WELCOME TO MSC — Incoming freshmen were greeted by lines which seemed to stretch into infinity during the change-of-program period. A computer malfunction at all eight state colleges was the Montclair State Local of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT).

Computer Snags Scheduling
Breakdown Causes Massive Delays

By Carol Giordano Staff Writers

"We hope to do better next semester," said MSC President David W.D. Dickson in reference to the many registration difficulties caused by computer problems this week.

Dickson explained that a major reason for the delays during the change-of-program period was the fact that the off-campus computer used by MSC did not print out class lists. The Office of the Registrar had to compile the lists by hand, causing the delays, he said.

In an apology issued to the student body, Dickson stated, "Because of state policy, we are obliged to use an off-campus, centralized computer system which is unfortunately not yet reliable. This has been a continuing trouble which has affected other aspects of college administration and despite our best efforts has handicapped production of the central registration materials."

Dickson concluded by assuring students that the college staff will "continue to seek remediation of our computer problems."

MSC registrar Marshall Butler commented the students for their "patience and understanding" during the change-of-program period. Interviewed in Panzer gym yesterday, Butler stated, "In view of all the problems, delays and difficulties, the student body has responded in a most positive fashion. They've been absolutely tremendous."

Butler said that only 50% of MSC students received full schedules. He estimated that 4000 of MSC's 7600 undergraduates adjusted their schedules this summer. He pointed out that schedules did not reach the registrar's office until 3:30 am, Aug. 29. By the end of the following morning, over 1500 schedules had been mailed to students.

According to Butler, the registration problems will be resolved. "We are much better organized and prepared to deal with the problems than ever before."

The Registrar added that part of the solution is to provide more sections of courses in demand. This will mean, he said, that "students must be willing to take classes at 8 am and 4 and 5 pm" since during other hours on Mondays and Wednesdays every classroom is already in use.

Players begins its 1973-74 season tonight with a presentation of Leonard Gersch's comedy "Butterflies Are Free." The play will be performed through Sat., Sept. 8 in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 pm.

According to the play's director, Michael Z. Murphy, "Butterflies" deals with the traumatic comedy which one finds in a love triangle between a young man, his girlfriend and his mother.

ALAN TULIN plays the young blind man newly established in his own apartment. Tulin's stage credits include an appearance in "She Loves Me" last semester.

After a series of delays, the Drop-In Center will open today, according to center director Michael King. Last semester the student-run problem clinic had been allocated the recreation lodge which formerly housed Dr. Donald Mintz dean of the School of Fine and Performing Arts.

Mintz has moved to the former faculty dining room and lounge in Life Hall, stated Jerome Quinn, institutional planning director. These two moves have forced a number of groups to play a game of musical offices.

The faculty dining room was formerly the location of a fine arts lab which was moved to the second floor of Life Hall to an office which formerly housed the Jewish Student Union and the Human Relations Lab.

Those organizations are scheduled to be moved to the north section of the snack bar. Quinn said that work will not start on the new offices of the JSU and HRL until Sept. 10. They have been assigned temporary quarters in the Alumni Lounge in Life Hall in the meantime, he continued.

SGA Hands Form Rights Safeguard

By John Picinich
Staff Writer

Student government leaders are forming an organization to act as a safeguard for student rights in college decision-making both on the local and state levels.

According to SGA president Angelo Genova, the organization will act as a "third party" between the administration and faculty on individual campus colleges as well as between the Board of Higher Education and the American Federation of Teachers (AFT).

The FIRST MEETING of the student government leaders was held on July 28. Representatives of six of the eight New Jersey state colleges were in attendance. "The meeting was necessary to discuss common issues of the state colleges," Genova said.

In the second meeting, held Aug. 11, the discussion centered on collective bargaining between the AFT and the board. "No president has been set for a third party agent," the SGA president said. He continued that the organization would have a student voice in the negotiations between the AFT and the board.

"In collective bargaining the outcome is always legal in contracts and the conditions prevail in those contracts," Genova said. He continued that the organization "must be students appointed by the SGA legislature."

The board was chaired by Dioguardi as athletic director. "If a question arises," Genova said, "we haven't followed those rules in the past so why is it necessary to follow them now?"

He also explained that the MAC's primary purpose is to be a go-between for the Athletic Department and the SGA and not for the Athletic Department and the NCAA.

According to the bill, the previous financial arrangements for funding the MAC were as follows: "The ATHLETIC Department submits vouchers and receipts to the Faculty Student Co-op at two payments per semester based on when state checks come in. The SGA submits the payments in lump sums with no questions asked regarding athletic expenditures. The Co-op then pays the Athletic Department from the SGA money." The passage of the bill, an "exchange account," is set up in the Co-op. By this procedure, a set amount (yet to be determined) would be returned to the Co-op for MAC.

"The Athletic Department would submit vouchers and receipts to the Co-op which would then pay all bills. The SGA would receive copies of all vouchers and receipts submitted to the Co-op.

According to the bill, "Any other student financial organization, (if the new procedure) would give us knowledge of how student money is spent without direct infringement on the organization's programming." The SGA will receive copies of the bills paid by the Co-op, and the MAC will be held responsible for the payments. "The fund is defined constitutionally" or arranged in a final set-up.

THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT leaders will meet Saturday at Trenton State College to define their "common interest" and purpose and to lay the groundwork for the organization.

"Genova stated that the organization will not ally itself with another party and will focus solely on student rights, "try to be separate," he warned.

Lacatena feels that there are issues, such as class size, on which the student organization and teachers agree, Lacatena expressed concern that possible differences between the student and the faculty, including the question of the degree of participation of each group may be "overlooked."

Lacatena labeled these disputes, should they occur, "minor."

GENOVA WOULD LIKE to see a faculty strike avoided. Should the AFT strike, the organization's role would be as a third party, protecting the interests of the SGA. Why the faculty decided to strike would be important. "The strike would hurt the students because they paid for the education and would not get it if there is a teachers' strike," Genova said.

To have an influence in the state legislature, Genova said, "We must meet the sophisticated and the legislature must accept the legislation orSophistication; we must show comprehensive ideas and programs."

There are plans for the organization to have a lobbying effort. Tom Barrett, SGA vice-president, foresees a problem of maintaining a lobby. AFT lobbyists will have to be appointed at each meeting of the legislature, and talking to individual legislators on issues relevant to the organization.

Genova stated that the purpose and goals of the newly-forming organization have not yet "been defined constitutionally." He also explained that the MAC is a "third party," and the board has to be "responsive to," the students.

"There is nothing for the administration to be responsive to," Genova added.

The funding of the organization that the MAC will represent is not yet to be determined by the student leaders. "There is nothing in any of the college's governments," Genova said.

The Montclair Athletic Commission (MAC) was restructured and funding procedures altered by the SGA at its first meeting on June 5.

According to a bill proposed by SGA president Angelo Genova the MAC board will consist of nine voting members and a student chairman.

SEVEN OF the nine members will be students appointed by the SGA president with two of those seven to be the SGA vice president of internal affairs and the president pro tern of the Senate.

The board will also have a faculty member designated by the administration and an alumni member to be chosen by the Pancur alumni.

Of the seven students, a minimum of two must be involved in the athletic program and a minimum of two must be women.

The VICE president of business and finance of the college (currently Vincent Calabrese) and the athletic director (currently William P. Dioguardi) are to serve as advisors to the board in the planning of schedules and budgets, but they will not have a vote on the board.

Genova expressed the desire to have the student appointments made and a faculty appointee by "the end of September."

However, Genova explained that the board's structure is questionable as far as the National Collegiate Athletic Association's (NCAA) by-laws are concerned.

The NCAA requires that "the board in control of athletics... be made up of a sufficient number of administrative and/or faculty staff members to constitute the necessary parliamentary requirement to transact business."
Students Face Key Challenges

In this initial article, I'd like to welcome you back to MSC and wish you a successful and rewarding year. After being elected student body president, many questions concerning the role of SGA, its effectiveness and its future crossed my mind. In reviewing these questions, the element of challenge persistently entered the picture. As I think about these challenges I am constantly aware of the commitment necessary to meet them successfully. I view these challenges and commitments in three basic areas: the individual, our community and our society.

CHALLENGE

As individuals we must all face the challenge of our education. In our days here at MSC, we are placed in the academic arena, where competition and realism thrive. Our search for employment is constantly being darkened. Many of us are preparing for a society where security in the future seems minimal. This is a challenge as individuals which we must undertake. As enthusiastic people with confidence in ourselves this challenge can be seized and ultimately overcome.

We have a definite challenge in our campus community. Students of today must meet the challenge and commitment to the ideals and rights established and gained by our predecessors. We are entering an era where all the rights obtained and garnered by former students are theoretically, and in some instances, realistically, in jeopardy by collective bargaining and state policies. We as students must confront this challenge to retain those rights which we have become accustomed to.

DIRECTION

We must commit ourselves to our independent role to effectively influence the direction of higher education in New Jersey. We have an obligation to the students before us and to ourselves to meet the challenge of the future of our education. With unity in our commitment, the ultimate success in this area is realistic.

We must also face a challenge that society places on us. Throughout history, the university has acted as a catalyst for social and attitudinal changes. We as students cannot range on this responsibility. Our role should encompass a sincere awareness of our society – its faults and its achievements.

AWARENESS

We must maintain a high level of political and social awareness in order to confront social life and not be fearful of attacking them. As students, we have this responsibility to our society, to our peers and to our children. Let us win this challenge and hold a firm commitment to it.

Next week, I will outline programs and areas that I believe SGA should develop. We will also include a breakdown of this year's budget, explaining basic policies of SGA in relation to its service branches.

Let's Keep Our Freedom

After three months of vacation, for some of us, rest and relaxation, we are now all back at MSC to continue our studies and process of learning. Some people may say that during these past months our minds have become deep and cloudy about life around us. I have to disagree. With President Nixon and Watergate in the news every day, a person has to be either totally blind or deaf to the falling apart of our nation. I can't believe that the President knew absolutely nothing of these activities.

Some people who read this letter may say, "If you don't like this country, then leave it." Let me tell these people that I care about my country's future and the people who live in it. I feel privileged to live in the United States, where people may go where they please, vote as they please, and speak as they please. If I lived in the Soviet Union, Nixon this letter wouldn't be in this paper or in any other paper, I would be considered an enemy of their state.

Next week, I will outline programs and areas that I believe SGA should develop. We will also include a breakdown of this year's budget, explaining basic policies of SGA in relation to its service branches.

Concern Unlikely

Marcantonio Lacatena, president of the Montclair State Chapter of the American Federation of Teachers, has stated that the faculty will safeguard the rights of students during their negotiations with the state.

However, the existence of faculty concern for student interests is highly questionable in light of the fact that for months faculty union leaders have steadfastly fought any proposal of student input in faculty negotiations with the state.

Students are more than capable of protecting their own rights, and are eager to do so. Areas such as tenure, student/faculty ratio and curriculum are several areas which have a great effect on students. If students have an opinion on subjects of concern to them, they should be heard, not just brushed off.

The need for student input is especially important now that the college is faced with a possible faculty strike. If such a strike should occur, no one would be more affected than the students who have paid for their education and, in the case of seniors, might have to postpone their graduation in event of a strike.

An ideal situation would be one in which faculty and student leaders work together to ensure that the rights of both groups are not infringed upon. Students are willing to do this and it may be possible if faculty leaders drop their "we know best that's for you"-"mind your own business" attitude.

Wanted.. Activism

During the late 1960's and very early 70's, the atmosphere of the nation's college campuses was charged with the force of student activism. Students around the nation took issue with steps that the American government was taking, particularly in Southeast Asia and reacted on their campuses - sometimes, as at Kent State, violently.

At Montclair State, the years of student protest culminated with a student strike in May, 1970 in protest of the invasion of Cambodia by American troops.

However, by the end of 1970 the pendulum had begun its swing from protest to apathy, and the past several years have seen an air of tranquility around the college campuses. Tranquility - when the Hai Phong harbor was mined. Tranquility - when bombs exploded over North Vietnam.

When the last tuition hike was being considered by the state legislature, it took a massive effort to get even a handful of students to work against the proposed increase. Had more people participated, their efforts might have been successful. Any attempt in the past two years to get students involved in any major issue, both on the national or state level has failed.

With the beginning of fall semester, students are returning from a summer which saw the unraveling of the now infamous Watergate scandal. The public viewed a panorama of corrupion and the attempts of power-hungry men to manipulate and thwart the democratic process. If there is any lesson to be learned from that mess, it is that problems do not go away if no attention is paid to them - issues are often not resolved to the benefit of the public if citizens do not take an active part in their solution. The spirit of activism and involvement that existed in the country, particularly on the college campuses, must return and must remain. Involvement is something that is not constant.

The pendulum must return from apathy to protest - protest against the corruption and misuse of American potential. If the public combines this protest with a struggle towards positive goals within the nation's capability, public opinion can once again become a powerful force.

Is College the Best Thing for You?

For the incoming freshmen, a few wortds of caution are in order: you are entering an institution that is in trouble. American higher education, of which our college is one small part, is operating in a vast spiritual void, having lost its sense of direction and purpose. As a result both students and faculty are suffering.

As you have become oriented to MSC, I'm sure you have heard much about, and you are no doubt impressed.

DRIFTERS

This may sound good, but the fact is that many, if not most, students are bored, unfocused, social dropouts, lacking well-defined goals and objectives of their own. They are in college not so much because they really want to be, but because of various social pressures or simply because "there is no place else to go." As such, the temptation is almost irresistible for them to slip the main course and dabble in the desserts of the cafeteria of knowledge wherein they have always visited man's profoundest feelings.

MIS-EMPHASIS

Yet it is this very mis-emphasis, on quantity rather than quality, that is at the root of the crisis we face. This crisis is intellectual and spiritual in nature and of a sort that no amount of money or concrete will solve. What, for instance, are the institutional objectives of MSC? As far as I can determine, there aren't any.

Instead of a genuine concern for the cultured, pursuit of wisdom and truth, what we have is sort of a cafeteria of knowledge wherein students are free, within broad-defined bounds, to pick and choose whatever they like.

FRUSTRATED

The better students, those genuinely interested in the works of the mind, past and present, which are the mess of education, are frustrated by the unintellectual and frivolous atmosphere which prevails on campus.

On top of all this, the education you will receive will be shot through with the philosophy of contemporary liberalism, which is out of touch with the real world, as it preaches disdain for individuals, patriotism, the family, the work ethic and most other middle class values.

SPIDERS

So, dear freshmen, you are about to begin an experience in education, if that is the right word, which in future years, you may look back on as an empty one. I say "may" because if you do have a goal, a profession, or something which you know your work at MSC will bring you closer to, then you are in a much more favorable position.

But if not, if you don't really know why you are here, I would urge you, from my own experiences and observation, to reconsider your situation. You don't have to be in college. Travel, see Europe, discover America or get a job and make some money.

There is a very few years after you have been out of the classroom and in the "real world" while you may just decide that college is the best thing for you. And then, if you were to say, you will be in a position to appreciate and enjoy it that much more.

This column is dedicated to the vain and empty cause of trying to straighten out (in laymen's terms) the things that have happened at the gym over this summer.

But we're going to try, anyway. Before reading further, jump down to the guide before and study it. Failure to do this now will result in confusion.

FIRST AND foremost is the separation of Intramurals from the Athletic Department by both the college and the SGA.

Prior to his resignation, President Thomas H. Richardson issued a college policy statement to establish Intramurals separate and apart from the Athletic Department, putting the rules in the Jar. (pronounced like the fabric) is a student board which runs and controls the Intramural program. The Intramural Director serves as an advisor to this board.

The reasoning behind this is that Intramurals is a student service and should be on its own and abetting the group. The actual game remains to be played.

If YOU'RE still with us, good. If not, go back and re-read the news column on what the students had in MAC has been increased to a large majority. The SGA has also instituted a Phase Two of this whole production involves the structuring of the MAC board and the SILC board (see guide). The small majority of the MAC board and the SILC board.

The SGA further emphasized this action by deciding to fund the Intramural Department directly and when and where the MAC spends its money. The actual game remains to be played.

The students have fought to give the students this power and control. But ALL that has been set up is BUT ALL that has been set up is...the kick-off and when the faculty, staff and administration boot the ball to them, they can't be afraid to run with it, or get hit, for that matter.
The Department of Intramurals has been divorced from the Athletic Department and is now under the jurisdiction of the Physical Education Department and the Panzer School. According to an administrative policy statement by former college president Thomas H. Richardson dated May 30, "The Intramural Program will remain responsible to the Department of Physical Education."

The Department of Intramurals and Athletics will be funded separately by the SGA. The Intramural Department has drawn up a constitution for Class I status and will submit it to the SGA for approval. Under the new set-up, Intramurals and Athletics will be funded separately by the SGA. The Intramural Department will be run by a seven-man student council with the Intramural Director serving in an advisory capacity. During the '72-'73 school year, the obvious choice for the position of Intramural Director was under the direction of the Athletic Department. The SGA funded the Athletic Department and a portion of that money ($1100 of $129,000) was allotted for Intramurals.

The statement also stated that "The Director of Athletics will be responsible to the Vice President for Administration and Finance." According to an administrative policy statement by former college president Thomas H. Richardson dated May 30, "The Intramural Program will remain responsible to the Department of Physical Education."

McKinley Boston, assistant football coach, was appointed to the position of Intramural director by Dr. George Pearson, chairman of the Panzer School Council. Boston, a former player with the New York football Giants, will replace Mark Schmidt who retired last June.

Barry Hennis, assistant Intramural director, under Schmidt and an obvious choice for the position, resigned to serve as Pearson's assistant. AT AN intramural meeting held on August 24 in Pearson's office, Hennis explained his reasons for resigning: "I would like to advance academically, so this move is for my own self-benefit as well as to have a fresh face in intramurals."

Hennis, who came to MSC last September from the University of Alabama, continued, "I've accomplished just what I thought I would and just what I wanted." He went on to say that he was "completely agreeable" with the selection of Boston as intramural director and that there were "no conflict" between them. Hennis added that he would continue to work with the intramural department as an advisor to the program. During his tenure in Intramurals, Hennis assisted in achieving the separation of the intramural department from the Athletic Department. He helped organize such competitions as the Intramural basketball tournament last year and The Great Race last spring.

This past summer, Hennis sent out a questionnaire-survey to 100 colleges across the nation concerning their intramural programs. The returns of this survey are still coming in and results are yet incomplete. Hennis will be working primarily in the area of academic research in the department of physical education.

In addition to his duties as Intramural Director, Boston plans to remain as assistant football coach. Working with Boston will be graduate assistants Marcia Zubanas and Bruce Smith.

Panzer to Host AAU Weightlifters in March

Weightlifters from across the nation will flock to the MSC campus next spring when the Physical Education Department and the Intramural Department host the National AAU Intercollegiate Weightlifting Championships. Barry Hennis predicted that athletes from colleges as far away as Hawaii and California would be participating in the event. Among the athletes will be MSC's Phil Grispaldi, '72 Olympian and American record holder. Grispaldi spent this summer in Russia training with the Soviet squad and will be in Havana, Cuba, this month for the World Games. Early rounds of the AAU competition will take place in Panzer Gym on Saturday, March 10, with the finals slated for the following day. Also scheduled are a "Mr. America" contest (following the finals on Sunday) and a weightlifting clinic. New Jersey high school and college coaches will be able to attend a weightlifting clinic in Panzer Gym on Friday, March 9.

Television coverage for the event is still pending. However, Hennis said that the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS-Channel 2) has expressed interest in televising the championships on its CBS Sports Spectacular program.

Hennis, who along with Dr. George Pearson, Panzer School chairman, was the moving force which brought the tournament to MSC, commented that he expects confirmation of the television arrangements sometime in October.

Last year MSC organized a weightlifting club and sent a team to the national competition. The squad, which included Grispaldi, finished fourth of the 55 competing schools.

John Donleycott

Montclair State tennis star John Donleycott suffered a fractured vertebra in his neck in a swimming accident in the beginning of August.

Donleycott, the NJSCAC singles champ this past season, was swimming in a backyard pool and attempted a flip turn in the shallow end when he cracked his head on the pool. According to Bill Dioguardi, athletic director, Donleycott had been going through a "slow but steady recovery." Dioguardi, who was one of Donleycott's many visitors, added that the tennis player "is beginning to regain feeling in his legs."

Donleycott had played tennis for the Indians the past three years. He posted a 9-3 record overall last season and went 4-0 in the NJSCAC. He defeated Joe McGrath to take the conference singles title last May 12, 1-6, 6-2 and 6-3, and was an NJSCAC first team all star selection.
