16-Story Problem: Threats, Calls...

By Lisa Burkhart

A female dorm resident at MSC has been harassed by threatening notes and obscene phone calls since Sept. 22. And the disturbances have disturbed her to the point where she says, "I'm afraid for my safety."

At least one other girl has received a similar letter which may be related and recently, Clove Rd. Apartment residents have become the targets of obscene phone calls.

Some additional security measures have been implemented and others have been suggested - but short of putting up "iron gates" the college administration says it can't do much more than it has.

Lawton W. Blanton, Dean of Students, and James Lockhart, Director of Campus Police, said that several actions have been taken to protect the threatened girl including analysis of the phone calls and handwriting samples. However, Blanton says the use of housing records for such purposes may be a violation of the residents' confidentiality.

Lockhart advocates "preventative measures" as the best method of handling the situation. "If I had my way I'd have damned near an iron gate put up," he exclaimed.

"We have some obscene phone calls every year," Blanton said, as he leaned back and threw his hands up in the air. "If people hang up their phones and just bear the situation out, it will soon pass. We catch some of the offenders but never before two years later."

One girl who experienced a series of threats on her life last year, said she regretted her treatment by school authorities more than anything else. She said they made her feel as if it were her own fault.

The girl still shows signs of distress when discussing the subject. "I think they (the administration) could have been more supportive to me as a victim. Students like me will lose confidence in authority. How can we trust those at high levels?" she asked.

Although Blanton refused to publicize all actions being taken on the grounds that it would alert the offender, he did say that the content of the calls has been analyzed and the letters were collected.

The campus police, however, claim they are limited in what they can really do, since "no direct act has happened and the force is not large enough to keep surveillance on the girl."

One step that has been taken which is of great concern to Blanton is comparing handwriting samples. However, Blanton says it can't do much more than it has.

"If people hang up their phones and just bear the situation out, it will soon pass. We catch some of the offenders but never before two years later." (Cont. on p. 7)

BELOW: Bohn Hall

By Ann Marie Gentile

Robberies in Bohn Hall have risen at an alarming rate this semester. During October at least 15 robberies have occurred and within one week alone eight were reported to college authorities. Other incidents have gone unreported.

Residents of the 16-story coed dorm are now planning a crime prevention project and are calling for better security measures within the dorm. Resident Assistants (RAs) and the Bohn Hall dorm director agree that security is often lax and must be improved. But according to a Campus Police Officer a more effective system "is nearly impossible."

The robberies have occurred throughout the dorm with about 90% involving girls' rooms. One female resident awoke to find a man inside her room. The intruder fled immediately and no description could be given.

"Articles such as money, a tape recorder, clothes and books have been reported missing. The largest single amount stolen at the Bohn Dorm was $75."

No one is sure how the robberies have taken place because according to Campus Police, it is impossible to open the locked door without a key but most of the rooms involved were locked according to the residents. The possibility exists that a master key or some other device may have been used to (Cont. on p. 7)

Candidates in Dead Heat Race Running Neck and Neck

By Barbara Ponsi

With the NJ gubernatorial races swiftly drawing to a close, the two major candidates seem to be approaching the finish line neck and neck.

The results of a campus poll conducted by the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA) indicate a dead heat between the number of students leaning towards NJ Governor Brendan Byrne, the Democratic candidate and State Senator Raymond Bateman, the Republican candidate.

Out of 159 students questioned by CINA representatives, 122 reportedly said they planned to vote this year; 49 (40%) expressed a preference for Byrne and 51 (42%) said they would vote for Bateman. Twenty (16%) were undecided and candidates from the Libertarian party and the Socialist party received one "vote" each.

The standard 3% margin of error in survey statistical results means that the differential between the number of Byrne and Bateman supporters holds no substantial significance.

The virtual tie between the candidates in this poll is a reflection of current State-wide trends. As they each begin to mount increasingly vigorous advertising campaigns, lashing out at their opponents with counter-advertising which disputes claims made about them in their opponent's TV spots, the public has not yet made a demonstrable preference in polls and questionnaires.

While a large number of respondents had definite preferences and opinions, only 22% considered themselves "well-informed." Thirty-one percent claimed to be "slightly uninformed" and 17% said they were "uninformed."

Most campus respondents justified their choices by citing the candidates' stand on the State income tax as the single most influential factor in their decisions. Twenty-two people voting for Byrne gave this reason, as did 26 of those voting for Bateman.

Other than the income tax, specific issues seemed to matter little to those students polled. A total of 46 respondents said they were led to a particular decision because they "discovered there is no other alternative choice you like." This figure was split into 22 Byrne supporters, 23 Byrne supporters and one Libertarian (16%).

Suspicious Fire

A fire—which has been labeled as "suspicious"—broke out in the basement of Seton Hall University's Walsh Gymnasium on Saturday night and forced an audience of 1,200 to evacuate a sold-out rock concert featuring Kenny Loggins and Dave Mason. Four people sustained minor injuries.

According to The Star-Ledger, the fire broke out in some large foam rubber gym mats stored in a basement corridor. Faulty electrical wiring has been ruled out as a cause. "Either it was somebody accidentally flipping a cigarette or it was set intentionally," South Orange Deputy Fire Chief Dante DeDomencico said.

The audience was evacuated halfway through a performance by the 55-member Colmicile Ladies Choir of Derry, Ireland, which remained on stage throughout the evacuation.

College President Robert T. Conley was present in the audience and helped evacuate the auditorium.

Going My Way

The Rev. Jack Conner, a Roman Catholic priest assigned by the Newark Archdiocese to Ramapo State College (RSC) can legally stay at Ramapo, according to a recent ruling by the Attorney General.

According to Paul Haveman, Editor-in-Chief of Ramapo's student newspaper, Horizons, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) as well as a college professor recently claimed that Conner was using Ramapo as a means to promote Catholicism.

Hot l Newark

Students at the New Jersey Institute of Technology (NJIT) in Newark have no housing facilities on-campus—and one facility recommended by the college as an off-campus accommodation was recently found to have rodents and not be up to par in other areas.

According to Harold Ewegan, Editor-in-Chief of NJIT's student newspaper, the Vector, Ray Boxer, Assistant Dean of Students, is "not keeping tabs on where he's sending people."

Accommodations recommended by Boxer in a college brochure at the Robert Treat Hotel are listed at $90 per month for double occupancy but according to Ewegan, the cost is actually $115 per month.

Rodents have been reportedly seen in the hotel by students, where kitchen facilities are open and no janitorial services are offered.

Stockton Saves

The Stockton State College (SSC) Board of Trustees recently authorized the establishment of a Center for Environmental Research which will combine the resources of Stockton's location in the NJ coastal zone with the college's capacity to provide environmental and land use advisory services for the region.

"Stockton is particularly interested in assisting local governments in maintaining the physical integrity of the region and the effective utilization of coastal and pine barrens resources," Richard E. Bjork, SSC President, said.

The Center is already offering a short course series this term and he plans for a second series in February. It will also function as a data base for environmental information concerning the southern NJ region and will provide consulting and advisory services for municipalities seeking answers to environmental or land use questions.

"Records are confidential. For the cards to be given to public officials, there would have to be legal proceedings and due process of law," he said.

Lockhart continues to emphasize that residents have to protect themselves and report suspicious people to the campus police. "The first person responsible for your safety is you," he said.

Lockhart feels that residents don’t want rigid security measures. But he supports stricter checking of visitors and assigning policemen in the buildings themselves.

Dorm Hall Robbery Problem

"It may be a resident or someone who doesn’t even come to MSC or it could be a lot of different people – we just don’t know yet," Faye Economos, Director of the dorm, said.

Judy Mazzurowski, an RA in Boffo Hall said, "Everyone has a lot to learn through crime prevention and self defense."

Joe Cafferelli, another RA asserted, "It’s very easy for someone who doesn’t belong here to get in unnoticed. I have found night shift Security Guards asleep or leaving the phone off the hook. I guess they don’t care because they don’t live here."

Charlie Giblin, a MSC Campus Police Officer for the last two years, said: "The problem at Boffo is the large number of people and the building itself, which was not designed for security purposes. We definitely need an improvement but finding an effective system in such a large dorm is nearly impossible."

Present security measures require everyone entering the dorm to check in at the front desk. The residents are asked to show their key tags and visitors must sign in at the desk while the desk staff calls the person they are visiting to inform him he has a visitor. Once inside the building, the visitor is supposed to visit only the room he signed in for.

“Our desk staff tries very hard but it’s almost impossible to stop every person,” Economos said.

Giblin said, "The Campus Security has been changed from untrained Security Guards to a mixture of Campus Police and Security Guards. The Campus Policemen are trained as well as any Policeman."

We are short of manpower presently so the security in the dorms at night varies from a

Dorm Machines Eat Money

By Sue Kobyla

Angry students in Boffo Hall are expressing dissatisfaction with the Blondel Vending Company over the operation and maintenance of the vending machines there.

"The vending machines are poor and students are losing cash with them," Bob Torres, a resident assistant in the dormitory said. He added that until recently, there had been difficulty getting refunds in such situations.

Blondel has a route man on campus from 7 am to 2 pm who carries $25 on him for refunds. Bohn residents claim he is difficult to locate but according to Blondel officials, there is a "personality conflict" between him and Torres. Refund money is not kept at the Boffo Hall desk.

It was only after some protest that a workable system was installed. Almost two weeks ago, Torres put a note on one of the machines, blaming Blondel for poor service and lost money. He noted that the situation improved after that incident.

A student losing money can now fill out a slip and hand it in to the desk, where the route man can pick it up.

Returning the following day, he will give back refund in small individual envelopes. Desk assistants put these envelopes in the recipient’s mailbox.

Some of the more cynical students point out that Blondel’s contract is up in August 1978 and wonder if that is a factor in the firm’s relatively quick response to recent complaints.

"The main thing left is that we’d like notices posted on every machine telling students what to do for refunds and where to call for mechanics if needed," Torres said.

Peter Macagne, Assistant to the Vice President for Administration and Finance, asserted "Blondel is a highly professional company, compared to Ogden Foods (the previous distributor). They have more varied selections in stock and the insides of their machines are much cleaner."

Regarding the service complaint,” Macagne replies, “I have only gotten one personal complaint”, adding, “Almost all the equipment is in new or good condition.”

Blondel also defends its position. "We don’t want their money – only what’s coming to us," Florence Ryder, a partner in the company, said. "In regards to money that is already lost, we check our machines and the amount of cash has not been as excessive as it should be if students were losing that much money," she added.

She claims that when machines break down, the company is not called immediately as it should be. "We have mechanics who are on the road and can service these machines in an hour," she said.

Dorm Do’s and Don’ts

In response to the increasing crime rate and dorm security problems at Boffo Hall, RAs, the Dorm Director and Campus Police urge residents to take strict precautions.

Everyone should lock their doors, even if they are just leaving their room for a minute. Do not leave notices on your door informing people when you are or will be out. Take notice and confront any strangers hanging around and inform the desk that someone is there. Hang up immediately on any obscene phone call. Attempts of having the call traced would be futile due to the cost and the time it requires. Give all obscene letters directly to dorm officials. Never leave your keys in your mailbox. And most important, report any robbery or other incident, no matter how minor, to the desk and Security.

If anyone has anything to report or information pertaining to any crimes that have taken place, contact Campus Police at ext. 5222.
MUNCH, MUNCH, MUNCH! (Get The Pump!)

By Eileen Curtis

In a brilliant last second display of gluttony, Gene Lazo, a sophomore psychology major, stuffed four tie-breaking munchkins in his mouth to win the second annual Dunkin' Munchkin munching contest for the second year in a row.

Lazo devoured 18 munchkins in 60 seconds — breaking his own record of 14 — while dazzling a standing room only crowd of on-lookers who screamed, "Munch! Munch! Munch!" throughout the Student Intramural Leisure Council (SILC) sponsored event held in the Student Center. Lazo won $10 for his efforts.

John Ulman, a business education major, took the second-place prize of $5 and tied last year's record by slamming down 14 munchkins. Although his stomach held its own during the competition (garbage pails were available just in case) Ulman said he felt "awfully sick" afterward. "I'm going to see the nurse," he said.

Jay Stobofsky, a business administration major and rookie Tom Buckey, a freshman uncommitted major, tied for third place honors: Munchkins gift certificates.

As a precaution, a health official was present at both heats of the contest since, according to Cathy Howell, sophomore business major and contest supervisor, "You can choke on the powdered sugar munchkins." Defending champ Lazo, with a victorious last spurt of adrenalin, was still eating them after the referee's whistle signaled time was up. "When's the next contest?" he nonchalantly asked.

He later admitted, however, that he would like to have his stomach pumped.

Lazo kiddingly explained, "I chose psychology for a major to find out what's wrong with me. Why, oh Why do I enter these contests? I've been an eating competitor for a while now but mostly as an amateur." But even pros have to surmount a number of obstacles.

"It was tough this year," he added, "I was injured. I have a hangnail and it was really hard to pick up the munchkins." Contestants were allowed to use only one hand for munchkin maneuvering and had to sit on the other to avoid double-handed temptation. The crowd cheered on the competitors with shouts of "Sit on it!"

Lazo, who jokingly demanded that photographers shoot only his best side, was confident that he could win next year's contest "hands down." Or at least sitting on one.

Davis' Second Coming

The Rev. Thomas E. Davis, who became MSC's first full-time campus minister when he founded the Newman House in 1967, will return to the campus on Sun., Nov. 6, for a 10th anniversary observance of that event. Davis, now pastor of St. Paul's Parish in the Greenville section of Jersey City, will celebrate the 11 am liturgy in the Studio Theater. A reception will follow in Life Hall.

During eight years at MSC, the priest served an undergraduate constituency of over 4500 Catholic students (approximately 60% of the total enrollment).

Current chaplains are the Rev. Kenneth Herbster and Jane Davis, a lay person, both of whom were appointed in 1975.

The public will be welcome at the anniversary celebration. Further information may be obtained by calling Newman House at 746-2323.

‘Margarida’- Trendy, Hilarious, Obscene

By Barry Miller

When was the last time you were taught by a middle-aged, oversexed, schizophrenic schoolmarm? If it has been that long, here’s some titillating news — there’s a new comedy on Broadway, called Miss Margarida’s Way which stars Estelle Parsons in such a role.

Miss Margarida is a composite of the multitudes of horrendous educators that all students have silently suffered with. Roberto Athayde, a twenty-eight year old Brazilian, fortunately did not keep his school day frustrations suppressed. He has created an outrageously hilarious, obscene show which promises to attract a “trendy” gang at the box office.

For almost two hours, with one short recess period, the audience becomes Miss Margarida’s eighth grade pupils. That means, they’re subjected to a non-stop tongue lashing from Miss M. Class begins with a biology lecture that is constantly interrupted by Miss Margarida’s accusation that the class wants her to take off her clothes. After saying she won’t do so, she suggestively fondles her legs and thighs and gingerly places her palms upon her breasts. Later, she promised to take off her blouse and skirt only if her students did “a lot of hard studying.”

Miss Margarida writes a lot on her green blackboard. The board plus her desk, chair, and a bookcase are basically the only props in the area next to the reserved theater boxes. Such use of the theater is production is actually being presented in a Broadway theater.

Throughout the show, paper airplanes are tossed at Miss Margarida. For almost two hours, with one short recess period, the audience was taught by a middle-aged, oversexed, schizophrenic schoolmarm. Whether it was a country rock number or a slow blues ballad, the audience at the Capitol Theatre in Passaic fell in love with the strong clear voice of Linda Ronstadt when she appeared with country singer Danny O’Keefe, Oct. 26, 1977.

Ronstadt performed a sampling of songs from her current album, “Simple Dreams,” as well as a variety of classic tunes from previous albums, to an audience ranging from teen-aged to middle-aged. At the first of the two shows that night she sang for 90 minutes while cries of “I love you!” came from the audience between songs.

Ronstadt was backed by a band well-suited to her sound. They consisted of Waddy Wachtel on guitar, Rick Marotta on drums, Kenny Edwards on bass, Don Grohnick on piano and Dan Dugmore on pedal steel guitar. Ronstadt described Dugmore as “the most tasteful steel guitar player that I’ve ever played with.”

The only boo during her concert came when she introduced her producer, Peter Asher, whose back up vocals were good, but who made the mistake of coming onstage wearing a Dodgers jacket.

Warner Brothers Recording Artist O’Keefe appeared solo playing guitar and offered a poor repertoire which included his past hit “Goodtime Charlie’s Got the Blues.” His attempt at conversation with the audience was totally inaudible.

Ronstadt opened with “Loose Again,” and the graceful brunette also performed “Blue Bayou,” “It’s So Easy to Fall in Love,” “Sliver Threads and Golden Needles.” “Faithless Love,” “That’ll Be the Day,” “It Doesn’t Matter Any More,” “When Will I Be Loved,” “Crazy,” “Poor, Poor Pitiful Me,” “Desperado,” “Simple Man,” “Simple Dreams,” “Love is a Rose,” “Maybe I’m Right,” “Someone to Lay Down Beside Me,” “Tumbling Dice,” “You’re No Good,” “Sorrow Lives Here,” and “Willin’.”

No explanation was given, nor necessary, when she performed “Love Me Tender” in obvious remembrance of singer Elvis Presley.

‘Home Folks’ Excel With Slick & Smooth Bluegrass

By Laurie Velger

“IT’s bluegrass time again”, anunciou Lee Martin enthusiastically proclaimed amid hoots of approval from a large and eager audience. Bluegrass returned to the hills of MSC last Friday evening to MSC’s Memorial Auditorium when both Hazel Dickens and Buck White and the Down Home Folks, sponsored by the Office of Cultural Programming, presented a foot-stomping and rousing good-time show in this second of a series of three bluegrass events to be given here.

Hazel Dickens, the singing voice of the recent movie “Harlan County, USA,” opened the show. With no perfunctory introduction or patter, Dickens went right into her songs. Admitting to being hoarse due to backstage workout before the show, Dickens’ singing occasionally fell flat, but she clearly gave all she could. Her voice came across as plain, yet in this plainness was capable of conveying all emotional levels of woman, and of human, suffering. Dickens sang a number of her own songs, many from the soundtrack of Harlan County, including “West Virginia, My Home,” “Working Girl Blues,” “Don’t Put Her Down, You Helped Her Put Her Here” (recorded by the New Riders of the Purple Sage) and “They Never Keep Us Down.”

Dickens’ band, seemingly put together for the movie performance, was rough and unpolished and had a tentative, uncertain quality in their playing. Yet, the musicians, clad in jeans and thoroughly unpretentious (as was Dickens herself) were honest and open about their lack of tightness.

In contrast to Dickens’ informality and unhearsaid presentation was Buck White and the Down Home Folks’ polished and immaculate performance. All arrangements and solos were clearly worked down to the last note, all harmonies slick and smooth, all stage patter contrived. The music was not exactly bluegrass but more of a blending of bluegrass, folk, country and western and yes, pop. The band was almost Lawrence Welkian in its clean-cut image and easy listening accessibility.

White himself has a very pleasing voice, and his mandolin playing was admirable in its technical virtuosity. His daughters, Cheryl on string bass and Sharon White Hicks on guitar, gave able background, vocally and musically. Bob Black on banjo gave a much further dimension to the group, and his playing was skilled and memorable.

White and the Down Home Folks did such numbers as Jose Feliciano’s “Rain,” “Making Believe,” “Sandy Land,” “It’s Sure Rains Hard in Tennessee,” “If I Could Only Win Your Love” and others. The girls ducted on one or two songs, all staged with an insatiable thirst for more.

Dickens joined White and his group for a song, “Will the Circle Be Unbroken?”, and an encore “Keep on the Sunny Side of Life.” Dickens clear voice could be heard giving the group added strength.

Steve Martin: Let’s Get Small. Warner Bros. BSK 3090

Just try to keep a straight face while this man is on. To say the least, Martin is not a new boy on the block when it comes down to comedic endeavors. He has been into comedy for quite some time.

Martin started out in Orange County at Disneyland, this was the beginning of the insanity to come. At the age of 16 Martin was billed as “Mendie & Magpie” with Wally Boag at Disneyland’s Golden Horseshoe Review. Before actually working with Boag, Martin would go see his revue which he remembered because there was something clean about it. Moving along, Martin at 21 wrote for the “Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour” for which he won an Emmy. In the years to follow he was writing for many other shows. But writing wasn’t enough. He realized what he wanted to do. Martin would cite Jack Benny, Red Skelton, Jerry Lewis, and Pat Paulson as early influences but his style makes it difficult to detect any similarities with any of them. His comedy is of a very fresh brand that is timely. Let’s Get Small is case and point.

Recorded live at “The Boarding House” in San Francisco, Martin’s wit and spontaneity can fully be appreciated, along with many other talents excellently incorporated into his show. This is one piece of vinyl that you will laugh. If this is any indication of what’s to come out of this comedian’s outstanding work. And, before listening you might try getting small first!

None of these works are powerful pieces of classical music. How could they be? But Martin’s wit and spontaneity can fully be appreciated, along with many other talents excellently incorporated into his show. This is one piece of vinyl that will make you laugh. MSC Art at Newark Museum

By Nina Lacy

Six faculty members, three former students and an undergraduate student of MSC’s fine arts department are among “New Jersey Artists,” the first biennial exhibition co-sponsored by the Newark Museum and the New Jersey State Museum.

The exhibition, featuring the works of 121 contemporary artists out of 784 in the State, opened last week and will be on view through Dec. 11.

The works selected for the exhibition are representative of current styles in art. They are by many of the State’s most important artists are on view, reflecting the quality of the exhibition.

Among the faculty of MSC represented are Euelien Glashausser, Patricia Lay, Christine Martens, wife of Charles Martens, PhD Chairman of the fine arts department, William C. McCread, Klaus A. Schnitzer and Carol D. Westfall.

This exhibition is the first of a regularly-scheduled series of juried exhibitions open to professional artists living in any county in New Jersey. Directors Samuel C. Miller of Newark and Leah Sloshberg of the State Museum agreed to sponsor the biennial exhibitions. A total of 784 artists, who were limited to one entry, submitted works in the media of painting, graphics, sculpture and photography.

Donald Bookstaber, Anna Marie Caluori, Rita Dalle Molle represent MSC as former students and Virginia Ernst is an undergraduate whose work is also included in the show.

Glashausser’s entry “Two Black Mounds-Series 1977” is made of felt, wisteria and horserhair. Lay’s “Co-Modulation,” a composition of 30 pyramids is of fired clay and glaze. Martens’ “Vertical Blue and Red,” is a hanging piece of a variety of colors, shapes, materials and textures. McCread’s Awdal II in vitrified clay is a combination of sculpture and drawing with different levels and lines. Schnitzer entered a sensitive photograph, “Line Clamp.” Westfall’s “Megalith I, II, III” proudly stands like an arch made of fiber.

There is interest among the State’s artists in new textures and non-traditional materials, such as plastic, fiber and rope. There is a noticeable upsurge in realism, and especially photo-realism, extending from everyday scenes, such as highway traffic, to blown-up still lifes of giant, super-realistic fruits “Twenty Apples,” by Reginald H. Neal or “Savoy Cabbage,” by E. Alan Buku at Trenton. The second biennial “New Jersey Artists” exhibition will be held in 1979 at the New Jersey State Museum in Trenton; supplanting that Museum’s “Art from New Jersey” series.

The exhibition may be seen from noon to 5 pm Sundays and holidays. Admission is free.

'Ecotopia' Captures Sci-Fi Fad

By Myra Weinman

Ecotopia. Bantam. $1.95

Ernest Callenbach’s novel Ecotopia presents a startling view of what could happen to the United States in the future if domestic conditions are not improved.

Unlike novels like Walden Two and 1984, Ecotopia hits home, using actual places, dates and events.

In the year 1980, after many years of increasingly bad pollution and strangling technology, the states of Oregon, Washington and California decide to take action and secede from the US. These states become a separate country, called Ecotopia, the Greek word meaning “home-place.” The Ecotopians form an entirely new society in the space of 19 years. They even succeed in establishing a new set of values for young and old.

Ecotopia cuts off all its communication from other countries especially the US. No video or any other type of air-wave transmissions are allowed to be sent over their country. No planes from any nation are permitted to pass through their skies. Ecotopia cuts off all its communication from the US. How does the film go? What kind of reception do the Ecotopians get? These questions are addressed in the book.

Passing Leads WPC, Profs

William Paterson College behind their all-time leading passer in Bob Pellechia, trounced Jersey City State College, 20-0, Saturday.

Elsewhere Glassboro State College behind an equally fine quarterback, Herb Nellio, beat a suspension ridden Kean squad, 38-0.

Pellechia came within 47 yards of a 1000-yard season, with two touchdown passes, both to Lance Sisco his tight end. Pellechia was hurt early in the second quarter but his backup Dom Marino came off the bench to throw a touchdown and an undermanned Kean team (12 players suspended for disciplinary reasons) played well against GSC, holding them to just a touchdown in the first half before the dam broke in the second. The first half score was a Nellio strike to Kelvin Hopes for 11 yards. The Profs came alive in the second half, Nellio hitting Glenn Jackson for 24 yards and a touchdown. Dino Hall, Mitch Garlick, and Brian Haveron all dove for scores from short distances in the fourth quarter. Steve Ratty hit all six conversions as well as a 47-yard field goal. The Prof defense held Kean to nine yards total offense.

IM Highlights

For the second year in a row, Gene Lazo took SILC's Dunkin Munchkin Eating Contest by storm. Lazo broke his own record, downing 18 donuts in one minute.

Elsewhere, in SILC's bowling league, the battle for first place grows ever tighter. With only three weeks of competition left, the AKY Gutter Rats remain tied with the Ballbusters for the top spot, while Follow the Leader and APO are tied and remain only 6 points behind.

In last week's men's football action, Tony DiMucci returned an interception for a touchdown propelling undefeated Zodiak to a 14-12 victory over Boff, knocking Boff out of the playoff picture. In the playoffs which are being played this week, Zodiak will meet the Force in one semi-final match, while the unbeaten Jedi Knights take on defending league champs Epsilon Unlimited in the other semi-final game.

In co-ed football playoff action this week, undefeated and untied Dissension takes on Ready-and-Willing, while the Big Fig Newtons meet the Gazelles in semi-final play. Championship Games for both leagues are tentatively scheduled for Sun., Nov. 6, at 1 pm at Sprague Field. The Men's Basketball League got underway with 38 teams in competition.

Conference Title: A Matter of Numbers

The possibilities are, well, seemingly endless.

Thanks to MSC's loss to Trenton State College Saturday (or no thanks to it, depending upon one's perspective) there is a very good possibility that the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference will have a three-way tie for the football title.

The scenario goes something like this:

The Indians beat Jersey City State College Saturday, Glassboro State College takes William Paterson College Friday and TSC defeats Kean College. The result: MSC is then 3-1-0 in the loop, GSC will be 4-0-0 and TSC 4-1-0.

It's not over. The Indians will then have to beat the Profs the following week giving the top three teams 4-1 marks — with no outright winner.

Why? Because none of those three teams will have beaten the other two teams, just one. MSC will have a victory over GSC, the Profs had a victory over TSC earlier in the season, and the Lions have a win over the Tribe.

Of course all of this is dependent upon having the favorites winning their games. If they don't things get more complicated.

Squaws Close With Two Wins

By Cindy Nazimek

With wins over Kean College and Brooklyn College last week, MSC's women's tennis team finished its season at 9-4.

Against Kean, the Squaws won the first three singles matches and swept the doubles. Playing her steady baseline game, Chris Grasso beat Betty Petrosky 6-1; 6-4, in the first singles match. Second Singles player, Donelo Weber outshot Jill Carson 6-0; 6-2. Replacing the injured Sue Brown in third singles play was Robin Brateman. Brateman won 6-3; 6-1 over Barb Pialkowski.

In third doubles play, Pat Reilly and Rosemary Haddad shutout Mary Lou Black and Fran Sciacchitano 6-0; 6-0. First doubles, Ellen Bauers and Sandy Eberwein outplayed Barb Conrad and Pam Perrell of Kean 6-1; 6-3. Lorraine Conte and Deb Vigliante were beaten by MSC's Mary Tuffy and Karen White 6-2; 6-2.

The Squaws' last match of the season was against Brooklyn College Friday. Grasso beat Linda Kourie 6-1; 6-3 to highlight the match and finished with her best personal record, 10-3.

The MSC cross country team

Glassboro's Harry Frezza took the individual championship in the NJSCAC, but the Profs did not totally dominate the conference as it has in recent years. TSC placed four runners in the top ten and nearly upset the Profs.

MSC's top finishers in the conference race were Mike Mooney and Rich Wallace, coming in third and seventh place respectively. MSC also defeated Rider College in the overall state standings. Rider had defeated MSC only the previous week in a dual meet, but MSC dropped the team by a wide margin this time.

Also, MSC swept the doubles play, showing the depth of the team. Coach Linda Galante was satisfied with this season's play, although the loss of third singles player Sue Brown and second singles Pat McNamara was significant.

"The powerhouse of talent we have is unreal. I am looking forward to next season which should be close to undefeated barring injuries," Galante said. In the state tournament, Donelo Weber made it to the quarter-finals where she was defeated by Kathy Muller, who went on to win the final. MSC's doubles team of Ellen Bauers and Sandy Eberwein were also stopped in the quarter finals. In the Consolation Feed-In Tournament, Grassano made it to the quarter finals.

If TSC loses to Kean (again unlikely) and the Indians and the Profs win this weekend, the Lions are out of the picture. If TSC wins and the Indians lose to the Profs, TSC will have a victory over the Tribe, but the Indians and Profs have a win over the Tribe.

But there's more friends, visualize this situation. The Lions beat Kean as expected, the Indians drop, but the Profs lose to WPC. Following this, MSC beats GSC next Friday. Wanna know who wins it? TSC that's who (whom?). Both the Lions and the Indians will possess 4-1 marks but TSC would have taken the head-to-head coast with the Tribe.

In all likelihood the Profs will battle MSC for a share of the title with TSC come next Friday. The Pioneers haven't been impressive and the Profs are too good a team to be looking forward to the battle with the Tribe. Likewise for the Indians. Although it has been rumored that JCS's recruiting consists of someone standing on a corner in Hudson County and whispering "Pssst! You wanna have a nice time playing football", there is no doubt that the game with the Gothics is now all-important. The Gothics will have 32 warm bodies but the Indians have a lot on the line. Look for a blow-out.

When a Loss is a Bit More Than That

By Dave Wertneim
MSC's head soccer coach Bob Wolfarth sat dejectedly on the equipment box following the Indians 1-0 loss to Pratt Institute—and with good reason. Prior to the game at Brookdale Park there had been talk of a possible post season East Coast Athletic Conference tournament bid for the Indians.

"It's a four team tournament, with two teams each from New York and New Jersey chosen on the basis of record. Now there's no way that we (5-5-2) will get in," Wolfarth said.

The ECAC tourney was something to shoot at for the Indians. The young team has played well at times (against New Jersey Institute of Technology, Fairleigh Dickinson University, and Trenton State College) and were looking for an opportunity to prove themselves.

"We were really psyched about getting in," captain Paul Nobbs said. Kuta Narayan's goal at 22:59 of the first period was the winner. It came as a result of one of the only MSC defensive breakdowns of the game.

Fullback Mark DiClemente and sweeperback Bob Fixter failed to communicate on a ball near the 18-yard line and both went for it. The boot deflected off Pratt's Jim Ertl and then to an unguarded Narayan who fired a shot past MSC goalie Bill Muller and Pratt was on top, 1-0. It was all they needed.

It's not that the Tribe didn't have their chances. They kept the ball in the attacking zone throughout the game, getting off 26 shots on goal. They outpassed, and out hustled Pratt until they scored.

After the goal the Indians seemed like a different team. Instead of moving well without the ball they started standing around watching the ball. It took the remainder of the first half to regroup.

MSC had most of their scoring opportunities in the second half. Near the onset, Pratt goalie Carl Schulz made a pair of fine saves on shots by Paul Nobbs. Minutes after Schulz made another grab on a header by sophomore Tom Treacy.

Muller certainly can't be blamed for the current string of four nonwins. In the past four outings the sophomore has given up one goal in each and has two losses and two ties to show for it.

The loss to Pratt has affected the boosters' outlook for the rest of the season.

"Now we're just playing for pride," Muller said.

ESSC Swarms With a 20-Shot Attack

By Mary King

EAST STROUDBURG PA. East Stroudsburg State College's field hockey team dominated MSC offensively Friday afternoon, by a score of 5-1 with 20 shots on goal to MSC's four.

ESSC kept the ball in MSC territory for most of the game with the help of right inner Hope Donnell, who scored four of the five ESSC goals.

From the opening bully, MSC's defense had to struggle to keep their opponents away from the goal as ESSC's offense swarmed together for the attack.

Donnell shot in the first goal from the right post 5:13 into the first half of action, and ESSC's total penetration during the drive was a sign of bad things to come for MSC.

But MSC did fight back on a few quick breaks from Joanne Helm to Michele Morea only to have their opponents clear the ball from their own territory.

The rushes of MSC's left wing and left inner were stopped short when ESSC immediately retaliated for another goal. Nancy Skeen tapped the ball past goalies Margaret Washington 12:50 into the half on a penalty corner following left wind Audry Stauffer's penetration downfield.

With the score 2-0, MSC held tightly as their opponents continued to threaten their defensive stand. But Donnell was suddenly attacking again, firing in another goal from the far post 30:26 into the half.

The first half ended with shots on goal at eight to three in ESSC's favor. They led in possession of the ball.

The pace was set for the second half, taking instant advantage. The Warriors asserted themselves offensively again in the second half, taking instant possession of the ball.

The elusive Donnell blasted another shot past Washington's reach at the mark 6:06 while the Squaws became weary as their competitor's swift execution methodically wore them down.

But the Squaws finally scored on a break down to ESSC's goal, as center forward Anna Wimberg slipped on by Dawn Dochtermann untouched at 10:42.

However, Donnell responded eventually, sliding in a long shot for the final tally of the game. The goal came on a penalty corner at 17:01 as ESSC's offense clustered in front of the MSC cage, putting the game out of reach.

What a Difference
Two Weeks Make

By Glenn Welci

In just two short weeks the MSC football team has given a perfect example of how a team can go from a Lambert Bowl playoff contender to a team just playing out the season. Of course they have a shot at the conference title if they can beat Glassboro State College on the final day of the season but even the most optimistic of fans has to wonder about that possibility if they saw the Indian performance against Trenton State College Saturday afternoon.

The Lions gave their fans an impressive showing in defeating MSC 17-14 with 10 points in a span of 4:29 in the fourth quarter. Tom Housman capped off that rally with a 34-yard field goal, giving TSC the lead for good with 3:36 left.

Although the game came down to the last seconds with MSC quarterback Joe Rebholz leading the Tribe down field for a last-ditch effort that failed, it wasn’t as close as the score indicates.

The Lions swamped the Indians with the type of inspired play that MSC had exhibited in the first half against Fordham last week.

Coach Fred Hill blamed the team’s poor performance on a lack of mental preparation.

“We just weren’t ready mentally for the game,” Hill said. “I think we reached an emotional peak against Fordham and just suffered a let-down against Trenton.”

With 5:38 remaining and the score 14-14, MSC halfback John Henry, playing in his first game due to injuries to Mike Cozza and Tony Arena, lost his grip on the ball and Lion Tim Fogerty recovered the fumble on the Indian 22. Four plays later Housman split the uprights on the Indian 14-7 lead.

Henry, a freshman, had dashed 79 yards for a touchdown on his second career rush from scrimmage with 2:24 left in the third quarter to give MSC a 14-7 lead, the offense sputtered.

After Henry’s touchdown gave MSC a 14-7 lead, the offense sputtered.

After another scoreless first half, the only rolling over that TSC did was over the Indians. They amassed 328 net yards against a usually stubborn MSC defensive line.

After Henry’s touchdown gave MSC a 14-7 lead, the offense sputtered.

With 5:38 remaining and the score 14-14, MSC halfback John Henry, playing in his first game due to injuries to Mike Cozza and Tony Arena, lost his grip on the ball and Lion Tim Fogerty recovered the fumble on the Indian 22. Four plays later Housman split the uprights on the Indian 14-7 lead.

Henry, a freshman, had dashed 79 yards for a touchdown on his second career rush from scrimmage with 2:24 left in the third quarter to give MSC a 14-7 lead.

“We tried to establish a running game,” Hill explained, “but just couldn’t get anything going except for that run.”

Take away the 79-yard scamper by Henry and the Indians managed only 31 rushing yards.

“We were disappointed that we didn’t go out to prove that we’re a good football team,” Hill said. “Look at Trenton. They’re 2-4 (now 3-4) and they played aggressively. We know they weren’t going to roll over and die when we went ahead.”
