Clifton Fines Raised

By Patricia Mercorelli

In an effort to eliminate blocked traffic, the town of Clifton has initiated a $50 parking fine for cars parked illegally on Milburn Place and McCosh Road. Vince Calabrese, vice-president for administration and finance, explained that "approximately 80% of the cars parked there are student vehicles.

The ordinance, passed by the town council, states that parking is prohibited on Milburn Place between Valley Road and McCosh Road as well as McCosh Road between Normal Avenue and Woodlawn Avenue except during specified times. It allows cars to park on alternate sides of the street from 8 am to 11 am on Monday through Thursday.

The ordinance prohibits parking on the northern side of the street closest to MSC on Monday, Wednesday and Friday while it restricts parking on the southern side on Tuesday and Thursday. However, the ordinance does not cover parking during the weekend.

Calabrese explained that since the roads are very narrow the town is attempting, through the alternate side of the street parking, to facilitate traffic flow. He continued, "When cars are parked on both sides of the street, it is impossible for a large car to drive through." Calabrese was confident that the parking restrictions would cause no problems for the college. He stated that "We have a sufficient number of spaces on campus to cover the approximately 50 cars which would normally park there."

Pub Decision Due

CRANFORD--Joseph Lerner of NJ Alcoholic Beverage Control said Tuesday that the present ABC director, Robert Brower, will not hand down a decision on MSC's application for a beer and wine license for its rathskeller before his resignation on March 8.

Lerner said that it was Brower's impending resignation that has prompted him to put off making a decision. Lerner explained that, while the new director may not take "immediate" action, the application will be given top priority.

He added that at the earliest, a decision could be made within one week after the new director assumed his duties. However he warned against premature anticipation of a decision.

Calendar Controversy Continues

By Gene Moore

As a last-ditch effort to have the Winter Session moved from January to May, Angelo Genova, SGA president, is attempting to get MSC's Calendar Committee to reconvene. To do so, two-thirds of the 20 voting members must agree to meet again. If Genova is successful, another vote concerning the academic calendar could be held.

On Jan. 30, the Calendar Committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. David Alloway, held its last vote, 11 to 8, in favor of the January Winter Session. After the vote, the committee sent its recommendations, which cover the next two academic years, to MSC President Dr. David W.D. Dickson and the MSC Board of Trustees for final approval.

Rose Mez, secretary to the president, remarked yesterday that "the president will go along with what the committee recommends." She added that any action on Dickson's part depends on whether Genova could be successful in getting the committee to reconsider the vote.

However, a controversy surrounds this final vote. Genova, who missed this meeting, said a proxy who supposedly became confused by the resolution's wording and voted contrary to Genova's instruction. Genova feels that the misunderstanding places the validity of the vote in question.

"I would hope we can all recognize this mistake as genuine and not as a ploy to change the committee's decision," Genova stated in a letter to Dickson.

But Alloway feels differently. "You either raise the issue at the time or take the vote the way it is," Alloway said. "Genova wanted a revote but by parliamentary procedure you must get two-thirds of the voting members to agree," he said. Regarding the alleged ambiguity of the resolution's wording, Alloway stressed, "The question was put minutely." The defeat of this calendar for a 16 week spring semester beginning around Jan. 4 and ending about May 12. The three week innovative period would then begin on approximately May 12.

PROPOSITONS of this calendar, including Genova, feel that the students would benefit because the longer summer vacation would provide the time needed to secure longer and better employment.

STREAKER, MSC STYLE: An unidentified male, clad only in a scarf and cap, raced through the Student Center mall yesterday afternoon to the shock, dismay and hysterical delight of the onlookers that gathered. The fad of streaking has adorned college campuses across the nation recently but motives for streaking have not yet been determined.

According to an Easter Seals release, the radiothon, the brainchild of Smith, will work in conjunction with the 1974 Easter Seal Telethon to be aired over WPX-5 (New York) and WPNI-TV. The project, which will benefit crippled children and adults, will start at 6 p.m. on March 20, and end at 8 p.m. on March 31.

Each of the nine stations involved will have equal time over the air from MSC, Hecht explained. Local merchants will be asked for contributions. "Possible examples are a pizza parlor giving away a pizza every half hour and a barber shop giving away a styling job," Hecht said.

In return for their gifts, "the merchants would get free advertising over the nine stations during the radiothon and their gifts would be tax deductible," he added.

Hecht, who is serving as technical director of the radiothon, related that "the radiothon will be viewed all over the country, but only this area will have a radiothon." He added that the radiothon will be aired throughout New Jersey and will be featured on the telephone.

"WMSC is considering raffling a stereo system to raise money for Easter Seals," Hecht said. There is also "a slight possibility of having a live concert over the air from the Jai C J In the Woods," a Parsippany-Troy Hills club, Hecht stated.

BOX OFFICE NOW OPEN
Consumer Bureau To Aid Students

By Susan Koenig

The Consumer Action Bureau (CAB) has opened next week Student Consumer Week. CAB will run a concession table on the second floor of the Student Center to introduce their services. To make students aware of their role as consumers, to investigate campus and community goods and services and to recommend courses of action for consumers are some of the objectives of CAB, a new campus group which had its first meeting last Thursday.

CAB, funded by the SGA, grew out of a class offered by Montclair State College's home economics department, under the instruction of Lois J. Guthrie, associate professor of home economics and advisor to CAB. NARY ANN Rizzio, CAB director; Peg Zabody, CAB consumer information chairman; Linda Brandimarte, CAB investigative committee chairman; and Stephanie Monti, appropriations chairman, originally looked into joining the Ralph Nader inspired Public Interest Research Group. PIRG is a student funded, nationwide program run by a professional staff of lawyers, economists and organizers with headquarters located in Washington DC. Presently more than 500,000 college students voluntarily support PIRG with $1.1 million.

Chris Burke, PIRG executive director, spoke with the CAB nuclear group and according to Rizzio, he came in and told them they could "take care of this and that." "Projects were thrown into our laps that we, as students, wouldn't even have any interest in," Rizzio complained. She explained that eventually they might get into PIRG but they would like to have enough power to have a say in what is being done.

According to Rizzio, the CAB office, located on the fourth floor of the Center, will be selling 10 cent stamps as an introduction to their services. CAB office hours will be 9 am to 5 pm, Monday through Friday.

ELLIO'T M. Baumpmd, SGA attorney and an active member of the NJ Consumer Action Board, has offered his services to the CAB group. Peg Zabody will be heading a committee to put out a newsletter called "Peg's Pointers" which will handle current consumer news on the campus, local and national scenes.

CAB will also put out five pamphlets entitled "Student as Consumer" which will compile the home economics department and other departments' student findings on consumer products.

Decals Not The Problem

The new ticketing policies to be instituted on the campus seem to be aimed at tightening up regulations that have been brushed over or ignored in the past. Now a student must have a $10 decal displayed in his or her car window in order to park on campus. If negligent in this, the student faces fines by the local municipality involved.

While non-decaled cars may be the cause of some of the illegal parking problems on campus, i.e., blocking other cars or parking on streets making traffic flow difficult or impossible, it is not the decals that pose the problems.

The difficulties arise when cars are parked in places that provide inconveniences for the rest of the campus, period; whether they have a decal or not.

Instead of merely focusing on a small segment of the campus auto population, current regulations regarding ticketing should be more strictly enforced. Stiffer penalties should be imposed on those cars which violate the existing rules.

Are Terrorists Frauds?

It is hard to write a column on the recent Hearst kidnapping that has monopolized front page corners of The New York Times during the last few weeks.

My immediate reaction is that the whole affair is perhaps some sort of plot by the pro Nixon forces in this country to give one comer less of the American anarchists. Not to mention more recent historic groups as the now more double Weathermen. They are not mentioned too often in the history books that the ruling classes infiltrate into the school system but these groups have existed nonetheless, in response to valid complaints.

The Symbionese Army, if indeed such an army does exist, is only one more example of what Lenin called "infantile leftist." As such, they are to be condemned, not from any moral viewpoint but from the viewpoint that their action is not part of any organized movement that is connected with consciousness rising.

Of course some good has come out of the act. The Symbionese Army did manage to wrest several million dollars from one of the country's more "comfortable" families and redistribute it to the poor.

Then there is the question of what action to take from this point on. Should the movement from such an isolated revolutionary act, however, it is offset by the harm that may come to the movement from such an isolated act.

So it is, now, that we must critically analyze the motives of the various groups that would be considered terrorists. Are they, in fact, motivated by a desire to improve the lot of the underprivileged?

Tactics Are Questionable

To the Editor:

The fact that Galumph was the center of the controversy, and I believe, is an indicator of a crisis in the SGA. The SGA has not been the only one to have a problem with the matter. The SGA, on the other hand, has generally ignored the problem.

It is true that many of the problems the SGA has encountered over the past few weeks can be traced back to the SGA's decision to support the motion. The SGA did not understand the impulse to support the motion, either.

Discussion was lengthy, with numerous views and facts discussed before the bill went to a role call vote.

The meeting was then directed to the main bill. Discussion was lengthy, with numerous views and facts discussed before the bill went to a role call vote.

The vote, which went against the bill by not obtaining a majority, was announced. Genova then moved that a vote be taken to dissolve this bill. The vote was then directed to the main bill.

Such crazes seem to reflect the return of another era -- the fifties or the early sixties. Naturally, the craze of streaking, as opposed to stuffing phone booths, takes on a seventies flare of abandonment and exhibition.

Beats Goldfish

The new campus craze of "streaking" -- racing sans garments in view of as many people as possible -- has hit MSC.

The craze, which sure beats eating goldfish for sport, seems to be growing at college campuses across the country. Streakers have made appearances at athletic events, in lecture halls or wherever they're assured of getting attention.

Nixon Budget Kills Higher Education Finance

After attending the Third Annual National Student Lobby Conference in Washington, DC, the problem of federal financial aid to higher education is looming ever-present upon the powers to be on Capitol Hill. The problem area is where the President Richard M. Nixon administration is taking student financial aid. A little history may help.

Approximately two years ago, the Congress established the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program (BOG). This program, in theory, is very formidable but in reality may have a disastrous effect on the entire picture of federal student aid. At its start, the program was modestly funded. Keeping in mind the low income requirements of the program as well as its minimum funding, BOG reached only incoming freshman at an average of $260 per applicant on a nation-wide scale. The maximum aid for the incoming freshman was established at $1400 per year.

BUDGET

Remaining federal programs, National Direct Student Loans, (NSDL) Work-Study Supplementary Opportunity Grants (EOF), State Scholarship Incentive Grants (SSIG), and Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL), combined cut the funds available for BOG’s operation.

The upcoming Nixon budget request for 1975-1976 strikes a severe blow to financing higher education.

With BOG, the President is requesting a substantial increase from $4472 million to $1550 million and million with SSIG. Although President Nixon requests a $31 million increase in SSIG, it is not a total no attempt is made to have the requirements for the loan more flexible and accessible to students.

The financial “Means” test as an established GSL program is set at the unrealistic parental salary figure of $15,000 per year. With inflation in both the economy and education, a family who has saved money and must pay good and still right and wrong. Pragmatism and compromise are the order of the day. Controversy is to be avoided.

With the colleges putting such a premium, as they do, on mediocrity and conformity it is really such a wonder that students are bored.

CAP FIGHTS RACIST IDEAS

By Dr. Robert Cherry

I have previously argued that the main issue in the Shockley controversy is not academic freedom but the seriousness of academic racism. Our Committee Against Racism (CAR) has no position on suppressing speech. We support and encourage open discussion of critical racist ideas with each local chapter deciding tactfully.

I have also tried to point out that freedom of speech has never been considered an absolute, and to do so only obfuscates the issue of racism. The constitution allows the stigmatization of free speech under sedit and treason danger, libel, threat of violence or obscenity, to name a few. Also, some construe attacks on Shockley as attacks on academic freedom.

Academic freedom is not a freedom but a vaguely defined privilege restricted to a limited group of people. There is no reason to assume Shockley should be extended this privilege automatically.

POINTS

How do we know Shockley is wrong?

1. IQ tests have become increasingly suspect for being both culturally value biased.
2. His theory of racial superiority has been thoroughly discredited in the past and except for identical twins studies, no new information is presented by Shockley.
3. The identical twins studies are only of white twins. Hence, it is impossible to make scientific statements concerning either the genetic component of intelligence among blacks or that the mean differences between black and white IQ’s is genetic.
4. The identical twins studies have all been shown to be worthless. The most often quoted studies, by Burt, were shown to contain falsified and manipulated data. As Burt’s sample increased from 20 to 40 over a thirty-year period, the genetic component of intelligence always remained about .771. He arbitrarily included or excluded IQ test scores of identical twins depending on whether or not they confirmed his hypotheses.
5. On the basis of this kind of information, the National Psychological, the American Anthropological and the Modern Language Associations have condemned these racist theories as pseudo-scientific.

One might ask why a white college professor is so concerned about the planting of “false ideas.” Over and above the significant moral issues involved, I believe I am acting in my own self-interest. For example, racist ideas are being invoked as a justification for cutting special spending.

The elimination of NSDL effects all students. No longer will this accessible loan program be available to meet our needs. The cuts in Work Study has the same effect. Jobs formerly not available outside the college will be limitedly available within.

RESTRICTIVE

Bush is becoming more restrictive in releasing loans to students. President Nixon makes no move to correct this problem nor does he take measures to eliminate or modify the “Means” test as a determinant of financial aid.

We must be aware of the crisis facing all students through Nixon’s budget requests. All students, middle and low-income, will feel the measure if Nixon’s requests are met. We must urge Congress to stop the President in these budget measures and redirect education as a priority item in this country.

Opportunities for an education are continually being suppressed. We have no obligation to ourselves and succeeding students to insure the right and accessibility to our education.

CAR FIGHTS RACIST IDEAS

Apathy: Who’s To Blame?

Joyce Maynard, an “apathetic nigger,” theories, to new book, “Looking Back,” (Douglas & Co., 1972), that the one thing she is most impatient with in her (our) generation is its “I don’t give a damn-ism.” The sociologists tell us how we have become so alienated by such things as capitalism and Watergate, I tend to believe in or care deeply about, whatever.

At least part of the reason why students don’t care deeply has a lot to do with educational purposelessness and the wave of “relativism” that continues to sweep through the social sciences. The fact is that a contemporary liberal arts education offers the student very little, if anything, with which to believe. Most students can tell that the answers are deeper, yet at the same time closer to home.

The fact is that a contemporary liberal arts education offers the student very little, if anything, with which to believe.

EPISTEMOLOGICAL thinking on campus is in a shambles. It has become essentially self-consciously ours for us to express allegiance to our country. We can’t even be sure that the sun will rise tomorrow. Ms. Maynard told us that we don’t know and can never know what truth is, that it lies somewhere in between all extremes; somewhere between left and right, up and down, freedom and total control. Good and evil, right and wrong. Pragmatism and compromise are the order of the day. Controversy is to be avoided.

With the colleges putting such a premium, as they do, on mediocrity and conformity it is really such a wonder that students are bored.

For years now the epithet “chauvinist pig” has been sung at men; usually it is accompanied with a great deal of venom and vehemence. And I cannot resist the temptation, inspite of my uneasiness with “women’s liberation” theories, to new book, “Looking Back,” (Douglas & Co., 1972), that the one thing she is most impatient with in her (our) generation is its “I don’t give a damn-ism.” The sociologists tell us how we have become so alienated by such things as capitalism and Watergate, I tend to believe in or care deeply about, whatever.

At least part of the reason why students don’t care deeply has a lot to do with educational purposelessness and the wave of “relativism” that continues to sweep through the social sciences. The fact is that a contemporary liberal arts education offers the student very little, if anything, with which to believe. Most students can tell that the answers are deeper, yet at the same time closer to home.

EPISTEMOLOGICAL thinking on campus is in a shambles. It has become essentially self-consciously ours for us to express allegiance to our country. We can’t even be sure that the sun will rise tomorrow. Ms. Maynard told us that we don’t know and can never know what truth is, that it lies somewhere in between all extremes; somewhere between left and right, up and down, freedom and total control. Good and evil, right and wrong. Pragmatism and compromise are the order of the day. Controversy is to be avoided.

With the colleges putting such a premium, as they do, on mediocrity and conformity it is really such a wonder that students are bored.

Vis-Ed Material Demonstrated

By Stephanie Valyo

Al Kochka, NJ State Humanities director, presented a visual arts light show and demonstration to students in the Fine Arts auditorium on Feb. 28, at 1 pm. Using a combination of "found" and recycled materials, Kochka demonstrated the importance of audio-visual techniques as a basis for educating the children of today.

"Kids need successful learning experiences," Kochka stressed as he voiced his concern with updating present educational processes. Through the use of instamatic camera slides, overhead projectors, music, and a variety of improvised materials, students who normally do not succeed in academic areas can be taught that learning is challenging and fun.

"DON'T DAMN kids who are not achievers in academic subjects."

Kochka admonished the future art teachers who composed his audience. He went on to say that, by using more visual and verbal means in education without the printed word, teachers can reach even non-productive students.

One of the highlights of Kochka's presentation was a series of slides showing reproductions of the works of Vincent Van Gogh, accompanied by Don McLam's popular ballad, "Vincent." The slides were superimposed against a multicolored, moving background, and represented various lines from the song. Using an overhead projector, a color wheel, and 25 cent slides, Kochka turned a simple, creative idea into an impressive light show.

WHEN QUESTIONED about the future of art education, Kochka found it hard to be optimistic. He admitted that art is the first thing to be cut from school programs. However, Kochka stated, by the use of art in the field of teaching methods, it could become the motivational force behind all other educational activities.

Kochka went on to demonstrate the use of audio-visual aids in the teaching of color theory, interpretation of form, and basic filming techniques. He also showed the importance of using the same stimulus to dramatize subjects other than art, also stressing the use of all types of music to add an auditory dimension to visual techniques.

The Newark Boys Chorus will present a concert on Wed., March 27 at 8 pm in McEachern Recital Hall. Mezzo-soprano Annajean Brown, head of the voice section at Kean College music department, and tenor Ralph McFarlane, also of Kean College, will assist. The recital is free and open to the public. Burton will play works by Bach, Weber, Liszt, Paganini, and will be joined by the vocalists in Britten's "Canticle II - Abraham and Isaac." A graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music, Julliard Graduate School of Music and Boston University, Burton made her debut in New York City's Town Hall as a winner of the Naumburg Foundation Prize. She has appeared extensively in solo recitals and as guest artist with numerous orchestras in New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts and Ohio.

Brown, an alumni of Drake University, the American Conservatory of Music and the Vienna Music Academy, has appeared in operas and recitals in Austria and Germany, as well as in the United States with the Matinee Opera and the Chautauqua Opera. Brown has performed the title role in the original cast touring production of Menotti's "The Medium." McFarlane holds a BA and an MA in voice from Oberlin Conservatory and the Chicago Musical College. He has sung lead roles in both operas and operettas in Basel, Switzerland and Vienna, Austria, including the Evangelist in Bach's "St. John Passion."

GOALLINE BENEFIT

A benefit concert entitled "Toward the Goalline" will be held at Immaculata Conception High School, North Fullerton Ave., Montclair, on Sat., March 9 at 8:45 pm. The show will feature the original songs and artistry of guitarist John Dull of Rutherford, assistant football coach at Immaculata. The Diamond Jim Brady Band, led by MCG grad Jim Brady, will back up Dull's folk-rock renditions and also provide some original country songs. All proceeds will go to the Immaculate baseball team for a Florida trip this spring. There is no charge but donations will be accepted. Dull graduated from Duke University in 1973, and presently teaches physical education at St. Joseph's School, West New York.

EXHIBIT BEAT

Miss Altamura, senior fine arts major, will be showing her collection of Gothic rubbings in an exhibition in Gallery One in Life Hall, beginning Tues., March 12. The exhibit runs through Fri., March 29 on weekdays from 9 am to 5 pm. "Rubbings" are sketched imprints of engravings, which Altamura traced from Gothic churches during her European study in England last summer on an SGA scholarship. The engravings date from the 13th century, and provide records of costumes, customs and genealogies. Engravings were largely created for family tombs and commemoration of the dead, and the rubbings will be mounted on coffee-like boxes to recreate a certain sense of authenticity. In addition, background medieval church music will complement the exhibit.

Although Altamura confessed a certain kind of "spookiness" comes from exploring ruins, she has expressed an interest in making this area her specialty in her studies.

Innovative Oedipus Rex'

By R. McCullough

In the year 429 B.C., the Siamese of Greece were at war with the Thebans. The king of Thebes, Oedipus, was determined to end the war. He consulted the Oracle at Delphi, who told him that the warrior who would slay the Sphinx would be his son. Oedipus sent his son, Eteocles, to slay the Sphinx. Eteocles was captured and killed by the Sphinx. Oedipus was arrested and taken to the city of Thebes. The people of Thebes believed that Oedipus was a traitor and that he had brought disaster to the city.

But in truth, Oedipus had married his mother, Jocasta, and killed his father, Laius. He had no idea of this, for he had been told by the Oracle that he would kill his father and marry his mother.

Oedipus was found guilty of the crimes he had committed, and was condemned to death. But he refused to accept his fate, and fought against the gods. He was finally led to the edge of the city, and there he was murdered by the gods.

The story of Oedipus is a tragedy, and is told in the play 'Oedipus Rex' by Sophocles. The play was first performed in 429 B.C., in Athens. It is one of the greatest works of ancient Greek literature.
Squaws Capture State Championship

By Renee Rovelli

Only the strong survive. That proverb proved to be the case as the Montclair State women's basketball team defeated a weak Glassboro team in order to win its third team defeated a weak Glassboro in four years.

The 61-53 victory was the product of what Coach Cathy Paskert called "pressing defense and definite height advantage" emphasized by the rebounding of JoEllen Bistromowitz and exceptional ball handling of Anne Fuller.

THE SQUAWS had from early on in the first quarter when they broke a 0-3 deadlock with six straight points. Randi Burdick, impressing the large crowd at Seton Hall with her quickness, stole the ball and returned for a layup. Bistromowitz coasted in for a layup and Fuller netted a jumper to clear the path for a MSC victory.

It was smooth sailing from there on as Mary Jean Hayek and Bistromowitz chipped in baskets and foul shots, along with Burdick's jumper at the buzzer to give MSC a 19-8 first quarter lead.

The momentum continued into the second quarter as bad passing by GSC added to their decline. Joann La Vorgna, with a spurt of power, fired in three jumpers and Anna Melnyk added two baskets which were the results of well-executed plays. Mary Jean Hayek's shot with 12 seconds left in the first half handed the Squaws a 34-21 edge.

THE ACTION in the third quarter was provided by Fuller, who connected for four baskets and two free throws. Melnyk and Bistromowitz continued to tire the Profs with their speed and rebounding as the Squaws stretched it to a 50-36 lead.

GSC, vainly trying to muster some power, shortened MSC's lead to nine points. But the Squaws never looked back and with baskets by Roberta Vasko, Fuller, and Burdick, regained a 56-41 edge. Glassboro State, still refusing to give in, began to connect and shortened the lead to 58-51. Nevertheless, the Squaws prove their mettle and two free throws and 12 seconds remaining in the game, captain Hayek netted her foul shot to give the Squaws their much deserved title.

Paskert said, "I was confident that the girls would win and have little trouble doing so." This was evident as the Squaws had four players in double figures: Burdick, Fuller, and Bistromowitz each had 12 with La Vorgna scoring 10 points.

The Squaws will be entering the Shore Division Tournaments beginning Wednesday, March 6. They take on Tuleen at Rutgers University, New Brunswick. Immaculata, the no. 1 team in the country is entered in the same bracket.

Baseball Team Tries To Break Blue Devil's Hex

Last semester a group of Montclair State students challenged the Jersey Blue Devils to a basketball game on the Devil's own terms: in wheelchairchairs. The students made more traffic jams than baskets and lost 53-46.

Now, as if they hadn't learned anything, another contingent of students, this time the MSC baseball team, will meet the Devils for the second time. The rematch is set for the Devils on the Devil's own terms; in wheelchairchairs that play several exhibitions against college teams and other wheelchairchairs.

The proceeds of the match will be divided up between the Devils and the baseball team's funds for their trip to Florida.

"To cry over the officiating would be like crying over spilled milk. But the call against Steve Strellner and a few other questionable decisions were the worst I have ever seen in all my wrestling career. We were beaten by bad luck, not bad wrestling."

That's how Coach Larry Sciacchetano summed up the way his MSC squad was treated in the National Wrestling Championships held at Wilkes College this past weekend.

The call which Sciacchetano was most concerned with came in the semi-final contest between Strelliner (177) and Brookport State's Frank Calabria, the eventual champ. Strelliner went into the third and final period losing 2-1. Then with about 30 seconds remaining he put his man on his back for two apparent near fall points but the referees did not see eye to eye on this decision.

The mat chairman (who was not looking at the tape) did not award Strellner the points and what seemed to be a 3-2 victory was suddenly a 2-1 loss. Strelliner had to settle for fourth place instead of a shot at the first position.

There were other questionable calls against Craig Spencer and Oscar Zavala which turned the entire match around. "The Strellner call was the one that cost us second place. Wilkes had it wrapped up before then but we lost all chances with those decisions. I have never witnessed a day where everything just went wrong," Sciacchetano added.

The weekend had started off in grand fashion as the Indians pushed their way through the opposition to rack up 47 points and take the early lead. But then came the semi-final round on Saturday when all of MSC's hopes went right down the drain.

But through all the turmoil, things were not a complete loss for the Indian grapplers. Nabil Guketlov was a victorious 126 pounder after an exciting 6-2 decision over Allan Evangelista of John Carroll University (Ohio). Besides Strelliner's fourth place finish, Spencer (134) and John Reid (190) took fifth while Mike Frick (Lehigh) in an attempt to come back with 47 points and take the early lead. Women's fencing may not be a big sport which is followed as closely as wrestling or basketball team, but with their undefeated season, they're making a name for themselves.

"Did I expect to be doing this well? Yes! With the returning varsity letterman, we have a very experienced team," said women's fencing coach, Domenica Desiderioscoli, after the Squaw's racked up their seventh straight victory with no defeats, 13-3, over Lehman College.

NANCY MURRAY is consistently dominating play, as in past meets, while the fencers continue to perform as smooth as newly oiled machinery.

This past weekend, MSC was involved on a quadrangular tournament held at William Paterson College, in which they accumulated three easy wins. The Squaw's defeated host Paterson, 10-6, while out classing Fairleigh Dickenson University of Teaneck, 11-5 and shooting down Buffalo (NY) State, 12-4.

MARY LOU Caffarra led the Squaw's with a combined 10-1 record, losing only in the Buffalo State match, while teammate Nancy Murray registered nine wins while dropping one.

What in Upper Montclair, New Jersey, could possibly entice such big universities as Texas, Penn State, LSU, Washington and Arizona, to come to little Montclair State College? None other than the National Weightlifting Championship, which is to be held in Panzer Gym this weekend.

After placing fourth as a team in last year’s championships, held at York College (York, Pa.), the MSC lifters, including an olympic athlete and numerous national record holders, “decided that we would win the national championship next year!”

MONTH THAT the championship is right around the corner, the tension, the arguing and the bickering have all reached a peak, as the lifters workouts have become dead serious business.

Their three weekly workouts have been increased to six a week, as the athletes now work to perfect their speed, flexibility and lifting technique.

Bergy Hennis, MSC weightlifting advisor and National Collegiate Weightlifting Chairman, described the pre-requisites for a championship weightlifter as being “the strength of a bull, the flexibility of a ballet dancer and the quickness of a cat.”

One of the MSC participants, standing nearby, interjected that “explodiveness, speed of limb movement and mental discipline” were also essential.

IN WEIGHTLIFTING, there are nine weight classes and MSC will have their 12 lifters participating in all save two (114 lb. and 123 lb.). All the preparations for the weekend competition were done by the Physical Education Major Club.

Aside from setting up the chairs, platforms and other various equipment, which is to be put in the warm-up room, 50 lifters preparing for their events may see the competition taking place in the main gym.

Not only will there be weightlifting but also the Collegiate Mr. America physique contest. The contest winner will be the one with the best muscle size, symmetry and definition, as well as the one who interviews the best.

MSC WILL have one representative, George Wetzel, entered in the Mr. America contest.

“We want a National Championship and after 12 months of hard work, we’re ready,” Hennis exclaimed.

Can drugs increase one’s strength? How valuable are carbohydrates and protein supplemented diets, when one is trying to increase his strength?

These and other questions pertaining to strength training, will be analyzed during the First National Strength Research Symposium to be held this Fri., March 8 under the direction of Dr. Leon Smith, of the MSC Physical Education Department.

The discussions will start at 8:45 am and continue throughout the day.

THE PROGRAM has drawn both local and nationwide interest. Brendan Byrne, New Jersey governor, has sent a letter of welcome and support to the participants and organizers of the event, while the Houston Oilers, Washington Redskins, Buffalo Bills and San Francisco 49’ers will send representatives. The United States Military Academy at West Point and the Army Strength Research Team will also be represented.

“IT occurred to me that since MSC was hosting the weightlifting championships, a strength symposium would be well attended if held just prior to the contest,” Smith explained. “Weightlifting has proven to be one means of increasing athletic skills through joint and limb strengthening and injury prevention,” he continued.

“Recently there has been an intensified interest by females in the area of strength,” explained Smith. “For example, Gall Fitzgerald, an MSC student and a recent record breaking member of the U.S.A. relay team, was enrolled in a weight training program and spoke highly of it as a pertinent training effort which aided her success.”

SMITH EXPLAINED that the aim of the symposium is to “translate recent theoretical findings into practial implications for teaching and coaching men and women on both the college and high school levels.”

He asserted that the same principles are applicable for both males and females, with men performing more stringent exercises.

“I’ve been working with the MSC weightlifters, teaching them various methods of strength training and I’m impressed by their enthusiasm in adopting the exercises and their improvement. Phil [Gripapalti] an MSC weightlifter, will be demonstrating different lifts while Cuban coach explains them,” Smith continued.

PROBLEMS RELATING to fatigue, drugs, diet, warm-up and practice schedules will be covered including the effects of amphetamines, caffeine and the new method of lactinexics.

Smith will be presenting his research on myostatic stretch reflex and its influence on increasing static strength.

Extremely happy that an audience of 200 or better will be attending the symposium, Smith feels it will be a worthwhile experience for all coaches, teachers and students who have invested in the registration fee and are going to attend.

Guarino To Give MSC A Big Lift In Tournament

By Tony Cafiero
"My goal is to participate in the Olympics. I am sacrificing a job and a social life to reach this goal. I have to totally dedicate myself or I'm never going to succeed."

The man is 21 year old Wayne Guarino. A mere 163 lbs carried on a 5’8” frame, Guarino has a tremendous burning desire to succeed and the kind of sheer determination that only the best of athletes possess.

GUARINO AND the rest of the Montclair State weightlifting team have set their sights for nothing less than a first place finish this weekend (March 9-10) when they take part in the 13th National Collegiate Weightlifting Championship to be held in Panzer Gym.

“Our chances of winning are very good,” Guarino confidently stated. "Penn State will be our toughest competition. They came in first place last year while we came in fourth.

Guarino’s career started at the age of 16 when he casually lifted "just to build myself up." Then came the 1972 Olympic Games which he viewed on television and Guarino decided that weightlifting was the sport for him. "The speed and strength involved impressed me," Guarino continued.

MANY PEOPLE might think that a weightlifter has to stick to a specific diet with special nutritional value to keep oneself in the utmost physical condition. Guarino puts it this way, "I eat everything and anything I’m Italian."

Backed by ravoli and lasagna, Guarino is able to work out three times a week for three hours at a time. When asked if he gets any special enjoyment from his sport, Guarino answered, "The most satisfying moment for me is when I surpass one of my previous lifts." His personal records are 305 pounds in the clean and jerk and 245 pounds in the snatch.

Guarino psychs himself up by constantly telling himself that his hard labor and many sacrifices are just stepping stones to his Olympic dream. Last month, Wayne took a small but important step to his réussed goal when he took first place (165 lb. division) in the Camden Moive Meet and was awarded the prestigious Best Lifter Trophy.

The Indians are hopefully and confidently looking forward to this weekend, a first trophy anxiously beckoning them to come and claim it. There will also be a determined young man representing MSC with great visions of his possible dream coming true.
