Jose Linares, its SGA president, was reinstated Monday night after a college hearing into the length of his suspension.

Last weekend, a group of approximately 100 Cuban students demonstrated in support of Linares. Dr. Eduardo Sanchez, co-director of the college, repeated a previous statement that Linares had entered the classes to obtain information needed by Dr. Ernest Watson, dean of the School of Education and Community Services.

Following the class, Linares was involved in a fight with a Puerto Rican student. A Cuban professor then intervened in the scuffle. Sanchez complained that no action was taken against the Puerto Rican student involved.

Sanchez stated that a similar incident took place at William Paterson State College in which a student was charged with some misconduct and a decision was made not to suspend him until a hearing was held.

"All we want is justice," said Rafaela Laara, a Cuban student. This brief was echoed by students present at the demonstration who maintained that Linares should not have been suspended for a period of three weeks without a trial. "Return Linares and we'll return to class," Laura stated.

Opposing this, Puerto Rican students have asked that Linares be expelled and that the professor involved be fired. Ina Robles, a Puerto Rican student, explained that the complaint of the Puerto Rican students was that Linares was continually disrupting class and that this recent incident was one of many.

Robles stated that Watson had sent a letter to the faculty saying that students should not interrupt class without written permission. Linares, according to Robles, did not have permission to interrupt the class and would not tell the students what the information was for.

"We, the Puerto Ricans, think that President Richardson was unjust in reinstating Linares and that he took discriminatory action," Robles stated. She protested the fact that no action was taken after recent Puerto Rican demonstrations but that a hearing was held after the Cubans demonstrated.

Richardson explained that a hearing was held "as soon as it was possible to get all of the principal parties together." He said that it was a regular college hearing by three faculty members and two students into the length of Linares' suspension. They recommended that the three weeks of his suspension was enough and that he be reinstated.

None of the faculty members or students were members of the Weekend college.

Mirgeno Collazo, Puerto Rican director of the college agreed with Robles' belief that the hearing was a reaction to the picketing. "How will things be solved in the future?" she conjured, "if the college will always yield to protest?"

At the weekend demonstrations, the pickets held signs saying that they did not want communism in the Weekend College. One of the students charged that communism had been advocated in one of the classes.

Sanchez explained that there were philosophical differences between the Puerto Ricans and Puerto Rican members of society. He said that Puerto Ricans are in favor of social change while Cubans support the present form of government.

Conflicts between Puerto Ricans and Cubans have plagued the Weekend College since it began.

The Cuban director said that he hoped that things would be relatively peaceful now that Linares has been reinstated and that in the future there will be more negotiation rather than confrontations.

MSC Students Support Meat Boycott

By Joan Miklaszuk

While the nationwide boycott of meat has hit most retail stores hard, with a sharp drop in sales, the atmosphere at Montclair State has an obvious anti-meat flavoring.

Harold Ostroff, director of the Student Center food services, reports that there has been "an approximate 30 to 20% decrease in the sales of meat dishes." He also noted an increase in the purchasing of meatless dishes of "about 50%." In addition to an increase in the sale of meatless sandwiches.

WHILE the cafeteria menu yesterday listed French meat loaf and meat has hit retail stores hard, with a sharp drop in sales, the atmosphere at Montclair State has an obvious anti-meat flavoring.

"Because we are a state institution we are obligated to present a balanced meal," Ostroff explained. The director did not think the boycott would solve the problem of high prices and felt that the enthusiasm surrounding the ban on meat would not last very long.

"Personally, I don't think that this is the way to accomplish the lowering of prices," he added.

AMONG STUDENTS eating lunch in the Student Center cafeteria yesterday, the feelings were definitely pro-boycott.

"Something has to be done about prices," commented Mike Keegan as he confronted his serving of lasagna. "Indications are that it's working, too," the junior added.

Another junior, Peter Kaney, supported the boycott with a lunch of vegetable soup. "I think it reflects an over-all trend in consumerism in America. Besides, you have to draw the line on prices somewhere," he remarked.

When Chris Wysocko was asked why she was eating a hamburger in the midst of the boycott, Judith Tampone interjected: "How do you know that meat hasn't been stored since December?"

ARLENE ALBANO pointed out the plight of dorm students who would like to support the boycott by not eating meat, but because the meat is bought so far in advance and frozen, not obtaining from meat would not drive down the prices.

"Whether we eat the meat this week has nothing to do with the fact that they'll buy it again because they're contracted to do so," Albano said.

DOUG SANTIELLO and Charles Nordlander, while munching on meat for lunch, claimed that they were supporting the boycott. "I forgot about it," Santiello moaned as he bit into his hamburger, "and now that I bought it I wish I hadn't.""Mother made it," remarked Nordlander as he indicated his homemade ham sandwich. "And last night I had fish and yesterday I had eggplant, too," he added.

Freshman Charles Samuel, lunching on hot dogs, claimed that he wasn't supporting the boycott because, "By buying meat, I'm not going to drive the prices up and it won't bring the prices down if I don't.""It's just another cause," he continued, "now that the war is over, the people have turned to something else."
SAFE Slates Dinner

The SAFE (Students, Administration, Faculty, Everybody) organization is sponsoring a college-wide progressive dinner on Wed., Apr. 11.

The School of Social and Behavioral Sciences have arranged for hors d'oeuvres to be served in Russ Hall Lounge. The next stop will be Partridge Hall for soup, arranged by the School of Humanities. The School of Professional Arts and Sciences is hosting the entrance to Matlory Hall with the School of Mathematics and Science serving dessert in the Math-Science building. Coffee and mints will be the last course, served in Life Hall Lounge by the School of Educational and Community Services.

The behavior of Montclair State students at Carnival may be the deciding factor in the decision of the Little Falls town council regarding the granting of a liquor license to the Student Center rathskellar, according to Little Falls Mayor James Capalbo. In order to be able to serve liquor in the rathskellar, the Center must obtain a club license. Little Falls currently has a law limiting the number of club licenses to two. The American Legion currently holds both of these licenses and an effort is being made to amend the law to increase the number of licenses.

LIQUOR WILL BE SERVED at Carnival by some of the participating organizations. Capalbo stressed that any problems that arise in connection with the consumption of the alcoholic beverages may jeopardize the granting of the license. Capalbo stated that he is personally opposed to the license because of zoning laws that prohibit the sale of alcoholic beverages within a certain distance of schools and other public buildings. He added, however, that the idea would be workable with certain restrictions.

"I think that it's unfair," said that organization.

A DECIDING FACTOR—Representatives from Little Falls will be closely watching Carnival activities for a decision is made whether to grant a liquor license for the Student Center's rathskellar.

Perspective Destruction Charged

The Student Center has been billed $90 by the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA) for approximately 500 issues of Perspective which were discarded by the building's student maintenance crew.

The copies of Perspective, CINA's political opinion magazine, had been placed in the third floor lounge on March 23, 24, 26 and 27.

In a letter to Michael Lowenthal, Student Center director, Joe Baracco, chairman of CINA, charged that the magazines were "destroyed by the Student Center (maintenance staff)." He also claimed that the "staff of the Center" got rid of the magazines because of the magazine's "political opinions." Capalbo stated that there were "differences of opinion" between the magazine and the Student Center which occurred in the third floor of the Student Center and has in fact done so on occasions in the past. Capalbo added that he had not been able to get rid of the magazine because the Director of Student Services informed him that the magazines were not available. Capalbo also stated that the magazines were not available at the information desk.

Center maintenance director Dave Cornelisse defended the crew. He said that the magazines were "scattered around" the lounge area, including on the floor. He said that the crew's job was to "keep things neat and straughten out." He denied having given orders to "get rid of" the magazine and said that he did not see the copies before they were discarded.

Lowenthal, who, Baracco admitted, knew nothing about the incident beforehand, echoed Cornelisse's sentiments. He said that the magazines were "found in a state of disarray." He also commented that the magazines should have been left in the information desk. He commented that the maintenance staff were "doing their job." Baracco also claimed that the magazines were left neatly stacked on tables in the lounge. Lowenthal submitted Baracco's letter to the SGA Goals Conference two weeks ago.

According to Cornelisse, the 200 faculty members who are included will have an opportunity to add their name to the winter session calendar. The board's suggestion is to "plans for the following year's calendar 1974-75 to have an end of the Winter Session." Students must pay $20 per credit for next year's winter session courses.Faculty members who work during the session will be paid on an overload basis.

Application Drop Risks Future Growth

By Patricia Mercorelli

Staff Writer

Significant drop in applications to state colleges may alter projected growth. Robert Birnbaum, vice-chancellor of Montclair State University, said the drop in applications to his college has been slight in comparison to others. "If Montclair State is the only state college which has had an increase in applications over last year, most of those applications, however, have been received in the last two weeks, according to a spokesperson for the Admissions Office.

The spokesman said the influx of applications was so sudden that the deadline was unofficially extended from Feb. 1 to Feb. 25 to handle the overload. There has been an increase of approximately 300 applications over last year.

Rutgers/Newark has experienced a significant drop in applications, according to Delor Jones, public relations officer. One explanation for the decrease, Jones commented, was that since Rutgers/Newark is an urban campus, "the problem of convincing people that they will be safe in Newark is one that constantly plagues us."

Newark State College has had an 11% decrease in applications, stated James Wilson of the Admissions Office. "The largest drop off is in transfers, with a relatively insignificant decrease in freshmen applicants," he said. The largest decrease has been in the elementary education department, though he felt this was partly the result of "the school spreading the word around" that the education field was flooded with teachers.

Wilson stated there is "no motivation for students to get a degree" since they can often get a better job without it. He also felt that the education field was flooded with teachers.

Application Drop Risks Future Growth

By Patricia Mercorelli

Staff Writer

Plans for future state college growth may be altered if last fall's significant drop in applications to these colleges continues, according to Robert Birnbaum, vice-chancellor of the Board of Higher Education. No cutbacks are scheduled at the present time, however, he said.

Many college administrators attribute the drop to the abolition of the draft, the expense of an education or to student apathy. Birnbaum, however, believes that the students are now submitting fewer applications to different colleges causing a decrease in the number of applications that each college receives.

In spite of the application drop, Birnbaum emphasized that actual enrollment has not been affected. The state colleges have always had more applicants than spaces. In fact, he continued, that state colleges have more applicants than spaces. In fact, he continued, that state colleges have

Am I mistaken or was Life Hall paid for by students in much the same way we are paying for the Student Center? If so, why is it now almost completely an administrative building? (no initials)

The impetus to gather money for the construction of Life Hall began with a fund raising drive in the late 1940's. As of 1957, all pledges had been honored. Student activity contributed about $40,000 of the $212,000 raised.

Students also contributed to the maintenance of the building through the War Memorial Fund, an added student fee of $2, until the college assumed the cost of maintenance in 1971. Unused revenue from the Fund was plowed into the new Student Center. The $2 fee continues and is utilized for unspecified purposes by the SGA.

Though the state did not contribute money to the project, it was built on state land and, according to Vincent Calabrese, vice president for business and finance, is state owned. To the claim that students partly own the building in theory, if not in law Calabrese stated, "We are one college and facilities will be apportioned on a priority basis." he continued that the line of thinking implied in the question would restrict student use of buildings they had not paid for.

The Student Center is not subject to administrative use unlike Life Hall, because the state donated the land for student use only, said Calabrese.

If you have a question for STOPGAP drop a note in the STOPGAP Box at the information desk of the Student Center, or call 893-5169 or the on-campus centrex number 5325. Include your initials. 'We are one college and facilities will be apportioned on a priority basis." he continued that the line of thinking implied in the question would restrict student use of buildings they had not paid for.

Petitions Are Now Available for SGA Executive Elections and Student Representative For The Board of Trustees

The use of Carnival as a "testing ground" for an MSC liquor license is illogical and an insult to Montclair State students.

If the Student Center Rathskeller was granted a liquor license, entrance to the restaurant would be restricted to MSC students with identification and their guests. There are even plans to limit the number of guests allowed in on one card.

Carnival is an open function. Anyone is allowed to attend and many outsiders will probably come on campus and buy the liquor. Carnival and the Rathskeller are totally different operations. They are not comparable and one cannot succeed in the testing ground for another.

It is all too apparent that although in the eyes of the law, the vast majority of MSC students are adults--the eyes of Little Falls are children. Students can exercise their rights in this matter by attending the biweekly meetings of the Little Falls town council and expressing their feelings.

MSC is a community of thousands of people and has as much right as any other community to have a bar. By going to a festival-smelling people's breath and making sure that they walk straight--Little Falls officials will receive no indication of student behavior in a bar/restaurant.

Gary Hoitissa

Education Lost Classical Core

The question has arisen as to what is quality education. It is a very important question and the lack of discussion about it here at MSC is unbelievable. Unfortunately, this is the inevitable result of the intellectual stagnation that has set in with the ascendancy of liberals on campus to its present position as the reigning academic and intellectual orthodoxy.

I think I recognize many of the current trends in education and how they relate to the movement of the Zeitgeist. I merely wish to register a dissent.

The essence of good education is not to teach students about current affairs. It is not to "examine" only those things students feel like studying. It is not to cater to students' emotional or psychological needs and desires. The purpose is not to "offer courses...that the student can relate to himself..." and society. (If I take that to mean "the new religions, neo-racism, women in society, community organizing and other contemporary issues". The purpose also is not, by definition, some one or other methodological approach to learning. "Active student participation" in the learning process may or may not lead to quality education. It depends on the aims, the ends-and means are not ends.

The aims of education are to forward knowledge and right conduct. The educated man, as Russell Kirk has said, is the man who has come to learn how to apprehend eternal norms by intellectual means. He has come to know what right conduct is and why one should conduct oneself rightly. He understands the rational basis for such conduct. It is the function of our educational institutions to pass on the proven knowledge that mankind has acquired over the centuries. It is to pass on those truths that have been discovered and to endow students with the knowledge of the processes by which they are recognized as such.

There are too many students walking around these days who think they can be "educated" by concentrating all their time in community relations and poesing a knowledge of the past that simply stops somewhere around 1950. This is preposterous.

The educated man should be schooled in the classics, in the great works of art, literature of philosophy and of religion. He should have an understanding of the fundamental principles of mathematics and science and of the discoveries that have been made in all of these fields which together have enabled the human race to progress and reach its present state of civilization.

Individuals such as Plato, Aristotle, St. Thomas Aquinas, Du Vini, Galileo, John Locke, Madison, Jefferson, Sir Isaac Newton, John Stuart Mill along with countless other men and women of the past have all made varying contributions to our understanding of nature, of the physical world, of God, of life, of all of the other important topics. The educated man and woman should be aware of the trials and tribulations that our fathers have been through, what conclusions they reached and what they did about it. There are few good men and women who are making contributions. But the salient point is that we cannot appreciate a Shakespeare without some knowledge of what went before.

Arguing for a more traditional classical education in today's climate is like spitting into the wind. Most students are not convinced that it is worthwhile to invest so much time and money to teach what they feel is an outmoded, antique, antiquated subject matter. Shakespeare or to just spend a quiet evening reading Jane Austen. They want "utility" and they have gone to extraordinary lengths to get it.

It seems that more and more the question is being asked, "What are they getting what they want? I only hope that they and their parents are happy with the results." It is recorded that the consensus is not unanimous.
East Coast's In
For Quick Getaway

It seems wintering on the Continent or summering at Antibes has lost favor with The Smart Set. The latest thing is to jet off to Garmisch - or someplace equally kicky - for the weekend.

There are several good reasons for taking off on two day jaunts. It's not necessary to put the furniture in storage. The hiker can take care of the Russian wolfhounds. And, although it shouldn't become common talk, it is possible to get along without Broadway for two days.

As it seems dreadfully tiresome to fly all the way to Ibiza for the weekend, there are a few spots on the East Coast worth missing Friday nights at "21" - or "99."

MSC Offers Study Abroad Programs;  Travel Overseas for Fun and Credit

College credits for sketches depicting life in Spain? Or a paper on witnessing tribal dancing, the root of jazz, in West Africa? The answer to the above is an energetic "yes," and each year more and more college students are nodding their heads to the tune of international study. For example, during the winter session of January 1972, a flight/course program to England was cancelled because only ten persons signed up. This year over 160 MSC students signed up for trips to England and Spain, and even more are expected to travel this summer than last year's 200. The upswing could be credited to the boredom that has permeated many classrooms. But even more influential than that is the growing realization that learning is more than analysis, unjust criticism for criticism's sake, and the assortment of dogmas that many professors use to brainwash their students.

Young people are discovering the value and dignity of scents and sounds, of the ingredients of existence. It is this desire for the felt experience that is waking them to the overtones of the earth and the uniqueness of its cultures.

That is why Joseph Kloza, office of international learning director, proposed the formation of the office three years ago. "Instead of a drag, getting college credits can be a fantastic thing," Kloza said, smoking a pipe filled with Edgar G. Robinson special blend tobacco. "Many people don't realize that travel gives. But once you've done it, you know it." Kloza emphasized the trip to Poland that he took while a student at MSC. "It was because of that opportunity that I entered the field of international learning. I felt that if the experience helped me, it much, I wanted others to have the same chance," he stated energetically.

One person who has been changed by his travel experience is Ken Key, a junior history major at Montclair. His trip to Japan and stay with a native family there are leading him into a career teaching the history and culture of that country.

The money angle is as crucial here, however, as in any situation. The fact that in recent years SGA funds for travel scholarships have been decreased from $10,000 to $4500 while enrollment at MSC has nearly doubled certainly doesn't help those that want to travel but don't have the cash. "I guess you could call this a retreat into isolation," Kloza said. He continued with the encouraging words, "Anyone who has ever shown any real desire to go has been helped." Still, it looks much better for those with money in the bank. Scholarship applications are judged on project merit and financial need, in that order. Some of the questions are short autobiography, reasons that an overseas experience is important (to the applicant) at this time, and a financial statement. Kloza pointed out that "Someone whose father is making $20,000 a year won't receive a scholarship." He also emphasized that students can apply for a scholarship for non-credit travel programs as well as accredited ones.

One factor that should encourage students to travel via MSC sponsored flights is the savings, sometimes as much as fifty per cent off standard airline fares. Another is the variety of the offerings, and the supervision and advice that are available are far superior than the 'package deals' that everyone has heard about. Group leaders always have experience in the country being visited and, for those who decide to go on their own, much valuable and time saving advice is available. The "The reason," said Kloza, "that we've only included breakfast is because we want students to eat where the Africans eat."

In short, anyone at MSC who is thinking travel should first visit the Office of International Learning in Life Hall (first floor, by the front entrance). Many services are available, including pamphlets, hotel and student hostel listings, transportation information, and car rental services.

Student Flies the Friendly Skies

Can you really be a student and tour Europe? Howie Schober, a senior at MSC, is proof that it is possible and being a student can even be an advantage.

Howie took part in MSC's semester abroad program in Denmark. He attended the University of Copenhagen during the Spring of 1972 and stayed in Europe for a total of seven months. During this time, Howie visited 19 countries, some of which included: Norway, Sweden, Finland, Scotland, Greece, Spain, Italy, Austria, Yugoslavia, England, France, East and West Germany, Israel and Russia.

While studying at the university, Howie lived with a Danish family. He felt that this was a worthwhile experience since he was able to meet and mingle with so many native Danish people. Howie explained that living with the people, as well as his travelling, was an important part of his education there. Also during this time, Howie took advantage of several travel agencies in Denmark. Those that were open to anyone were called "Spies" and "Ne Ferie." These agencies provided inexpensive package deals, which included jet fare, hotel and meals. Traveling in this way, Howie spent a week on the Riviera and Majorca, a week in England and a week in Israel. As a student, Howie was able to use the services of the university's travel agency, "DIS." Through this agency he visited Finland and spent two weeks in Russia.

After his studies were finished in Denmark, Howie decided to continue travelling in Europe. From May until August of 1972 he visited the remainder of the 19 countries by travelling on Europe's trains with an Interrail Pass available at special student rates. This pass is the European version of the Eurail Pass available through the US. Howie explained that he did most of his travelling at night so that he could use the train as a place to sleep. He also commented on another type of resting place called "Pensions" which are modest type hotels, considered one step above the hostels and where the European traveller usually stays. Since hostels are usually occupied by Americans, Howie found the pensions a good place to get to know the European people.

In his seven months in Europe, Howie learned about other people as well as from them. He studied in a Danish university, lived with a Danish family and travelled through 19 countries, meeting new experiences and people all the time.

Editor's Note: "The Power Behind the College" is the first in a multi-part series on Montclair State College's Board of Trustees. In subsequent articles, MONTCLARION reporters Diane Forde and Joanne Swain will preview the nine board members' backgrounds, their opinions and predictions for MSC's future.

By John Piccirill

The MSC Board of Trustees, like other boards of trustees throughout the state, was created by the Higher Education Act of 1966. In December 1967, its members were appointed and in January 1968, the first meeting was held, according to James W. Cottingham, executive assistant to MSC President Thomas H. Richardson. A bill, known as the "Autonomy Bill," was adopted in 1969. The bill gave additional independence to colleges of Higher Education in Trenton. The bill also added the president of the college as a non-voting member of the board.

Cottingham stated that there are a number of committees on the board that handle specific areas.

However, the president's assistant commented that the board "primarily functions as a whole."

"Originally," he said, "the committees were entirely board members but as a result of the Presidential Search Committee, in which students and faculty are in the committee, the board plans to include students and faculty in those committees."

Cottingham proposed that the committees, according to Cottingham, is to act as advisor to the board, which makes the final decisions.

"The single most important thing that the board does is the appointing of a new college president," he said.

Cottingham commended the Presidential Search Committee, meeting one to three times per week, stressing the importance of the appointment of a new president for the college.

The executive committee of the board, according to Cottingham, is composed of three board members who act as chairman, vice-chairman and secretary.

EMPOWERED

This committee is empowered to take action during the interval between Board of Trustee meetings, they can approve anything," he said.

Cottingham remarked that the board tries to get all the members in on any decision. If a board member cannot attend a meeting he or she can vote by proxy, he stated.

"The board also has had telephone polls or telephone conference calls in which all nine members of the board are on the same line at one time, which has happened once or twice," he said.

For any resolution to be acted upon, "there must be a quorum, a majority of board members present," Cottingham said, "and at least two members of the executive committee," he added.

The board primarily makes decisions on policy questions, according to Cottingham. He also stated that many of the decisions that the board makes are "unanimous," with the exception of personnel actions, such as tenure and dismissal, on which the board has a minor split.

Cottingham stated that many of the board's decisions are "compromise solutions which result in the board's harmonious relationship."

OPEN MEETINGS

All members of the college community are welcome to attend the public meetings that the board holds, he said.

Cottingham labelled some of the public meetings as "formal enactments" of a decision reached in a closed session, such as tenure.

The attendance at the public meetings, according to Cottingham, varies from five guests to about 250, when an issue of great importance to the college is discussed.

He gave the example of Race Relations Day, held at this college on Dec. 7, 1972. "On one day's notice, 40 to 50 students showed up to discuss race relations," he said.

"At the end of a public meeting such as that, nothing is decided on anything, but action cannot be taken immediately because the board first finds out what the story is and looks into it," the president's assistant said.

Cottingham stated that faculty and student participation at a public meeting is appreciated by the board.

"The president of the college is an employe of the Board of Trustees," he said, "they have voting power over him, he cannot veto any of their decisions," he concluded.

JSU Asks For Remembrance

To the Editor:

Next month marks the 30th anniversary of the uprising of Jews of the Warsaw Ghetto on Passover Eve against Hitler's murderers. Jews throughout the world are planning to commemorate that day for the six million Jews murdered by the Nazis. The slogan for the commemoration is a single word—Remembrance.

Our Jewish Student Union has urged President Richardson to take the lead in fostering a Day of Remembrance at Montclair State College. We have written to him, as have many of our Jewish friends, stressing the need for a Day of Remembrance along the lines of our recent Racial Awareness Day, during which students may be excused from classes to attend discussions on the Nazi death camp holocaust.

Although the actual anniversary of the uprising is April 19 (which falls on our spring recess), groups are commemorating the day at various times in April. We have written to passover 1972, which falls on the week before Passover this year. JSU has already made plans to hold its annual Passover Model Seder at 6:30 pm on Thursday.

Seniors Disagree

To the Editor:

In response to the MONTCLARION'S misconception of graduation, we feel that the truth should be printed. To quote the paper, "this year it seems no one knows exactly what's happening," it is obvious that the only one who doesn't know what's happening is the MONTCLARION. The senior class officers met with President Richardson back in December of last year and asked them to submit recommendations as to who the class would like to be its graduation speaker. This list was handed in at our second meeting with the President in early February. Since that time, I have held four meetings with members of the college administration. At my last meeting with Mr. Edward Martin, who is in charge of graduation, he said that we are way ahead of schedule.

In regards to the Alumni Association, we immensely dislike being seconded of not nominated by the call to Mrs. Diane Carlson (executive secretary of Alumni Association.) We are considering their suggestion at this time and will contact them as soon as a decision has been made.

As for Kurt Waldheim (UN Secretary General), he is not one of our recommendations as a graduation speaker. I would like to know where the MONTCLARION receives their information or, more truthfully, their misinformation. Concerning the statement that "there won't be any graduation speaker," it is President Richardson's responsibility to contact the four remaining names on our list. I'm sure he is moving as quickly as possible.

Alumni Honors

To the Editor:

I wish to correct an impression that was given in the March 29 issue of the MONTCLARION. In an article discussing senior class activities, the impression was given that the senior class officers and the Alumni Association are at odds. Quite the contrary is true. The alumni office is actively planning a project to honor the seniors and have the full cooperation of Ed Martin (assistant dean of students) and Larry Bishop (senior class president), in the venture.

"Lemmings," a wild and witty theatrical collage brought to you by the publishers of National Lampoon, is madcaply playing at The Village Gate.

"Lemmings" is a kind of animated version of the magazine, retaining all the darker humor and blackest humor. The loosely-held theme of the show is death, particularly mass suicide. Mass suicide is what lemmings are about.

"Woodshuck" comes onstage. "Welcome to Woodshuck, festival of love, peace and death," he intones in the stereotypical voice of a rock festival announcer.

Parodies of the big rock names come next and the six actor cast displays its virtuosity. Credible imitations rap it to Joe Cocker, James Taylor, Mick Jagger (performed effectively by a female, a mean he landed on a jack-knife. The judge's cards score him 7.5 and 6 on that one. The blue bellas donna is bad. Get into it!!!"

One skit poke parody at the rash of Jesus revivals such as "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Godspell." JC becomes "Jackie Christ" and delivers a plethora of corny one-liners in Jack E. Leonard voice and style. "My father went crazy, thought he was a Superstar" and "Godspell." JC

For once Webster has defined a word beautifully-"Lemming(lem-ing) any of the recurrent themes of the skits is death, beautiful:"lemming(lem-ing) any of thousands of people died or were momined in a fool's war, some of the best minds of our time are being turned to yogurt by hard drugs and others are marching to the sea of a slower death, entering a society they cannot fit. "We're all freaks in the universe," laments the opening song.

ASIDE FROM the gags there is music, surprisingly good music. About midway through the two hour show, the announcer of music notes

Sensible

parody of Jagger's bisexual mannerisms, Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young (called Fraud, Pavlov, Ador and Jung), Bob Dylan and others.

In between acts the announcer encourages deathly mayhem. "Remember the guy next to you is your dinner." You on the sound towers, climb higher. Jump! Hey, man, man, nice dive, a jack-knife. chicken, We'da had him committed but we needed the eggs. Thank you.") His manager is none other than Judas, who promises to book him in the "mountains, the desert and even the Garden." Judas betrays him to a good Godfather imitation and books him at the Last Supper Club. Before the crucifiction, Jackie makes

Whoopie with Mary Magdalene, an empty-stated, bleached-blond who exclaims, "I've heard of the passion of Christ but this is ridiculous!!!"

Later, with the lights turned low the bodyless voice of LBJ reveals the return of the defeated POW and a new discriminated minority-the Dead Minority. The deceased are the bust of disparaging terms: deadbeat, deadbead, deadhead, deadend. He is angered by the removal of dead government officials for arbitrary reasons and is burned that "the only living president is dead."

Other skits include a stoned surgeon's unsuccessful operation, the return of the defeated POW and a lecture on the history of slapstick humor featuring unique variations on old gimmicks.

Though the entire cast distinguishes itself, particularly fine were John Belushi (who sings about half-a-dozen laughs just by saying "Hey, man," as well), Christopher Guest (who credibly twangs Bob Dylan and James Taylor) and Alice Playton of Alka Saltzer "narrativation meatball" fame (a tiny body, a huge voice).

The cost of "Lemmings" is $5.95 Tuesday through Thursday 84 with a student ID and $6.95 on weekends. Seats are not reserved.
Strings Play Final Concert

The Montclair String Quartet will be joined by their colleague, violist Thomas Will, in the final concert of the 1972-1973 season to be held on Sun., April 8 at 4 p.m in McCaheen Recital Hall. The concert is free and open to the public.

The Quartet composed by Jerome Landman and Lisa Todd, violins; Leon Hyman, viola and Aaron Coleman, cello will open the program with the Quartet No. 1 in D major by Giuseppe Tartini. This early 18th century composer was also a teacher and concert violonist with his own school of violin in Padua. He is well-known for his innovations in violin playing, including the use of the lighter bows and thicker strings.

Thomas Will will join the Quartet in the second work on the program, Mozart’s Quartet in C major for Flute and Strings, K. 631. This piece is one of four similar works composed in 1778 in which the flute assumes the first violin part. Containing a famous set of variations, the composition is a reworking by Mozart himself of one of his divertimentos for orchestra.

The ensemble will close the program with William Walton's Quartet in A minor. Each instrumental part in this, his only quartet, is the equal of all the others.

'Child Of Woes'-- Projects Positive Image

By Carol Weeks
Staff Writer

Sondra Dean, the writer and director of the three act play, 'Child Of Woes,' will be presented Sun., April 8 at 2 pm and 8 pm in Studio Theater IC-200. The cost will be $2.50.

The play is about a young man from an upper middle class black family, who wants to live in a ghetto to do research for a college term paper. The father, who is minister, strongly objects to his son getting any "exposure" to the ghetto because, "your mother and I worked so hard to spare you from it."

The play was written two years ago when Dean was a senior at Moorestown High School in Moorestown, NJ. According to Dean, she wrote the play in one day, inspired by a dream she had had the day before. Ruby Marshall, one of her high school instructors, suggested that Dean produce the play as a community project to help their local church raise money to purchase pews. The play was well received and many local papers picked up the story including the Burlington County Times.

"I FEEL there is a negative attitude towards the blacks on campus," Dean said. "After a visit to the National Black Theatre in New York, I decided to show the play here to project a positive image. There are many talented black students attending MSC and their talents need to be exhibited."

"There were no public notices for auditions because I handpicked my cast after weeks of observation," Dean explained. "For instance, there are two gossipers in the play which are a natural. I watched them for days as they talked about he said, she said." Dean liked their speech patterns and expressions and offered them the part.

Many of the cast members are from various college departments. Perduss Jones, who plays the father, is MSC's ass't dean of admissions.

The son, portrayed by Frank Lewis, is a senior in the speech and theater department. His sister is played by Robin Campbell, a frosh in the art department. The two gossipers are played by freshmen Diane Walker and Willa Harris.

DEAN WILL assume the role of Kathy, a junior and eight-year-old Terry Sennory is her child. Michal Buck, an EOF counselor, is in charge of costumes and Philip Thomas, a frosh, is the stage manager.

Dean explained there is no lead character in the play because everyone's role is important in order for the play to succeed.

Dean stated, "The message of the play is that upper middle class blacks should not look down on the blacks in the ghetto or the blacks on welfare. We are all in the same boat and the ghetto blacks cannot hide behind a closed door. Too many people make it and forget about their own." She continued, "I never want to forget. If I do I should be reminded, by any means necessary."

Dean is a sophomore speech and theater major. The play will be considered an independent project in Directing I. "My head is really into poetry more than playwriting, but I think exposing myself to all forms of theater can develop my talents," Dean concluded.

The Special Olympics are a popular event in Adelphi University's Early Summer Sessions. For undergraduates from Nassau, Suffolk, Brooklyn, Queens, and Manhattan, Adelphi University's Early Summer Sessions mean a productive summer combined with more than a month-long vacation. As a visiting student, you can earn up to 12 credits and still have time for the beach and travel.

SUMMER SESSION I: MAY 29 TO JUNE 30
SUMMER SESSION II: JULY 9 TO AUGUST 10

Each program in Adelphi's Early Summer Sessions is designed to help you achieve your educational and personal goals. You can choose from a variety of courses in a wide range of subjects, including Arts, Business, Chemistry, Economics, English, Languages, Mathematics, Philosophy, Physics, Political Science, Psychology, Religion, Speech, Social Work, and Nursing. These courses are taught by experienced faculty members.

Adelphi offers more ways to accommodate more this summer. You can register entirely by mail. Write to the Adelphi University Early Summer Sessions office at:

Dept. C88 Room 103, Lennihan Hall, Adelphi University, Garden City, L.I., N.Y. 11530, or call direct to Summer Session Office, 516-294-8700, Ext. 7261

For undergraduate students, you can earn up to 12 credits and still have time for the beach and travel.

I just went all out for it.

UNDER HER Y coach Marilyn DeFilippo, Jag, developed a specialty in freestyle competition. Swimming against other Y teams from Pennsylvania, California, and "just about anywhere." The physical education major's decision to attend MSC rather than go to college somewhere else was considered a "big swimming school." "I really didn't want to go away," she said, "so I wanted to stay home where all my friends were." The swimming season was great, but Jaglowski said she was not working out as much as she was last season. "I can swim for a couple of hours a day, seven days a week," she said.

JT: "Jaglowski's superstitions don't stop with the milkshake habit. "I have a lucky suit," she admitted with a smile. "And I always wear a bathing cap even though I don't have to," she added.

The Special Olympics are a program that provides opportunities for mentally handicapped people of all ages. The program was established and funded by the Kennedy Foundation. Since the program's inception four years ago, almost 500 kids will be participating, according to age, sex, handicap and ability, and each will be highlighted by a parade featuring the Wayne Hills High School band.

"We expect anywhere from 500 to 1000 kids will be participating," commented regional director Tim Sullivan. "Our objective is to get exposure for the kids and for this type of program," added the MSc physical education faculty member. Each person entering the program must have a sponsor submit an application to the regional director a week in advance of the tournaments.

"Anyone can sponsor a child," Sullivan explained, adding that "even a student can be a sponsor to a handicapped youngster he or she may know." Sullivan stressed the student involvement angle, adding that the contests will be almost entirely run by students from the physical education, speech and psychology departments. While approximately 80 students have volunteered to assist with the games, Sullivan said that additional volunteers are needed.

Each participant is classed according to age, sex, handicap and ability and competes only against those in her class.

The LAST Olympics was conducted at Newark State College where, according to Sullivan, 300-400 persons participated in the games.

Other regional meets will take place at Glassboro State College, Trenton State College and Veterans Stadium, Bayonne. The first, second, and third place winners will compete in the State Meet at Monmouth College, June 23 and 24.

Today's Army: a meaningful alternative for college students

Today's college students have several alternatives. They can remain in college. They can try to get a job. They can postpone making a decision. Or they can consider the Army as a meaningful alternative.

Not all young men and women are ready or able to go on to college now. Some may not be sure about the profession they wish to follow. Others may not be yet mature enough to take full advantage of all that college offers. Many find they simply cannot afford it. Many may want to get a job first.

When it comes to jobs, the good ones go to those with skill and experience. Jobs available to the unskilled, like bagging groceries, messenger work, or checkout clerk, are hardly career opportunities.

Today's Army does this by bringing together a number of alternatives as opportunities. Opportunities to learn a skill. To work at a rewarding job. To continue one's education. To travel. To mature.

And today's Army is more than a place to mark time. It's a place where many young people can build up their assets. Find capabilities within themselves they may have never known they had. Develop those capabilities. Build their sense of self-respect as they grow in their jobs, in maturity and responsibility.

Young people who take advantage of the opportunities offered by today's Army should find themselves better prepared to take advantage of opportunities that may come their way anytime anywhere else.

So that if you know a young person faced with today's alternatives, you may be able to tell him about the one that could be the most meaningful for him.

HORSING AROUND

The MSC Riding Club participated in the first Intercollegiate Horse Show of the season at the University of Hartford, Conn., on Sunday. Of the seven girls who competed, five returned with ribbons.

Fran Del Gatto was the top medalist with a second place in the Beginner Walk-Trot category. Team captain Terry Renz picked up a third place ribbon in Advanced Walk-Trot-Center. Linda Marine and Cheryl Repe were third in Beginner Walk-Trot-Center and Marlene McDermott placed fifth in the Beginner Walk-Trot class.

Of the 30 colleges in the New York-New Jersey-New England area in the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association, MSC is ranked 10th. The girls’ next show will take place on Sunday at Four Seasons Stable, Reddington.

ANDERSON HONORED

MSC football and baseball coach Clay Anderson will receive the Distinguished American Award of the Essex County Chapter of the National Football Foundation on Wednesday at the organization’s Hall of Fame dinner.

INSTRUCTIONS IN swimming are available to those who request them at any time. Ferris stressed that those wishing lessons do not have to learn the basics of paddling through the water. “I just hate to think that there are people who will go through their whole lives without knowing how to swim, especially with the facilities available to them,” he remarked. “They (non-swimmers) are depriving themselves of many fun and leisure activities by not being able to swim.” Ferris added.

For those students who are at home in the water as a duck, the pool is opened for recreational purposes at the following times: Monday - 3 to 6 and 7 to 9 pm; Tuesday - 7 to 9:30 pm; Wednesday - 3 to 6 and 8 to 9:30 pm; Thursday - 4 to 6 and 7 to 9:30 pm; Friday - 1 to 3 pm and Sunday - 2 to 5 and 7 to 9:30 pm.

INSTRUCTIONS ARE available at the Panzer Gym on the Normal Avenue side. How about a hint: it’s wet and bigger than a bread box. If you guessed a swimming pool, you guessed right. Unfortunately, the pool gets kind of lonely every now and then, according to co-coordinator Hank Ferris, even though certain hours are set aside six days a week in which the pool is open to the Montclair State faculty, staff and students, free of charge.

KARATE AT MSC

The 1973 All Koei-Kan Karate-Do Championships will be conducted this Sunday at Panzer Gym. Eliminations start at 9 am with the finals taking place at 2 pm. Included in the $1 admission will be demonstrations by masters. The competition is open to Koei-Kan students only.

Gymnasts Finish Ninth in Regionals

The gymnastics squad finished ninth in the Eastern Regionals at Temple University, Philadelphia, accumulating 81 points. The girls improved their placing over last year when they copped the tenth spot.

In an unusual occurrence, the judges’ scoring was protested by coach Gail Bakker and reconsidered. Denise Cram, the last performer on the uneven parallel bars, was given a score of 6.9 for her routine.

BAKKER, THINKING the rating was too low, submitted a written protest to the judges who re-evaluated the performance. The result was a 7.2 for Cram.

“I was really shocked,” Bakker commented. “They very seldom change a score,” the blond coach added.

“I was really pleased with the girls’ performances,” she commented. “It wasn’t their best meet, but everyone did a fine job.”
