'A Sort Of Compromise'

By Steve Nuiver

Jorge E. Illueca, Panamanian Ambassador to the United Nations, spoke at MSC Tuesday night on the Panama Canal Treaty, expressing the view that even though the treaty didn't fulfill all the aspirations of the Panamanian people, it was still a good settlement and should lead to better relations between the US and Latin America.

 Appearing under the joint auspices of the Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA), Illueca lectured and answered questions, often referring to actual treaty excerpts, before a small audience of 60 persons in Memorial Auditorium.

"The treaty was a sort of compromise," Illueca said. "Both the US and Panama had to be flexible."

Illueca felt that the only way Panama could get a favorable treaty from the US "was to accept provisions that could be a burden to the nation."

Since the US is a nuclear power and the treaty allows for all ships, nuclear or not, to pass through the 51 mile canal, Illueca said that the Panamanians feared that, in the event of war, retaliation against the US could be directed at the canal zone.

"There will be no limitation on the vessels who cross the canal," the ambassador said. "Many countries don't even allow nuclear type vessels to come into port but the right to transfer atomic vessels across the canal will remain."

However, Illueca felt that even though the treaty wasn't the perfect answer to the Panama Canal situation, the Panamanian people had shown their acceptance of the compromise by virtue of their two thirds affirmative vote for the treaty during the country's National Plebiscite of Oct. 23.

Crane: It's Time to Move On

By Rich Figel

Sam Crane, Executive Director of the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA), tendered his resignation at the NJSA Board meeting last Sunday, saying that it was time "to move on to new challenges" after working for students in various capacities the past five years.

Crane said the decision was not easy to make because of his "unshakable faith that students have an important role to play within the higher education community" and should not reflect upon the NJSA in any negative way. Crane will leave the position on or before Feb. 1 of next year — two years since he was hired by the NJSA as their first paid lobbyist and coordinator at a reported $10,000 per year with benefits.

As for his personal future, Crane has no definite plans but hopes to work in government or higher education.

Upon accepting Crane's resignation the NJSA Board paused to applaud him for doing what one member called, "one hell of a job." They did not dwell on it for long. Moments later Crane was outlining an "action proposal" to put pressure on State Senate leaders to vote on the Tuition Aid Grant (TAG) program by Thurs., Dec. 15 -- the deadline for implementing TAG by next fall.

As Executive Director of the NJSA, Crane has served as a liaison between the State college student government — which the NJSA represents — while communicating student positions to elected and appointed officials in the State government. He has also been responsible for coordinating legislative data, administering NJSA programs and researching public policy questions in higher education.

TAG is a prime example of the NJSA's role; the NJSA has sat in on countless meetings, presenting student input and testimony at hearings, informing student governments as well as the student press of its status and potential impact. And now they are the principle force pushing for speedy implementation.

A Championship Season Ends in Tragedy

By Deborah Tortu

The Glassboro State College Profs won their fourth straight conference championship by defeating MSC's football team last Friday but there were no victory celebrations; a tragic accident left a Glassboro player in critical condition — perhaps paralyzed for the rest of his life.

As the MONTCLARION went to press, John Green, a junior defensive back for the Profs, was still listed in critical condition. Green sustained a broken neck in the game and is now in traction.

According to a spokesman for Underwood Memorial Hospital in Woodbury, Green is conscious but paralyzed. Fred Hill, Head Coach of the MSC Indians, has been in touch with Glassboro on Green's status but says there is "no guarantee" on the future of his condition. "He could be fine and play again or he could remain paralyzed," Hill said with uncertainty.

According to health officials, this type of accident is an isolated case in football today — it happens but not very often.

The accident occurred with seven minutes left in the first half, when Green bolted into MSC's Armand Assayag, who was attempting to catch a pass. Both players were jarred to the ground.

A native of Woodbury, Green was named to the All-Conference Team as a First All-Conference Secondary back.

Have a Happy Turkey Day

Thanksgiving Day recess is scheduled from Thurs., Nov. 24 through Sun., Nov. 27. Classes will resume Mon., Nov. 28.

Dorms will close Wed., Nov. 23 at 5 pm. Dinner will not be served. Dorms will be reopened Sun., Nov. 27 at 1 pm and dinner will be the first meal served.

All administrative offices at the college will be closed next Thursday and Friday. Governor Brendan Byrne granted all State employees the extra day off (Friday) earlier this week.

And because of the holiday, the MONTCLARION will not come out next week.

One Day Fast
For Indians

Fasting for a day can help the Jicaque Indians of Honduras who are facing a serious famine due to drought. According to Laurie Sacks, a representative of the Institute Indigenista Hondureño, the Jicaque Indians “face tremendous problems: malnutrition, disease, illiteracy, lack of arable land, exploitation, debt, scarcity of cash, inadequate housing, etc.”

The money saved by fasting for a day can be donated in cash or check at the APO table in the Student Center on Thurs., Nov. 17, or to the Anthropology Department Secretary in Russ Hall by Wed., Nov. 23. Contributions can also be sent separately to 11 Divinity Ave., Cambridge, Mass., 02138.

‘El Cuento Del Jibirito’
The Latin American Student Organization (LASO) will present the Teatro Cuarto in “El Cuento del Jibarito” (“The Story of a Country Boy”), on Sat., Nov. 19, at 8 pm in Memorial Auditorium. Admission is $1.

The play, to be performed in English, deals with the life of a Hispanic youth who tries to adjust to American society.

William Kunstler — defense lawyer for the Chicago seven, the Wounded Knee Indians and, more recently, William and Emily Harris in connection with the Patty Hearst trial—lashed out at the “status quo, the middle-class zombies and the corporate whites who dominate this country and the world,” at a Council on International and Peace Studies meeting on Tuesday.

"The People I represent refuse to be zombies"

National Affairs (CINA) sponsored lecture on Nov. 10. Kunstler, dressed conservatively in a grey suit and conservative in a grey suit and tie, gave a long, thoughtful address on "defending the kind of people who have moved to say anything good about this country," in a question and answer period following the lecture.

Kunstler assured him that there were "good things" about America like the human liberties described in the Constitution, but that they were often not enforced.

"The way things are, I see no reason for any ethnic minority," he said. "We've had Nixon, the Nixon pardon and now Carter's going to give us God. But if all the winners in elections lost and all the losers won, we'd still be in the shape we're in." He added, "The problems facing America are more subtle than who wins an election. Electoral politics have never accomplished anything because this country is run by corporations, not politicians. And Americans still don't believe that."

Kunstler, who was accused at one point of being the kind of "good-hearted liberal who will ruin this country," said, "I'm just trying to point out to people how wrong it is for us to hold ourselves aloof with fine noble sentiments. When you come down to it, all people are like Nazi Germans. Take a look around and feed their faces like most of us."

The Yale graduate admitted, "It's hard to not succumb to it all." When asked what kind of society Kunstler would like, he explained, "A society in which people can do things for themselves. Where they can make decisions for themselves. I'd like a society where people have more to say to each other than 'How's the lawn?'"

"Zombies' and Corporations Befelled by Kunstler"

By Alex Cieciarski

The Student Center lobby became the scene of a three day letter-writing protest Nov. 10, 11 and 14 held by the Jewish Student Union (JSU).

An Oct. 28 vote at the United Nations (UN) censured Israel for taking land from the Arabs in the 1967 war. The Arab League totalling 131. One vote was cast in favor of Israel by Israel herself. The United States abstained from voting.

Wayne Trager, Chairman for the Israel Cause of JSU, organized the letter-writing protest.

"We feel letters have more of an impact than just a form letter or a petition," Trager said as he flipped through the stack of letters addressed to President Carter.

"Carter said in his Presidential campaign that he was pro-Israel. Now he gave the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) a seat at the Geneva Peace Conference. Israel won't attend until the PLO changes their stand," Trager said.

Trager explained that the Arabs claim Israel illegally took land in the 1967 war. He said, the Arabs want the land on the west bank of the Jordan River back from Israel. The PLO was created by the Arabs to get the land back from Israel and as soon as they do, the Arabs will destroy the PLO, Trager feels.

The letters will be read by Presidential aides and a few will be read by Carter himself. The aides will report to Carter on the content of the rest of the letters, Trager noted.

The majority of letters were written by Jewish students.

"Some members of Chi Alpha also stopped by and wrote a few letters. We want to see an end to the fighting in the Middle East," Trager said.

Registration Renovation

The advance registration deadline for the spring semester is Tues., Nov. 29. Students turning course selections in after this date will be forced to pay late registration fees.

In an effort to alleviate some of the problems students face with registration the Office of the Registrar will make two changes in post-registration procedures.

The Change of Program period will be lengthened from three to four days and is scheduled from Jan. 16 to 19, 1978. The Office will also publish sheets several times a day indicating what courses are still open, so students won't be totally dependent on finding out inside Panzer Gym.

Marshall Butler, Registrar, explained that by extending the Change of Program period, a greater number of students will receive efficient attention from the Office.

"Registering" sheets to the students with courses still available will reduce the congestion created by students trying to read course numbers projected on the wall.

It is expected that there will be the same number of courses offered in the spring as there were in the fall, Butler said.

"The Change of Program procedure should take just 20 minutes if you aren't building a full schedule," Butler added.

Students must have their computer printout schedule and their current academic records in order to make changes during this period.

Final evaluations should be sent out to seniors graduating in May by Jan. 16, 1978. For those seniors who submitted applications for final evaluation by Oct. 1, the Office of the Registrar will mail official notices out in time for them to make adjustments during Change of Program.

"Zombies' and Corporations Befelled by Kunstler"
Controversy Calmed

Things have calmed down at Rutgers University in Camden following the theft of 2700 copies of the Nov. 2 edition of the student newspaper, Gleaner, which contained a cartoon interpreted as implying racial slurs by several student organizations.

The cartoon depicted a party scene as a Cultural Awareness Festival in light of a festival scheduled for Sat., Nov. 19, which is being sponsored by the University's Latin American Student Organization (LASO).

In protest of the cartoon, LASO asked for the resignation of John Barna, Editor-in-Chief of the Gleaner, as well as that of cartoonist Russ Novak. Neither resigned.

Following the theft, 2000 copies of the Gleaner were reprinted and redistributed so that students were able to obtain copies of the paper.

Despite criticism from Walter L. Gordon, Dean of the University, for reprinting the issue, Barna maintained that students have a right to be informed and to see a paper which their fees pay for, in an editorial on students' rights in the succeeding issue of the Gleaner.

VP Suffers Stroke

Frank Zanfino, Vice President for Finance and Administration at William Paterson College (WPC), is in critical condition after suffering a stroke Nov. 7, while hospitalized at Greater Paterson Hospital for a heart attack.

According to Stewart Wolpin, Editor-in-Chief of WPC's student newspaper, the Beacon, Zanfino is a "well loved" administrator.

Assault At Douglass

Two Douglass College women were sexually assaulted last Thursday in a field adjacent to the college campus, according to Norman Weisfeld, Editor-in-Chief of the Targum, the daily student newspaper at Rutgers University in New Brunswick.

The two women were returning to the campus when they were stopped by a man who warned them that he had a pistol in his pocket. He raped one woman and sexually assaulted the other.

No suspect has been found yet.

The Show Will Go On

A recommendation to eliminate music and theater as majors by the Committee on Long Range Planning at Ramapo State College was recently reversed. Paul Havemann, Editor-in-Chief of Ramapo's student newspaper, Horizons, said the commission came to this decision after evaluating comments from the faculty teaching Contemporary Arts.

Kathy Sunshine, Director of Contemporary Arts, stressed the need to maintain the performing element in music and theater in order to maintain quality majors.

Ramapo Opens Library

Dedication festivities for a new $4.2 million library at Ramapo State College included a Media Conference on Nov. 16, which featured Dave Marash from CBS-tv and Jack Freeman, Producer of News Center 4. Also included were Steve Hollis from WWDF radio as well as representatives from Time and Newsweek magazines.

According to Nora Muchanic, Co-Editor of Horizons, Ramapo's student newspaper, the conference was held for high school newspaper editors and college students as well.
Self-Study Commission Well Underway

What was nothing more than an idea on paper at the beginning of this semester has crystallized into a working operation.

The SGA Self-Study Commission was authorized by Jose Fuentes, SGA President, to review organizational procedures and structures — eventually its members will make recommendations as to how SGA operations could be streamlined and made more efficient.

Bob Hicks, Chairman of the Commission, said that it was now "well past the organization stage and into the actual study and breakdown of the present SGA."

“We hope to learn from the past and see why back in 1964 the student body adopted our present Constitution," Hicks added.

Besides examining the SGA Constitution, additional tasks the Commission has undertaken include the compilation of a survey to be distributed to students — designed to assess their views and opinions of the SGA and how it affects them — and establishing a liaison with the Government Administration Committee. The Government Administration Committee will review and propose legislation which has come about as a direct result of the Commission’s work.

Aid Applications Available

Financial aid applications for the spring semester are now available in the Financial Aid Office in College Hall. Deadline for filing completed applications is Fri., Nov. 18.

SGA Cabinet Member Quits

By Lori Parrott

John Donnelly, Director of Student Services of the SGA, resigned from the SGA Cabinet on Nov. 9. The resignation goes into effect on Friday, Dec. 23, the last day of the semester.

The Director of Services coordinates and manages all SGA services — the Drop-in-Center, the discount pharmacy service, the notary public and the free legal aid services offered.

"I was personally disappointed with a few actions of the SGA Executive Board," Donnelly said. He declined any further comment concerning his resignation or any underlying friction within the Cabinet.

Jose Fuentes, SGA President, called Donnelly a "dedicated worker" but went on to comment, "however, he has not reached that level of maturity to fully comprehend the intricacies of policy-making."

The Cabinet is made up of the SGA Executive Board, eight SGA members appointed by the SGA President, who advise the President on policy decisions and assist in their implementation.

Some observers speculate that friction within the Cabinet and Executive Branch was the main reason for Donnelly’s resignation.

"There was some confusion in the Cabinet at the beginning of the year but by and large these differences have been ironed out," according to George Roukas, Vice President for Welfare and Internal Affairs.

"Things are getting better. We had a productive meeting last week especially with regard to communications."

Maria Venuti, Vice President for External Affairs, thought the resignation was not due to a conflict with the Cabinet but with the Executive Branch and the conception of a Cabinet.

Band Wanted to Drum up Spirit

By Elaine Higgins

The MSC football season is over now. But many say the team was missing something all season: a marching band.

Uniforms from the last marching band, which disbanded in 1973, are still hanging in locked closets in the music department but are a little dusty now from lack of use.

The music department supports the idea, as does MSC President David W.D. Dickson and the Athletic Department, of reestablishing the marching band. They say it will do everything from building school spirit to filling seats at games. However, questions of funding and administration of the band will have to be resolved.

Dickson had had a series of meetings on the subject in the past year with Jose Fuentes, SGA President, Maureen Carr, Chairperson of the music department and William Dioguardi, Director of Athletics. They all would like to have a marching band if they feel there is enough student interest.

Details of funding have not been worked out yet and will not be until student interest is evident.

Carr would like to hire a faculty coordinator to instruct the players and make the band a division of the music department.

"Anything musical reflects the department," Carr said. "We are concerned with safeguarding the musical quality of the marching band." She said this did not mean restricting membership to music majors, although the corps would most likely come from the music department.

Dickson said he would probably be able to hire an adjunct teacher or two and he would like to see the band funded through private sources, such as the Alumni Association.

Allie Gelston, basketball coach, speaking for Dioguardi, said that MSC desperately needs a marching band. "People expect a marching band at football games," he said. "A marching band is adrenaline-producing. It generates spirit and has a great effect on the team." He said a band would draw more fans to the games.

Dickson, a long-standing clarinet player, agreed that team sports need a band even if only a stadium band. He said a band would add to the color, joy and spirit of a game. However, he added, "If we have a band, it will be because students want one."

Gelston added that few students know the MSC fight song. He said that the whole school would know it if we had a marching band.

Since football games are played on Saturdays, Carr thought that corps members should be paid rather than receive academic credit. She would also like to see scholarships for the musically skilled.

Dickson did not agree to be awarded to band members because it would be a learning experience to direct or play in a band.
Aging College Hall in for $30,000 Facelift

By Janet LaMantia
College Hall is getting a facelift.
College officials were scheduled to meet this morning with the firm contracted to re-stucco several portions of the building which have become weathered and deteriorated in recent years.
Large areas of grey stucco can now be seen where the paint has chipped away and several patches of ugly brick show where the stucco has fallen off.

Jerome Quinn, Director of Institutional Planning, estimated that external renovation would be completed by mid-December, postponing a Thanksgiving deadline which he had previously set.

"The contract has already been awarded and all the paperwork has been done," he explained. "Now, we have to meet with the contractor to determine exactly what has to be done where and the time period feasible for the work to be completed in."

Quinn said the contractor had a certain amount of flexibility in the time allotted to him to do the job, but stressed, however, that the contract was not "open ended" and certain guidelines set by the college had to be adhered to.

The $30,000 project also includes paint jobs for all three floors. The main floor and three stairwells have already been painted, Quinn said, with the other two floors scheduled to be painted next summer.

New lounge furniture is presently on order and is expected sometime next month, according to Quinn, who labelled it as "MSC's Christmas present."

Rust-colored carpeting has already been laid down in the lobby, to go with its new rust and cream color decor.

DECA Cures the ‘What Will I Wear’ Blues

By Eileen Curtis

They weren’t professionals but the 16 MSC students chosen to pirouette down the runway in the Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) sponsored Winter Fantasy Fashion Show “weren’t bad at all,” according to one male spectator. The show, which included five male models from MSC, was held in the Student Center Ballrooms Monday night.

The fall and winter fashions modeled ranged from what the well-dressed student might wear on campus to what the equally well-dressed couple will be wearing on a “glittering” New Year’s Eve.

The show, complete with refreshments and door prizes — was attended by almost 300 potential buyers who paid $2 for admission. According to Sharon Insabella, DECA President, “The proceeds will be used to send DECA students to a conference in Washington D.C.”

She added, “Last year’s Summer Getaway Show went over very well but this one was even better.”

A holiday atmosphere pervaded during the event with giant snowflakes hanging down from the ceiling and candle centerpieces illuminating the 30 or so tables surrounding the runway.

The high point of the show came when the models staged a New Year’s Eve party, toasting the New Year with champagne and balloons.

The featured clothes were provided by Silvermans.

Women’s Studies-- A Minor For Women’s Special Needs

By Patti Hayes

Myrna A. Danzig, head of the Community Alternative Education Program in the Department of Educational Foundations, will coordinate the Women’s Studies minor at MSC next spring, replacing Constance Waller, who is planning a leave of absence.

The minor, initially introduced by Waller last spring, was instituted “because women’s positions and roles in society are generally blocked out in traditional studies,” Danzig explained.

“Introduction to Women’s Studies” and an independent study course are the foundations for a minor in women’s studies.

Twelve credits from other departments offering women-oriented courses are also necessary, Danzig said.

According to Danzig, job opportunities for students with a women’s studies minor are available at centers offering services to rape victims or battered wives. During the past 10 years, she pointed out, there has been more of a social concern with the special needs of women, opening up more women’s services and thus, more jobs relating to women.

Danzig said that the “Introduction to Women’s Studies,” first offered last spring, was evaluated favorably by the 30 students who were enrolled.

Panama and U S Compromise

"The treaty was approved by a substantial majority," he said, "This indicates that the people of Panama feel it is a great step towards solving the problem." The ambassador revealed that 506,000 voters out of 765,000 had come out in favor of the pact.

The treaty, which still needs to be ratified by the United States Senate, would provide for a gradual turnover of canal control to Panama by the year 2000. Until then, the US will remain in control of the operation, maintenance and security of the canal. In addition, the US will raise the rent it currently pays to Panama from $2.3 million to $10 million per year. Panama will also receive $295 million in loans.

At midnight, December 31, 1999, the US will give up its control, including its 14 military bases in the canal zone. The US, however, will retain the right to intervene militarily should the canal's neutrality be threatened after this date.

"The treaty commits both the US and Panama to take action in the event of aggression toward the canal," Dluca said. The ambassador added that provisions in the treaty specifically state that both countries must protect and defend the canal.

If the US Senate fails to approve the treaty, Illueca foresees continued conflict until something is done to give Panama control.

"Many people in the US feel that if the Senate rejects the treaty, the problem will be finished but it will not be the end of it," he asserted.

Illueca said that the treaty would "put an end to a colonial enclave in the heart of Panama."

Sewage Spill Causes Car Crash

By Lisa Burkart

Two MSC students and one alumna were injured in an automobile accident Monday due to a sewage backup that caused icy patches on Clove Rd.

John Bach, a senior, a junior business administration major, was another passenger in the car but declined treatment.

According to Joseph McGinty, Director of Maintenance, a sewage pump that connects the Clove Rd. Apartments to the sewage system in Little Falls failed causing the tank to overflow.

The backup spilled out onto Clove Rd. and resulted in dangerous driving conditions.

John Shearman, Clove Rd. Apartment Manager, had just reported the ice to the town of Little Falls 60 to 90 minutes prior to the accident. Salt crews did not appear until later, after MSC maintenance workers had finally cleared away the sewage.

Fun With Math

Max Sobel, a professor of mathematics at MSC, will present "Historical Aspects of Mathematics" on Fri., Nov. 18, at 11 am in Rm 224 of the Math-Science Building. He will relate interesting anecdotes gleaned from 200 years of mathematical history.

The math lecture series is open to the public without charge. Further information may be obtained by calling 892-5132.
NJSA Suffers Loss

Sam Crane, Executive Director of the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA), announced his resignation last Sunday to the NJSA Board, effective Feb. 1 of next year. Crane has served students for the past five years in various capacities, including a stint as SGA President at MSC and his involvement with the NJSA from its early inception in 1972. It will be two years since Crane was first hired.

Since he took on the job and the responsibility of running New Jersey's largest student organization, the NJSA has taken great strides in bringing together student governments - representing the State colleges, the New Jersey Institute of Technology and parts of the Rutgers University system - for effective action. The NJSA has been instrumental in providing student representation at the different levels of higher education and government. And the best interests of students has always been at the forefront of their initiatives.

If anything, the NJSA under Crane's tutelage has proved that students can and will be a year-in, year-out fixture in the policy making processes which affect all students and the future of higher education.

Crane will be missed - by the student government leaders who have worked with him on many State and local issues and by the MONTCLARION; he has been a valuable source of information to the college press and, consequently, it is the students who have benefited.

We wish him the best of luck in the future and hope that the NJSA can find someone equal to the task of filling the void he will leave. It will not be easy.

Family Festivities

If it is not just a glorified pig-out, what significance can be ascribed to Thanksgiving? Endlessly repeated rituals often suffer for their familiarity.

Yet in the strictly literal sense of the word, familiarity is undoubtedly the essence of the Thanksgiving tradition. Rooted in "família," the Latin word for "family," the word implies the kind of warm, relaxed atmosphere that, ideally, should characterize the gatherings associated with the Thanksgiving observance.

Thanksgiving, then, should be appreciated for the rare opportunity it provides for today's far-flung families to reinforce their common bonds. Contributing to the preservation of the family unit is no small distinction.
REPORTAGE

High Grades Lower Insurance Rates

By Daniel P. Condon

Students with good grades can save up to 30% on their car insurance rates. Some insurance companies offer a discount to good students. The amount of savings, the requirements for obtaining the discount and the reasons for offering it vary according to company.

With the discount the student's automobile insurance rate is usually reduced by 10% to 30% of what it would otherwise be. Generally, the full-time student wishing to take advantage of the good student discount must be able to prove that he is maintaining a "B" average. The companies which offer this discount feel that students with higher grades are probably conscientious drivers.

Prudential Insurance Company of America offers a 25% to 30% reduction in car insurance rates to good students according to Brent Barth, a Prudential division manager in Springfield, NJ. Barth said that the discount increases as the student's grades go up.

To gain the good student discount the student must obtain a form from his insurance agent to be completed by the school administration which will verify that he meets the necessary qualifications. For the Prudential good student discount these qualifications usually include being in the top 20% of his class and maintaining a "B" average. Prudential prefers students who are on the Dean's list.

During a telephone interview Barth chuckled and said, "We want to cover drivers who will avoid accidents. Statistics prove that he is maintaining a "B" average. The companies which offer this discount feel that students with higher grades study more and drive less. They also feel these individuals will be more stable and controlled behind the wheel." In his small office, Edward C. Martin, Associate Dean of Students, talked about the good student discount forms which come across his desk for verification. He said, "Most of the reductions are between 10% and 25%. This amounts to quite a sum considering the high insurance rates students are forced to pay these days."

Martin chewed on his pipe and leaned back in his chair. He said that students who get the forms for the discount from their insurance agents are often confused about which administrative official to take them to. "They should come right here," he said. Martin's office is in College Hall.

Although some might question an insurance company giving special rates to good students, Martin thinks it makes sense to a degree. "The companies probably have the ideal student in mind," he said. This ideal student, according to Martin, is committed to studies and scholastic activities. The model student with good grades thinks towards the future and acts conscientiously. It is questionable whether such a student actually exists but some insurance companies must believe in the relationship between good grades and good driving.

Martin expressed regret that more students have not taken advantage of good student discounts. He leaned his tall frame forward and frowned. He said, "I think many more students are eligible but simply are not aware of it."

If a student thinks he may qualify for a good student discount, he should ask his insurance agent about the possibilities. The agent supplies the form which the school administration fills out. This form verifies that the student is, in fact, a full-time student who meets the qualifications for the good student automobile insurance discount.

GUEST SPOT

La Campana Fights Back

By Ron Russell

At this time I would like to respond to the MONTCLARION's harsh and rash attack on La Campana's policy regarding formal group shots.

Perhaps if the editors of the MONTCLARION had bothered to discuss this matter with us, they would have had a clearer idea of what it is they are talking about. It is obvious that no effort has been made to find out or to comprehend what the other side of this issue is.

It is not our intention to "punish" any organization but rather to give credit to those individuals who deserve it. Nor do we intend to "ignore the group efforts of students actively serving MSC." We rather intend to recognize those "students actively serving MSC."

Formal group shots have several faults. They are as follows:

1) A formal group shot is a one-occasion deal. If a student misses his organization's group shot he has no recourse.
2) Group shots are not representative of what it is the organization actually does.
3) Group shots give no special recognition to individual members of an organization who "knock themselves out for MSC."
4) Perhaps least of all, group shots are boring to all but those who appear in them. After a while I suspect they would be boring even to these individuals.

The advantage of candid coverage over group shots is obvious. Candid shots may be taken on more than one occasion. In addition, as any competent photographer knows, "candid shots" may be posed. With a little cooperation from other organizations we will be able to assure inclusion in the book of all active members.

Frenes Fleischer has stated that "our yearbook, La Campana, should reflect what MSC students are doing." I have yet to see MSC students standing in groups three rows deep. Perhaps this is a new fad on campus I am as yet unsure of. I feel that candid shots give a much truer representation of what organizations are doing.

I must point out that Steve Nuiver has made a rather blatant misquote. I never said "some organizations may be excluded altogether because of yearbook budget cuts." What was said was that if we had an unlimited budget and 600 plus pages we would gladly give every organization the coverage they want. In view of the fact that we are without this luxury we are forced to ration coverage according to merit. We will not purposely omit any organization.

As Nuiver has pointed out "The 1977 yearbook, as are all past issues, is water under the dam." I might point out that the MONTCLARION has not always been "New Jersey's Leading Collegiate Weekly." I wonder how the MONTCLARION editors would feel if they were to be judged on the efforts of past MONTCLARION editorial boards.

I'd like to conclude by saying that we are not trying to punish or ignore anyone but rather, are attempting to improve the content and quality of our product, the 1978 La Campana.

Home Ec: Why Not Give It a Try?

By Margie Buchinger, Donna Mizalko and Linda Rudin

Are you one of those students on campus who has not selected a major or is considering a different one? Well, why not consider home economics? You may be surprised to discover that home economics is not just sewing and cooking but actually is a lot more. The home economics department offers a variety of courses and disciplines, which allow for a variety of careers. The home economics department offers the following concentrations of study: consumer affairs, family/child studies, food and nutrition, home economics education and food management service.

If you concentrate in the area of consumer affairs you will find there is a demand in our society for people concerned with the plight of the consumer and the problems of the suppliers.

If you choose family/child studies a career in teaching day care or nursery school, family counseling, case worker or administrator could be yours.

The foods and nutrition concentration deals with nutritional aspects related to business, institutions and community agencies. You could work as a dietician, nutritionist or nutrition specialist. People with this concentration are also in demand by the government.

A home economics education major allows the student to become educators in diverse learning environments such as cooperatives, extension programs and business.

Food Service management concentrations on establishing the required background necessary for careers such as food service manager, hotel/motel manager, institutional manager and caterer. In fact, this concentration is ideal for a position in the growing fast food industry.

These are a few of the job opportunities that are available to men and women with a home economics degree. Home economists are in high demand in industry because of the diverse nature of their school curriculum.

By Carol Huston and Val Hendrickson

In our modern society, procreation is secondary and a career is primary; whereas in the past, raising a family was a woman’s main goal in life. Many women, presently single and striving for a career, should not be deprived of the opportunities emerging in such a widespread field as home economics. It is true that years ago home economics involved not much more than cooking and sewing but now that the field has broadened we feel people should know about it.

“The home economist is a professional who not only has a general understanding of the whole of home economics but also possesses expertise in a specialized area pertaining to the social, psychological or physical needs of individual human beings. The general goal of home economics is thus interpreted and demonstrated by each professional in terms focused on but not restricted to his or her area of specialization (Journal of Home Economics, March 1976).

Much of society is ignorant of the fact that home economists are extremely talented, knowledgeable, confident and up-to-date. For example, when friends inquire about our major, some responses include, "What do you do run around in an apron all day?" and "Oh, you're going to college to learn how to be a mother?" Those were just a couple of the many negative responses we received. The most common response included some hesitation and then, "Oh, really... that's, nice."

The extensive growth of this profession can be described imaginatively as a tree whose trunk represents the basic field of home economics; the branches, extending in various directions, symbolize beneficial and rewarding careers. The basic description of home economics is management which is involved in these careers.

The various branches of home economics include areas that are obvious such as education, child care and nutrition. Occupations which many have no knowledge of; however, include the following: family relations, interior design and housing, community/inter-national service, consumer economics and management, journalism, Peace Corps/Visa Volunteers, banking... these are only but a few directions one can follow in home economics. The opportunities in this field are limitless.

Home economics is a field which provides knowledge necessary for guiding every human being toward a self-rewarding, fulfilled life in society.

Search Underway For New Director

By Jose Fuentes

Student representation at the state level has undergone a dramatic shock with the resignation of Sam Crane, Executive Director of the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA). Crane was not only the Registered Legislative Agent for the Association but as a student of MSC, he was one of the founders of the state-wide student group.

On behalf of the SGA I would like to extend my most sincere thanks for a job well done. I am certain that he will be successful in future endeavors.

However, with the many issues confronting us both at the Department and the Legislative level, we cannot afford to vacillate. The NJSA has formed a Search Committee for the new Director. Your SGA has secured the proper representation within this committee and, together with our sister colleges we will work to maintain our position of leadership in Trenton.

Another aspect of the NJSA which requires focus is its representative structure. Here again, your SGA has provided the necessary impetus to rectify the current deficiencies.

Elvis - The Sun Sessions, RCA

In 1954 who was to believe that a $42 a week teenaged truck driver from Memphis would become the greatest rock entertainer of all time? Had Sam C. Phillips, director of Sun Records (a local Memphis studio), known the fate of Elvis Presley, he never would have sold Presley’s contract and Sun tapes to RCA in 1955 for only $35,000.

Elvis - The Sun Sessions is a RCA compilation of the first tapes Presley recorded between 1954 and 1955 on the Sun label. The album is a good-size helping of country music with a large side-order of rhythm & blues and soul. These sounds, blended together, constituted the beginnings of rock.

Although the back-up instrumentation is quite primitive – electric, acoustic, bass guitars and drums – Presley transcends his limitations. And so the evolution of Presley’s unique style, including oscillating voice, broken phrasing and fast string pickin’ begins.

Some of the early rock and rollers included are “That’s All Right,” “Blue Moon of Kentucky,” “Good Rockin’ Tonight” and “Trying to Get to You.”

Two versions of the country serenade “I Love You Because” are also included on the album, the second complete with narration. Although Presley lacked the voluptuous depth that characterized his later love songs, the potentiality for its development is quite visible.

Elvis In Concert, RCA, APL2-2587

“And now the end is near/And so I face the final curtain...”

When Elvis Presley sang these words from Paul Anka’s song “My Way” during his June 1977 concert, there was no reason to believe that they would be prophetic.

Two months later, however, the King of rock and roll was dead.

This song, along with many of Presley’s best, are included in the two-record set, Elvis in Concert. The albums contain featured songs from the CBS-es special of his last concert and his final US tour this summer.

The oldies such as “Hound Dog” and “Jailhouse Rock,” although shorter than the original versions, are sung with much of the same vivaciousness as they were almost 20 years ago. Presley’s love songs (“Can’t Help Falling in Love” and “It’s Now or Never...”) overflow with the vibrant sensuality that made him one of the hottest sex symbols of our time.

There are, however, telltale signs of the King’s demise. In the narrative of the renowned ballad “Are You Lonesome Tonight?” the words are so mumbled and slurred that they become incoherent. Whether or not Presley’s stumbling over words in this song or others was merely coincidental, the truth remains that he was no longer able to keep up the fast-paced phrasing which characterized the songs that nurtured the birth of rock.

Also included on the albums are a variety of comments made by those fortunate fans who experienced his last concert. “He’ll always be the King...” said one fan, “no matter what.”

Rockwood of MSC
Is Poe on Broadway

By Phyllis Plitch

Students in Jerome Rockwood’s acting classes can have the rare pleasure of seeing their professor in action on Broadway, portraying the controversial literary figure, Edgar Allan Poe.

As the theater went black before the opening of A Condition of Shadow the same frightening, timeless atmosphere that is so prevalent in Poe’s works filled the audience. The lights grew to expose a dark, dreary setting; dusty books, a bed, a desk, a small wooden stove, a bottle of whiskey and Jerome Rockwood as Poe.

On stage, alone, with no cues other than his own, Rockwood courageously engulfs Poe’s character in a wondrous fashion. The range of Poe’s moods is dramatized and matched by the range of Rockwood’s acting.

The large geometric, brilliantly-colored paintings of Robert Slutzky, the major exhibition which opened last month will remain on view through Nov. 27. The work of Slutzky, professor of architecture at the Cooper Union in N.Y. and visiting critic at Yale University, is related to Mondrian and Josef Albers.

His very large paintings, measuring as much as eight feet wide were included in exhibitions at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; the San Francisco Museum; the Museum of Modern Art; Whitney Museum; Metropolitan Museum of Art; and the Brooklyn Museum.

Next week two exhibitions will open. One called "Every Object Rightly Seen" is a selection of still-life paintings; the other, "Signs and Symbols," is a display of many forms of visual communication — Roman, Arabic and Oriental writings, photographs, ideographs, directional signs, sign language, and other familiar symbols.

The still-life and landscape exhibitions are drawn from the landscape exhibition includes the work of several artists to be discussed by Robert Koenig, the museum's assistant director, in his lectures. A gallery talk on the "Roman Visions" exhibition will be given on Nov. 20 at 2:30 pm by Susan E. Strickler, the museum's curator.

On Nov. 27, at 3:30 pm, Robert Koenig will give a gallery talk on the Slutzky exhibition. Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10-5, Sunday 2-5:30. The museum will be closed Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 24. Gallery talks are open to the public. Admission to the museum is free.

Is ‘Titanic’ Another Disaster?

By Myra Weidman

Rate the Titanic, Clive Cussler, $2.95.

Many novels have been written lately combining fact and fiction. Sometimes it seems as though authors have found it difficult to come up with fresh ideas. They have to dredge up the past, re-creating fatal disasters and glorifying them with maudlin story lines.

With all this “pirating” going on, taking on a task like raising the Titanic requires an extraordinary amount of new material. Clive Cussler has managed to make a breakthrough in this genre, with his new novel Raise the Titanic. Surprisingly enough, Cussler combines the outlandish and the factual and comes up with a palatable story.

Cussler’s stereotyped characters include the government executive with an upcoming ulcer; the dedicated wife in love with her husband but also her quickly rising consciousness and salary check and others.

The outlandish includes miners from a small town in Colorado traveling to Russia in the 1800’s mining a mineral they know nothing about. The dialogue between the Russians resembles that of Batman and Robin with a Russian accent. Combining these details with the relevance of a conniving president and the mystery that has engulfed the Titanic disaster for so many years make this book difficult to put down. The sections that deal with the private lives of the characters detract from the atmosphere of mystery and suspense. Yet, it is the interaction between these characters that adds an extra spark to many pages.

‘Turning Point’: A Study of Life

By Pat Vierschilling

Contributing to the recent study of women’s relationships, 20th Century Fox’s latest release The Turning Point proves to be the most insightful paradigm of this genre. The emotionally articulate performances of Anne Bancroft and Shirley MacLaine; and a gutsy, sensitive screenplay by Arthur Laurents make this a film demanding to be seen.

The Turning Point centers on the friendship of Bancroft, an aging prima ballerina having chosen the lonely, but rewarding life of a disciplined artist and MacLaine, a housewife, mother and one-time rival who sacrificed her ballet career for a loving, yet uninspired life. Their reunion 20 years later sets off a series of rivalries, reconciliations and reunions.

Using the dance world as a microcosm, Laurents focuses in on several “turning points.” Having groomed her daughter (Leslie Browne) for a possible ballet career, MacLaine struggles to come to terms with her daughter’s independence when possible ballet career, MacLaine returns from a four year sabbatical gives a flawless portrayal as Deedee. Mikhail Baryshnikov in his film debut is the roguish dancer, Yuri. He does, however, dominate the screen with his animal magnetism and flamboyant athletic grace. Leslie Browne as Emma is fawnlike in both appearance and action. As were all the dancers, Browne was taken from the American Ballet Theatre.

Director Herbert Ross and executive producer Nora Kaye have given us the best ‘behind the scene’ cinematic expose of the blood, sweat and tears of the American Ballet Theatre. If there is a flaw in Ross’ film, it is the material world coupled by the death of his only true love destroyed Poe and led him to drink and drugs.

As he quotes some lines from The Imp of the Perverse and tells the audience sees an unusual side of Poe, that of the good-humored lover of good stories. He seems playfully eccentric as he explains in his own egocentric way, “the raven almost replaced the eagle as the national bird.” Poe fluctuated between the good humorist and a mournful melancholy person. The darker side of Poe is excellently displayed. Poe is torn between the good humorist and a mournful melancholy person.

Poe's favorite theme: The death of a beautiful woman. Rockwood interpreted "The Raven" in such a way that Poe himself would have loved.

Students who underestimate the talent and the accomplishments of the faculty here will be quite surprised by A Condition of Shadow. Nov. 21 will be the last of three consecutive Mondays that it will be presented at the Bijou theater.

Dr. Rockwood, who also teaches Oral Interpretation of Literature and Dramatic Workshop, will be directing “Thieves’ Carnival” at MSC in the spring.

Benimeo: Player of the Year

Mario Benimeo, MSC football captain and defensive tackle, was named New Jersey College Division Player of the Year. Benimeo led five of his teammates to the first team and three to the second team.

On the NJSCAC first team from the Indians are senior Orlando Alvarez at split end, the leading receiver and scorer, senior tight end Mike Malkinski who caught 12 passes and threw his share of key blocks and offensive right tackle Tom Morton, only a sophomore.

Defensively besides Benimeo, were senior defensive end Mike Fox, a quick and strong lineman and Sam Mills, a freshman sensation who finished second on the team in tackles.

Leading the team in tackles was of course Benimeo. Benimeo was a solid four-year performer for MSC and the anchor of their defensive line. Benimeo made the NJSCAC starting team in each of his four seasons.

Gaining berths on the second team defense were noseguard Ralph Betcher, junior defensive tackle Mark Dorsey and sophomore defensive back Mike Crosby.

A Winner, a Loser and Some Changes

If you closed your eyes for a minute at the MSC-GSC football game last Friday and simply took in the sounds and feelings of the event, it would have brought out some washed away memories of the NFL Championship extravaganzas the Cowboys and Packers used to stage every year in the mid-sixties.

There was the enthusiastic throng of spectators swallowing up every ounce of action, not worrying about their vocal intensity.

There was the aura of knowing that the team managing the most points would bring a fitting climax to the months of preparation, practice and downright butt-busting.

There was the sub-freezing temperature that made the breathing patterns of the mass rise above the stands like a cloud.

There was a winner. There was a loser.

Some of the faces have changed over the past four years. Some of the games have exhibited different strengths or weaknesses by both teams. Most importantly, the outcome has remained constant.

The Indians are once again bridesmaid to the Profs. For a time during the contest, it seemed that both teams should have been the bridesmaid. The Profs bestowed early Christmas gifts to the Indians in the first half by way of a fumble, an interception and a 20-yard punt. MSC managed only 10 points despite the seeming invitation by the Profs to give the game away. The Indians should have had at least 21 points. Championship teams tend to act that way, by taking all points whether they're earned or received.

The offense has been a stumbling block for coach Fred Hill all year. Against many of the opponents, Hill's main concern at halftime should have been whether or not he'd get home in time to tuck the kids in bed. Usually the lack of points gave him other things to think of.

"We feel that we have the people to improve the offense," Hill said while studying that same offense on film in his office. "We'll recruit a couple, but not many. It will mostly be with people who've been playing this year. The only ones we're losing on the line are Hart and Malkinski."

The line, Hill feels that an offense revolves around the line.

"The backs can't go anywhere if there isn't a lineman in front of them knocking people down," Hill noted. "Our line is young and experienced, just what we wanted to get out of this year."

Undoubtedly, another unfriendly clash between these two teams will take place around this time next year. All the hoopla will surface once more in a setting where anything is possible and invariably probable. Only one thing is certain:

There will be a winner, a loser and another memorable game in a long line of games. These two teams wouldn't have it any other way.

Ennis Fourth in Regionals, Qualifies for Nationals

NEW BRUNSWICK -- MSC's Doreen Ennis capped a fourth place finish in the Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (EAIAW) Regional cross country meet at Rutgers University's Buccleuch Park Saturday afternoon.

Ennis posted a time of 17:38 over the 5000 meter course. The senior Phys. Ed. major finished in the top of the pack of the event which featured 165 runners. Ennis' win enabled her to qualify for the Nationals. Success is nothing new to Ennis. She is the national champion in the 1500 meter run. Ennis came in with a time of 4:15.6 last June in the University of California at Los Angeles.

MSC fared well in the overall team competition. The Squaws nabbed a seventh place finish in the 24 school field with 252 points. Penn State University was the No. 1 team with 29 points. The Squaws runners in the meet.

Kathy Mills of Penn State University took individual honors. Mills, considered perhaps the finest runner in the country and a sure bet for the nationals, finished with a time of 16:39. The time was a course record.

MSC's Jean Chadnicki finished 20th at 18:56 just missing the cutoff for the nationals. Carol Conlin (50th) did.

Two weeks before the opening of the 1977 basketball season, MSC basketball coach Ollie Gelston is cautiously optimistic about his Indians.

"I believe we will be a contending club. Barring unforeseen injuries, we'll be a winning club and in the thick of things," Gelston said.

Gelston's reasons for caution are well founded. Two major changes within the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference will definitely have an impact on the status quo.

The first is the new divisional structure of the NISCAC. There will be two divisions, North and South, comprised of four teams each. MSC is grouped with William Paterson College, Ramapo College and Jersey City State College, Glassboro State College, Stockton State College and Keen College and Trenton State College make up the Southern division.

A playoff system has been instituted within the conference. The winners of the respective divisions will play the runners-up in the opposite division. The winners of these contests will face each other for the conference title and the NCAA bid for further post season honors.

"The playoff system is going to change the complexion of things," Gelston said. "A late peaking team will have the advantage with this system."

The other change that Gelston sees as significant is the new transfer ruling that will allow transfer students from NCAA Division III schools who transfer to another NCAA Division III school to retain their eligibility. Prior to this season a transfer student had to sit out one season to regain their eligibility.

"The ruling is going to have a universal impact," Gelston said. "We have two transfers and I'm sure the other schools will have them. It should raise the caliber of competition within the conference."

But Gelston has reason for optimism as well. Seven veterans return from last year's 11-13 club. Five of those are in the backcourt. Doug Brown, Jim McNichol, Tom Frank, Nick Martarazzo and Keith Murray should provide the Tribe with a deep and solid backcourt.

The forecourt returns Tyrone Sherrod and Reggie Belcher. Neither Sherrod or Belcher are taller than 6'6" and their lack of size will have to be compensated for.

Transfers Randy Meinner, a guard, and Tom Young, a 6'6" forward, should provide depth. Ronnie Yuhl and John Hagan, both sub-varsity performers last season, should round out the squad.

Gelston acknowledges the lack of height on his team but feels that quickness and intelligence should more than compensate.

"Our success depends on how smart and how well the team plays together," Gelston said.

The coach hopes that the level of experience and intelligence on the squad will enable them to control the tempo of the game, a quality that Gelston sees only North Carolina University as having succeeded at.

The Squaws' toughest rival remains Rutgers University, current NCAA Division III champions.

"This team is strongest in the breaststroke," Meyer said. "We have two transfers and I'm sure the other schools will have them. It should raise the caliber of competition within the conference."

MSC Gets a Strange Feeling of Deja Vu

By Glenn Welch

GLASSBORO — It has become all too familiar to the MSC football team. For the fourth consecutive year the Tribe has dropped the conference decider against Glassboro State College. However, it was not that aspect of the Tribe’s 13-10 setback to the Profs Friday night in Glassboro that discouraged coach Fred Hill most.

The way they lost is what Hill was more concerned about.

"The whole story of the game was our inability to make the most of the breaks we got," Hill said. "We had chances, especially in the first half but just couldn’t cash in."

If the Indians had been able to take advantage of the breaks they might have been up by two or three touchdowns. Since they didn’t, GSC was able to stay close enough for Herb Neilio to loft a 56-yard bomb to receiver Bo Niland with 12:18 left in the game for the game-winning points. Niland broke free from MSC defenders down the right sideline and grabbed the pass at the MSC 35.

Until that time MSC had led for the entire game.

Despite the fact that the Indians weren’t taking advantage of Prof mistakes in the first half (MSC took possession inside the GSC 34-yard line three times) they still managed to come away with a 10-6 lead at halftime. It was only a matter of time when GSC would break through.

"We just didn’t control play like we did in the first half," Hill admitted.

"Neither team changed any type of game plan, it was simply a fact of not playing in the second half as well as we did in the first."

When Niland caught the touchdown pass, it was the third time in four losses that the Indians were either tied or leading going into the last quarter.

The Indians were unable to pass consistently in the first half but were able to run well. The running faltered in the second half, which put the Indians away.

"Nobody can be blamed for the loss," Hill said in response to the speculation that a few dropped passes cost the Indians the game. "I don’t put the rap on anyone that may have affected his receivers."

Although the temperatures dropped below freezing, Prof quarterback Neilio hit 12 of his 23 passes, eight in a row at one point.

Hill disagreed that the cold weather might have affected his receivers. Although the temperatures dropped below freezing, Prof quarterback Neilio hit 12 of his 23 passes, eight in a row at one point.

Does Final Record Tell Whole Story?

GLASSBORO — When it was all over the result was as it has been for the past four years — Glassboro State College was once again the NJSCAC football champs. Four yards made the difference between success and failure, as MSC failed to score in the closing minutes and lost to the Profs 13-10.

The Tribe finished at 6-4, an improvement over last season’s 4-5-1 mark but not enough to win it all. Some might see the season as a failure but not MSC coach Fred Hill.

"This season was a definite improvement over last year," the second year coach stated.

The Indians got off to a great start and at one point stood at 5-1. But a heartbreaking second half loss to Fordham took the wind out of the sails as they lost three of their last four.

Hill felt that the team’s inexperience made the difference down the stretch.

"We started quite a few freshmen and sophomores this season, including four of five offensive linemen," he said. "We really didn’t have the maturity for a championship team."

The Tribe lost their share of close games. "Some progress was lost when you realize that we lost three of our games by three points," Hill indicated.

Four of the five home games this season were played in torrential rain and naturally a muddy field. That’s a factor that may have affected the development of a potent offense.

"I’ve never seen a season with this much foul weather," Hill said. "It hindered our offensive development although we managed to win all four games. However, you can’t put that much blame on the weather."

Using underclassmen may have hurt the Indians this year but could pay off next year.

"We have some fine young players this year," Hill said. "Sam Mills, Joe Rebholz, Tom Morton and John Henry to name just a few. We had a 51 man sub-varsity team this year. We hope to
