Advisor's Status Throws WMSC into Conflict

By Dia Palmieri

Harold Elrod, institutional planning director, remarked, "the earlier. Jerome Quinn, institutional vice-president for administration facilities.

"I am not trying to inhibit the activities of the students," he declared.

"Dickson feels that there is a need for someone to act as a liaison between the radio station and the administration because of the legal responsibility an fm radio license carries." Dickson explained that WMSC is not a student organization in the "typical sense." Much of the equipment needed to broadcast in an fm capacity was paid for with state funds. And the license itself is held by the college Board of Trustees. As a deputy of that board, Dickson feels himself to be obligated to protect the trustees in case of a "slipup" while the radio station is broadcasting.

Holding the license makes the Board of Trustees legally responsible for whatever is broadcast and also for radio operations which must obey FCC regulations.

According to the president, the professional advisor would act in a multifold capacity. He or she would assist the WMSC staff in technical matters, acting more or less as chief engineer, Dickson explained. The advisor would also be a spokesman for the administration along with offering professional and technical advice.

HECHT OPPOSES the induction of a professional advisor into the station's board of governors on the premise that it puts an "academic hold" on programming. He feels part of the conflict arises over the prospect of educational programming opposed to a basic popular music format.

"WMSC is more than a college station," explained Dickson, "it is now a "public broadcasting system" and it must have an educational purpose. The reputation of the college will be connected with the radio station."

A professional advisor would help the radio staff, for working rapport with the college administration, voiced Dickson.

"I hope that the students will not feel forced but will voluntarity seek professional expertise. I hope that the students will sense that the radio station is there not only for fun and games," concluded Dickson.

ACCORDING TO James Harris, assistant dean of students, the search for the professional advisor is almost at an end.

Candidates for the position, none of whom are from the college, are already being interviewed, stated Harris. The search committee, headed by Harris, has been looking for an advisor since June and is presently narrowing down the list of prospective candidates.

The search may be over by the end of the month, stated Hecht. Until the professional advisor is selected, the radio station will not go on the air with administrative approval.

In a related development to establish WMSC-fm broadcasting operations before the FCC deadline expires, a summer task force was formed with the approval of the SGA-sponsored fact-finding committee. The task force, comprised of three station members and three "ultraudents," worked throughout the summer under the guidance of Hecht.

Hecht feels that the six students "know a lot more now then they knew then."}

Parking's Still Snug

By Mary Cuomo

Although students again faced a critical shortage of parking space this year, Vincent Calabrese, vice-president for administration and finance, emphasized that there are no plans to increase parking facilities.

He expressed the view that by October the crisis will ease as students begin leaving campus earlier. Jerome Quinn, institutional planning director, remarked, "the problem always seems worse in the first few months of the semester."

Quinn explained that 125 additional spaces were paved in the quarry as well as a net increase of 50 spaces in the gravel lot along the road to the Little Falls exit of the campus. "Although more cars park in that area, we only gained 50 more spaces by laying down the gravel."

He stated that there are approximately 128 spaces in that lot.

He CONTINUED that although an area for 60 cars will be paved during the spring, that will yield no increase in spaces.

Although Calabrese estimated that there are 3700 spaces available, Quinn believes this figure to be closer to 4000. Undergraduate daytime enrollment is estimated at 7500.

According to a spokesman for the security office, ticketing will begin on Mon., Sept. 16. This includes both municipal and campus ticketing. James Lockhard, security chief, explained that all cars without decals will receive a municipal ticket. All illegally parked cars which display a decal will be given a $5 campus ticket.

Decals, which cost $10 for the entire school year, may be purchased at the business office in College Hall. However, campus students must see John Brauman, off-campus housing director, for an overnight decal.

THE TASK force worked together to coordinate programming and learn the technical side of broadcasting along with familiarizing themselves with FCC standards and regulations.

A major development was the formation of the "Third World Production Unit" by the three black members of the group. The unit will be concerned with developing third world, or minority, programming. One of the planned programs is an "African Perspective Series." The unit will be given half of the airtime.

If you want to eat, you have to pay. More. Last semester the cost of a burger, coke and fries was 95 cents. This semester you are paying $1.12 for that same meal.

Students' reactions to the price increase were mixed. The majority of the students feel the prices charged are too high. At Gino's the aforementioned meal is 93 cents.

The Student Center food service determines the prices for the cafeteria and has been raising 33% more for food and labor. The student body has been burdened with only a 10% increase over last semester's prices.

Student director said, "The rising cost of food effects everyone, and the cafeteria is no exception. He remarked that the cafeteria prices have been regulated to be fair to the student and to the student's budget. The students are complaining about the prices. However, we have been complaints about the price of food everywhere."
Homecoming '74: A Festive October

By Patricia Mercorelli

Octoberfest, including beer, a circus and a German Oompah Band, will transform the campus into a miniature Germany during Homecoming 1974 to be held on Oct. 18, 19 and 20, according to Rosanna Nativo, Homecoming chairwoman.

One of the major activities scheduled is a full-scale three-ring circus including international acts, wild animal acts, horse acts, dog acts, clowns, trapeze acts and, of course, elephants. Called the Circus International, it will be held in Panzer Gym on Saturday afternoon.

In keeping with the campus oriented theme, Nativo stated that float construction for the revitalized parade "will begin at 9 a.m., Friday and continue around the clock until 11 a.m., Saturday."

Shaky Start for SC Board

By Ann Karen McLean

The Student Center Policy Board is in "a state of limbo. Elections to the Board, held last spring, were invalidated on grounds of procedural and operational glitches.

As a result, Betty Anne O'Keefe, then-chairwoman of the Board, appointed a surrogate Board, comprised of the 27 candidates whose names appeared on the ballot, to advise on Center policy over the summer. According to Bill Gibson, co-chairman of the surrogate Board, decisions of policy made over the summer were actually made by the administration, with little or no consultation with Board members. Gibson noted that by-pass of the Board's authority was a frequent occurrence; members dealt with problems as best they could, but were virtually "overwhelmed by the lack of cooperation" from the administration.

"The MAIN problem facing the Board now in dealing with problems of the Center, is the fact that it is a short-term Board. No member currently on the Board has a guarantee that he will be on the Board after the election, which is slated to be held in late September." One issue that faces the Board at the present time is the fate of the formal dining room, which underwent a transformation from an a la carte to a buffet facility. The transformation, made over the summer and under the direction of the administration, was executed without the knowledge of the Board.

Gibson stated that the largest impediment to the Board's effectiveness is the "lack of cooperation and communication between the college administration and the Policy Board. Unless this obstacle is overcome," said Gibson, "I can see no way that the Board can continue to operate as a viable advisory council." Gibson added that the Board's only recourse is to deal exclusively with problems of an immediate nature, and to merely lay the foundation for solving long-term problems.

Students Reconstruct Indian Lifestyle

Commission to Probe Tuition

In state colleges, tuition averages $550. But, Roessner said, tuition is one of the key areas which the panel wants to examine.

Edward E. Booher, president of the McGraw-Hill Book Division, will serve as chairman of the state Board of Higher Education.

OTHER MEMBERS of the committee are: Anthony J. Bartolotta, vice president of Victory Optical, Newark; Albert Burstein, an attorney and chairman of the NJ Assembly Education Committee; Dr. Lester Chandler, retired from Princeton University; and Sara Douglas, former student government chairperson of Douglass College.

While house construction is not usually an accredited course, the situation changes when the house is a Lenni Lenape family shelter which dates back 1000 years and when the new extinct Indian tribe populated the Delaware River Valley.

The structure was built by six MSC students and their instructor Harrison Goodall, on the grounds of the field camp in Stokes State Forest at the New Jersey School of Conservation. The project was a three credit independent study course offered by the department of industrial education and technology.

Goodall was assisted by Dr. Herbert Kraft, a professor of history at Seton Hall University, and an authority on the Lenni Lenape Indians, in researching the project. Goodall explained that disease and the encroachment of settlers caused the tribe to become extinct by the time of the American Revolution.

BUILDING THE shelter, a dome-like structure made of interlaced sapling and bark, proved difficult since 200 saplings and 40 dead trees were required. "We must have thumped every tree in this area," Goodall laughed, referring to the process in which trees are "thumped" to determine if the bark is dead before removing it from the tree.

In construction of the 15-foot by 25-foot shelter, the saplings were bent into a dome shape with the ends being driven approximately one foot into the ground, Goodall commented.

In order to strengthen the hut, the points at which the aspings crossed were joined by wire instead, by the inner bark of the bawood tree that the Indians would have used. "We won't be here every day, as the Indians were, to make repairs," the instructor pointed out.

Bark was laid over the saplings like shingles and another layer of saplings was placed over that, resulting in a very strong structure.

Dr. JOHN Kirk, director of the School of Conservation, noted that the shelter, the only replica of its kind in existence, will serve as a classroom for courses on the Delaware Indian tribes.

After three weeks of work, the group celebrated their accomplishment with a traditional Indian feast. Foods such as squash, corn and turkey were cooked Lenape-style on hot rocks. Following the feast, the group spent the night in the shelter.

Last year, Goodall and another group of students reconstructed a 160-year old carriage house not far from where the Lenni Lenape shelter now stands. The project slated for next year is the construction of an authentic pioneer log cabin at the field center.

Commission to Probe Tuition

TRENTON - A major commission charged with examining some of the key problems confronting New Jersey's colleges and universities was created last week by the state Board of Higher Education.

A tentative outline calls for an examination of student financial aid programs, the quality of existing courses, the ability of colleges to adjust to changing examination of student financial aid programs, the quality of existing courses, the ability of colleges to adjust to changing needs and the maintenance of existing institutions of higher education.

The committee, to have 14 members from the business, education and political communities of New Jersey, began work at an organizational meeting on Tuesday at Rutgers University in New Brunswick.

GILBERT G. ROESSNER, chairman of the higher education board, said that the state board wants the panel to issue its findings by early next year so that any recommendations requiring legislative action might be considered by the next session of the state legislature.

The creation of the committee - formally called the Commission of Financing Post-Secondary Education - comes at a time of increasing declines in student enrollment and severe inflation caused budget deficits. The problems have forced three NJ colleges to close - Alphonseus, Englewood Cliffs and Tombruck - and forced another - Bloomfield - into bankruptcy.

Several prominent educational organizations have made studies over the last three years examining the financial plight of colleges and universities. "We believe each of these groups has made a contribution to our understanding of the nature and complexity of the problem," said Roessner, "but...none of the groups had direct responsibility for taking action to effect changes."

THE KEY panels included the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education and the Committee on Economic Development, both of which called for increases in tuition at public colleges to bring them up to the level of more expensive private institutions.

Another organization, the National Commission on Financing Post-Secondary Education in the United States, was appointed by former President Richard Nixon and made its report last December, offering a variety of plans for college finance.

Roessner noted that tuition at New Jersey public four-year colleges, once one of the highest in the country, is now about average. Students in private colleges pay about $2500 a year.
The more things change the more they remain the same.

While summer baked the campus with sun, while students worked and vacationed, changes were taking place at MSC.

The mall in the center of campus progressed, but not quite enough to be finished for the beginning of the semester. So we go back to the chaotic state of perpetual construction.

The more things change the more they remain the same.

The bookstore was rumored to be working on a new system for getting student's books quicker during the first rush for texts. But this was somehow nixed. Instead, the interior of the store was revamped to give students worked and vacationed, changes were taking place at MSC.

The traffic on campus was re-routed (at last) into a one-way system. But students were not notified of the changes until they arrived on campus and tried to get around, even though copies of the campus map with traffic flow arrows were sent to campus locations and posted on bulletin boards. We knew that the bookstore had changed to The Center Shop, but were ignorant of a vital change such as a traffic flow.

This ignorance, coupled with the normal heavy traffic load during the first week of school and the fact that once again more freshman were admitted than can be reasonably comfortably handled, brought us back to the lines of cars snaking through the campus roads, all at a standstill, waiting to escape or get in.

The more things change the more they remain the same.

Registration procedures are constantly being modified and streamlined. But students who come to register are still greeted by long lines, a chaotic gym full of confusing departments (especially for freshmen) and those immortal words: "That course is closed."

The more things change the more they remain the same.

It's time MSC stopped being so satisfied with mediocrity, so content with little advances, so eager to say, "well, that's the way it is." We should be more open to other systems, to new ideas. But first that involves admitting it can be done better than it is being done. If everyone, students included, continues to accept long lines and long waits, without searching for alternatives, we will never really get this college off the hill.

Realistically assessing our space limitations and admitting a number of students compatible with that space would be the first step. Instead of cramping the campus to the rafters, squeezing classes in dormitories and providing inconveniences to all in general, cut down the enrollment and give us all a little space to breathe.

The matter of a few less people to contend with, rather than a few more, will ease a lot of these situations. Perhaps this would not remain the same. Perhaps they would get better.

There's just got to be a better way. But people have to look for it in order to find it.

Is One-Way Wrong Way?

By Michael Hatem

Will the one-way traffic help MSC students get books quicker? Not unless the problems are solved.

Evaders Must Earn Amnesty

To the Editor:

US President Gerald R. Ford's decision on Sept. 8, granting Richard M Nixon full pardon for his wrongful actions as President, has simplified the demand by many that a likewise unconditional amnesty be granted to those who evaded military service. My reaction to this demand is a negative one.

Mr. Nixon incriminated himself by attempting to cover up his wrongful actions as President, and his actions were wrong, and his mendacity concerning them even worse.

However, it must also be remembered that Mr. Nixon served our country for over five and a half years by occupying the most difficult and demanding job in the US, the Presidency. During his tenure several substantial gains were made in the area of foreign policy in a world where tension between countries is high, and the threat of nuclear annihilation stags.

Despite his mistakes, for which he suffers great compensation, Mr. Nixon did contribute to the advancement of peace, and for this, we should be thankful.

It is with this in mind that I pose the following question to those favoring unconditional amnesty: What contributions were made to this country by those men who chose to desert it in time of war, that should entitle them to unconditional forgiveness?

It is my belief that if those men who evaded military service wish to receive a pardon, let them first be required to contribute some social service to this country. This contribution will then put them on the level of Mr. Nixon and this entitles them to a pardon.

More importantly, however, it will at least serve as an act of respect for those men who gave their lives in the service of their country.

Problems Would Rather Increase than Decrease

Each year MSC students return to the same set of problems that existed in the previous semesters.

This fall, as in the preceding years, lines for parking and the Center Shop (Bookstore) are once again problems students are forced to deal with. This fall we have also encountered a new inconvenience on the campus: classes being conducted in both Chapin and Freeman Halls.

CONTINUOUS

It bothers me personally that problems here seem to increase rather than diminish. Every time we return to the campus we see the same problems and inconveniences we had in the past and we receive the same explanations as always.

As in previous years, the parking problem is due to commuters arriving here at the same time, and staying on campus for the entire day. Each fall, MSC is overcrowded; each fall, we receive more freshman and transfer acceptances than anticipated; and each fall, our problems increase rather than lessen.

As students we are tired of the same excuses for the familiar inconveniences. We realize that the college continue to procrastinate over those problems? SOLVE IT! I hope that both students and the administration can always work in a cooperative effort for our benefit. I believe that this college is here for us, the students. Without us, there would be no need for administration, faculty or buildings.

In our constant struggle for a better community, we sometimes forget the purpose of this institution. I feel that if we keep in our minds and in our actions the goals and objectives of MSC, the problems will be less and hopefully our academic community will progress and flourish.

Separated by Guilt

This column will attempt to deal with various topics and issues from a Christian viewpoint, and perhaps a bit differently than you'd expect.

We would like to start out by explaining just where we're coming from. Our presuppositions are basically these:

We accept the possibility of divine intervention in the world. In fact, the planet was once invaded by God himself in the form of a man, Jesus the Messiah. Jesus claimed that real moral guilt separated every single person from God, Who still loved all of us. Jesus died, having claimed that His death somehow took care of all that guilt.

This opened up the possibility of a new relationship with God as Father. For anyone to take advantage of this, he would have to submit his life to Jesus as Lord. Jesus Himself is still alive, having come back to life a few days after his execution. Coming to us, as it were, from the other side, Jesus could finally give us the answers to life. In fact, we think it's pretty difficult to give a good reason for the way reality stands if we don't use His answers.

Why accept this as more than another religious myth? The thing that sets Jesus apart from Buddha, Osiris, or Lao-Tzu is reliable historical documentation. The firsthand testimony and outside corroboration are too good to dismiss and dismiss as legend. The radically different world view and liberating lifestyle offered by Jesus puts things into a new perspective—what we're calling "resurrection perspective."

Prison Doesn't Quell Artist's Spirit

By Mike Finnegan

Being behind bars quells the spirits of many men—but not all men.

A proof of this assertion is the exhibit of artwork in the front foyer of Sprague Library created by Samuel N. Reese. REESE ALSO bears another identity, that of inmate no. 69852, living in block 39, cell 740 at the Missouri Training Center for Men in Moberly, Mo. In the identity apparent at the library exhibition, Reese has conjured up such varying black-print impressions as dreamy landscapes and shadowy prison scenes. Prisoner Reese has been incarcerated for 22 years as a convicted murderer serving a life sentence (commuted from death) as well as concurrent sentences for robbery and for escaping prison once. He has been in prison since the age of 17.

The 25 pieces adorning the solid white library wall offer a paradox to the average expected effects of prison experiences: the black-print pictures, rather than reeking with the bitter resentment of confinement, depict peaceful landscapes, detailed portraits of interesting individuals, thoughtful abstracts and pastoral reflections of Reese's home in Prairie Home, Mo. which he shared with his foster parents, as well as stylized impressions of prison life.

REESE'S PERSONAL comments accompany the pictures, and these remarks reveal what he terms his "bittersweet dreams behind bars" as he describes how he came to create a particular work. His commentary embraces his "religious idealism" in examining his motivations behind his inspirational works full of sacred symbols, as well as his humble admission of erotic initiation accompanying his forays into erotic scene.

One picture is a caricature-like satire of a prison scene, counterpointed by telling portraits reflecting the loneliness of confinement. Another scene is dedicated to Jada Wade, an inmate as a carsonite and staff artist in the California Institute for Women in Fannortto, Calif. Reese once said in a newspaper interview, "I love Jada, and feel close to her because she's in a similar situation as I am. She's a big thing in my life."

According to Harry Rosenzweig, director of cultural programming, Reese first wrote the college earlier this year to offer his exhibit to be shown on campus. A continuing correspondence led to the importation of the show, which also includes copies of the letters written between Reese and Rosenzweig. The exhibit was set up in July and will remain in the library lobby through mid-October.

ALTHOUGH HE has neither met nor talked with Reese, Rosenzweig confessed that it seemed like they're "old friends" since they kept up a consistent correspondence. As a token of his gratitude, Reese sent Rosenzweig a copy of his work "Daybreak" for his office. Reese does not enter into his personal background in the letters but Rosenzweig feels that one can perceive the genuine sensitivity of the artist in the humble and reserved tone of the letters. Rosenzweig said that Reese supplies his own materials through the proceeds of the sale of his artwork, and there is a price list accompanying the block-print show for the interest of perspective buyers.

Reese has also engaged in painting and his works have been exhibited at college campuses and galleries. His exhibits include 14 awards in art competitions and an illustrated book "The Iowa Parole System."

Why would a female high school graduate want to come to Montclair State as opposed to Trenton State or Glassboro State, to be the strongest faculty, we are William P. The Montclair Athletic Commission (MAC) budget for the 1974-75 school year again into the proverbial wall when the SGA put the bill promoting the MAC budget's committee at its first meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The bill, proposed by SGA chairman Mike Masina, was scrutinized by the SGA appropriations committee at the end of last semester and had passed to the floor of the legislature, but action was delayed when questions on some of the items formed.

THE BILL once again came to the floor and was pushed to the end of the day's agenda Tuesday by vice president Manny Menendez. A motion to table the bill until an appropriations committee was formed was withdrawn by its author, Fred Jenny, history rep, when Ken Malmud proclaimed that it was "unfair" to MAC who had submitted their budget on time.

Malmud, newly appointed vice chairman for academic affairs and chairman of the MAC board, feared that the budget wouldn't be acted upon until later in the semester. He stressed that running a program the size of the athletic department's requires planning and that a budget is necessary for contracting.

Maggie Casapunno, former SGA secretary and current legislator, remarked that the new representatives would not have had a chance to study what they were voting on and that the extra time would help them to be more informed.

THE LEGISLATURE, which still has 35 seats to fill in their fall election, was ruled by Menendez to be a valid legislature to act on the bill because all seats with candidates in the spring election were filled.

Following the passage of the bill putting the MAC budget into the appropriations committee, the committee was quickly formed with SGA treasurer Peter Lijoi serving as chairman.

Menendez stated that he was optimistic that the bill would be handled promptly, "probably next week."

MAC Budget Gets Nowhere
Guess Who's Coming To Coach Us

By Tony Cafiero

What happens after a year when your secondary had a habit of being picked apart by top-flight opposing quarterbacks? In the case of Montclair State, you go out and get someone like Ken Graham to help defend against the passing game.

If you think the name sounds familiar, it's the same Ken Graham that made his football fortune with the San Diego Chargers, but unfortunately he won't be out on the field in an MJC uniform. After being turned down for a similar position at Rutgers University, the former all-pro accepted the task of coaching the defensive secondary here.

GRAHAM REPLACES Tom Testa as the defensive backfield coach. Testa returned to his alma-mater, Belleville High School, to headman its football program.

Graham wasn't overly concerned with getting the n-go from Rutgers. His philosophy on the matter was pretty simple. "Their loss is someone else's gain," ribbed the talented and personable addition. And with the seasoned defensive expert guiding an already experienced secondary, not many other schools will be gaining anything, at least not through the air.

GRAHAM JUST works with enthusiasm when he labels his secondary as being "good, young ballplayers.

Although most of last years secondary is back, Graham has no seniors to work with and will coach the same boys for two to four more years. His cornerbacks are Johnny Christodore (6'-1, 180) and Barry Giblin (6'-1, 210). Safeties will include Daryl Collins (5'-11, 168) and Mark Hansen (5'-10, 175).

Horn Blows Trumpet on Coaches

Dr. George Horn didn't pull punches. He's a coaching purist, and his philosophy is explained by the card on his bulletin board. It reads: "Illegitus Non Est Actus.

"I'd say 80% of all college and high school coaches in this country are worthless; the MSC track coaches assessed. "They lose their humanity when they stop looking at their players as human beings and think only of winning."

NCAA SUSPENSIONS of Long Beach State University, Southern Methodist University and Oklahoma University have brought to the fore what seems to be the prevailing attitude of many college coaches across the country: to win at all costs.

As he leaned back in his green leather office chair and pushed aside papers that cluttered his desk, Horn emphasized that "all the big schools are bidding for the superstars regardless of their academics. They make all sorts of offers simply to get the official NCAA scholarship regulations.

"Other schools know that these athletes, especially sub-par, but they won't blow the whistle on each other, thinking that next year they might be the super jock. It's not fair that someone who can run a 9.6 in high school yet can't spell his name should get a scholarship, while the true scholar can't.

HORN RELATED an example of another reason why colleges don't report violations by other schools. It seems that a certain coach from a large eastern university wanted a particular athlete to attend his school but his high school rank was too low.

They decided to use the number of students in his high school freshman class, placing all those who dropped out (about half the class) below him. After all this was done he became eligible but decided to attend a different college. The original coach couldn't report the violation without incriminating himself.

"I SAW Bear Bryant, the Alabama football coach on TV the other day and he blamed recruiting violations on the kids and their parents. What's a kid who is lucky to get two pairs of shoes a year going to do? He's mined and dined and offered cash, money and girls to go to a certain school. How does he cope? The really sad part is that the American public respects men like Bryant but they're really a cancerous star."

This is football: New coach Kenny Graham seems to be saying to his group of hopeful secondary members during a recent practice. He comes here following a six-year stint in the NFL with the San Diego Chargers, Cincinnati Bengals and the Pittsburgh Steelers. Graham, a five-year all-pro cornerback with the Chargers, takes over for Tom Testa who returned to Belleville High School to become their new head coach.

Booters Have No Power Shortage

By Lonny Cohen

Probably, the closest parallel to this season's Montclair State soccer team would be that of a new car with an old die-hard battery under the hood.

Horn mentioned a speech given by Digger Phelps, Notre Dame football coach, concerning the use of freshman on the varsity level of competition. He said he was morally opposed to it but he added that by adding him to use them in order to have a successful program.

Horn, who did his undergraduate work at Albright College in Pennsylvania and received his M.A. and Ph. D. at New York University stated, "Most coaches are hypocrites but it's not entirely their fault. They enter with high ideals but pressure from the school and alumni corrupt them and that's when they stop looking at their athletes as human beings and only at how they can help them win. A few times I've gotten fed up and was about to quit but I know that's what a lot of people want. I'm like a small voice in the forest but sometimes small voices can grow.

In case your wondering what that little card with the Latin words on Horn's bulletin board meant, roughly translated; Don't Let the Bastards Wear You Down.

Graham wasn't overly concerned with getting the n-go from Rutgers. His philosophy on the matter was pretty simple. "IT WAS very satisfying," grinned Graham. "He was a rookie and making so much money."

The body of the machine will consist of several newcomers, led by freshman goalie Tony Vechione and freshman halfback Tim McDonough. Vechioni, out of Bloomfield High School, survived until the final cut of the Olympic trials, while McDonough made two all-state teams while performing for Hamilton High School.

THE BATTERY will contain five sparkplugs from last year's steady squad. High-powered threats Dick Moore and Bob Mykoluk, along with speedy yet Manny Manendez and ex-Howell Township star Bill Gartner will carry the machine's scoring, as Chuck Dozen anchors the defensive end from his goalie position.

Driving the machinery will be coach Bob Wolfarth, entering his third season as MSC mentor with an impressive 18-6-7 record. The brain-trust is completed by assistant coach Manfred Schaufeld, well known in the soccer world for his coaching in the National Soccer League.

The practices have been tough this year since Wolfarth has stressed the conditioning end of the game. "All we do is scrimmage and drill, but we are pretty much in shape," went the comments of letterman Bill Cecce.

"POSITIONS ARE as yet unsure," said Wolfarth. "We will experiment with the new players, but we are lucky in that most of our boys are offensive-type players. It's easier to change to defense than vice-versa."

Horn Blows Trumpet on Coaches

This year's schedule shows a lot of tough teams including nationally ranked Harvard College (at Brookdale Park Sept. 21), Adelphi University (17th in the nation last year) and LIU (Brookdale Park Dec. 6). The conference should follow last year's example when the top three teams finished within one point of each other.
Who Needs Two Stars

By John Clark

Last year’s NJSCAC conference race resembled the league in this year’s American League East. The scramble went right down to the wire, with the Indians finishing just one point behind the front-runners, the New York Stars of the World Football League, in a very competitive season.

The American League East was dominated by the Indians, who finished first in the NJSCAC last year, and are confident they can improve on that record. They do have 12 members of last year’s starting lineup returning (four on offense and eight on defense) it could be tough for us, he added.

This doesn’t mean that McKeown is discounting all hopes for this season. “We have to be very competitive with the rest of the league but me being a new head coach with a brand new coaching staff, which should hurt us at this moment.24

THE OFFENSIVE line is powerful, with tackles Rich Barbetta (6-2, 215) and Jim Beshaw, 6-5, 215, 236 bob Martin and Bill Sease, 6-1, 228 pounder, in the end positions.

Our entire season depends on how fast and how well we react in the secondary. The safety positions will be occupied by Daryl Collins (5-11, 168) and Mark Hansen (5-10, 175). The cornerbacks will be John Christadore (6-0, 162), and Anthony Hooper (6-1, 182) in the fullback slot. VanderMay, who started last year there is nothing much we can improve on that record. They finished first in the NJSCAC last year and have a good chance of repeating, MJC took third in the four-team Eastern Football Conference in 1973 and has a lot of potential.

And Southern Connecticut State. Kean College 29-17 in a close game.”

They’ll be strong,” said SanFilippo. "They come to play. I look for a big game. We have a better balanced backfield, anyway. We have more guys who can do more things. They can block, run and catch.”
