The manager of the station, a junior music major, designed the station's new facility on the fourth floor of the Student Center. "It will have a commercial station. "It will have sand-fitted doors and a double glass window for sound proofing, new equipment, new production areas and a separate record library."

Hecht said that the new facility is modeled like a commercial station. "It will have sand-fitted doors and a double glass window for sound proofing, new equipment, new production areas and a separate record library."

He STATED THAT the new area formerly designed as part of the MONTCLAIRION office is actually too small for the needs of WVMS. In planning the layout Hecht had to utilize "every square inch."

Though the present facility in the basement of College Hall is larger, Hecht considered the trade-off to be beneficial. Referencing to the present quarters he said, "This place is a dump."

He explained that it is inefficient in design and minimal in soundproofing. It has been reported that MSC president "I don't think the board has heard WVMS broadcasts without turning on the radio."

Another advantage Hecht cited is being near to student offices. He hopes to work more closely with student organizations once they move. Hecht's flair for broadcasting comes of experience. He is producer and moderator for "Contemporary" on WPAT-FM at 8 am on Sunday mornings and moderator for WIDC in Newark. At the close of the interview, Hecht smiled and said moving of the "center: Maybe it isn't such a crazy dream after all."

VWS Move Set For May

By Mike Corneots

To the dismay of many out-of-state residents, New Jersey's new age of majority law will have little affect on Montclair State's student body.

According to Vincent Calabrese, vice-president of business and finance, "A student's residency may be viewed as separate from that of out-of-state parents or guardians if the student is not financially dependent upon said parent and the student acquired a bona fide domicile within the state of New Jersey for a continuous one year period."

I think the factors relevant to determination of this financial independence is the parent's income tax return. If the student's parents claim him as a deduction on their federal funds there should be only one residency requirement which is to be a United States citizen.

A spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union stated that while they were not currently looking into the legality of out-of-state tuition, should someone want help in this matter, they need only to write them.

Since 99% of the student body at MSC are New Jersey residents, the disregard of non-resident tuition would not present an exceptionally large problem. However, for those cases pending where students maintain that since most state colleges receive

New Law Has No Effect

By Mike Corneots

The "aging of majority" law that will go into effect at the beginning of next semester has made little effect on the pattern of residence at Montclair State University.

According to Mike Ruiz, administration assistant to President Coczttingham, "Out-of-State students currently pay twice as much tuition as New Jersey residents."

Another advantage Hecht cited is being near to student offices. He hopes to work more closely with student organizations once they move. Hecht's flair for broadcasting comes of experience. He is producer and moderator for "Contemporary" on WPAT-FM at 8 am on Sunday mornings and moderator for WIDC in Newark. At the close of the interview, Hecht smiled and said moving of the "center: Maybe it isn't such a crazy dream after all."

OUT-OF-STATERS will now have to continue to pay twice the regular tuition. However, the out-of-state resident is far from assured.

Quarterly Seeks A New Image

By Margaret Marchuk
Staff Writer

The MSC literary magazine, "Quarterly", made its somewhat delayed 1973 debut with little input from MSC students. According to Candy Joseph, editor-in-chief of the magazine, the issue was late in appearance partly due to a "lack of good material." Joseph blamed this lack of material on the lack of student participation. The editorial board of "Quarterly" was left without students to evaluate the contributions, Joseph explained, but even in this aspect there was no student participation. "Quarterly" has always welcomed students to submit their work, Joseph said, and as she already stated in this issue of "Quarterly," "We seek a better fate than being found suitable only to decorate dormitory walls.

"Quarterly" was awarded first place in the Columbia Press Association competition last year. The magazine is presently competing for this year's title.

All sophomores (Class of 1975) interested in admission to the MSC Teacher Preparation Program are reminded to submit an application form with all pertinent references to their respective admissions committee no later than March 1, 1973. If their application is to be acted upon during the fall admissions period it must be submitted by that date.

Applications not received by March 1, will not be acted upon until the Fall 1973 admissions period.

The Greeks at Montclair State College are not immune to the trend towards individuality and anti-traditional modes as indicated by Pat Bocola, Inter-Sorority Council vice-president and the chairman of this year’s 10th annual Cotillion Ball.

As the co-ordinator of this Saturday evening’s dinner and dance in which 100 recent pledges from 11 sororities will be presented as new sisters, Bocola expressed hope that the next Cotillion would be less formal. “I don’t think they will run Cotillion as it is,” the senior health major stated. “The purpose is to have an ISC function and a formal night out but the presentation is just a formality.”

Although the girls being presented still wear white gowns, Bocola noted that the “ultra-formality is diminishing.” “The guys used to wear tuxedos,” she noted, “but it was an undue expense and really unnecessary. We are trying to change with the general trend and it is long overdue.”

ACCORDING TO BOCOLA, approximately 225 couples – “about the same amount as last year’s” – will attend Cotillion this Saturday night, February 24 at the Governor Morris Inn in Morristown. The cocktail hour begins at 6:30 p.m. and the presentations will start at 7:30. Dinner and dancing will follow until 1 a.m. and the “George Malanga Orchestra” will provide the music.

The receiving line will include MSC President Dr. Thomas H. Richardson; the president of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Lincoln Hawkins and his wife; the Dean of Students Lawton W. Blanton; the Vice-President of Academic Affairs, Dr. Walter Heilbronner and his wife and the ISC advisor, Mrs. Swenson and her husband.

Plan Poses Problems

In light of the alleged misuse of SGA funds, the business office of MSC has announced the intent of studying an alternative procedure to dispense funds to student organizations. Such a plan would put student funds under the control of the college in addition to the present policy of SGA control.

While Vincent Calabrese, vice-president of business and finance, has said that the college would not regulate the distribution of SGA funds, the college would control the issuing of checks to student groups. Whether or not this procedure becomes practice depends on if the present plan runs without hitches.

However, these are student funds being dealt with, of which the students' elected representatives should have sole control. The present administration has been quite lenient in not imposing on student control of such matters. But, future administrations might not operate in a like manner and students may find the spending of their money out of their hands.

Texts In The Ivory Tower

By Gary Holstein

There appears to be a substantial amount of concern at Montclair State College regarding the methods and effectiveness of teaching. The administration has announced the intent of studying an alternate procedure to dispense funds to student organizations. Such a plan would put student funds under the control of the college in addition to the present policy of SGA control.

While Vincent Calabrese, vice-president of business and finance, has said that the college would not regulate the direction of spending of SGA funds, the college would control the issuing of checks to student groups. Whether or not this procedure becomes practice depends on if the present plan runs without hitches.

Tenure Bill Won't Work

The tenure bill currently confronting the state legislature represents a half-hearted attempt to reach a compromise between the Board of Higher Education and the faculty association. It is unlikely, however, that the bill, which extends the present three year probationary period to five years, will do much to solve the dispute over the value of tenure.

The opposition of the faculty is understandable in that the bill would increase administrative control over them. The danger is that innovative teaching techniques and constructive criticism of the college would be stifled because of the faculty's fear of losing their jobs.

However, once a teacher is granted tenure it is virtually impossible to remove him. While there are many excellent professors at MSC there are also a good percentage of poor ones who do not deserve the permanence of a tenured job.

An ideal situation would be to retain the current three year probationary period but to reevaluate each professor every five or seven years. This would give the faculty some security and make it possible to recoup from the students the money spent on mediocre professors who might otherwise have become firmly entrenched in their attitudes and values.

Right Over Their Heads

By Stephen Bogart

The spring semester is just underway and already the warming air holds portents of a long hot summer. Important policy decisions, affecting students, are being made at administrative levels. As usual the students are being either ignored or neglected.

The innovative period is being dropped. The thought of students getting "something for nothing" has really bothered somebody. The faculty and not its best professors have been forced to give up. This is not an equal concern about what is not being taught. The actual substance of the ideas, attitudes, concepts and viewpoints which are being advanced and/or omitted by our professors is of paramount importance in terms of the quality of the education we receive.

That is why it is always interesting to note and learn, at the beginning of each new semester, to browse through the college handbook and observe the nature of the reading material which our professors deem as required. Having just completed this illuminating exercise for my fifth time at MSC, I must report the observation of a disturbing pattern.

The opposition of the faculty is understandable in that the bill would increase administrative control over them. The danger is that innovative teaching techniques and constructive criticism of the college would be stifled because of the faculty's fear of losing their jobs.

However, once a teacher is granted tenure it is virtually impossible to remove him. While there are many excellent professors at MSC there are also a good percentage of poor ones who do not deserve the permanence of a tenured job.

Remember the last tuition increase went through during the Christmas vacation of 1971. The tactic used is known commonly as "the run around." President Richardson now seems willing to talk until students are so fed up that they will take just about any alternative they remember the last tuition increase went through during the Christmas vacation of 1971.

BLATANT

The Drop-In Center has to be the most blatant case of the administration's refusal to meet students requests. The tactic used is known commonly as "the run around." President Richardson now seems willing to talk until students are so fed up that they will take just about any alternative they remember the last tuition increase went through during the Christmas vacation of 1971.

The Drop-In Center people have about 4000 signatures, a valid student request and still they are refused. The dean (Dr. Donald M. Mintz of the School of Fine and Performing Arts), whose office the Rec Lodge houses, has even expressed a willingness to be relocated. Two questions have to be answered. Why won't President Richardson let the Rec Lodge be used as a Drop-In Center? When will students tire of "the run around" and turn their requests into demands? Students already see the imperative of organizing a student group to fight for the rights and appropriate education.
New Jersey lawmakers meet about twice a week in Trenton—usually on Mondays and Thursdays. In between, they are at their own jobs, close to their neighbors and constituents. They are close to local events and close to local voters. They are very responsive to the influences of citizens who live in their districts. They know their state senators and any assemblymen-at-large who represent you. Know precisely which assemblymen are your.

- Give your full name and address. Identify yourself as a registered voter in his or her home district.
- Identify the bill in which you are interested. Lawmakers usually remember them by number and a short nickname. Check to be sure you are talking about the right bill.
- Give reasons for the position you take. Your own personal experience is your best supporting evidence. Be specific. Let the legislator know how this measure affects his or her own election district.
- Your letter should arrive while the bill is being read for consideration and needs your support. When the bill is before him or her, the state legislator is able to relay your ideas to the proposals.
- Follow the bill's progress. Good timing when sending your letter can be determined if you maintain a continuing interest in legislative issues.
- Don't be wordy.
- Don't use form letters, printed postcards or copy some other person's. Let your legislator know this is your own personal opinion.

Don't ask sponsors to vote for their own bills. A legislator's name on a bill as a sponsor is a commitment to a "yes" vote. Thank sponsors instead and ask them to get the bill up for a floor vote.

Black Dialect-Friend or Foe?

Otbear has been raging for several years over what school should do about the distinctive dialect spoken by black children. Traditionally, the black dialect has been considered unsuitable for education. Now the school is debating whether or not to accept the black dialect and build on it.

One of the latest to express an opinion is T. J. Sellers, former editor of the Harlem-based Amsterdam News and now a special assistant to a New York City school system. Sellers is the school's official spokesperson for this position.

"The black dialect is not the answer," says Sellers. "Learning to speak and read the mother tongue is the way of saying that black children can be literate Americans."

"The black kids who are in school now will have to compete with people who have been educated in the accepted culture that prevails in this country," he warns. "It is a cruel thrust for teachers or parents or editors or leaders to make children feel that a romantic elevation of the dialect is necessary to help them overcome the overwhelming task."

A Point Perfectly Clear

To the Editor:

I wish to add to my article of February 13, 1973, on the following information and objections to Assembly Bill 328. The Bill contains a "good behavior" clause which is both arbitrary and ambiguous and should be stricken. The part of the bill calling for bi-annual evaluation should also be taken from the bill for it defeats the purpose of tenure.

I hope this shall help to clear any confusion as to my feeling about A 328.

HUT, TWO, THREE
Igor Stavinsky's "Histoire du Soldat" will be presented in MSC's Calcia Center Auditorium on Sun., Feb. 25 at 1:30. Admission is free.

The performance by chamber ensemble and narrator was prepared during Winter Session under the direction of Akiva Talmi, who holds a dual faculty appointment in music and fine arts. Television versions of the piece and Claudio Monteverdi's early opera, "Il Combattimento," were also developed as part of the Winter-term course.

Ora Shiran, violinist and part-time teacher at the Juilliard School of Music, will be guest soloist. The narration will be given by James Cassidy, a speech and theater major.

The ensemble consists of Mark Angelone, trumpet; Richard Goldstein, trombone; Theodore Cole, clarinet; Donna Gann, bassoon; John Reuther, percussion and Ronald Naspo, string bass. Naspo is a member of the music faculty and the others are music majors.

Gioquinto Grapplers’ Jokester

By David Benavage

“"I like to wrestle because it’s the most challenging sport there is,” said Montclair State’s heavyweight grappler, Bob Gioquinto. “It’s a one-on-one sport, just you and the other guy you’re going to wrestle,” he explained.

Weighing in at 220, Gio wrestled his first full season of varsity this year against Glassboro, but this year Gioquinto has been an answer to coach Larry Schiacchetano’s dreams, posting an outstanding 10-3-3 record.

Weighing in at 220, Gio wrestled his first full season of varsity this year against Glassboro, but this year Gioquinto has been an answer to coach Larry Schiacchetano’s dreams, posting an outstanding 10-3-3 record.

"GIO HAS been such a big asset to our team," said co-captain Craig Spencer. "When you're on a wrestling team, you as an individual can win your match, but the team would lose because you have a weakness somewhere in the lineup. We used to have a weakness, but Gio has fixed that," he explained.

A junior physical education major, Gio is considered the team's joker. Schiacchetano related, "Whatever the team is depressed about a loss or right for an upcoming match, Gio always gets us laughing."

“ONE OF the most amazing things that Gio has done," the coach confided, "was during a match when he was beating his opponent so badly that he looked up towards the bench as if to say, 'what do I do now, coach?' With this the guys on the bench and myself just laughed our heads off."

Spencer added, "What cracks us all up in the locker room is when Gio marches in with his head gear on and waves to everybody."

Gio's hangup this season has been wrestling Jeff Howley of Glassboro State. He faced Howley twice and lost both times. The two will probably meet in this weekend's Metropolitan Tournament and as far as Gio's concerned the match should go to his favor if he's in his right frame of mind.

PHYSICALLY, HOWEVER, the advantage goes to Howley who has a little height on Gioquinto.

Gio is one of those big guys who doesn't appear to bully people around unless they're on the mat with him. He has a boyish grin which automatically makes him likable, but one thing's certain — the next time Gio and Howley meet, the MSC grapple won't be smiling.

An Outstanding Year.
Montclair State's writers wrapped up their season in style Saturday, bearing the US Merchant Marine Academy (King's Point) 31-15 in Pancer Gym before 300 fans. The team won their last nine meets for an 11-2-1 record. "I'm very satisfied with the season," remarked an efficient coach Larry Sciacchitano. "We've come so far, we're a different team now. Our condition is great; we're perfectly tuned for the Men's Metropolitan Tournament."

On Wed., Feb. 14, MSC had shut out Long Island University 54-0. Against King's Point, Lenny Cholish (118) just barely got things rolling for the Indians with an exciting 9-8 win. His first period aggressiveness cost him a takadown on a disputed call. A few stumbles now put him down 5-2, but in the third period Cholish scored a predetermined and rolled through a few maneuvers to win on riding time. Craig Spencer's match was a sharp contrast. In what looked like a practice drill, he kept letting his man up only to take him down again with a variety of ankle picks, shrugs and lateral drops. The final score was 17-6.

Hayspell brought the crowd to life with his storming attack. His pin (1:38) was his third to guarantee the Pioneer win. Freshman Greg DiGioquinto kept up the MSC attack. His aggression and tough riding style resulted in a 9-1 win.

"That last bout..." he shook his head, "I was exhausted.

Montclair State, contrary to the final score, was never really out of it. With the last round of pins and fall bouts (six points) yet to be played, the team only trailed 11-9. And when freshman George Pearson took the first base out, 5-2 against Scott Mustilli, it seemed as if MSC had a chance to pull off an upset. But Sigonetti beat Yee, Mustilli fell to Marino and Alex Colatrella became Ross Bunter's second victim to guarantee the win. CARL DAVIS, who could have presented his own case against the director at times, and Ben Frungillo won two bouts apiece as the sabre team came out on the plus side, 5-4. The foil and epee squads did not fare as well as well; Roger Marchegiano and Joe DePolo managed to cut down four Pioneers between them.

Outruling for Paterson were Genn (Shay, Sigonetti and Bill Fischer, equal), as they added nine points to the visitor's score sheet.

The Indians travel to Seton Hall today for a 4 p.m. contest before meeting Muhlenberg College in New Jersey on Saturday. MSC knows 7-0 will be looking to avenge last year's one-touch loss to Muhlenberg.

Women's Fencing

MSC Faces Big Test

Ray Miller, coach of William Paterson College's women's fencing team was quoted in Sunday's Newark Star Ledger as saying, "We have no intention of losing for quite a while." Miller's squad, boasting a 21-meet winning streak, faces Montclair State's women's team today at 5 p.m. in Pancer Gym. The 150-pounder failed, trying for a takedown, and a superior decision. But despite

In a telephone interview on Tuesday, Miller refused the exact statement was prepared to lose at any time. However, that doesn't mean the Paterson girls would like to lose — largely because it's something they have had little practice in.

IZA FARKAS and Jeanie Linni Freshman and sophomore fencers, respectively, are unbeaten this season, while a third member of the team has a 17-2 record. Miller declined to name his starting four for the clash with MSC, but did remark that he has eight fencers with the ability to start today, four of them left-handers, that species of fencer that he highly values. The duration of "quite a while" might be determined.

DON'T LOOK BACK: If Chuck Holland could have chanced to turn around on this layup, he would have seen the hands of an unidentified William Paterson defender bearing down on him. The Indians won the contest, 74-64, but may have lost Holland's services for tonight's clash with Jersey City.

Intercollegiate Basketball Tournament. MSC is seeded first and their opponent will be Princeton.

THE FOURTH quarter was the deciding factor in the game, as after having compiled an 8-0 record, the Squaws succumbed to Queens College last Friday night, 49-41. Annie Fuller and Mary Hayek combined for 25 points to lead MSC scoring.

IN SATURDAY'S thriller with the Pioneers of William Paterson, the clubs splitting the defense: MSC's Jim Rake soars on Monday night, 62-55, and along with it the ir chances for an NCAA Eastern College Division bid for a post-season tournament appear slim.
