Dorm dampened

by Dennis Bloshuk

Minor flooding occurred on the first floor of Bohn Hall last week, as a result of heavy rains caused by Hurricane David.

A problem with the pumps used to get rid of the extra water was the result of the flooding, according to Raymond Stover, dean of housing.

Bernard Charles, a resident of the first floor in the dorm, stated that the water was about four to five inches in the hall and the bathroom.

"The water was so high, that we could not open the bathroom door because of the water pressure," Charles said. He also added that there was only two inches in his room, and that there were no damages in his room.

According to Stover, the pumps were under repair at the time of the flooding. A power failure just before the beginning of school had caused the pumps to go out and they had to be checked since then to make sure they were still working.

An outside company was working on them at the time, and was planning to come back the next day to finish the job. When the storm hit, the pumps were not able to handle the excess water from the rains, and flooding was the result.

However, the flooding was cleaned up by many people, Stover said. Included in the clean-up was a number of staff members of Bohn Hall, the Civil Service, and the student maintenance workers. Stover said that the rooms would be cleaned and deodorized "to maintain as good a living area as possible."

Charles said that another resident on his floor had his stereo speakers ruined and another moved off of the first floor because of the flooding.

When asked about the constant flooding on the first floor, Charles said, "We're really used to it. We don't have to clean it up; someone comes in and does it. As long as someone else cleans it up, I don't mind."

The NJ legislature has approved a $95 million bond issue to appear on the ballot this coming November. If the bond is approved, MSC is to receive $10.5 million to build a new fine and performing arts center and an addition to Sprague Library. There will be another $2.3 million allotted for energy conservation projects, and renovations for the benefit of handicapped persons.

The bill still awaits NJ Governor Brendan Byrne's signature, before it can go on the ballot. Then the NJ taxpayers will have to decide whether or not to let the bond issue go through.

Quinn said the bond will be paid back at about $5 million per year. The department of higher education first drew up plans and sent a recommendation to the board of higher education. From there, it passed to the NJ Commission on Capital Budgeting and Planning who made the final recommendation to the legislature.

If the bond is passed in November, Quinn said construction on the projects at MSC probably will not be underway until 1981 or 1982. The new fine arts facility, which is being planned because MSC has been designated as a center of fine and performing arts will include an 800-seat concert hall, 30 practice rooms, small film theaters, a resource area, and new classrooms. It will be about 100,000 sq. ft. Quinn said that the north end of the quarry is being considered as the construction site. The total cost is $4.9 million.

The addition to Sprague Library will be made on the north side of the existing building. The addition will have more book capacity and more tables. The total cost of the addition is $5.6 million.

Quinn said that if the bill passes, the state Division of Building and Construction will immediately begin interviewing architects for all the projects of all the state schools.

From the $2.3 million maintenance allowance, $500,000 will help fund a $1.5 million project that includes replacing underground water and sewer lines that are old, and changing the fire alarm systems in some of the buildings. Another $900,000 will go towards repairs to the electrical system, and water and steam distribution to the new fine and performing arts center.

Two hundred thousand dollars will partially fund a $420,000 project to improve water pressure to meet standards for protection against fire. The final $700,000 will be used to provide facilities for handicapped students to meet federal law guidelines.

TV's turn on

by Naedine Hazell

As of next week, bored MSC students will no longer be able to watch The Flinstones. The formerly dormant tv monitors are finally to be used for their designated purpose. The tv monitors are scattered in various buildings across campus, most prominently at the information desk in the Student Center.

The $65,000 monitors were bought by the SGA and installed in the spring and summer of 1978. However, throughout the following year they were the subject of much controversy between the SGA and the college administration concerning the SGA's rights to protection from censorship by the administration. The controversy is in the process of being solved.

The standing agreement between the SGA and the administration leaves the SGA with top priority concerning scheduling. "Student activities will oversee all the operations of the tv monitors. However the SGA gets top priority for important situations," Nadar Tavkoli, SGA president, said.

"We do have priority which is right in view of the fact that we paid for them," Tavkoli continued.

For example, if the SGA were sponsoring a tuition rally or any...

Changes coming
by Lisa Burkhart

MSC students should soon see their "fee money at work" this fall when construction of the Student Center Annex begins in late November. At present, the project is being submitted by about one dozen contractors vying for the $8 million contract to build the Annex and the Quarry Development project, which should be started in the spring. The Student Buildings Fee, which will pay for the $9.3 million project, was raised this fall according to the schedule established by the college Board of Trustees in May, 1978. During the academic year 1978-79, the fee was $3 per credit, up to a maximum of $36; this semester, the fee which appeared on tuition bills read $3.85 per credit, up to a maximum of $46.20. In September, 1980, the fee will settle at $3 per credit, making the maximum $56.40 per semester.

One major change in the plans was announced this summer when it was discovered that the locker building and indoor recreational facility had to be cut down in size. Building on the Annex would be expected to cause little inconvenience to the students, and hopefully, the project will be completed by November 1981.

The Annex will be an addition to the present Student Center, and will house many of the student offices now located on the fourth floor of the Student Center. The Quarry project will develop the Quarry and indoor recreational facility including three softball fields, a multi-purpose field, a soccer field, and an all weather track. The Annex will be used for walking, jogging, bicycling, and cross country competition. The area will also have suitable lighting for night use.

Each of these changes was necessitated by a space crunch—the Annex will give room for expansion of the now crowded student center, and the Quarry project will allow growth of the student intramural sports program. In its restricted form, the Annex may cause some distraction to classes in Partridge Hall, but no blasting will be permitted in this area.

Quinn explained that traffic will be heavier on College Avenue while equipment moves in and out of the area. The heavy traffic on College Avenue may be worth the inconvenience to students since the eventual widening of the intersection of Webster Avenue and College Avenue is part of total addition to the Student Center. Upon completion, the student will be feeling the third lane moving next to the Annex, for the purpose of student drop-offs and, shuttle bus stops at the Student Center.

Bids from contractors will be opened Sept. 27 in the Maintenance Building on campus. Any student wishing to view the specifications is invited to see them in the SGA office, fourth floor of the Student Center. The final specifications are expected to be approved at the Board of Trustees meeting on Sept. 11.

Schneider leaves

by Mary Ann DeFiore

Carl J. Schneider, dean of graduate studies at MSC, has left his position to leave abroad for the fall semester. The position will be filled to capacity.

The most dramatic change in admissions compared to other years is the increase in the number of part-time students. Buechler has noted a 19 percent increase in the number of part-time students. The students are also older than the traditional 18-19 year old range. This is true of both part and full-timers.

Enrollment increasing

by Bonnie Jerbasi

The fall semester is now in full swing as everything seems to be finally settling down on campus. Students are quickly becoming familiar with new professors assigned for this year, it has been estimated that he and his staff will be visiting some 150 to 200 high schools this year. Various talks by open house programs, career days and personal interviews are on the agenda.

Apathy attacked

Student Activities at Kean College has decided to nip the apathy problem in the bud by sponsoring an Anti-Apathy Week beginning September 17. The week was formerly referred to as Campus Awareness Week. The aim of this week is to familiarize freshman and other students of the activities available to them on campus.

The events will be kicked off Monday by country-rock performers Steve Forbert and Kingfish. Various student organizations will have displays depicting what their organizations are all about and how they operate.

"The main crux of the week is to make Kean-ers out of strangers," said Renaldo Stokes, editor-in-chief of Kean's newspaper, the Independent. The program is coordinated by Ken Blowero, general manager of WKC-radio at Kean and Karen Wignall, vice-president of the student organization at Kean.

Housing hassles

Students who counted themselves lucky to get housing at Rutgers' Cook and Busch campuses have been sadly disappointed. The fact is there are massive housing shortages.

Rutgers University newspaper Targum reported that "the construction of 228 on-campus apartments was hampered by extensive delays during the summer; therefore only 224 of the 912 spaces to be occupied were ready at the beginning of the semester."

The delays during the summer were the result of a number of small strikes and 28 straight days of rain which delayed the roofing.

Students who were promised the incomplete housing have been offered the options of commuting and canceling their housing contract without penalty or accepting a tripled housing contract. The system has caused a bigger problem. A usual one-step bookbuying system.

"The main crux of the week is to make Kean-ers out of strangers," said Renaldo Stokes, editor-in-chief of Kean's newspaper, the Independent. The program is coordinated by Ken Blowero, general manager of WKC-radio at Kean and Karen Wignall, vice-president of the student organization at Kean.

Rapists rampant

The Glassboro State College (GSC) campus has been the scene of two sexual assaults in the past four months, according to Gwyn Jones, news editor for GSC's newspaper, the Whit.

The first rape took place May 31, and the second on Aug. 3. It to Gwyn Jones, news editor for GSC's newspaper, the Whit.

The education of more than 25,000 NJ college students has been interrupted because of teachers' strikes at the three campuses of Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU), as well as Union College in Cranford and Monmouth College in West Long Branch.

The major issue in the three college strikes is higher wages. The faculty at the three campuses of FDU-Madison, Florham, Rutherford, Teaneck — were voting last night to see if a see if a settlement could be reached.

The leaders look to 1979-80

by Lisa Burkhart

In preparation for the nine-month term of office ahead of them, 65 SGA legislators and Class One officers retreated to the Poconos last weekend for the annual SGA Leadership Conference. The three-day conference, which cost the SGA approximately $3,000, hosted 25 of the new SGA legislators and five of the college's administrators.

The conference gave the legislators the opportunity to get to know each other, to learn more about the strengths and weaknesses of the college, and to become familiar with the structure of the SGA and the Class One organizations. The conference consisted of a number of workshops on particular subjects, and free time for the legislators to find out about their fellow student representatives whom they will be working with in the next year.

"The legislators developed an easy working relationship," Michele Gierla, SGA vice president said after the conference. "The legislators are now aware of their role in the SGA, and will have an easier time working on bills together, and on special projects.

"If you know people personally and can socialize with them, then you'll get a lot more work done," she added.

David W. D. Dickson, MSC, president, Lawton Blanton, dean of students, Elliot Mininberg, vice president for administration and finance, and Tom Stepnowski, director of student activities addressed the legislators on their views of the college. Saturday evening, James Harris, Assistant Dean of Students, spoke to the group concerning trends in affirmative action on campus and in student activities.

Blanton, who has been the dean of students for over 20 years, opened his talk with a brief sketch of the history of the college since he had been here. "Let me first tell all of you that the 'good old days' weren't so good at all," he told the audience amidst their laughter at his stories. "I think the good old days are in the future. Montclair is a tremendous college, and it only gets better.

Dickson spoke of the construction which will be starting on the campus this academic year. In referring to the building of the new dorm which will begin in the spring, he mentioned the food facilities in Bohn Hall.

"I hope the food will be suitable for the new dining hall in the dorm," he said. The legislators enjoyed his comments.

Included on the weekend's agenda were workshops covering SGA procedures, such as qualifications for new SGA-chartered organizations, Robert's Rules of Order, which structures the weekly legislative meetings, and cabinet presentations.

Gierla, who attended last year's conference compared very well with her first one. "We did more work at this year's Leadership Conference. We'd rather have people say we did too much work rather than not enough," she said.

Many legislators felt that the free time they spent with each other was the most beneficial part of the trip. Gierla agreed that the friendly and cooperative mood of the conference will be an asset in the coming year.

"We are very pleased with the enthusiasm we saw in the legislators, and we are confident that our goals will be accomplished because of the good composition of the legislature," she concluded.

Career counseling

Eileen Bruck, assistant director of the Office of Career Services, and Moreen Rabino, a counselor in the Co-op Education Program, both at MSC, will conduct a workshop on "Exploring Career Options" on Thurs., Sept. 13, from 6 to 8 pm in Russ Hall Lounge.

Sponsored by the Second Careers Program (for people 25 and older), in cooperation with the Offices of Careers and Co-op Education, the workshop is designed especially for adults and is open to students on campus and to men and women in the larger community. There is no charge, but those planning to attend are asked to pre-register by calling the Second Careers Office at 893-4431.

Campus Police Report

Crime climbing

by Dave Yourish

While not running at an alarming high rate, crime at MSC is still occurring enough so that Jayne Rich, chief of campus police, has started a Crime Prevention Unit (CPU). The CPU will try to gather the information when a crime has occurred, and do so quickly so the area police in Montclair and Little Falls will have the information, as well as the campus police. It is hoped that all the police agencies will be able to apprehend suspects quicker.

The CPU will include Sgt. Charles Giblin, Officers Debbie Newcombe, and Victoria Brown. It will also include other officers who are now on different jobs. All of the above mentioned officers have had extensive training in crime prevention.

The CPU will try to help students as much as they can, but the students will have to give the CPU as much information as possible as well as report crimes immediately. If this is not done, "We can't do our jobs," Giblin stated.

The CPU has their hands full already, as a larceny occurred on Aug. 19. In the Psychological Education building on Clove Road, someone entered by breaking the back window and stole two typewriters and a radio. However, a witness saw the suspect and gave a description to the police. Also, the police lifted fingerprints from the area, and Newcombe will be investigating this case.

On Aug. 1 Paul Modean, a Clifton resident, had his moped stolen from the front of the Student Center. Modean notified the police and in 45 minutes they recovered his moped when they found it hidden in a bush by Stone Hall.

A significant factor in this case was the victim didn't have a lock on his moped, creating "a crime of opportunity," according to Rich. The way students leave valuables creates easy pickings for the thieves, she explained.

On the first day of classes, Robert Christ's 1969 Ford was stolen. The CPU will be working on this case. Rich believes that this is not a result of a car ring operation at MSC, because of the apprehension of a group of juveniles last year who were stealing from cars as well as taking cars.

On Aug. 17, a car ran the Freshmen Hill Road stop sign. Police officers Kowsalski and Kinnie gave pursuit in order to issue a summons. The suspect did not stop and the passenger in the car threw out a large plastic bag which contained over 25 grams of marijuana. After throwing the bag out, the suspects stopped. The two were apprehended, booked, and later freed after meeting the $2,500 bail that was set for each of them, pending a court hearing.

Another incident with drugs occurred and again it was handled by officer Kowsalski. While he was on foot patrol, he stopped a vehicle for a moving violation and found that the driver had a concealed weapon, a knife, and the driver also was in possession of under 25 grams of marijuana. This case is also still pending for a court hearing.

Malicious damage is still a problem at MSC. On Aug. 10, while a campus police officer was patrolling at 5:30 am by the Math Science building, he heard a noise by Bohn Hall. When he came to the entrance of Bohn Hall, he noticed that the two light poles were torn down. No suspects were caught. If one is, he or she will be billed for the amount of damage that was done.

This information has been taken from the Campus Police Report and is public information.

Speech workshop being offered

The Montclair Institute for Continuing Education in Special Education at MSC will join with the NJ Speech and Hearing Association in presenting a one-day workshop for speech-language pathologists on Sat., Sept. 15, at the college.

The workshop is a continuation and extension of one given last spring at the NJSHA convention on "Interdisciplinary Approach to the IEP (Individualized Educational Program) Conference." According to Harold M. School, a professor in the department of communication sciences and disorders at MSC and workshop leader, the emphasis this time will be on the organization and administration of the testing, classifying, planning, and remediation processes for children who are eligible for speech correction services.

Pres. Pro-Temp elected

by Bob Racipoppo

Steve Dempsey, presently serving his third year as an SGA legislator, has been elected president pro tempore by his fellow representatives. As president pro tempore Dempsey will assume the following responsibilities - chairman of the meetings of the legislative body and executive board. He will also act as an informal floor leader of the new officer supported by 25 of the 34 members present.

The SGA legislative body gathered yesterday for its second weekly meeting of the fall semester.

Several bills came up before the body. Among them was the appointment of Esther Hampton as vice president of the academic affairs. The appointment was unanimously approved. The appointments of Andy McCormick and Jay Stuborsky were also approved as legislators at-large. A maximum of 30 seats remain open for the possible appointments by President Tavakoli to the legislature.

Another alternative would include the home economics department accommodating the dorms with an appropriate committee. Dickson and LaBoff are expected to be present at various future meals at both Bohn and Freeman cafeterias, all of which will be unexpected. The New Jersey Student Association (NJSJA) will hold a state-wide meeting at noon Sun., Sept. 16 at Jersey City State College.

Anatomy of the student gov't

by David Anderson

With a budget of $450,000 in students' money, the SGA is a complex non-profit organization modeled after administrative government.

The SGA divides power between two branches: the executive and the legislative. The executive branch is led by Nader Tavakoli SGA president. According to the constitution of SGA, the president has the power to appoint his cabinet officers (subject to legislative approval), veto legislative bills, and act as official representative of the SGA.

Michele Gieria, executive vice-president, presides over the legislative meetings and succeeds the president in the event of vacancy.

Donna Santarino, treasurer, reviews financial legislation, disburses monies and plays a major role in formulating the fiscal year budget. Carmen Santiago, secretary, performs the duties associated with the minutes of the meeting, maintaining the records of the organization, and supervising correspondence.

The executive branch is composed of representatives from each department elected by its constituency and one to three representatives per school.

The legislature formulates, reviews and approves the major policy and legislation of the SGA. The legislative body is composed of representatives from each department elected by its constituency and one to three representatives per school.

The ICP Scholarship, offered by the Institute for Computer Programming, Inc., will consist of two-year's tuition plus education expenses to students during registration. The scholarship will be utilized to support students during registration.

The ICP Scholarship Committee, made up of highly qualified men and women in the information processing industry, will base their selection on the student's accumulative grade point average in his or her field of study, and overall grade point average. The deadline for filing scholarship applications is Oct. 15.

The SGA divides power into three branches: the executive, legislative and judiciary. The executive branch is led by Nader Tavakoli SGA president. According to the constitution of SGA, the president has the power to appoint his cabinet officers (subject to legislative approval), veto legislative bills, and act as official representative of the SGA.

Unlike many student government organizations at other colleges, MSC's SGA functions virtually autonomously from the college administration. The dean and assistant dean of students and the director of student activities serve as advisors but they exert no significant control on the policy or financial procedures of the organization. This autonomy helps the SGA function in the interest of the students, providing needed student services and programming.

Computer scholarships available

Larry A. Welke, president of (International Computer Programs, Inc.) ICP the oldest and largest publisher for the information processing industry, has announced the second annual ICP Scholarship Program. The scholarship, to be awarded for the 1980-81 school year, is designed to be an investment in the future of the information processing industry.

To qualify for the ICP Scholarship, applicants must be enrolled in a university, college, or junior college science or computer science program as a sophomore or a junior. The scholarship will consist of one-year's tuition plus education expenses up to a maximum of $5,000.00 at the US college or university of the winner's choice.

The ICP Scholarship Committee, made up of highly qualified men and women in the information processing industry, will base their selection on the student's accumulative grade point average in his or her field of study, and overall grade point average. The deadline for filing scholarship applications is Oct. 15.

Applications will be available through the data processing and financial aid departments of all United States colleges and universities. The deadline for filing scholarship applications is Oct. 15. For further information, contact Carol Stumpf at ICP (800) 426-2329.

And Have Fun At The Same Time.
A Class 1 Organization of the SGA
by Louis Lavelle

In case you are wondering what kind of person would run for and win the office of SGA president, Nader Tavakoli will tell you, “I’m a boring person. I don’t go to parties. Between schoolwork and the duties of his office, it is easy to see why the 21-year-old senior 1979-1980 SGA president has difficulty finding time for leisure activities. However, when he does, he enjoys tennis, basketball, and a good game of ping-pong. Although he says he really does not have any hobbies, he does have a small stamp collection. When he goes on vacation, he likes secluded spots.

In his ping-pong games, as in politics, Tavakoli displays an aggressive, competitive character. Speaking of ping-pong, Tavakoli says, “I hate to lose.” Speaking of the presidency, he said, “I saw something that I wanted. If someone has the time and the opportunity, he can do it, so I did.”

Born in Iran on Feb. 16, 1958, Tavakoli immigrated to the US when he was just eight years old. “It was my parents’ decision to come over,” he said, declining to give a reason. He attended Dickinson High School in Jersey City where the family settled. In high school, he was involved in the student government and senior class activities. Upon entering MSC, he said, “I had no ambitions of becoming president.” As a sophomore, he was appointed legislator under SGA president Jose Fuentes. A year later he was elected president pro-tempore and a year after that, president.

Tavakoli is currently a resident at Clove Hall. He previously lived off-campus and at Bohn Hall. A political science major, minoring in public administration, Tavakoli anticipates entering law school—possibly Georgetown. He was awarded a $500 Alumni Scholarship for this academic year.

Elected office is not in Tavakoli’s future as of now. He would like to operate a private law practice. “I feel that being SGA president is giving me experience in dealing with people, making decisions, and I guess in a sense, justice.”

During the interview in his crowded, busy office, Tavakoli described the job as president as “more than I expected.” He laughed, and then continued, “It will be a great education. I’m learning about contracts, financial procedures, policy decisions, and also how to deal with professional people.” Tavakoli concluded the interview by commenting on a perennial college topic. “Apathy is a monster created by society.” He explained that with rising prices, many students are forced to take part-time jobs in order to meet their increased expenses. With many students having to work their way through college, they just do not have the time to devote to school-related activities, he said.

“You name it,” Michele Gierla, SGA vice-president, said describing her life, “and I did it.”

Born and living in Belleville, she has been extremely active ever since high school. “My hobbies are kind of organizational hobbies,” Gierla said. The political science/economics major is not only the vice-president of the SGA, but a member of the Economics Club. She was treasurer of the Economics Club last year, and this year the club wants her to be president. However, with her commitment to the SGA, she might have to turn down the offer.

In high school Gierla was also a very busy person. During her four years in high school, she was class president, the lead in a play, a drum majorette, and a member of the honor society.

Gierla has also held numerous jobs in her active life. She worked in a hospital, a bakery, and in three different banks. She also worked for State Sen. Harrison Williams (D-NJ). In the hospital, she worked as a junior nurses’ aid and in the bakery she was in charge of selling cupcakes. While employed by Williams, she did correspondence work, which included answering mail and telephones to help people who complained about problems, or people who wanted information.

She worked at three different banks as a teller, and she eventually became head teller in one. In these banks, she has had many experiences. She has been robbed twice while a teller, once with the robber holding a gun to her face. Another time, the bank she was working in had just gotten robbed as she was coming to work in her car. “I was just coming in the entrance, when the robbers were coming out the same way,” Gierla said. She wouldn’t let them past and she kept honking the horn until the bank robbers let her in first. Then, the robbers drove away, without Gierla knowing that they were thieves. She did see the car very clearly and she later went to court to testify.

As for her future goals, Gierla hopes to go to law school. However, if she does not get into law school, she will go for her masters in business administration. Although she does not like interviews, Gierla would like to get a job working for the 1980 census since she is interested in statistics.

“I simply enjoy doing beneficial things for those around me,” Brian Cige, student representative to the board of trustees, said. Cige is a junior, originally from Somerset, N.J. He is a political science major with a possible second major in economics.

Cige has been involved in politics for many years. He sat behind his well organized but relatively empty desk and listed a few of his credits. He helped form the pre-law society, helped organize the Montclair Athletic Committee (MAC), and was a contributing factor in the Steering Committee of SGA. He is a member in Alpha Phi Omega (APO), a national fraternity. He is also a resident assistant (RA) in Stone Hall this year. He has been a member of such committees as the pre-law society, the government administrative committee of SGA, of which he was chairman, and the election committee. He was a member of Latin American Student Organization (LASO), the Jewish Student Union (JSU), and the Italian Student Organization (ISO).

In his free time Cige likes to play some tennis, go to the shore in the summer, and go camping. “In short, I like to do anything that will help me relax because my various political and social activities keep me very busy,” he said. He continued in his easy going, friendly manner that he likes things to be well organized.

After graduation, Cige plans to go to law school. “I hope some place near Washington D.C., maybe Georgetown University.” As for his future career, Cige is still uncertain. He enjoys the atmosphere of politics and he likes to “hobnob” with administrators.

“Anything that will get me close to the excitement of the business or political world is for me,” he concluded.

Sisters double

There's an old saying that good things come in small packages. If there is any truth in that statement, then it's a sure bet that we will be hearing more from the singing duo of Sandra and Carol Gibson. A pair of identical twins who just barely break the five foot mark, they are two very talented young women.

Whether it's singing in television commercials as they have done in the past, or eventually delivering an aria at the Metropolitan Opera, a dream both girls share, these music majors from MSC are bound to be a hit. The twins, both attractive with blue eyes, brown hair, and bubbling personalities, share more than just the same physical appearance. In conversation one detects an energy flow between them, a silent rapport that is finely-tuned from working so closely together. The fact that they have enjoyed success over the last nine years as a duo attests to this; yet in spite of this, they are still two unique, different individuals.

Born in Ireland, they arrived in this country at the age of seven. An early interest in the arts was a result of their father, who Sandy said, "always loved classical music and Irish tenors." By age nine they had received scholarships to study piano and violin at a summer music preparatory school in Montclair, where the family was living at the time. It wasn't till they entered seventh grade at Brooklawn-Parsippany Junior High that they started singing together as a duo. "It was our music teacher there, Linda Pickert Feldman, who helped us. Our first performance was in front of 1,000 people, and we had to learn the song in less than a week. It went so well that we began to sing together all the time."

Throughout the balance of their years in junior high and high school they were involved in singing whenever possible. "We sang in church and in plays, and every year we performed for the PTA. We were also members of the North Jersey Regional Chorus."

After graduation from Parsippany Hills High School, their singing careers looked as if they would be set aside. Neither sister wanted to pursue music in college. It was Carol who first changed her mind and decided to give it a go. Sandy soon joined her sister, and both are now entering their senior year as music majors at MSC. They are interested in study all the Renaissance and languages. Another form of music they would like to devote time to is jazz. "I find it a unique style of singing."

As to future plans, Sandy said, "I would like to get a masters in voice performance or study voice in the city. Study voice is an art and I want to develop this, but most of all I would love to sing opera." Carol said, "I feel God gave me my voice, and it's my responsibility to develop this gift. I want to go with opera which means I will have to study all the Renaissance languages. Another form of music I would like to devote time to is jazz. I find it a unique style of singing."

Asked about their singing and what they like most about it, Sandy answered, "The real reason we sing is we enjoy it. Our parents have always stood behind us with love and support, which has also helped make it a pleasurable experience for us, and really we just love to sing. Who could ask for more?"

A perpetual sight during spring-like and summer-like weather, the old-fashioned hot dog stand provides students with a quick bite to eat between classes. Lea Curran serves up a hot dog to every hungry person.

Sandra and Carol Gibson, born in Ireland, share their love for music, their success in tv commercials and their dream for a career in singing.
The lower part of the quarry is hardly recognizable at dawn. The many spaces available would be a joy to anybody who has spent dozens of the vastness of MSC's parking facilities.

Perhaps the most familiar aspect of MSC, the parking lot is undoubtedly a notorious landmark on campus. For a majority of students, parking is a problem. For some, it is just a way of life, a ubiquitous part of their education.

Although the pits may be a horrendous sight for the student arriving to class at ten minutes to noon, for the photographer who looked upon them at 6:00 am and again at 11:30 pm, they were a seeming work of art. The hills and curves of the sloping quarry appear as if they were geographical wonders from another world.

A view from the disabled lot shows the parking situation for those who arrive at 5:30 pm for evening classes is similar to that of the daytime students.

An awesome effect rushes from the parking lot at 11:30 pm when the emptiness seems to shed mysterious calls from the night.
This year, especially, parking is a metaphor for fuel consumption. Even with the oppressing fear of long gas lines few students seem to have faith in the theory behind carpooling—that is, the less driving they would do the more fuel they would conserve. The SGA has established a detailed list of students and their hometowns which is available in the Drop-in Center for those interested in forming carpools. Hopefully, people will take advantage of this, and maybe save some money usually spent at the pumps.

By late afternoon the pits empty out at the same rapid pace they fill up.
Keep watching

The true test of any training program is in the performance of the trainee after the program is over. The same will hold true for the final evaluation of the annual SGA Leadership Conference which was held last weekend.

Whenever an SGA executive board takes 65 legislators to the Poconos, there will be differences of opinion over the worth of the trip. The grapevine on the fourth floor of the Student Center has already echoed comments ranging from total praise to total criticism of the weekend; the comments have pointed to valid pros and cons of the whole idea of a Leadership Conference.

Our answer to the question is an emphatic—maybe!

The worth of the conference can be measured with two yardsticks. One measure would denote the effectiveness of the leadership training in SGA procedures. The other would tell us the strength of the cooperative attitude among the legislators that was built up over the weekend.

The training results will be proven in short time. With each successive meeting, the wisdom or ignorance of the legislators will shine through their comments—wisdom comes from a thorough knowledge of SGA, the college, and their constituencies; ignorance comes from underestimating the importance of being a legislator and a disregard for the value of compromise and cooperation. Each of these qualities was touched upon during the weekend.

The spirit of togetherness in the legislature will be tested throughout the year. It may be easy to judge at this moment that the 65 people will work together, but those ideas may well fizzle in the months of February, March, and April.

If judgements are to be made at this point on this year's conference, our advice would be to have an optimistic attitude. The true results of the conference will be heavily influenced by the predispositions of the legislators. An open mind could be the best medicine of all.

Watch the bonds

In November, NJ state taxpayers will be asked to approve a $95 million bond issue for capital improvements to the eight state colleges and Rutgers University. For the first time since the early 1970's, the state is recognizing the need to approach the taxpayers in support of new building and improvements to its higher educational facilities.

The bond could mean a great deal to the MSC campus. Students who have practiced on the present practice rooms and instructional areas. Any student who tries to find something in the library realizes the shortages of space and resources which an addition to the building would greatly improve.

NJ public college students have a responsibility to themselves and their successors to find out more about the bond issue. The Montclarion will be running a number of articles in the coming weeks concerning the referendum. Read the articles, and those which appear in the professional newspapers. Any referendum which asks taxpayers to pay more money goes in handicapped from the start. Make sure that you at least know what your own vote will be.

On Second Thought

A few of my favorite things

by Meryl Yourish

"It's the little things in life that count," goes the ad. How true. The following are some little things that annoy me. Very much.

Parking, especially in the pit monster. Especially trying to park at 9:55 when you have a 10 am class.

And while we're on the subject, trying to get past a car that is playing the waiting game.

Then we have the obstacle of crossing the road on a campus with a 15 mph speed limit. Cars do not give pedestrians the right-of-way. Nor do they obey the speed limit very often. Numerous students have been seen frantically scrabbling for the curb as a Trans-Am zips by at 50 mph down Webster Road.

The litter on the steps and mall of the Student Center. With garbage cans set up every square yard, you'd think people might be able to find one once in a while.

People who walk slow. These people usually hog the sidewalk, so that you can only do two things: (a)go around them (thereby stepping in the mud puddle), or (b)knock them down. Let me warn you, though, (b) can bring exceptionally bad results; especially if the person is the captain of the football team. The only good result is that you won't have to worry about walking for another six months, since both your legs will be in casts.

People who walk on the wrong side of the stairs—it is virtually impossible to get to class in time when you have to push your way through idiots who don't know their left from their right.

On the same token we have the lovers' goodbye kiss (they must separate for a whole hour), almost always in the classroom doorway.

While the two are totally lost in a passionate embrace, you hover around the side of the door clearing your throat and saying things like, "Excuse me. Time to go to class. Could you move over, please?" and finally, in desperation, you scream "FIRE!!" and smugly walk through the door as the two pick themselves up from opposite ends of the hall.

Teachers who keep you ten minutes after class is supposed to be over. That's always fun. Especially when you're in Partridge and your next class is in Russ Hall.

People who hog a machine in the game room. So you're an expert on one machine, Big deal. That doesn't mean you own it. Someone else might want to use it too, you know.

People who walk slow. These people usually hog the sidewalk, so that you can only do two things: (a)go around them (thereby stepping in the mud puddle), or (b)knock them down. Let me warn you, though, (b) can bring exceptionally bad results; especially if the person is the captain of the football team. The only good result is that you won't have to worry about walking for another six months, since both your legs will be in casts.

Last but not least, I detest hearing someone with two healthy legs and no visible physical problem say, "Well, I couldn't find a parking space so I parked in the handicapped lot." I sincerely hope that those clods are driving through downtown Newark some night at 3 am and get four flat tires.

That would be a bit more annoying.

A touch of Class

by Lori Scutti

Upon entering its third year of life, Class One Concerts is now stronger and more organized than ever. Last year the umbilical chord was severed and the club became a recognized, chartered, subsidized organization: A service to the students more facilitating than the registrar, to be sure. There have always been concerts at MSC sponsored by the individual clubs who could appropriate the money. Class One Concerts now combines the monies of these clubs and organizes it into one bank for a more organized and respected method of concert presentation.

The founder of the club is Lynn Genesko, who brought eight top acts to MSC, among them Peter Allen, Meatloaf, Chuck Mangione, Roy Ayers. Although criticized by her peers as being overbearing, she ran what she terms a "benevolent dictatorship" and got the job done. The average price for a ticket to the aforementioned entertainment during Lynn's reign was three dollars, a good deal by anyone's standards.

Last year's producer was Tony Guggino. Under Tony we saw five acts, including Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes, Patti Smith, and Gil Scott Heron to name a few—literally. He did not run as many shows as the previous year, and his average ticket price was five dollars. Although he did an adequate job, when asked to comment on the performance of her successor, the club's founder replied, "he left much to be desired."

This brings us to the fall of 1979. A new producer is heading Class One Concerts, an amiable Scott Clark, who has been with the organization since it began. I spoke with Clark concerning his aspirations and intentions as producer of a now stronger than ever club.

Are you happy with the way Class One Concerts was run last year? Do you see room for improvement?

There is always room for improvement. I was, however, happy with last year. We did our best, though this year Class One is more organized, being a chartered club.

You can't please all the people all the time. How does this saying relate to Class One's selection of entertainment?

This organization tries to please all of the people most of the time. We can not do that without knowing what the students want. Student feedback and communication is crucial in order for this organization to be a valid service to the student body.

Do you take whatever name groups you can get, or is there money for discretion?

Well we're working with a budget of roughly $23,000/semester. Although this isn't a lot, the money is not the main concern. As with most of the departments, space is the holdup. We are only given by the college two or three days a month in which we can hold a concert. If, say, a group we want for the 10th says no, but yes to the 9th, we have to forget it because there is no hall space for that alternative date. This is the foremost limitation on selection of groups.

A perceptive producer will recognize a soon-to-be-hot performer and get him. For example, Billy Joel played here a few years ago. How important are upcoming musical trends in the decision regarding an act for MSC?

Again, feedback and student voices determine if a trend should be followed up on.

Who are you planning on having this semester?

Joe Jackson will be at MSC Sept. 23. October isn't set up yet, and we are locked out of November—no hall space.

Do you have any information to offer about yourself or Class One Concerts?

We want involvement. And I say "we" because this is an organization that works together, not an autocracy.

The Who carry on

by Kevin Malmud

The Who Capitol Theatre, Passaic Sept. 10

"Someone called while you were out, something about Washington DC. They didn't sound like they knew exactly what."

"Ma, what in God's name are you talking about?"

"Someone from the Capitol called, they said something about the what or when."

"Not the what or when Ma, the Who! I won Who tickets for the Capitol Theatre!"

Obtaining tickets for the Who at the Capitol was almost as much of an event as seeing the actual concert. Those who were lucky enough to be picked from the 300,000 postcards sent in received a call from the Capitol saying that you were eligible to purchase two tickets. Purchasing the tickets involved a procedure comparable to obtaining entrance to the Pentagon. The winners were given a personal code number, a specific time to appear, and told to bring at least two forms of identification.

There have been many complaints and hostilities directed at John Scher and the Capitol Theatre, many of which have been totally justifiable. However, one cannot overlook the contribution the Capitol has made to N.J. John Scher has been putting on concerts for the past seven years, and has been quite successful at it. The Who joins a list of supergroups including The Rolling Stones, The Allman Brothers, Bruce Springsteen, and The Grateful Dead. They have all graced the stage of the relatively tiny 3,000 seat hall.

In 1978 The Who decided to retire from the concert circuit. This was a result of conflict within the group about touring and Guitarist Peter Townsend's loss of hearing. Townsend's hearing resulted in the death of their legendary drummer Keith Moon apparently gave the band motivation to tour once more. Joining the original members Roger Daltrey, Peter Townsend, and John Entwistle have been the addition of former Faces drummer Kenny Jones and keyboard player John "Rabbit" Bundrick.

The Who provided the kind of sound that has gained them the reputation of being one of rock's truly exceptional live acts. As an early predecessor to punk rock. The Who have always provided an energetic show, displaying exceptional stage presence and providing a solid rock sound—here they conducted business as usual. The audience reacted and expressed their approval to the eerie buzz-saw guitar chords played by Townsend, along with his flying leaps and Daltrey's twirling of his microphone.

The two and a half hour set included such Who classics as: "Magic Bus," "Long Live Rock," "Baba O'Riley," "My Generation," and "Won't Get Fooled Again." Not being a group known for their ability to jam or take extended solos, a low point in the performance was an extended version of "Sister Disco" from their last studio album Who Are You. Bringing the concert to its highest peak was a medley of song's from their historic rock opera Tommy. The medley included "Pinball Wizard," "See Me, Feel Me," and "underwater."

The absence of the antics and voracious drumming of the late Keith Moon left a small hole in the Who's performance. Kenny Jones, while providing a more than adequate performance, made it a point not to draw any undue attention.

Although The Who did not end the concert with their traditional smashing of their instruments, they provided a very solid rock and roll show. In my book, the kids are certainly alright.
Dynamic tension in Grovers Corners

by Ilan Strasser

The fashion and charm of turn-of-the-century America is vividly brought to life in the current Players production of Our Town. The Thornton Wilder play, set in Grovers Corners, New Hampshire, tells the story of that town and some of its remarkable citizens.

The central characters of the play are Emily Webb and George Gibbs, who like most of the people in Grovers Corners, fall in love and get married. Their story is told around the backdrop of the story of the town itself, a town that its residents call "just another ordinary town." Robert J. Penotti gives a creditable performance as George and Denise Simone plays an absolutely breathtaking Emily.

Ms. Simone, who sparkles throughout, brings life to a part that can easily bog down in melodrama and cliche. That she transcends her character is more of an indication of her acting ability and the fine production by Leo Hudzik. Life in Grovers Corners is very simple. Cars are still not a part of the American scene and the events that com-prise day to day living are never too complex. Still, the relationships between the families and friends in the little town are full of dynamic tension.

The tension is exquisitely highlighted by the imaginative sets of Brian Archer and the sensitive lighting by David Weiss. The small-town story is therefore brought to life and its characters made real not because of a nostalgia for an earlier time period, but because of the audience's true empathy for the characters.

The tragedy that befalls Emily at the end of the play eventually becomes a symbol of what our lives should be. We are told that we can become so much more than our feelings and ignorances allow us. Our Town, with Penotti and Simone serving as its best advertisement, is a joy to behold. Stephen W. Clark, in his role as the stage manager, proves to be a versatile and expressive actor. His introduction of the different acts is both good-natured and full of insight. The part is deftly handled by Clark and I'll be watching for him again. Players should be applauded for tackling a work so prone to the sentimental, and truly touching work.

Coppola's bungle in the jungle

by Dirk Bender

It's taken long enough, but we moviegoers have finally received a stream of movies dealing with our war in Vietnam. The studios shied away from filmed recreations of what the public could more intensely catch on the seven-o'clock news every day. Now that we've pulled out it's fair game; you can explore the effects on domestic life in Coming Home, or pull out the six-pack, tuck in the 30.06 and indulge in The Deer Hunter. Or if you're up to wallowing in all-American guilt, there's Francis Ford Coppola's Apocalypse Now.

If things had gone according to schedule, Coppola's epic would've preceded the other Vietflicks, but typhoons, script revisions and a personnel change take time, so much of the impact has already been automatically lost. What remains is a visually stunning film which goes nowhere (or, in this case, to Marlon Brando). We view this through the eyes of Willard (Martin Sheen), a man sent up the river and into Cambodia with four men in a boat: They're on an Army intelligence mission to seek out and destroy a renegade Green Beret officer named Kurtz (Brando, who is fortunately only in the picture for 20 minutes, portrays this psychotic leader of a ragtag private army). The film intends to say something about the horror of war while assaulting our senses. The latter is achieved spectacularly, to the point where the viewer becomes numbed to the violence—here a small village equipped with one anti-aircraft gun is blown to bits in a swirling helicopter attack, topping off with some bright yellow-orange napalm from above; there a family gets cut in half on their boat by machine-gun—but somehow, this intelligence mission doesn't seem to be war-epic material; it oversteps itself. It's not a character study either—Brando's role isn't substantial enough for that; Robert Duvall's Colonel Kilgore, who mixes surfing and combat in an enjoyably gung-ho fashion, isn't around long enough either; and Sheen doesn't change from start to finish. The incidents portrayed onscreen are simply made to seem too isolated to make any sort of universal statement about the war, it just dazes. It dazes in an entertaining fashion, though, and for some slight purpose (undoubtedly not the way its creator had intended), that is, the psychic preparation for the entrance into Brando's outpost. Sheen and the two surviving comrades find themselves in the ruins of a Buddhist temple for the last half hour of the film: It is this section of Apocalypse Now which has received the harshest criticism, and for good reason, because the initial, horrifying shock inflicted by the scores of mutilated bodies hanging on meat hooks and severed heads is unnecessarily drawn out to get the most out of Brando's useless part. His shaven head is photographed glowingly against his shadowy living quarters: He is the film's muttering Messiah.

The ending you'll get depends on where you've seen it. At its current run at the Zeigfield in New York the possibility for a final air attack is revealed as one man remains near a base radio while Sheen deals with Brando, and Coppola has shot Napalm sequences for a big-bang ending. But what's playing now concludes quietly, with Sheen finishing his job and heading back toward Vietnam in his boat. Unorthodox and interesting, to be sure, but it's equally frustrating and noncommittal. Still, it is a movie which should be seen despite its flaws, Forget the obscene economics involved ($30 million to complete, 51-1/2 million to Brando alone, in case you did forget), and the hype attached. Just go with an open mind, because this is a film that tries. Perhaps some day the definitive film will be made on this subject: Apocalypse Now is a beginning.
Zappa: making you and me look stupid

Frank Zappa
Joe's Garage - Act 1
Zappa SRZ-1-1603

by Ian Strasser

There is very little that Frank Zappa's detractors have been able to do in the last five years to change my mind about the man. Zappa is no genius for at least half of those years, and though he is certainly not the most accessible of artists, I feel that he deserves to be seen as such.

While it is true that his songs are perverse and degenerate, it is also true that they ring with the subtle (sometimes) humor of truth. Zappa is unparalleled in destroying our ideas and notions into tiny fragments. His blunt satire, almost always derogatory and insulter, expresses the artistic search for truth. The art of course is not art in a classic sense - it is simply an art of the common man.

Joe's Garage, which was originally conceived as a triple-lp set, is the follow-up to last year's wonderfully deranged and successful Sheik Yerbouti. While it took me many listenings to finally appreciate the special feel of Yerbouti, it took only one listening to Joe's Garage to convince me that Zappa has finally reached the promise that his early music only slightly hinted at.

Joe's Garage is a musical piece which concentrates on the consequences that arise when music is found to be a harmful influence. Laws are passed to obliterate music from society in order to safeguard the nation's youth. What we've got here is an updated, 1980's version of "Reefer Madness." The main thrust of the story deals with Joe, a member in a local band, and Mary, his girlfriend. The plot reveals how both get corrupted through the horrible evils of music, and it does so without sparing any details. The narrator, called The Central Scrutinizer, appears throughout the album and is helpful in explaining the silly, but funny plot twists. He also serves as a social commentator.

The album opens with "Entrance Of The Central Scrutinizer," whose responsibility is to "enforce all the laws that haven't been passed yet." Among these laws are the abolition of music. The voice is mechanical and backed up by a steady ponderous beat. "Joe's Garage" is next and it is here where we are introduced to Joe and his band. They're a seriously small time band (they only play one song) and even that offends the neighborhood. But the band gets an agent and soon things are looking up. "Catholic Girls" is next and what Sheik Yerbouti's "Jewish Princess" did to defile and degrade young Jewish girls, so "Catholic Girls" does the same to that breed. The song is noticeably vulgar, yet at the same time extremely humorous. Listening to it will bring back memories most of us have been through. Zappa, as always, is blunt at the object of his disapproval: "Catholic Girls: In a little white dress/Catholic Girls/They never confess." Yuk, yuk.

The side ends with "Crew Shut," where Mary is now the sexual toy that Toad-O (Joe's band) plays with - except Joe doesn't know. Full of more vulgar references, the song nonetheless portrays an accurate picture of what female groupies are like. It's not complementary, but rather a clear reflection of rock and roll life on the road.

Side Two opens with "Wet T-Shirt Nite." It's a snappy little song with tremendous guitar work by Zappa and a wonderful beat. Here, we see Mary trying to win the contest so she can get back home. Real nice.

"Toad-O," an excellent instrumental follows. The song is reminiscent of Zoot Allures "Black Napkins" in its urgency and straightforwardness. The guitar solo is very impressive and Zappa is in complete control of the band. Another great instrumental piece can be found in the next song which deals with venereal disease which Joe gets from Lucille, a lusty Jack-In-The-Box-Girl. Entitled "Why Does It Hurt When I Pee?," the song is terrifically funny and shows that Ike Willis, who handles all the album's lead vocals, to be in excellent voice.

The eight scenes that make up Act I of Joe's Garage are by turns vulgar, witty, infuriating, and honest. Zappa's genius really comes through when the realization is observed that there are many different things going on through the album. Many different vocal performances, excellent instrumental, and tight group performances, Zappa's firm control of his musical styles, have produced an album that will set a precedent for his future work. For one can't wait for the second and third acts. This is Zappa at his best.

Where old records go to die

by The Masked Miser

Are you fed up with paying $7.98 for records today, which on the most part, feature mediocre music? I am. And a lot of other people apparently are too because major record labels are actually losing money on this. Besides the increased usage of black tapes (which this writer already employs), the main factors are obviously third-rate music for first-rate prices. But what does a poor soul do in this situation? Does he stop buying records? Is he forced to borrow and lend albums just so he can have a chance to listen to fresh material? Will he actually (gasp) turn on a radio?

Cheer up poor soul! You can get first-rate (or at least second-rate) vinyl for third-rate prices. Where? Chances are you have been passing up the answer for years without giving it a second thought. It's cheap records! Now, a careful distinction must be made as to what I am specifically referring to, so there will be no misunderstandings. I am not referring to "cheep" records where there are "all label" sales which offer series 798 records for $5.29. But what are we worried about? If the album you buy has only two good cuts, you'll want to open up your window and throw the record out (or jump out yourself). One last point to make is that in time, you will find that many of your own records will suffer the same fate as these records which you have short-sightedly snubbed. So come on! Go out and get those cheap records!

We need help

Wanted: male or female. No previous experience necessary. Excellent opportunity to meet other people on campus. Any major accepted.

If you qualify for any of the above, the Student Intramural and Leisure Council (SILC) is looking for your help. SILC is a Class One organization of the SGA which provides the intramural activities for the MSC community.

Despite a popular misconception, SILC is not just for recreation and physical education majors, but prides itself on having a wide variety of students with various majors.

If you would like more information on SILC, just stop by the office on the fourth floor of the Student Center directly across from the elevator, or call 893-5245.

For those of you who are searching endlessly for a job on campus, we may have just what you are looking for. The intramural department needs students to keep score and referee the various events run by SILC. Weekly Wednesday luncheon meetings are held to discuss rules and a referee banquet is held at the end of each semester. Added incentive is the "rookie ref of the year" and "referee of the year" awards, which are given to the outstanding person in each category. Referees cleared for financial aid are paid through work/study funds provided by the college. Contact the director of intramurals, McKinley Boston, at 893-4411, or head official, Mickey Corpora at 893-5245.

This year the tennis tournament will be held on consecutive weekends in September, men's and women's singles, (advanced and average) will be this weekend, Sept. 15 and 16.

Mixed doubles (advanced and average) will be Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22 and 23, both will begin at 10 am. Applications are available in the SILC office. On-site registration will also be held 15 minutes prior to the start of the tournament.

This Monday, Sept. 17 will be the beginning of our evening programming for the fall semester. The women's volleyball league will be held Monday—Thursday from 6 to 7 pm in Panzer Gym. Tuesday evenings will offer new and exciting open floor hockey beginning at 7 pm.

WBL lands Ternyik

Janice Ternyik (Caldwell, NJ), a former starting center for MSC's Women's Basketball League (WBL) has signed a professional basketball contract with the San Francisco Pioneers of the WBL.

Ternyik thus joins MSC All-American and teammate Pat Colasurdo to sign with the Pioneers. Colasurdo was the league's number one draft pick in the June free agent draft. Ternyik also became the third member of MSC's 1978-79 team to join the professional ranks. The other being Karen Smith with the New York Stars.

"I just took a chance in trying out for the Pioneers," Ternyik said. "Pat (Colasurdo) encouraged me to come to the free agents try-outs in early July, so I figured I have nothing to lose and that it would be a good experience," she added.

The try-out camp went from July 9 to 13, and the former Squaw center was fortunate enough to come home with a contract in her hands.

The intramural department at MSC has been very fortunate in its recruiting attempts to provide solid officiating for intramural competition. All intramural officials are MSC students who for the most part tackle the task with little or no experience.

During the past six years the men and women who officiate intramurals have formed a strong Officials' Club. The club was created so that weekly meetings could be held to discuss rules, problems with teams, and establish an atmosphere of esprit de corps among student officials.

There are approximately 20 members (men and women) who attend the weekly meetings and officiate intramural games. Every official is given an opportunity to work "practice games" before each season starts. The purpose of this is two-fold: it gives the experienced referee a chance to review the rules in a game situation and the new referee has an opportunity to learn the rules and to be observed by the "head official." Some of the fringe benefits included are an annual banquet, an officials' jacket, a pay increase after one year, and rookie referee of the year awards.

This year's Head of Officials is Mickey Corpora. He can be contacted at the SILC Office. Newly elected Assistant Head of Officials is Mary Johnson. If you are interested in officiating please attend one of the weekly meetings on Wednesdays at noon. For further

Last year's MSC defensive secondary had its troubles. (Remember the infamous Kaye Comments; "Coach Hill is looking for defensive backs. Anyone interested contact the Athletic Office." ) Last week, I predicted that this year's secondary would be "rejuvenated." MSC's defensive secondary was superb Saturday against Glassboro State College (GSC). Safeties Mike Smith and Mike Griglik had fine games but it was the play of cornerback Carl Adams which sparked MSC to victory. Adams is this week's MSC athlete of the week.

Adams, playing in his first college game, came up with seven tackles, two interceptions, and a fumble recovery. His first interception early in the second quarter led to the game's only touchdown (MSC won 10-0). "I had my man covered on the play," Adams recalled. "The ball slipped through Mike Smith's hands and I picked it off." Adams returned the ball 16 yards and four plays later Bill Grundy darted 42 yards for a score. "I was real nervous from the start. After the first pass, I calmed down. After the touchdown, I felt real good."

Aside from his fine work at corner back, the freshman from North Edison also did a standout job on special teams. Late in the game, Adams virtually sealed GSC's doom by recovering a muffed punt by GSC's Steve Murray. "The ball bounced right to me," Adams related with a wide grin on his face.

Football is not the only sport at which Carl excels and in fact, it was the team's greatest strength. "Football is not the only sport at which Carl excels and in fact, it was the team's greatest strength."

William P. Dioguardi, who has devoted over 30 years of service to MSC as an athletic director, coach, and athletic director will be honored on Mon. September 17 at Mayfair Farms, West Orange.

The roast will pay tribute to Dioguardi's long years of service to MSC. The affair will come just two days after the debut of the resurfacing of MSC's football gridiron with astro turf, a Dioguardi project for the last ten years.

Appointed director of athletics at MSC in 1969, Dioguardi has led the Indians to national attention in a number of men's and women's sports. In 1979 season he headed the baseball coach, the Indians scored 300 wins while losing only 139 games. He posted a winning record in 19 of his 20 seasons.

An interesting season

by Dave Yorsh

Reggie Jackson once said, "It ain't where you are when the leaves are green, it's where you are when the leaves are brown."

The leaves are still green but, are on their way to turning brown. If the leaves are still green as far as MSC is concerned, baseballs are still flying.

This fall, the Tribe has a schedule slated for 21 games. On that schedule stands six doubleheaders. Already one has been played, and that was last week against Upsala. In the first game co-captain Greg Petite suffered the loss, by a 4-3 margin. But in the second game MSC came back with more of an offense, for a 7-1 triumph. Following was another pitcher's duel and MSC made the most of it to win 2-1.

The other game that was played against Glassboro State College (GSC) 10-9" Schoenig related yesterday at Holster Park. "Two years ago we had seven starters back. This year Schoenig is healthy and should continue his hot hitting.

On third base is Bob Fortunato, who led the Indians last fall in hitting. Fortunato also played junior varsity last year and will be available as the designated hitter and he'll be able to play the outfield.

Besides Petite, Roe, and Buccino the Tribe pitching staff looks very strong. Danny Bowerbank and Jay Aldrich are two freshmen who are looking to join the staff. The duo were all-staters in high school and are considered to have a lot of potential. Also, returning to the staff are Glen Dwyer and Bob Henriques. Henriques will be starting today's FDU-Teaneck game. Bob Campo is another transfer who comes from Deleware University.

Guarino and Gaeta will be working on the nautilus weight machine. The interesting thing to see what effect this will have on their power in the spring. Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox used the nautilus machine over the winter and row has 36 home runs this year compared to about 26 last season.

If everything goes according to plan this spring should be an exciting one for baseball. "We think we got the players to take us to a national championship," Coach Norm Schoenig stated yesterday at Holster Park. "Two years ago we went to Maryland and lost to Glassboro State College (GSC) 10-9" Schoenig related.
Veterans spurn optimism

The MSC women's tennis team is coming off a winning season for the first time in quite awhile.

Coach Linda Sue Galate is looking forward to an even better season, considering the loss of two seniors from the team. "I am looking forward to a strong season. New talent has come out for the team and that could prove to be enough for us to hold a good position for the season."

The Squaws will return their number two and three singles players in Sue Brown and Pat McNamara. Brown will move up to the number one spot, while McNamara should move up to number two.

Also returning for MSC will be the great duo of Sandy Eberwein and Mary Tuffy. Eberwein and Tuffy were 9-2 last year, and look to improve on that mark.

The Squaws have added matches against Centenary College, the US Military College and Fordham University, bringing their match total to 14.

MSC will begin the season with their first match against Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU) on Fri., Sept. 14 at 8 pm.

The rest of the Squaws season looks like this.

Mon., Sept. 17 Upsala home 3:30 pm
Thurs., Sept. 20 Seton Hall away 3:30 pm

Thurs., Sept. 27 Bridgeport home 3:30 pm

Tribe defense does it

by Kenneth Lambert

In the last five years, the defensive unit for the Indians has been very much in evidence. The defense was definitely visible on Saturday to anyone who was there, as MSC defeated Glassboro State College (GSC) 10-0. They came up with nine Prof turnovers, and allowed only 149 yards in total offense. MSC came up with five interceptions and four fumbles to thwart any scoring opportunities.

MSC's offense had 255 yards, but scored just 10 points. Two MSC touchdowns were called back because of penalties.

The 10 points by the Tribe were a result of the aggressive defense. Carl Adams, a freshman defensive back intercepted a John Havers pass attempt and ran it back 16 yards. A clipping penalty nullified the return, but MSC took over on their 45. It took the Indians four plays to score the touchdown. Tailback Bill Grundy ran 42 yards for the score.

Another MSC touch down was called back, a Scott Fischer to tightened Hubert Bond pass of 30 yards was negated because of another penalty.

A three yard run for an apparent touchdown by Mike Horn was called back. The Indians had many chances to score but penalties once again held them back.

There were some bright spots for the offense as well. Mike Horn carried the ball 24 times for 119 yards, despite the fact that everyone on the defense expected him to carry it a lot. Bill Grundy, another good MSC tailback had 76 yards on 17 carries with one touchdown.

Guard Bill Powers and fullback Mike Hensler made some really good blocks, including the one that sprang the 42 yard run by Grundy. Defensive for MSC, linebacker Sam Mills enjoyed a solid game. He had 14 tackles, five solo and nine assisted. Brown, another line backer for the Indians enjoyed a good game, he had seven assisted tackles as well as an interception, which set up a field goal.

MSC's next score came as a result of another defensive gem. Dave Brown starting in first collegiate game, intercepted another Havers pass, the second of five on the day, returned it to the GSC 15. The Indians managed only eight yards and had to settle for a 25 yard field goal by Keith Sahlin.

While one game may not give enough of an impression about the Indians, the team's performance left some things to be desired. The offense was asleep in the 10-0 victory. Interceptions during the second period led to both scores.

Carl Adams, playing in his first collegiate game for MSC, picked off his first interception for a touchdown. The other interception was made by Dave Brown, this one setting up a Keith Sahlin field goal from 25 yards.

The victory was made possible by the Indians defense, as they held the Profs scoreless throughout the game. The victory over GSC marked the second consecutive year MSC defeated the Profs, something they hadn't done in eight years.

Prior to last year's victory, GSC had maintained a mastery over MSC. In the past, when this game was the last one of the season and not the first, it also was for

If last Saturday's game against the Profs of Glassboro State College (GSC) was any indication of the season to come, it will once again be up to the tough defense of MSC to hold our team together.

MSC had one scoring drive in the game following Adams' interception. Bill Grundy's 42-yard-scramper went for most of the yardage in the 55-yard-drive. Coach Fred Hill will have much work ahead with the offense, as they missed several other scoring chances.

The Indians next play the Seahawks of Wagner College on Saturday night. It will mark the first football game played on the new artificial turf surface, although MSC has previously played at Giants Stadium on the turf.

The Indians are much improved this year and Coach Fred Hill would like to prove that his team's 8-2 record of last year was no fluke. The team also finished up with a perfect 5-0 mark in the NJSCAC. The record was their best in over a decade.

The schedule for MSC doesn't let up. After Wagner, the Indians travel to East Stroudsburg State College (ESSC) to tackle the Warriors. ESSC has always been rough on MSC, who haven't won in the last five tries. If MSC is to convince the skeptics of its improved team, then the two game will be must victories for the 1979 season.
