GENOVA WINS BY LANDSLIDE
Barrett, Oliva and Capuano Complete Slate

By John Picciuch and Patricia Mercorrelli

Angelo Genova has been elected SGA president with a total of 685 votes. Genova was backed by 56% of those students voting. Kathy Ragan, current vice-president, and Michael King, SGA public relations director tied with 252 votes and 26.6% of the vote. Sophomore Wayne Russin received 34 votes and 2.8% of the vote. With 446 votes Tom Barrett won the SGA vice-presidency. Betty Ann O’Keefe placed second with 327 votes. Debbie Gerdes had 197 votes and Chris Breneden received 177 votes. Miguel Mena was elected secretary with 622 votes while Blanche Smith received 450 votes.

The new SGA treasurer will be Maria Oliva with a total of 447 votes. Miguel Mena received 257 votes and Cline Bower had 258 votes.

THE FIRST day of picketing was "a slow time, a fighter" from Angola, Furbert said. Friday's lecture is in ballroom B, Furbert last week told the MONTCLARION that "Gulf is a country and a company that people have who are in power to structure over the years," he said, "I will be responsive to the students and in the capacity of SGA president I will remain a student," he continued. Speaking on those who had won in the election he said, "To run they had to be dedicated people and I can work with dedicated people."

THE DIRECTION Genova wants the SGA to go is one of "organizing to its fullest capacity and efficiency, focusing primarily on the problems of this campus and maintaining its fight against the state."

While waiting for the final tally of the election Tom Barrett said, "This is enough to drive anybody to an ulcer."

Barrett stated after he had seen the official tally that he will try to meet "the expectation of those who elected me to this office."

"What hurt my margin over O'Keefe was that the MONTCLARION endorsed a presidential candidate and a candidate for treasurer but not for a vice-presidential candidate which hurt my campaign," he said in the lobby of the first floor of the Student Center.

"I have a great deal of compassion for MSC because it's taken one giant step backward," King stated in the lobby of the first floor. However, King went on to say that he was not bitter about the results of the election.

Menendez Addresses Environmental Convention

While some of MSC's student population spent their Easter vacations getting spoiled on Florida's beaches, sophomore Manny Menendez spent his hobnobbing and rubbing elbows with the authorities in Washington, D.C.

Menendez, the head of the environmental protection commission in his hometown of Caldwell, was invited to a national conference of environmental commissioners at the request of the then-environmental protection agency director William Ruckelshaus, now the temporary director of the FBI.

At the conference, Menendez presented a statement on the anti-pollution devices established for automobiles. The law requires that all car owners who have purchased models that are not equipped with anti-pollution devices establish them or face penalties.

There is expected difficulty, the statement continues, for those car owners who have purchased models that are not equipped with the necessary control devices. Since these people have already purchased their cars and planned their budgets accordingly, they now find themselves at a serious disadvantage.

Menendez proposes "some adjustment through tax deduction or other manner to ease the burden for the common taxpayer."

The 19-year-old student has been in charge of the seven-member board of environmental commissioners for the past year and a half. He was elected by the commissioners who are all "over 30" and, at age 18, was the youngest person to serve in this capacity in the nation.

When asked why he is so involved in the ecology movement, the physical education major replied, "It's taking care of the world that you live in, taking care of all living things."

In addition to his work in Caldwell, Menendez does freelance photography for a New York-based firm and in the summer of 1971 made a tour of Europe taking pictures.

Menendez is currently the vice president of the physical education majors club. He also plays soccer and baseball and worked out with the track team this spring.

For some, all this activity might leave one gasping for an unpolished, that is, but for the diminutive Menendez, it's all in a day's work.

Menendez is the head of the environmental protection commission in his hometown of Caldwell.

Defends Psycho Services Post

by John Picinich

A candidate chosen by the search committee to fill the position of director of Counseling and Psychological Services has refused to offer the candidate, a median Blanton, dean of students.

by Lawton W. Blanton

Salary Not Enough

Blanton said that Buchner's decision was "taken of his own accord, it was his decision not the administration's.

The position of director of counseling and psychological services will become available, with the hiring of a new director, a full-time post, according to the dean. "The position will be for a 12 month period," he said.

The search committee for a new director has screened 65 applicants for the job. There are 70 applicants that have not been screened, according to Buchner's secretary, Viola Robe.

Speaking on the qualities he would like to see in the new director, Blanton said he was looking for "someone competent who could state well with students" in a strictly confidential manner.

Buchner Would like to See

Buchner would like to see the new director as "very vigorous who is constantly searching for new ways to meet human needs." He also stated that the new director must have experience in working with young people and "know about the drug culture," be aware of college student mobility, the sexual revolution and the strains of minority groups.

"Increasing the options a student has with which to make a choice increases the anxiety a student has in wondering if he has made the right choice," he said. Buchner gave the lowering of the voting age in New Jersey as an example. "Students are more anxious now than ever," he said.

"Speculating on the future of the new services, Blanton said that he hopes it maintains the effective level of performance it has had in the past and "through the enlargement and improvement of the staff, it can give better services."

Buchner Sees Services in Future

Buchner sees the services in the future as having a full-time staff "as required by law." Buchner also stated that he thinks the new staff will be action oriented and more directly involved in campus activities.

"I hope that no change in structure effects the competence of the new staff," he concluded.

Carnival '73 is the Sale of Beer and Wine

Carnival '73 is the sale of beer and wine will be sold at the MSC faculty and acknowledged contributions but that will have to be paid. Reactions from students were generally favorable though not enthusiastic. SG president Sam Crane remarked that "I am happy because I drink a lot of coke." Continuing in a more serious vein, Crane mentioned that although "it is a limited price knockdown" it is effective because the prices were lowered on popular items. He emphasized that "I think they should be set at prices and stick to them I do not think they should be raised again."

In response to Lowerenthal's comment that budgetary requirements could cause an increase in prices, Crane said, "I do not think the budgetary demands on a $.05 or .10 cup of coffee is that great."

"I thought the original prices were absurd" stated student Mark Chernesko. He continued that "I am not sure..." to a student "I am not sure..." to a student another student, "I am not sure..."

Testimonial Dinner Slated In Richardson's Honor

by Diane Forden

More than 450 faculty, students, MSC alumni, townpeople and friends are expected to join in a testimonial dinner for President Thomas H. Richardson in honor of his nine years as MSC president this upcoming dinner. The event, which is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. on May 7 at the Robin Hood Inn, will feature a magician and a variety of other entertainment. The money raised at the event will be used to purchase a large gift for Richardson. Richardson will also receive trophies. The testimonial dinner committee consists of Dr. W. Linwold, chairman of the Board of Trustees and the dinner chairman. Dr. Alan Morehead, provost emeritus; Dr. Harold Wake, physical education professor; Dr. Raymond Young, an MSC alumnus, former Alumni Association president and a former member of the Board of Trustees; Mr. Matthew Carter, former mayor of the town of Montclair and Sam Crane, the Student Government Association president.

Carnival: "Something For Everyone"

Carnival co-chairman Carmella Marino expects the event this weekend to be "the biggest it's ever been," with "something for everyone." That "something" is a potpourri of games, entertainment and refreshments which includes just about everything from bowling with fortune to candy apples to a karate demonstration.

A special added attraction of Carnival '73 is the sale of beer and wine.

From 6 p.m. to midnight Friday and noon to midnight Saturday, the Life Hall mall "will be filled with activity," Marino said. Some 22 different student organizations will set up and operate booths selling souvenirs and refreshments, providing entertainment and featuring games of chance.

BEER AND WINE will be sold at two booths, but must be consumed on the premises. No bottles will be sold, she stressed. Campus or local police will be present at both booths and present throughout the Carnival grounds.

A massage parlor is the attraction in one booth, Marino said. Another, women's Volleyball club may also put on demonstrations. A free play area south of the mall is open to all students for volleyball and badminton games, Equipment will be provided free of charge.

First Carnival Wins Columbia Award

by Carol Giordano

Quarterly, MSC's student literary magazine, has been awarded a first place certificate for its three 1972 issues by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association in its annual competition.

The magazine's art work was cited by the judges for its "quality and excellence." Referring to the Summer 1972 issue, the judges' remarks included: "The work is executed in exquisite lettering of form and color." Candy Joseph, Quarterly's 1972 editor-in-chief, said she was "surprised but pleased" by the award. "It's nice to be recognized with something at MSC that isn't mediocre," she added. She noted that the magazine received 890 out of a possible 1000 points.

This Was the Second Consecutive First Place Award For Quarterly.

Quarterly, according to Hartson Poland, the magazine's current chief executive. He added that there was "no unfavorable criticism in any category that was judged." Points were lost, he said, because the magazine did not use any of the judges' suggestions.

Virtually every magazine of this type in the metropolitan area participates in the annual contest, Poland stated. Four categories are judged: make-up, art, content, and general consideration. Quarterly received a perfect score in the content category.

The judges congratulated the Quarterly staff for its accomplishments. "The talent revealed is fresh and creative not in concept but in development," they said.

Poland and Joseph noted that the Spring 1973 issue of Quarterly will be available on Friday.

Upon returning from Easter vacation, MSC students were met by a change in the prices of the Student Center coffee and food. However, unlike the current trend in the nation's economy, the prices were down.

Prices were lowered by a nickel on hamburgers, cheeseburgers, coffee, tea and soft drinks. Student Center director Michael Lowerenthal explained that they were lowered because the Center "had met its budget requirements."

"Since we are not here to make a profit, we can lower them," Lowerenthal stated. He continued that "all the money that we make goes back into the Center.""Lowerenthal said, however, that the prices could be increased at a future date. He explained that in September, the Center administrators determined that it is necessary to raise the prices, they will return to their original levels.

Reactions from students have been generally favorable though not enthusiastic. Students have been happy because they have not been "surprised but pleased" by the award. "It's nice to be recognized with something at MSC that isn't mediocre," she added. She noted that the magazine received 890 out of a possible 1000 points.

A Pint For A Pint

By Marilyn Barnes

Staff Writer

Alpha Phi Omega is sponsoring a blood drive to benefit the MSC Blood Bank. The drive will be held Wed., May 2, from 10 am-3 pm in Ballroom A, Student Center.

Dennis Butler, APO vice president, explained that the purpose of the blood drive is "so that during the year when anyone on campus needs blood students can come to the fraternity and can just call up the blood bank and release it."

APO SPONSORS two blood drives a year—one in May and another in November. The blood given in May goes to the MSC Blood Bank and the drive in November usually benefits hemophiliacs. Last November Robert and David Cochran, two brothers who are hemophiliacs, were given 300 pints of blood.

They are still about 300 pints in debt. Butler noted that the credits (blood donated) left from the last drive will be donated to them.

There is a slight difference in this May's drive—a raffle will be held. The price? A pint of whiskey will be auctioned off every hour—"sort of a pint for a pint," stated Butler.

Asian Club Formed

By Vincent Biunno

Staff Writer

"Our main objective is to improve conditions thus enabling a greater understanding as to what Asian culture is all about," explained Sue Yang, one of the advisors of the newly formed Asian Culture Club.

The club, which recently held an informal dinner party at Yang's house, was developed to unite Asian students on campus and to help them learn about Asian cultures other than their own, according to president Lauren Ong. The group plans to accomplish this through the use of guest lectures, films and field trips.

"WE FEEL that it is very important to establish a personal ethnic identity not only for Asian cultures but for all others as well," Yang explained, pointing out that one of the reasons for the group's existence is to discourage the ideas of stereotypes that are sometimes associated with Oriental groups.

President Ong will be assisted by Bodma Strzemnow, vice-president; Cerina Poon, secretary; Yolanda Jui, treasurer; and Helen Dau and Nancy Ong, public relations promoters.

Course Registration

For The Good Old Summertime

On Thurs., May 10, MSC undergraduates will have an opportunity to register for summer courses.

Registration forms are now available in the registrar's office in College Hall. These forms must be signed by school counselors before May 10.

Payment of fees is required at the time of registration, which will take place in C-121 from 9 am to noon. Those students who are unable to register on this date may do so on June 14-15 from 5 pm to 9 pm.

Students intending to pursue work at another college during the summer should obtain the appropriate request form, available in the registrar's office, and submit it to their academic counselor prior to registration.

The Trust Is Gone

On August 29, 1972, President Richard Nixon told members of the press that “no one in the White House staff, no one in this administration, presently employed, was involved...” in the Watergate bugging incident.

Last night, in an unbelievably poor speech, Nixon publicly accepted the resignations of White House aides John D. Erlichman, John W. Dean and H.R. Haldeman after the implication of these men in the now infamous Watergate case. Nixon also accepted the resignation of Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, who resigned because of his close personal and professional association with the fallen members of the Nixon administration.

In his speech, Nixon proclaimed his undying loyalty and love for the country and ended by saying “God bless all of you.” After the wave of nausea that must have passed over the nation subsided, the gravity of the situation becomes apparent.

Americans have always had great respect for the office of the President even if they do not particularly like the man who holds that office. The Watergate scandal, however, has destroyed much of that respect.

Nixon firmly adheres to the story that he was assured of the innocence of his aides and when it became apparent that these aides were involved, he ordered a full investigation. It seems inconceivable that the President’s two closest advisors would attempt something of that magnitude without consulting him.

It is possible, however, when the personalities of Erlichmann and Haldeman are considered. These are men who have vigorously isolated the President from all criticism. They have surrounded him with men who share his political opinions and his mistrust of the press. These are men who are largely responsible for the widening gap between Nixon and the American people. Whether they would take this final step for what they considered to be the good of the President without his consent remains unanswered question.

It is a question which was not answered by Nixon in his sympos speech last night. The speech was poorly written and our teary eyed President used some very tired cliches. Nixon wished the American people that the case involved them, he ordered a full investigation.

The immediate solution is to make the fee voluntary. Now I can already hear the cries of those who will say that nobody will pay a voluntary fee and that all the present campus organizations will die as a result. To the extent that this is true, it is based almost purely on economic ignorance of the student. And in the interest of education this ignorance should be corrected.

Gary Hoitsma
End Forced SGA Fee

During the recent SGAC election campaign, it was obvious that the candidates were groping for issues to talk about. Even though the campaign itself is now over, a forlorn discussion of the one issue which directly concerns every student is long overdue; namely, that the mandatory student activities fee should be terminated. The reasons why manipulating students should not be required to pay the fee are both practical and theoretical. Consider:

Every year each student is forced to hand over $60 to the SGA. The SGA represents a minority of students. (It will probably be considered good if 2000 of our 7700 students bothered to vote in the recent SGAC election.) In addition, it is being asserted that we should lower the fee from 30% to 15% of the percentage of student body required to vote in order to make a passed referendum effective; the effect of which would be to increase the tyranny of the minority over the majority. Whatever happened to democracy and majority rule?

DANGER!

The minority SGA, which, according to the MONTCLARION, is in danger of being deprived of people “I cannot afford to lose” if the sum requirement is not lowered from 2.5 to 2.0 (what’s this world coming to?), will in turn spend the majority’s money regardless of the majority’s wishes.

For many students the activities fee is not only unprofitable but downright impoverishing. Suppose I chose not to avail myself of $60 worth of student activities during the school year, which many students do, double, to do. By golly, I need that money to pay those ridiculous prices in the cafeteria every day.

FORCED

Why should be forced to pay for athletic events if I never participate in or attend any? Why should be forced to pay for an appearance by a particular guest speaker if I don’t wish to hear him speak? For instance, I personally resent the fact that my money is financing CINA, an organisation whose presentations over the last three years have, on balance, been grossly biased in favor of political opinions I do not share. (I do not favor the abolition of CINA.) Even if I an a minority of one on this issue, my rights deserve to be protected, which leads me to the theoretical point.

Your money is your property. No one has the right to deprive you of that property without your consent. The mandatory fee is a blatant infringement of your rights as an individual.

INSULT

The mandatory fee is an insult to your intelligence. It assumes that you, as an individual are incompetent in knowing how best to spend your own money.

The immediate solution is to make the fee voluntary. Now I can already hear the cries of those who will say that nobody will pay a voluntary fee and that all the present campus organizations will die as a result. To the extent that this is true, it is based almost purely on economic ignorance of the student. And in the interest of education this ignorance should be corrected.

The organisations themselves should endeavor to raise money privately through the use of advertising, fund-raising activities, and admission charges at their events. They should use their imaginations and try some of their own entrepreneurship which may even help them later when, upon leaving MSC, they must confront the “real” world.

Those organisations which cannot survive in this matter simply do not have enough student support to justify their continued existence. Teachers.
Oil Costs Shake Dollar

By Mike Lynch
Perspective Editor

Last month the newspapers were filled with headlines like, "Dollar under attack in world money markets" and suddenly our currency was devalued 10% for the second consecutive year. The basic problem boils down to this: there are too many dollars floating around outside the United States because America imports more than she exports. This means that billions of dollars go overseas and don't come back.

The money panic in Europe is increasingly linked to one coveted commodity, namely petroleum. For years Western Europe has imported virtually all its crude oil, and now even the US relies on imports for one-third of its supply. The Arab oil money has been a disrupting factor in world currency markets, a situation which could worsen in the near future.

NO DISTURBANCE

American oil companies have so far been prevented from tapping the immense reserves lying offshore under the continental shelf, not to mention the North Slope of Alaska. A strong case can be made against risking oil spills on our Atlantic beaches. The North Slope tundra, on the other hand, is neither as vital to human ecology, and spillage there wouldn't disturb our lives too much.

If we don't exploit domestic sources, we will be forced to buy petroleum from the Arabs. The European consumer, already dependent on imported oil, pays $3.60 per gallon for gasoline. Americans will watch in horror as gas prices double, and our first reaction may be to slap profit controls on the oil companies. But if it costs them a dollar to produce each gallon of gasoline, and government limits corporate profits to a penny per gallon, the price will remain $1.01.

HARD BARGAIN

It is really incomprehensible that Exxon or Texaco would have to sink a dollar into making every gallon! Then, when the Arab countries become our principal source of petroleum, billions of American dollars will flood into the Middle East. A further 20 or 30% devaluation of the dollar would probably result.

LIMITATIONS

The United States remains a great and powerful nation, but we must understand our limitations. The conservatives must realize that we can't afford to play global policeman, and the liberals should attack tax-dodging oilmen, not new oil wells. With a little luck and some pragmatic planning, our technology will eventually come to the rescue.

Students Are Not 'Lambs' of Past

By James P. Pettegrove
English Professor

In the April 5 issue of the MONTCLARION, Mr. Gary Hoitsma regrets the superficiality of education on this campus; he feels this "is the inevitable result of the intellectual stagnation that has set in with the ascendancy of liberalism." In a carefully reasoned presentation, Mr. Hoitsma seems to deplore the proliferation of the sciences, the expansion of liberal arts and the undermining of traditional approaches to education. One wonders whose "right" is meant. It is certainly not the "right" during World War I; the British government jealously guarded it, for all his education, he was deemed "wrong." Would not an education in right conduct amount to indoctrination?

If education's aim is to "forward knowledge," one must ask which knowledge. In view of the modern proliferation of the sciences, the traditional approach to education through the "fundamentals" has lost some of its meaning. To be sure, there are some consequences which the student can hardly avoid.

THE PAST

Current afflairs, according to Mr. Hoitsma, are not essential to an education. Serious courses ought not, he feels, to cater to students' emotional needs. When change is slow and relatively predictable, there was considerable value in centering one's study on the past. I recently read that the navigators of the Spanish Armada sailed by Julius Caesar's directions in his Gallic Wars. Today events move rapidly, and fundamentals vanish overnight. Is it really inconceivable that MSC students today are not the lambs we used to herd into Proctorless programs. Lambs are lovable, yes, but at best they can only develop into sheep.

Great American Novel Strikes Out

By Joan Miketzuk
Staff Writer

Attempting to review Philip Roth's latest book "The Great American Novel" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 382 pages, $8.95), is sort of like contemplating one of those apple turnovers (no slight to apple pie intended) with 32 layers of pastry. The book can fill a summer afternoon or evening with a few chuckles and guffaws because it is funny (honestly), especially in the beginning. But if entertainment was Roth's only purpose in writing the tale of the Ruppert Mundys baseball team, he should have stopped after the first chapter. After that the humor takes a tumble, becoming almost sickly in taste and character. A section which describes the old Negro Leagues is enough to turn one's stomach, but at the same time too it is enough to force the blood to rush to one's face in shame. Likewise is another section depicting the adventures of two midgets in the Patriot League: the humor is sick, but the indictment of American treatment of the handicapped is clear.

In SIMILAR fashion, Roth spends most of the book taking swipes at Americans with his typewriter and he hits harder than if swinging with a 34 ounce baseball bat. Using baseball as a model of society, the author touches all bases as he sends the reader back to the centerfield fence in search of the ideals he has destroyed.

The supposed sacredness of American literature is called out on strikes, Herman Melville batting leadoff, in the first line: "Call me Smitty." Borrowing techniques from Melville's much-celebrated but seldom-read "Moby Dick" and a lengthy introduction from Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter," Roth lets fly using the annual losers of Port Ruppert, N.J., as his targets.

The Mundys, a conglomerate of kooks and degenerates, are evicted from their hometown because of Hitler's War and are forced to play all their games in "away gray." Roth takes the reader behind the scenes of the ballclub and its front office, portraying The American version of "big business" and the "fate of many in the hands of few" pictures in vivid color.

WINNING FOR the Mundys is success and success is printed in green and white portraits of Washington, Lincoln, Hamilton, et al. Corruption runs rampant through the pages and along the basepaths in the chase for the elusive buck that accompanies fame and fortune.

The Mundys obtain the latter via the ingestion of the Breakfast of Champions (Wheaties) which are supercharged by Isaac, the super kid with the super mind. Isaac is hardly altruistic, seeking only to make money by betting on the Mundys during their brief winning streak. The plot falls though, however, as the team loses their last game by 31 runs and Isaac loses his small fortune.

If I didn't know better, I'd swear the author of "Goodbye, Columbus" and "Portnoy's Complaint" was pulling my leg with all this. Unfortunately, he's not.

You can laugh through "The Great American Novel." You can wince through "The Great American Novel." But it is impossible not to think about "The Great American Novel." The book itself, though, is based on a tired theme. Roth is trying to throw a scuffed up baseball and make it do tricks. Written five or 10 years ago, the book would have been as brilliant. Now, it's just another look in the mirror.

Using baseball as a model of society, the author touches all bases as he sends the reader back to the centerfield fence in search of the ideals he has destroyed.

The supposed sacredness of American literature is called out on strikes, Herman Melville batting leadoff, in the first line: "Call me Smitty." Borrowing techniques from Melville's much-celebrated but seldom-read "Moby Dick" and a lengthy introduction from Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter," Roth lets fly using the annual losers of Port Ruppert, N.J., as his targets.

The Mundys, a conglomerate of kooks and degenerates, are evicted from their hometown because of Hitler's War and are forced to play all their games in "away gray." Roth takes the reader behind the scenes of the ballclub and its front office, portraying The American version of "big business" and the "fate of many in the hands of few" pictures in vivid color.

WINNING FOR the Mundys is success and success is printed in green and white portraits of Washington, Lincoln, Hamilton, et al. Corruption runs rampant through the pages and along the basepaths in the chase for the elusive buck that accompanies fame and fortune.

The Mundys obtain the latter via the ingestion of the Breakfast of Champions (Wheaties) which are supercharged by Isaac, the super kid with the super mind. Isaac is hardly altruistic, seeking only to make money by betting on the Mundys during their brief winning streak. The plot falls though, however, as the team loses their last game by 31 runs and Isaac loses his small fortune.

If I didn't know better, I'd swear the author of "Goodbye, Columbus" and "Portnoy's Complaint" was pulling my leg with all this. Unfortunately, he's not.

You can laugh through "The Great American Novel." You can wince through "The Great American Novel." But it is impossible not to think about "The Great American Novel." The book itself, though, is based on a tired theme. Roth is trying to throw a scuffed up baseball and make it do tricks. Written five or 10 years ago, the book would have been as brilliant. Now, it's just another look in the mirror.

THE OPERA WORKSHOP is a class devoted to the study of musical theater by means of performance rather than through the usual lecture-research method. All its productions are in English and rely on acting, music, lighting and stylized scenery, with minimal emphasis on sound. This year, for the first time, the course is a joint offering of the music and theater departments. Every student enrolled in the course is involved not only as a performer, but also as a stage technician who creates costumes and scenery.

For the third consecutive year, the Workshop has been invited to perform for the Cedar Grove elementary schools. The group has also been sponsored by the Metropolitan Opera House as part of its study.

Bowie Is 'Hunky Dory'

By Kathy Crado Staff Writer

There have been about a hundred different words said to describe David Bowie - talented, showman, pleasurable, exciting, a man of words, a man of music and many more. His album, "Hunky Dory," on RCA records, truly shows that each and every one of these words describes what Bowie is all about. The album is more or less high-energy rock and roll, with Bowie singing in a high, girlish voice. Bowie has been compared to Alice Cooper with his stage combination of theatrics and singing, but nevertheless, he is a fine musician who is making really fine music.

"Changes," a song off the first side of the album, is probably one of his best compositions. "I watch the little ones change their size But I never leave the stream Of warm impermanence But the days still seem the same..."

Bowie has appeared with many other major groups, one of which was Mott The Hoople, on their "All The Young Dudes" album. He not only played the saxes for this group, but also arranged and produced the album. The music of Bowie is together, tight, powerful and sometimes reminiscent of the Who.

A "Song for Bob Dylan," third song on the second side, actually sounds like it is Bob Dylan and not Bowie, singing the song: "Never know what might have been..."

About a strange young man called Dylan

With a voice like sand and glue

Dylan brought a few more people on

Girlish voice

Put the fear in a whole lot more...

All in all, this album is really a fine collection piece. As they said on his first album, Bowie is a "man of words, a man of music."

Stickmen Stop York

By Joan Mikeszuk

It didn't take much time, to fact it took less than half an hour for slaughter to take place. MSC's lacrosse team netted four goals in the first period of last Wednesday's game with York College and from that point on it was only a matter of finishing the job, 11-2.

Co-captains Bill Paladino and Dick Keller were accomplices to the crime, each scoring three goals and riddling the York defense most of the afternoon. Houston Webber was the team's henchman, tallying two goals and assisting on Paladino's second marker.

TIM FLYNN was responsible for the first strike and Webber, Paladino and Keller followed up before the second quarter started.

Two straight Paladino goals, the last assisted by Charlie Noonan, put MSC up, 5-0, and completed the first strike and Webber, Paladino and Keller followed up before the second quarter started.

Franklin Walker scored MSC's 10th goal when he netted a rebound of a Paladino shot midway through the fourth quarter.

Webber, who had been frustrated by Gaddie a few times and hit the crossbar once, ended his frustration when he put a hard, waist-high shot on the York goalie. Keller finished his hat trick with about two minutes left to play but York had long been buried.

Friday's game with Maritime College was washed out and will be rescheduled for the near future. Following yesterday's contest with Southampton College, the MSC squad travels to Stevens Institute Saturday for a 3 p.m. game.

George Ruston had the high series of 563 and hit the high average of 187. Len Ferro had the high game of 231 in the Wednesday league 450 and above class and walked away with the high game, series and average in the Thursday league, 449 and below class.

THE GREAT RACE IS COMING
Gals Still Unbeaten

By John Tobiason

Last Monday, Montclair State College’s women’s tennis team lost their first meet of the year, at Upsala College, 6-1. This was a complete turnaround from the results of last week.

All the Montclair State College tennis courts were empty late on this gray overcast Wednesday, as everyone wondered what sweating Tom Krukiel, playing his baseline style, battled Sports Writer explained, grinning.

decisive foe. Yet Krukiel refused to back down to take a 6-5 lead in the second. This was a disappointing loss for the undefeated Skein to seven. The doubles results brought the final score 7-2.

The key was being steady, said the sophomore Krukiel, taking a drink of orangeade from the tennis ball canister. “I could see the fuzzy sphere go ‘thok thok’ overwhelmingly in favor of my opponent...”

And so she did. Darting left and right, Novogrod kept her opponent off balance and managed to regain control of the game with her long drives to the baseline.

Tagliarini in straight sets, 6-1, 6-0. In a battle of the undefeateds, MSC’s John Donleycott was unable to capitalize on enough of Chuck Kirby’s occasional mistakes, lab balls and to leave off the result, 7-6, 6-0.

“I had a good first set,” explained the lanky junior to his teammates, “then I just fell apart in the second.”

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood, And sorry I could not travel both. And one travelled, long I stood And looked down one as far as I could To where it bent in the undergrowth. When I had heard that the intramural department was going to become separated from the athletic department, I immediately thought of Robert Frost’s poem “The Road Not Taken.” It seemed fitting to use the words depicting the fork in the road as an introduction to a column on the athletic department. But there were no answers to these questions. The department curtailed their spring program until their status could be definitely ascertained. Were they going to be an autonomous board of intramurals, or would they be an autonomous board of intramurals, or a committee studying the subject three weeks later? People talked in hushed voices about “what’s going on down there.”

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood, And sorry I could not travel both. And one travelled, long I stood And looked down one as far as I could To where it bent in the undergrowth.
