Trenton--A $95 million bond issue to appropriate money to NJ state colleges for improvements and renovations will definitely go before NJ voters on the ballot this coming November. This past Tuesday, Brendan Byrne, NJ governor, signed the bill into law that the bond issue will be placed on the ballot. The NJ Legislature had previously given their approval to having the referendum appear on the ballot. With his pen poised, ready to sign, Byrne said, "Some bills I sign, and say it is now the law. When I sign a bond issue, we merely take one step in a process seeking public opinion whether or not to spend the money."

T. Edward Hollander, chancellor of higher education, sat at Byrne's left side during the signing. Before he signed it, Byrne asked Hollander if so much money was really needed for state colleges with enrollments decreasing as the birth rate decreases. "Enrollments are stable," Hollander replied. He said that enrollments at the state colleges would not drop until the late 1980's or 1990's.

Hollander continued that the bond would actually save money for the taxpaying public. He said part of the money will be used to install energy saving devices in some campus buildings. The chancellor pointed out that although it will not save money, updating the campuses to accommodate handicapped people will insure their right to higher education.

Sen. William Hamilton (D-Middlesex) described the bond going before the voters as "a further commitment to higher education in NJ."

"It will round out the tremendous investments that people made in the 60's," he said.

Hamilton said that in the 1960's, NJ taxpayers paid a lot of money to erect new dorms on state college campuses to handle an influx of students during the early 1970's. He said that because of the greater numbers of students, there must be additions and improvements to existing buildings.

Two major plans on the drawing board at MSC are an addition to Sprague Library and a new Fine and Performing Arts Center. MSC will also be making energy efficient changes, and improvements to help the handicapped with the proposed bond money.

Byrne warned the crowd of about 60 who witnessed the signing, that the bond issue would not be an easy thing to get voter approval. Hollander commented that former NJ governors Robert Meyner and William Cahill will chair a citizens committee to gain voter support.

Ernest May, a member of the MSC Board of Trustees, gave advice to MSC students. "The key is that students have the vote, and get their families to vote," he said. May was at the signing along with David W.D. Dickson, MSC president, Gerald LeBuff, chairman of the Board of Trustees, Kelsey Murdoch and Lilian Valdes, a trustee.

A higher education bond issue was signed by Brendan Byrne, NJ governor (center), this past Tuesday. The fate of the bond issue will be in the hands of NJ voters when it appears as a referendum on the November ballot. Overlooking the signing were Sen. William Hamilton (D-Middlesex) and T. Edward Hollander, NJ chancellor of higher education (right).

MSC will temporarily be losing 400 parking spots in order for the new 640 room dorm to be constructed. A new 1000 space parking lot will be built simultaneously with the new dorm, according to Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, and John T. Shearman, assistant director of housing.

The new dorm will be located in the Bohn Hall parking lot. Construction could begin as early as December. The massive project is being funded by the Educational Facilities Authority (EFA).

The total project cost is estimated at over $11 million. Approximately $7 million will be going to the building of the dorm with another $2.5 million going to the estimated construction cost.

The building is designed to save energy. It is a basic parallelogram shape enabling the inner rooms, those facing into the courtyard, to retain heat. A regular building, where all of the windows face outward, wastes heat because there is nothing there to hold it in.

The new parking lot will be built in the undeveloped part of the Quarry. With the additional 1000 spots minus the 400 spots that will be lost from the Bohn Hall parking lot, MSC will end up with 600 more parking spaces.

The Health Center, which serves as the Campus Infirmary, will be moved to the first floor of the new five floor dorm. This will make it easier for the handicapped, as well as other students, to reach it.

The new dorm will have its own cafeteria. It will be for students in that dorm as well as those in Bohn, Stone, Freeman and Webster.

To fund the project, EFA will sell 35-year bonds to private individuals or corporations. The money will be paid back with a part of each student's tuition. "Our hope is that it will be done in two years--by September 1981," Shearman said. He also added that there are many variables such as strikes, that could delay construction.

Riding High

Unknown to most students, the MSC Riding Club/Team places second in having received the most awards and affiliations of all MSC clubs and teams.

It all began about seven years ago when a small team of four members worked its way up to fifth position in the Eastern Intercollegiate Division. Of the 38 other colleges and universities participating in this circuit, USMA, FDU (Teaneck), and Stony Brook State College remain MSC's prime competitors.

Heading this year's first of a series of 10 intercollegiate competitions is the MSC Horse Show. The club officers, undergraduates, and alumni have been working together in a concerted effort to make this year's show a huge success.

The show, consisting of over 200 competitors from 28 colleges, will be held Sun., Sept. 30 from 8:30 am until 5 pm. in Briarwood Farms in Oldwick, NJ. The grounds can be reached by taking Route 80 west to 287 south to Route 78 west. Get off at the second exit, Oldwick-Whitthouse. Turn right off the exit. After 2.3 miles turn left onto Hill & Dale Rd. Follow this road for 2.5 miles. The stable is on the left.

MSC to get the business
by Louis Lavelle

If all goes well, MSC will soon have a new Masters in Business Administration (MBA) program, according to Fred Kelly, director of the division of business.

The new program has been more than six years in the making. Starting in the summer of 1973, MSC submitted to the Board of Higher Education (BHE) a preliminary program announcement declaring its intention of starting a new MBA program.

In 1975, MSC was asked by the board to consider a consortium in which the courses for the new program would be taught here, at William Paterson College (WPC) and at Kearney College. In 1976, however, the idea of a consortium was refected on the grounds that the exchange of students between the colleges and the uneven quality of the faculty would make the plan undesirable.

Also in 1975, outside consultants were brought to MSC to determine if an MBA program here would be feasible. In 1977 their findings prompted the college to request information from the BHE on how to establish the program.

In the summer of 1978, the BHE had three consultants visit MSC, WPC, and Jersey City State College (JCCS). The consultants also met with representatives from Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU), Rutgers Graduate School in Newark, and New Jersey Institute of Technology (NJIT), all three of which had graduate programs in business or management at the time.

Amid protest from competing institutions, the consultants recommended that MBA programs be permitted at both MSC and WPC. In the summer of 1979 the BHE agreed to accept proposals from the two schools.

MSC submitted its proposal in August, making changes of a minor nature in the past few weeks. If all goes according to schedule, it will be reviewed by the BHE by December.

However, if this new MBA program is to be accredited by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB), MSC's undergradu-

Suit still continues
by Dennis Bloshuk

"The college will not settle," Jeff Jones, deputy attorney general for NJ, said. "To have a landfill constructed on that site." This statement was made in reference to the Carrino landfill contract, which has been argued over for the past four years.

On Sept. 15, 1975, MSC filed a suit in Passaic County Court against the Carrino Contracting and Trucking C. of Belleville, NJ. MSC contended that Carrino had failed to comply with certain stipulations in the contract, before he started dumping in the 7.9 acre area near the NJ public tv tower.

The main stipulation was that Carrino was to line the bottom of the area with clay, and to install pipes to carry moisture from the dumping so that it would not seep into the drinking water supplies. When Carrino had failed to do this, MSC filed a civil suit against Carrino, in order to prevent him from dumping any further.

The court ruled in favor of MSC, and stated that Carrino was no longer allowed to dump there.

Carrino appealed the case to the NJ Appellate Court, and the decision by the Appellate Court was in favor of Carrino. MSC took the case to the NJ Supreme Court in February 1978. However, the Supreme Court said that it could not make a decision in the case, but that they could only review it.

As of right now, Little Falls is also fighting Carrino about the landfill. Little Falls contends that they have the right to regulate the landfill, since it is in their town. However, when the case was taken to court, it ruled in favor of Carrino. Little Falls is appealing the decision which will have a direct effect in what will happen at MSC. A decision is expected between November and January.

The decision is particularly important to Little Falls and MSC. If Little Falls wins the decision, that means that Carrino had no right to start the landfill without following the stipulations of the contract first.

If the decision is in favor of Carrino, that means that MSC would have to pay Carrino a specific amount of money for cancelling the contract before it was completed.

Ticketing declines
by Carla Zarro

The campus parking regulations which were revised by the Board of Transportation Affairs (BOTA) last year are still in effect. According to Jayne Rich, director of campus security, "Things are much improved."

Last year's regulations are being enforced but discretion is used in the issuing of tickets.

The amount of ticketing and towing is less compared to last year's figures. During the fall semester of last year, when these rules were first implemented, between 10 and 12 cars a day were ticketed in the first two weeks. Since the start of this semester only 12 cars have received tickets.

"I am very pleased with the cooperation of MSC students and I hope it will continue," Rich said during an interview in her office. "I think Montclair students are super.

According to Rich, some of the biggest problems are: students parking in faculty-staff lots, unauthorized parking in the disabled lot, parking at the gas pumps, parking at the end of roadways, and speeding.

Tickets issued on campus are $5. If payment is ignored the price is raised to $10. If this one goes unpaid the fine is $10 and the student will be referred to the dean and disciplinary action will be taken. Municipal tickets will be given out for all moving violations and serious parking violations.

Cars parked overnight without the proper decal are referred to the housing director. Anyone driving on the grass will have to pay for any damages he causes. Some fines from last year have been collected.

The college is now using the towing services of Sam's Garage near Park & Watchung Avenues, Montclair. They have a cash-only policy for getting back towed cars.

If anyone wishes to have a copy of the parking regulations, they can pick one up at Jayne Rich's office in the Law Enforcement Building behind faculty-staff lot seven.

The proposed site of the Carrino landfill, in the area across from the Clove Road apartments, has been a subject of much disagreement over the past few years.
Profs return

Striking teachers at Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU) agreed to a settlement on Thurs., Sept. 13, according to Al Bellenchia, managing editor of the Gauntlet.

The original dispute was over a proposal made by the administration to include a work-load clause in the teachers' contracts. The proposal, which would have required all professors to meet with a minimal number of students per year, was eventually dropped.

According to Bellenchia, the teachers had asked for a seven- and one-half percent increase in their salary for one year, and cost of living increases for the other two. They settled for an eight percent increase for each of the three years.

Minorities mad

Last spring, over 700 black students participated in two major demonstrations on the Rutgers University campus (New Brunswick), according to Bruce Stockier, news editor of the Rutgers' Daily Targum.

They protested institutional racism, and presented a list of demands to the administration. They suggested having more facilities and social events for black students, a higher admission of blacks, and more minority members on the faculty.

A task force report was submitted by the Board of Governors during the meeting held on Sept. 14, 1979.

Black students threatened that there might be a recurrence of demonstrations this school year if their previous demands are not met.

Drill done

William Paterson College just recently staged a fire drill for the Heritage and Pioneer Dormitories, according to Sue Merchant, news editor of the Beacon.

The North Halden Fire and Police departments participated in this event.

They discovered that the students on the upper floors of both dorms could not be rescued effectively in the case of a real fire. This is due to the placement of the school's garbage dumpsters. Actions being taken to correct the problem.

Frat fumes

The Latin fraternity and sorority at Kean College are in the process of petitioning against the Financial Aid Office, according to Renaldo Stokes, editor of the Independent.

The petitioning students are angry because they feel they do not receive any assistance in filling out the financial aid forms. They are also tired of waiting in lines for two hours to hear that their grant applications have been turned down.

The students seriously feel that something should be done about this.

Renaldo Stokes stated that the petition has received an overwhelming amount of support.

Ring orders ready

by Tracy Bernthal

Sixty dollars may buy you your college ring. Prices go up to $130.

Since last year, certain changes have been made to eliminate the causes of student complaints about Josten's, the ring company that supplies MSU.

According to Michele Gierla, SGA vice president, last year some students were dissatisfied with the ring when they received it.

Other students who bought rings last year complained that they were not aware that rings made of "Lustrum, a non-precious white metal, were available. Lustrum is less expensive than silver or gold."

"Complaints about the rings included chipped stones, incorrect signature or initials, etc," Gierla said. Josten's now supplies postage paid mailing envelopes so that any dissatisfied customer may return the ring immediately, she said.

These envelopes are available at the SGA Office.

Josten's now advertises their Lustrum rings more. All ring styles are available in Lustrum, silver, and 10 or 14 carat white or yellow gold, Gierla said.

Rings are displayed every Wednesday in the Student Center lobby. Check ads in the Montclarion for times. A sales representative, she continued, is present to answer any questions or take orders. A deposit is required when an order is placed. The remaining payment is made COD.

Delivery to your home usually takes six to eight weeks, she said.

Any freshman, sophomore, junior, senior, or graduate student may order a ring with the name of the college, graduation year, and degree designed on the outside of the ring, she said.

Special promotions offered by Josten's include a trade-in on high school rings, or discarding a particular style or stone is ordered, Gierla said.

Ring styles include traditional, school and curriculum, dinner, fashion, miniature, and college signet rings. A special series of athletic styled rings are available. Featured sports for men and women include baseball, basketball, gymnastics and tennis.

Get involved

by Ann Marie Miskewicz

Now that the chaotic first weeks of school are over, many students may be looking for an organization or a club to join.

This Wed., Oct. 3, each student will have an opportunity to learn first hand about the different SGA chartered organizations on campus at an information carnival sponsored by the Public Relations Committee of the SGA. The Carnival will be held from 10 am to 2 pm in the Student Center Mall.

Food and drinks will be provided at the information carnival, and various activities will be sponsored by the student organizations. A total of 35 organizations responded to the SGA's invitation to be part of the carnival. Karen Rosenthal, a senior marketing major and director of public relations for the SGA stated, "Tables will be set up for information and recruiting of new members. It's a way for the students to find out what the SGA and what the student organizations offer them."

Refreshments for the event will be provided by the SGA. Hot dogs will sell for 25c and a special deal on a hot dog and a drink will be for 40c.

"Money for this comes out of the public relations budget of $1750 per semester. Cost of this will be about $300 for the food," Rosenthal said.

The SGA will also be providing other services throughout the year. "As part of SGA public relations, we are going to have tables in the Student Center lobby every Thursday morning from 10-12 pm, where the executive board and SGA legislatures will meet with the students to discuss suggestions and answer any questions," Rosenthal added.

The information carnival is an excellent opportunity for students to meet new friends and learn more about what's happening on campus. Rain date for the carnival is Thurs., Oct. 4.

Dorm on the rise

This is an architect's conception of the proposed 640 room dormitory which will be located in the present Bohn Hall parking lot. Construction is projected to begin as early as December with a total cost of over $11 million.

Another site next to Bohn Hall had been proposed. It was rejected because there wasn't enough room. The power lines limited the available space.

The interior of the dorm will be completely air conditioned. The room layouts will be similar to those in Freeman Hall, two rooms will be connected by a bathroom.

If it's sick to the bone, then the world's going crazy.

It happened to secretaries first. Then lawyers, bookkeepers, waitresses, cable operators, housewives, and businessmen succumbed to the beauty of our Pilot Razor Point and Fineliner pens.

Some people felt it was sick to get so emotionally involved with our pens. But it's really so crazy to use a Pilot Razor Point pen that writes with a sharp smooth line and costs a mere 79¢ than to flip over its unique little metal collar that smartly helps to keep its point from going squish?

If it's crazy, it's going to surprise a whole lot of people. In fact, we understand that Pilot Razor Point even has what it takes to score extra points with football players.

It also comes to our attention that many coaches are just about the Pilot Fineliner. Along with all the other Razor Point features, the Pilot Fineliner has the strength and size to drive to go through carbons.

It's hard to resist a pen that holds the line like a Pilot.
New director chosen by Barbara Spallitta

Frederick Kelly has been selected as the director of the division of business at MSC and began serving a one-year term as director of administrative sciences, business education, and office systems early in September. Kelly, formerly the chairman of the department of administrative science, along with Katherine Hall, who resigned as dean of the school of professional arts and sciences, was selected as the director of the department of professional arts and sciences, business education, and office systems. Kelly also is in charge of budgeting, planning, and staffing, and participates in the meetings of the dean's council each week. One major task is the planning and hopeful accreditation of the Master (MBA) at MSC.

Kelly's main goal is to finally reach the culmination of many plans and activities which have been in progress since he came to MSC in 1975. Although it is quite early in his term, Kelly believes that, "The most difficult aspect of my new position is going to be delegation authority to the chairmen and faculty committees which are being established. But it is critical for the success of the program," he said.

Kelly received a BA in economics from Manhattan College in the Bronx, a MA degree, and a PhD in finance. He taught at Adelphi University in Long Island and Medgar Evers College in NY. He lives in Sunset Park in Upper Montclair with his wife, who is an assistant professor of biology at Malloy College in Long Island. She is currently on leave working on PhD studies at Rutgers, Newark. They have three children; Matthew, Andrea, and Laura.

Kelly stated, "MSC is an excellent institution and the education here in all disciplines compare very, very favorably to any institution in the country. There is a great student body with the nicest students, who I really enjoy working with."

Senator speaks out

Bredemeier explained that plans A and B weren't passed because they called for the merger of the School of Humanities and the School of Fine and Performing Arts. In regard to the passing of Plan C, Bredemeier said, "I don't know if it will be passed. A lot depends upon the presentations the Board of Trustees will hear at the open meeting."

When asked what power the senate has to prevent the passing of Plan C she replied, "We have influence, not power. We can stop the proposed plan from going into effect but we do have the ability to persuade. The final decision lies with the president and the Board of Trustees."

Bredemeier explained that she sees pros and cons of reorganization. "I see the point of the individuals who feel that MSC is operating fine under the present system. On the other hand I appreciate the possibilities of Plan C for promoting interdisciplinary studies and strengthening liberal arts preparation of students," she stated.

Regarding the success of Plan C if it is passed, Bredemeier stated, "I think its effectiveness in promoting the goals that the president has set for it will depend upon the quality of leadership and by that I mean who is the dean."

Musicians needed

The MSC Orchestra, under the direction of Norman Smith, is looking for any string players who would be interested in joining for the 1979-80 academic year. The orchestra is made up primarily of music majors, but it is open to all MSC students.

The orchestra will give its first concert of the year in December. The program will include "Semeramide Overture" by Rossini, Haydn's Symphony 102, and Bartok's Third Piano Concerto. If you play a string instrument and are interested in joining, please contact Liza Di Savino in the Music Department, in McEachern Music Building.

Campus Police Report

Crime down

by Dave Yourish

On Sept. 14, at 3:20 pm the Campus Police observed a car parked in front of a fire hydrant. The automobile was empty but running. The police responded with their usual summons. As they were writing the summons, the two occupants of the car returned.

The officers approached the vehicle to present the summons and noticed that one of them was carrying a two foot long stick. This is in violation of a statute which prohibits possession of an unlawful weapon. The police explained this to them and they both apologized. They only received a summons for illegal parking.

Two males were observed on the electric tower on Clove Road, at 3:48 pm on Sept. 11. When the police arrived on the scene in response to a complaint, they could not locate any suspects, who had been described as being in their 20's. However, they did find a uniform that was reported lost over a year ago.

On Sept. 19, at 10:25 pm, Noel Gamble, a part-time maintenance mechanic in Bohn Hall, had the misfortune of having a sink blow up on him. He was using a power plunger on a clogged sink, and the front of the sink exploded. Fortunately, Gamble received only five small cuts. He was treated at the College Health Center and later released.

ID's available

College ID's may be picked up tomorrow in room 301 of College Hall. In order to receive your ID you must bring your schedule form, tuition receipt, meal ticket, or an orange temporary ID. White temporary ID's are not acceptable.

ID's will be given out between 9 am and 4 pm.

Frequency challenge

by Adam Sommers

"I just don't know why we have to go to 100 watts," Lee Martin, head engineer of WMSC said. "The future of the campus radio station is being threatened, and there is no sound reason for it," Martin stated.

Last June the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) introduced this "document" or "item for discussion": all 10 watt radio stations in the United States must apply for a change to 100 watts before Jan. 1 1980. This, according to John Bourcy, chief engineer of fm stations for the FCC is the reason: to "unclog" the airways and to get more efficiency out of the existing radio stations.

Even if the station has its application into the FCC it is still far from certain that it will achieve 100 watt status. In order to get on to fm radio at 100 watts the station must find room for itself on the dial. If it does not, there are three options. It can move to a new FCC channel. Frequency number 87.9. This is only effective in rural areas where the distance between the stations and most of the listeners are more than 15-20 miles away from the station.

Many of the over 600 10 watt stations in the nation are upset and confused about this move. According to Jeff Tellis, representative of the Intercollegiate Broadcast System (IBS), "Many of the stations were upset, but not enough complained to do any good." The problem is so far removed from them that they don't really care.

The situation is very confusing and it is going to get worse as time runs out. The 600 or so radio stations are now fighting for some unknown number of fm spots. In the process nobody knows which station is trying to get what spot. When asked if they shouldn't have done the change systematically, state by state, Bourcy had no reply.

"What the eventual outcome of this will be, nobody knows for sure," Martin said. "We may have a much improved 100 watt radio station by Jan. 1, capable of reaching much farther. We also may have a station dedicated solely to broadcasting educational shows for children."

"Students Serving Students"
CATACOMBS
by Adam Sommers

The shades are drawn, the lights low, and everyone is finally seated in the large semicircle of chairs. At the open end of the circle sits a singer ready to perform her first number.

Every Wednesday night at 8pm on the third floor of the Student Center the College Life Union Board (CLUB) presents "Catacombs."

"People just come here to relax, shoot the breeze, and just be mellow," Camille Astalos, a dirty-blond of medium height and slender build, said. As a junior and an executive on the board of CLUB, Astalos has a lot to do with getting entertainment for the night.

The atmosphere is casual. People sit around, talk quietly or drink strong hot coffee and eat cookies or doughnuts. Meanwhile the singer softly runs through her repertoire of quiet love songs and ballads.

"Usually we have three to four acts a night. Most people like to go on for an hour or so," Astalos said. CLUB does not advertise strongly for this. They almost always have an abundance of willing entertainers.

The entertainment and refreshments are free. The artists, usually female singers, volunteer and are not required to audition.

Generally, the cost for the evening is small, about $10. CLUB makes no profit on "Catacombs." "This time it was about $125 stocking up she means buying cups, plates, napkins, etc. for the rest of the show. Most of the money however, goes into the entertainment and refreshments. The money comes from the CLUB budget which is controlled by the SGA.

The other expenses are the house manager, and the sound technicians. "The house manager gets $3.25 an hour for the upkeep and usage of the house," CLUB president Bill Harrison said. Donna Noone and Sari Kalomeer, the two sound technicians, preferred not to have their salaries disclosed, saying only that they came from the Faculty Co-op.

PIRG on pollution

by Dawn DiGuilmi

The NJ Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) sponsored a seminar in reference to the Clean Water Action Project (CWAP) “To make a small dent in the fight for a better environment,” is the goal of the project according to Gretchen Shankweiler, Mercer County Director for CWAP.

PIRG founded the CWAP in 1973 by Rich Wellinger, whose first act was to review and comment on National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System Permits (NPDES) issued by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). These permits regulate the amount of industrial, municipal, and individual establishments discharging waste products into a waterway.

Streamwalking is CWAP’s main activity in their effort to find illegal discharges in local waters. The streamwalkers observe a designated stream, and analyze samples from industrial, municipal areas for heavy metal, bacteria, or other contamination. In the case where an industry has violated its NPDES permit, a violation is written up and submitted to PIRG for further action. The industry owner will be fined for illegal discharging. In the past year, streamwalkers have revealed approximately 30 discharges.

Bond committee formed

by Bob Racicoppo

A subject gaining much popularity among MSC students recently deals with the possibility of a financial grant of $95 million from the state of NJ to its state colleges. The bill appropriating the money has been termed the bond issue. After being passed by both houses of the state legislature, the bill was sent to the governor’s desk. Brendan Byrne, NJ governor, signed the bill Tuesday.

One barrier remains before enactment of the bill. It must obtain a majority vote from NJ voters on Tues., Nov. 6.

In the president’s report at yesterday's SGA meeting, Nader Tavakoli explained that if the bill succeeds in the November election, MSC is expected to receive approximately $13 million of the grant. The SGA president continued by saying that, in round figures, $5 million would be used towards an expansion of Sprague Library, $5 million towards the expansion of the fine arts building, and the rest to be dispersed among various projects such as underground piping. “It will provide for added facilities for future students,” Tavakoli stated further in his description of the bond issue. Tavakoli also announced the appointments of Dennis Galvin and Brian Cige as co-chairmen of a special committee to campaign the bond issue beyond the college limits.

David W.D. Dickson, MSC president, was present at the SGA meeting for a brief explanation of the administration’s plans for reorganization of the five schools of the college. “We’re very good, but we’re not good enough,” Dickson exclaimed calling for a needed change.

Following a series of question directed at Dickson, a consensus vote was taken in order to establish the degree of unity among the legislators toward the new program. The vote was 10 for, 12 against, and eight abstentions. The vote was recorded as a failed measure, however, the day’s meeting was adjourned without official change.

A major bill passed yesterday approved the annual budget of the Montclarion for the requested $26,000. This amount covers only 45 percent of the Montclarion overall budget. The other 55 percent is raised by advertising sales.
Cynthia Lepre
Richard Renzulli.
At her new post, Lepre's main concern will be keeping the 32,000 MSC alumni informed of special projects and events happening on campus. The Alumni Association supports the college in numerous ways, including faculty grants, project grants to alumni and current students, and incentive scholarships to undergraduates. The association also sponsors the Homecoming festivities and publishes the newspaper Alumni Life. Last year, the association raised $80,000 for the college through its various activities.

Prior to this position, Lepre was development director of the Richard Foundation's Chapter for two and a half years. She was also public relations coordinator for the Essex County Heart Association and co-director of the Arts International Gallery, Woodbridge Center. A 1972bsp;from a theater graduate, she feels a need to work in a service-oriented position. In her four years at MSC, she was a student aide in the Office of Public Information, worked on the Montclarion and was listed in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." With a "genuine concern for the individual," she hopes to provide the difference between "adequacy and excellence."

A resident of Roselleville, NJ, she was recently nominated one of the Outstanding Young Women of America and serves on the Big Brother/Big Sister Board of Directors. Lepre wants to "nurture the college" in return for the support she has received. "MSC is very close to my heart," she concluded.

Candy store expands
by Julie Shore
Everything from soup to nuts is what the MSC candy store now supplies. The expansion of the candy store has provided a wider range of goods for the benefit of students.

The cost of the newly renovated candy store was about $15,000. Harold Ostroff, manager of business services, said, "Students are encouraged to suggest to the salespeople which items they would like the store to carry as to benefit all students."

The store's main concern is to serve the students to the best of their ability. The store is located on the lower level of the Student Center across from the Rathskeller. Three popular daily newspapers and numerous magazines are sold at the candy store every morning. Campbell soups, candy, cookies, ice cream, deodorants, tissues, toothbrushes, malted balls, and peanuts are among the stock of the newly renovated candy store.

The candy store is a part of the center, therefore, we stock the store in the best interests of our students," Ostroff said. The three daily newspapers delivered to the store every morning are: The Star-Ledger, The New York Times, and Daily News. According to Ostroff the Daily news has been the biggest seller. Ostroff proudly said, "The renovation of the candy store cost a minimum of $15,000 because we had MSC maintenance employees do the job for us. If we had to bring in contractors from the outside, it would have cost us a lot more money."
Guthrie moves up

by Laura Henault

"I don't look back. I just keep moving." This statement typifies the life of Lois Guthrie, who hurriedly spoke while shuffling papers, taking phone calls, and contending with numerous interruptions in her new office—in Finley Hall.

Guthrie, newly appointed interim chairman of the home economics department, takes her hectic world lightly. She assumed her one-year position after Katharine Hall, former department chairman of the home economics department, became interim dean of the school of professional arts and sciences this summer.

Guthrie, who can be spotted in a crowd by her jolly and whole-hearted laugh, explained that she naturally fell into the position of department chairman after acting as deputy chairman for the past five years. She will remain coordinator of the consumer affairs concentration within the home economics department and will teach one section of Consumer and Family Law. In addition, Guthrie plans to continue acting as a departmental advisor "at least for this semester" and proceed with professional practicum placements of home economics students for the spring semester.

How does Guthrie feel about this abundance of new duties? "The enterprise chairman feels a personal need to try her 'wings' at this position, although she admits to missing the teaching of her regular course load. Guthrie added that she is still "not sure" that administration is what she will like doing.

Casually-dressed, Guthrie described her long-standing involvement in consumer affairs as a "strong interest in the marketplace and how families make decisions within it." She developed the consumer affairs program at MSC in 1974 after obtaining a BS from West Virginia University and an MS from Purdue University.

She brought her expertise in family management to MSC in 1962 when she began the Home Management House, now the Student Health Center. Here she worked with groups of six students for six-week periods focusing on home management, the family, and interpersonal relations. The jovial chairman added that she almost wrote a book describing those chaotic days entitled / Taught Standing on my Head. An avid boater and gardener, Guthrie may return to her faculty position next year if Hall resumes her position as department chairman.

Anna Pai

awarded a new Health Careers Program which takes in students from disadvantaged backgrounds.

In order to accommodate more advanced students, a new honors program has just been set up in the biology department. One other new program which is in the process of being passed by the department of higher education is in the field of toxicology.

The courses offered to students in the Health Careers Program are taught in individual groups, explained by Pai, since it would be unfair to place them randomly in a regular classroom situation with more experienced students. This also helps deal with the needs of those students in the program without interfering with the learning of others, she added.

In her spare time, Pai practices the intricate and creative art of bonsai, which is miniaturizing trees through special and delicate cutting methods. "In order to concentrate on this work, I have to block everything else out of my mind. The beauty from this art helps me find an inner peace with myself, and I can relax my mind by just concentrating on one thing, like my plants," Pai stated.

To be eligible for the Honors Program there are certain minimum requirements that need to be met, and a high cum must be maintained, Pai said.

Those involved are given independent research projects to do and are assisted by their professors, who put in extra time to work with the honors students.

Even though this time creates overload in the professors' schedules, they are given no extra credit in compensation for their time, she said. Students may see Pai or their teachers for details.

Pai feels toxicology is "a topic that is very pertinent, especially to us in the NJ area."

"The growing cancer rates and environmental pollution are evidence of the importance of the subject, and student awareness and interest may soon result in the establishment of the new major," she stated.

Pai began her education by studying biology through an academic scholarship at Sweet Briar College in VA. Oddly enough, genetics was one of her most difficult subjects; yet she was determined to succeed. She said, "It used to make me mad when I couldn't understand something-like genetics. I must possess a dominant destructive gene," she joked, "for I kept taking the test over and over, and I received an MA from Bryn Mawr in embryology. She was awarded a PhD in genetics from the Albert Einstein Institute."

Guthrie, newly appointed chairman of the department, discusses affairs with Vivian Morris.

"I am a firm believer in grabbing everything out of life. And I'm not one for passing up on any experience that comes my way, even if it means mixing my career with marriage and my family," Rhea Seagull, the new director of public information, exclaimed.

Seated in College Hall, Seagull was friendly, with a warm smile and an engaging manner. She was easy to talk to and eager to volunteer any information necessary. When asked how she manages both career and family, she answered, "For me, it just seemed the natural progression. When I had my children, I was working as the news media director at Swarthmore College, which is located just outside of Philadelphia. I worked right up to my delivery and then brought my daughter to work with me and even was the subject of a feature article in the school newspaper."

Considering the career she has had, one can see why she would not want to give it up. Seagull attended Douglass College and received her degree from the Rutgers School of Journalism. She then moved to Washington, D.C. and attended American University, taking courses in communications which encompassed radio and television broadcasting. This led to a job with a radio station in Washington, D.C., where she wrote, researched, and produced public affairs shows which garnered several local Emmy awards. "I found it tremendously interesting, exciting, and most of all, fun," she replied enthusiastically.

The new director then continued in that vein when she moved to Chicago after her marriage. She got a job with the City News Bureau as a reporter and writer, covering such stories as the rash of fires which gutted the city, the pre-trial of Richard Sheck, and, of course, the antics of Mayor Daley. "I think that the time I was there, everything that could possibly happen, did. It was truly a mixed bag of journalism." she added.

After she left the News Bureau, Seagull got a job with NBC-tv and Radio as a reporter and writer where she covered the 1968 Democratic Convention in Chicago. She also wrote news for Floyd Kalber along with other NBC newsmen. "I enjoy seeing and hearing my words spoken by others. It's nice seeing your words in print but there's an added zing in having others acknowledge your work on the air," she replied.

When asked if she takes her work home with her, she paused reflectively and answered, "I don't think you can have this kind of job and not be involved. It's both administrator and working reporter at the same time. The working reporter in me thinks up an idea and then the administrator part of me figures out how it will be worked out. Sometimes I just pound out an idea on a typewriter myself instead of waiting to give it to someone else. Being a reporter has helped me think on a typewriter to the point where it has become an extension of my hands."

In her new position, she deals with the image of MSC. "I am concerned with the face of the college and how it appears to the outside world. We do appeal to the general public in a number of ways through our invitations to attend the various lectures, concerts, and art shows we have here," she stated.

One of her goals is to achieve a united presentation of information throughout the entire campus. "I would like to have the various offices, instead of doing their own publicity, come to this office so we can have a united image instead of one department trying to do it one way and another trying to do it another way," she stated.

The Office of Public Information has much to offer for all members of the college. And Rhea Seagull encourages people not only to drop off announcements but to come to seek information also. "I'm here as a resource person. I feel that public information is a misnomer of what I'm all about. I'm not just a conduit for information. I have knowledge about the types of things that I can offer. It's a two-way street with information coming in and going out as well," she replied with a smile.

Taking a closer look

The offices that may well be the lifeblood of the MSC campus are familiar to everyone. The individuals who are behind each office keep the rhythm of the college moving. The following are candid interviews with some of those people.

by Patti Hayes

During registration, did you ever wonder, "Who is behind all of this?" It's the registrar, Marshall A. Butler, a man who not only enjoys his job but thinks it's a challenge. "I like the challenge of this job. I think there's a lot of things that can be done," he said. And he added, "I don't look at it callously; I know that things don't always happen right and I take it as an incentive for the next time."

Butler, who always wanted to teach said, "I like to work with young people and I enjoy teaching." He started teaching industrial arts at MSC in 1962. Three years later he had an opportunity to go into administration and was named assistant director of the summer and evening division. Seven years later the day and evening divisions collaborated and Butler, who was then associate director, became the registrar. Butler said, "I've been pleased with this institution and I find it an enjoyable place to work."

When asked if he had anything to say to the students he said, "I would like them to understand that they are one of 14,000 students and that we need their help to follow procedures." He added, "We would like to treat everyone as an individual and if they have questions I would like them to ask before the fact."

Butler admitted the most frustrating part of his job is that students are already upset by the time they reach the Office of the Registrar. He said, "Misinformation and misdirection that students sometimes get is the most difficult job of the registrar because they come here upset and we have to give them the bad news." He added, "I have five children and I understand some of the things students go through."

Butler is a family man and he likes being outdoors with his family; they go camping, skiing, sailing and playing tennis. He also enjoys being active in community affairs. He was president of the Board of Education in Verona from 1969 to 1972.

"If there was anything I would like to change," Butler said, "I would like to see the students at the college being involved. I would like more school spirit." He added optimistically, "I see a different attitude in the student body this semester; the students seem more ambitious."

Butler strongly believes in education. He said, "I think education is very important; it is more than a piece of paper; instead it is a bright, intelligent young person who can help society." And he said, "It is important to take advantage of educational and all other opportunities in college to gain as much experience as one can, because four years is a very short period."

Are you aware that fifty percent of the full time undergraduates at MSC receive some sort of financial aid? That's quite a number. Just ask Randall Richards, director of financial aid.

A graduate of MSC with a BA in social sciences and a minor in English, Richards' duties include the organization and dealing of financial aid on the state and local levels. He feels a great satisfaction with his position. "There are instances when I or one of my associates can make the difference when it comes to a student furthering his or her education."

Richards came to MSC as a dorm director in 1968. He then moved from that post to that of assistant director of financial aid, and is presently the director.

He started with the ambition of being a teacher (he has an MA and PhD in counseling from Rutgers University). Richards taught social sciences in a high school in Columbus, NJ. He found that students could talk to him easily, and he became more and more of a counselor. With the great amount of time his job commands Richards has found that this kind of interaction with students has decreased.

A family man, as evident in the display of his children's artwork which decorates his office. Richards is an elected board member on the board of education in Verona where he resides. As busy as he is, the blue-eyed Richards still finds time for his family, Pamela and David, in the 5th and 1st grades respectively, and for his hobbies: reading, platform tennis, water skiing, building furniture and traveling. He comments, "I'm not a specialist!"

Richards' plans for the future include computerizing the financial aid office to make the tremendous workload move more smoothly and quickly. "Phase one of the Student Aid Management System (SAM) will enable us to increase the efficiency in regard to tracking, analyzing evaluating and providing an interoffice department data exchange," Richards said.

"Right now we have a manual mode in processing," he continued, gazing over the 15 workers scattered among desks in the outer office. "Ninety-nine percent of the client-associated work is done here."

He is disappointed that many students didn't reapply for financial aid for this school year. "If people don't apply again, our allotment will eventually shrink." Richards also mentioned that students should be sure to be aware of the importance of filing for financial aid on a timely basis. "It makes everything easier," he said. "When people do things on time it relieves us of a large burden."

"Only Robinson Crusoe gets all his work done by Friday." This saying describes one of the major problems that Constance Waller, director of the Women's Center faces everyday—a problem of too little time. A plaque with the humorous message sits on her desk.

This semester she teaches the "Legal Rights of Women," and "Perspectives of Women," as well as directing the workings of the Women's Center and resigning as President of the Women's Equity Action League (WEAL).

Although she vowed "never to teach! There are too many teachers in my family," teaching is a special kind of "interaction without that many problems," to Waller.

A graduate of Indiana University with a BA in education—English, music, home ec ("I couldn't decide"), and a doctorate and masters from Columbia, she enjoys music, stamp collecting, and cooking, especially home canning. "Cooking is therapeutic." She has had articles published and has helped in the research of a book that Charity Kundem, a retired counselor, is now working on. She is not sure that time permits her to start work on a book of her own.

Waller came to MSC in 1965 as an employee in the student personnel division. She immediately became involved in the Women's Center when it was first started in 1972 as a result of Affirmative Action. She was a strong supporter of the Center because she felt it "meets the needs of the women on campus—staff, students, and faculty."

Informative files are available for any student wishing information for stay papers or for personal interests. The Women's Center Library, a gift from the senior class of 1973, contains books of all kinds written by women and about women.

Waller, a resident of Morris County, finds satisfaction in helping people achieve a self realization or goal. She stated happily that, "The Women's Center, once a strictly on-campus organization, is now involved with the women of Montclair's surrounding communities. Many workshops are given by the Center to encompass the many needs of women on today's society. For instance, we are finding many women are now being left on their own—due to broken marriages, etc. We run special workshops dealing with the particular needs—financial as well as emotional—that a woman may face. We try to be flexible with the workshops and always love feedback." Waller couldn't begin to count the many women the Center has helped in its seven years existence. However, there is not enough time to run as many lectures as Waller wishes. The Center's next workshop, "The Independent Woman," is scheduled for Oct. 6 and will deal with such topics as "Considering Divorce," and "Making It on Your Own."

Another problem? "People can't find us!" Waller remarked from behind her cluttered desk located in the dark corner of the third floor of the Math-Science Building.

She anxiously awaits the building of the new student Annex to the Center can move into its "new home."

It should be stressed that the Center advises men. "Many think we're radicals. They don't understand what we're here for. We are a service. We invite anyone to come up and see us. We'll show them around."
Call us, please

On Wed., Oct. 3, the public relations committee of the SGA will be sponsoring an Information Carnival. The carnival, which will be held from 10 am to 2 pm in the student center mall, will be the perfect opportunity for students to become familiar with many of the activities available at MSC.

Through the committee's efforts, 35 SGA-chartered organizations will be present. Unfortunately, this number represents just over half of the more than 60 organizations which currently hold a charter from the SGA.

The low attendance at the carnival is the symptom of a growing problem in student activities.

It is a relatively easy thing for students to contact Class One organizations. Most of these groups have office space on the fourth floor of the Student Center, and enjoy a great deal of publicity on campus and in the Montclarion. The dilemma occurs when a student attempts to reach a Class Two, Class Three, or Class Four organization.

These organizations, which bring a great variety to SGA and help to serve the countless interests of MSC students, are most difficult to find.

One of the Montclarion's new projects for the fall semester can be used as a perfect example. In an attempt to offer more coverage to these elusive groups, who are too often forgotten, we sent letters to Class Two presidents. With the promise of a centerfold, and other coverage to come, we have succeeded in contacting only half of the Class Two's.

If we can't find these people, it is obvious that students cannot find them either. We can only wonder what it must be like to find Class Three's and Four's.

Those organizations who will be missing next Wednesday should question passing up an opportunity such as the Information Forum. When the SGA is handing them an organized affair, with planned activities and refreshments to attract student involvement, it would seem that these groups are not interested in recruiting or informing the campus community of their existence.

Take some time to reach out to the students. And while you're at it, can you give us a call?

Shuttle Serves

by Rick Zweibel and Rich Schiafo

What do you think of the idea of having a shuttle bus service on campus?

"It's a good thing to have, especially in bad weather. I use it mostly down by College Hall or at Partridge Hall. It's very good for commuters. It should be available more right before classes. It also should be available in more places more often.

Cynthia Mersier
business administration/1981

"It's very convenient. I use it going back and forth from the parking lots. I think service can be improved. Hours should be extended until midnight."

Gigi Cuntala
history/1981

"I think it's pretty good. It saves time and energy spent on walking. It's good for bad weather, too."

Craig Stugart
business/1983

"I've never used it. I prefer walking now. I would consider using the service in the winter time."

Carolyn Kessock
uncommitted/1983

"I think it's convenient, but it should run more often. There is too long a wait for a bus sometimes."

Phyllis Ruglio
psychology/1980

"I use it when it rains or snows, but I don't use otherwise. It works out all right."

Erik Fallman
geoscience/1981

"I usually walk now, but I would take it in the winter time."

Horace McGloster

"It's a good idea. It saves a lot of walking from parking lots."

Point of Information

Welcome to the SGA
by Nader Tavakoli

In this my first article, I would like to welcome you to MSC for the upcoming academic year. By now, you have hopefully managed to enjoy the productivity of your student government in some manner. Your fees and the hard work of some very dedicated students have allowed you to enjoy Club's first beer blast, or Players' superb production of Our Town. You may have attended the Joe Jackson concert presented by Class One Concerts or enjoyed the music aired over WMSC, and you have been lucky enough to get excellent reporting on all the above happenings every Thursday through the Montclarion.

In weeks to come, you may find yourself at a BSCU function or perhaps listening to a CINA lecture. Quarterly will make excellent reading, and LASO will enlighten you to the Latin perspective. Finally, you may find yourself participating in the intramurals and leisure of SILC.

The above organizations, along with numerous others, are chartered and/or funded through the SGA. Nearly all of their programming is made possible solely through students who, sans monetary reimbursement for their time, provide unselfish service to the MSC community.

A communication breakdown

To the editor:

As most of you probably don't know, the MSC men's cross-country team opened their season on Sept. 15 with a victory over Stockton State College. For the record, Ian Gordon and Rich Wallace tied for first, John Kirchof was third, Ron Macey fifth, and Tom Schwarz sixth. They won by a score of 17-38 (lowest score wins). So what, you may ask, is so earth-shattering about this? It is the way in which your local cross-country team has been snubbed once again that brings me to the point of this column. I, for one, was not really aware of the results of this meet, which was run over the old course at Chestnut Ridge Park. When not so much as a trace of it showed up in last week's issue, I became enraged and immediately rushed up to the office. When I asked what happened to the article, their explanation was simple: they lost it.

Fact is, if the article was misplaced, staff writers had enough knowledge of the meet to give us at least a token picture. No article. Just two sentences in the "athlete of the week" column.

Oh yes, the "athlete of the week". You know, that attractive feature in the sports pages every week awarded to the most outstanding athlete of the previous week. There's a picture of the winner at the top, with the entire article dedicated to that particular athlete. Not last week. Two runners won. No picture. No article. Just two sentences squeezed in under "MSC Notes." A left-handed compliment by any standards. Don't get us wrong. The purpose of this article is not to cause any unnecessary problems. We just feel that as a hard-working group of athletes, credit for our efforts should be given as it is due. This most recent oversight in itself would not necessitate such extravagant measures as this letter. However, the cross-country team has absorbed as much abuse as it is willing to take at this time. Treated as third-rate citizens by the athletic budget, publicity services (last year an average of one out of every three meets' results were seen in the local newspapers), and the yearbook (if you go back three years, we were actually awarded a half-page spread. Nothing at all the last two years), you will soon realize the situation we are in.

Now that you are educated of the situation, we are hoping that you, as fellow students, will be pulling for us in our effort to qualify for the national championships. Everyone is more than welcome to attend our home meets at Garret Mountain. It is a fact that distance-running is the only sport that remains a competitive one year-round. Summer road runs to cross-country to indoor track to outdoor track. And the cycle continues. Daily workouts are easily in excess of 10 miles, and running 100 miles in one week is not uncommon. We are obviously no lacking in hard work. Why is it then, that we are constantly being dumped upon? I surely can't see a logical answer.

business administration/1979

EDITOR'S NOTE: It is not a common practice of the Montclarion staff or myself in particular to lose or misplace an article. In fact, to my knowledge, it has never happened before. Despite the fact that the article was read over three times it is impossible to remember many of the details, because cross-country, football, or whatever else is not the only sport that we cover. Unfortunately, we are human and capable of making mistakes. An apology is all we can offer.

Last season, cross-country was covered every week in either Rich Wallace's column or an article. I have always believed that a situation can be cleared up when there is communication between people. This was obviously a lack of communication.

Priorities?

To the editor:

If I may offer an additional opinion on the installation of astroturf on the football field.- Why, I ask, can we afford to spend $650,000 on playing fields when, if you look up on a rainy day in one of the chemistry labs, you may be in danger of drowning from the leaks?

I have a son that plays football, so obviously I enjoy the game, but really, I mean, wow! -who sets these priorities?

PS. Or possibly they have corrected the leaks over the summer? I await the next big rainstorm!!

It's time

To the editor:

As an alumnus of MSC and a former member of the SGA, I would like to publicly express my congratulations to Nader Tavakoli and the rest of this year's SGA leadership for putting into operation the campus Video Display System.

Their action clearly illustrates the ability to put aside bureaucratic protocol in order to provide the campus community with a long overdue service. In my judgment, this is the true mark of responsive and aggressive leadership, a quality conspicuously missing in last year's inept administration.

Again, thank you for restoring my faith and pride in MSC's student government.

There's a future for the liberal arts

by Patti Hayes

"You know what you can do with this degree... or do you?" This is the title of the forum on careers for liberal arts majors, sponsored by the School of Humanities. It will be held on Thurs., Oct. 4 from noon until 3:00 in the Student Center; Ballrooms A, B, and C.

Tom Benediktsson, a coordinator of the Humanities Curriculum Committee, explained there are two reasons for the forum. First he said, "Many students are not aware of what opportunities await them. Secondly, students should realize how liberal arts study can contribute to personal growth."

The focal speakers for this event will be Edward Bloustein, president of Rutgers University, and Howard Figler, an expert in career development from Dickinson College, Pennsylvania. Bloustein, an authority in education, will speak about the role of liberal arts in personal development.

Figler, who wrote the book "Path," will discuss the skills of a liberal arts major such as writing, analytical thinking and problem solving, and their usefulness in job situations. These skills Benediktsson explained, "are acquired from activities such as reading and discussing literature, philosophy and history; and they can be carried over to jobs such as management."

In Figler's book, "Path," he writes that most jobs except those highly technical and specific ones can be accomplished in a variety of ways by people who possess different sets of capabilities. He also writes, "...you are hired primarily for your potential to learn and advance within the organization rather than for your existing work capabilities or experience."

The forum will have three self-contained programs; one each hour. There will be a table set up with materials from Career Services and a question and answer period after each program. Also, after the forum informal discussion sessions will be held with some of the speakers.

Benediktsson, along with coordinators Kenneth Aman and Steve Seegmiller, organized this forum after a coffee hour last year with some Humanities students. Benediktsson reflected, "We wanted to find out how we could develop a career program for liberal arts students." He added, "The students told us, if you believe in humanities you should say something for the humanities themselves."

All of the speakers in this forum were humanities majors. "They are people who have made creative job choices and are in a position to talk about other careers, as well as the value of humanities," Benediktsson said.

Some personal points of view on liberal arts and careers will be discussed by three speakers: P.J. Capaccio, president of Hughes and Capaccio Associates, Management Communication Consultants, a liberal arts major who now has his own business; Rita Kowalski, regional training officer, General Services Administration, formerly a doctoral candidate in English at Ohio State University; and Protase Woodford, director of test development, Educational Testing Service, will speak about his experiences. Woodford is a graduate of MSC with a degree in Spanish and Italian.

Also, there will be a panel discussion on job hunting. Peter Prichard, MSC Career Services Office, will be the moderator. The panelists are Neil Fleischmann, social worker and graduate from MSC with a BA in philosophy; and Joan Schulhafer another MSC alumna and a publicist, Dodd Mead and Company, who has a BA in English.

Another panelist is Kathleen Fowler, MSC Co-Operative Education Office. Fowler will discuss jobs in business for humanities majors such as retail/buyer and management trainee. She will also present growing fields such as program planning and design which includes planning company resources, employment, budgets and programs; and staff development and training which involves training company personnel. Fowler said, to be a trainer you have to show that you can learn well and train others; as well as research and break down huge amounts of materials. Adele Henderson personnel consultant, Prudential Insurance Company, is also a panelist. She has a BA in classics and comparative religion from Barnard College, New York. She will give the interviewers points of view on how liberal arts students can put themselves in a better position. Henderson, when interviewed over the phone explained that humanities majors can get jobs as understudies, technical writers, public relations workers and advertising writers at Prudential. However, she said, "Humanities majors have to work a little more to get themselves through the door." She added "You need extras to sell yourself." Extras she explained "are employment and extra-curriculum activities."

The schedule for the forum is: noon - 1 pm: The Liberal Arts in a Tight Economy featuring Bloustein and Figler; 1 pm - 2 pm: Liberal Arts and Careers; Some Personal Points of View by Capaccio, Kowalski and Woodford; 2 pm - 3 pm: What I'm Going to Do Now, I Think: A Panel on Job Hunting with Fleischmann, Fowler, Henderson, Schulhafer, Prichard, and Figler.
Disadvantaged receive help

by Carol Haversang

A new health careers program (HCP) for the financially and educationally disadvantaged has recently been made possible at MSC through a $250,000 grant awarded by the department of higher education.

Seton Hall University has also been awarded a grant, and the two schools will work together on many aspects of the program.

The program has been established to provide an opportunity for disadvantaged NJ students to be able to qualify for medical or dental school. The HCP is achieving this goal through formal classes, tutoring, and job experience in various health careers.

To be admitted to the HCP, the student must be financially and educationally disadvantaged. The candidate's financial status must fill the requirements presented in the NJ Educational Opportunity Fund Programs (EOF). Low SAT scores, low class rank, locality of the high school, and profile of the graduating class are all taken into consideration when determining if the student is educationally disadvantaged.

Admitted students must participate in summer sessions, beginning with their pre-freshman year. Pre-freshman and pre-sophomore summer sessions include reading and writing courses, and introductory classes in basic chemistry, organic chemistry, and health careers. Field experience in health professions is included in the pre-junior and pre-senior summer sessions.

Tutoring services are also available to these students. The new tutoring materials, made available through the grant, are available to all MSC students. HCP participants are required to live on campus.

This summer, ten students began in the program. An enrollment of 25-30 students is anticipated per year, for a total of 100-120 students at a time. The grant money will cover a five year period, and will pay the salaries of professors, program director, and program counselor.

Richard Lynde, the temporary program director and dean of the school of mathematics and science, seemed enthusiastic about the program when he said, "The faculty, on the whole, has been quite receptive to the idea. They see the need." The program is now under way and is making the first effort to fill this need, according to Lynde.

Life Hall to be renovated

by Thomas Wittmann

"This isn't an expansion; it is an upgrading of facilities that meets the needs of our present students," said Wayne Bond, chairman of the speech and theater department, while discussing the Life Hall renovation. This renovation will affect the whole School of Fine and Performing Arts.

Life Hall, with its cafeteria now out of operation, is ready to be renovated. The final product will house all of the departments of the School of Fine and Performing Arts. Construction will begin as soon as the bids are received and the contract awarded.

The largest benefactor of the renovation will be the broadcasting department. The other departments will benefit also, but not to such a large extent. Donald Mintz, dean of the school stated that the renovation will "benefit the entire college."

The excitement is building as the broadcasting majors anticipate the two new TV studios. The new studios will give the students an opportunity to work with color equipment.

Along with the two TV studios, the Life Hall Cafeteria will be turned into a dance rehearsal room. There will also be a Multi-Purpose Room to be at the disposal of the entire school.

To the benefit of the entire college, a new media center will replace the old one at College Hall. The Life Hall Cafeteria kitchen will be remodeled to form a new media center. This is for all students, not just for the fine and performing art majors.

Bond, kneeling on the floor over the outspread blueprints, said, "It is exciting to have new facilities."

An art gallery will be constructed from what used to be the Life Hall Lounge. This will give the entire college a chance to see the tremendous talent of MSC students.

MSC, along with Rutgers, will be a center for the Fine and Performing Arts in New Jersey. Mintz commented that "When a college is known to be good for something, everyone benefits."

One more time

by Lori Scutti

“Americans audiences are too docile,” says Joe Jackson while sipping on a glass of orange juice. He gazes around the room and sporadically runs his fingers through his closely cropped blonde hair. Relaxing after the hour long sound check in a black T-shirt and those trademark white shoes, I was discussing with Jackson the American rock scene as opposed to England’s. “Sometimes feel that audiences over here are too reserved. They should go a lot crazier and take a lot less from people. Every gig we do the promoters want to put benches and security mobiles around the stage. If we know it we say ‘take it down.’ I’m always trying to get people on their feet. A lot of the time it seems they don’t expect it.” On Sunday night in Panzer Gymnasium, Joe Jackson did indeed take Montclair by surprise.

“I love being on stage. That’s the one thing that makes it all worthwhile.” Wearing a black pinstripe suit and polka dot tie, Jackson appropriately executed an almost exact replica as on the lp cover. Executing to a club in the city, Eve England, “Look Sharp.” Executing every gig with “Look Sharp,” the song contained a dynamic tension that made the audience feel like they were part of the show. The band has been together for a year now and we’re stronger than ever.” His backup consists of Gary Sanford on guitar, Dave Houghton on drums, and a very impressive Graham Maby on bass. Jackson performed alternate songs from his first album and his new album, Look Sharp.

Jackson began his singing career by way of his writing. “It got to the point where I realised that I wanted to write songs and I would do it for other people to sing them. For a couple of demos the singer would sing them and I never liked the way it came out. As my writing developed, I was writing things I really meant, and I thought; ‘I’ve got to start singing myself.’ I had to really struggle, it was really hard for me to become a singer. It’s still a struggle sometimes; I still feel I could get a lot better.”

Jackson's style is influenced by reggae (which creeps into songs such as “Fools in Love” and “Sunday Papers”), and the rock and roll which surrounds him in England. I asked him his opinion about the differences between rock in England and New York. “England is about two years ahead. There are a lot more good bands in England than there are in New York. Everytime I've been to a club in the city I've seen a terrible band. I'm not saying there aren't a few good bands here, but the only ones I can really relate to are the Ramones and Talking Heads.”

With this tour Joe Jackson has conquered the east with one sweeping battle. His second album, from the cuts played in concert, has victory written all over it. “All I know is I'm not going to keep doing the same thing. I'm going to keep changing. I don't want to be stereotyped.”
Alda does it all

by Missy Muhler

Alan Alda has always been recognized as the fine actor who plays Hawkeye Pierce every week on M*A*S*H, but now he will definitely be acknowledged as Alan Alda, the ingenious writer. Alda’s script centers upon the life of Senator Joe Tynan. Tynan is manipulated to run for the presidency by his fellow politicians, coerced not to run by his wife, and seduced by a charming lady lawyer. These three events entangle his life, and tension surrounds his every move. Alda writes realistically, eloquently, and with a consistent flow. His political characters are satirically wonderful.

Alda excels in his portrayal of Joe Tynan. He presents him as a gentle, sensitive, and honest man who is devoted to both his family and career. Alda’s performance never falters, instead it becomes more forceful and complete. Barbara Harris is stunning as Mrs. Joe Tynan. Her comedic skills are “an added delight to the film’s deadliness; one pictures her as an intelligent, loving, and somewhat flighty woman who tries to keep a balance with her own career and her husband’s. Meryl Streep presents a flawless performance as Joe Tynan’s lover. She plays a southern lawyer who seduces Tynan with her intelligence and her classic beauty. Her acting is superb, and her smile manages to uptick the entire screen.

“The Seduction of Joe Tynan” could well be an Oscar contender in many categories. The film is a genuine one that will touch all hearts. The credit for much of the consistency of the film goes to director Jerry Schatzberg (although Schatzberg falters occasionally by dragging a few scenes out a little too much). The script is beautifully written, the acting is magnificent, and the film is a winner. “The Seduction of Joe Tynan” is a must for all moviegoers.

Anti-nuke musings

by Toni Lenz

MUSE Concert Madison Square Garden Sept. 22

Even though this concert was billed as Musicians United for Safe Energy (MUSE), and didn’t specifically mention any one artist, you knew everyone was there to see the one and only Bruce Springsteen. From the T-shirts emblazoned with his face, to the cries of “Bruce,” and the National Guard could not stop them.

Fans endured a mercifully short set by Raydio and their easily forgotten three songs. Then we were treated to another short set by Peter Tosh—complete with Arabian garb. Tosh performed a rousing reggae, but, well, had trouble whipping the crowd even into a mild frenzy.

Another break, where we were temporarily diverted with a boring, no-nukes film during which Nixon was booed and the American Indian was cheered, followed.

Bonnie Rain was next. She performed with Rosemary Butler, who as Bonnie put it, “May not be Bruce, but she’s cute.” And then, a very pleasant surprise—Jackson Browne came out to do a song extolling the virtues of alternate forms of energy with Bonnie and Rosemary.

“The warm power of the sun. Restless power of the rain. Strong power of the wind.”

Marriage is the pits

by Bonnie Jerbasi

BEDROOM FARCE: Written and directed by Alan Ayckbourn. Directed by Tim O’Brien and Tazeena Firth. At the Brooks Atkinson Theatre. Ernest = ROBERT COOTE Delia = MILDRED NATWICK Nick = JOHN HORTON Jan = VAN MURGRIM Malcolm = DAVID SCHRAMM Kate = JUDITH IVEY Trevor = JOHN LITHGOW Susannah = ALMA CUERVO

Alan Ayckbourn invites you to look in on an eventful (not to mention memorable) Saturday evening in the life of four couples: Ernest and Delia, Nick and Jan, Malcolm and Kate, and Trevor and Susannah. Where? Why in their bedrooms naturally!

Accept the invitation and I assure you that you won’t be sorry. Ayckbourn’s Bedroom Farce is an English comedy with non-stop laughs.

The curtain opens on Ernest and Delia and the farce begins. They are an older couple who have reached a point in their marriage where eating sardines on toast and reading “John Brown’s School Days” wins out over passion and sex in the bedroom. Not that they’re complainting, mind you. Both are very content with this arrangement and have no great needs—except perhaps that they could use a new hot-water bottle.

There are two other bedrooms on stage and the action switches from couple to couple.

The main event of the evening is a party held at Malcom’s and Kate’s, the flighty couple who seem to have a happy, if not comically silly marriage. They are young (or at least act that way) and find great pleasure in hiding each other’s shoes in the pillowcases.

The other bedroom belongs to Nick and Jan, the contemporary “it” couple. The most obvious problem is that Nick is temporarily bedridden with a bad back and makes no effort in concealing the fact that he wants attention. Alas! His wife has other plans—she’s getting all decked to go to the party alone. We soon realize though that Jan is not so lonely because she is busy comforting Trevor, her old boyfriend, in Malcom and Kate’s bedroom. Trevor and Susannah’s bedroom is not included on the stage, but the audience is not missing a thing. Their marriage is the pits and their bedroom inevitably a breeding place for boredom. Yet this does not stop them from wreaking havoc in the others’ rooms.

They manage to scar up all the guests at the party, aggravate Nick’s ailment (and add a pain in the neck to his list of grievances), disturb Ernest and Delia’s sardine orgy, and make firewood out of Malcom’s new homemade desk all in one night.

These feats were accomplished with various techniques: screaming, punching, rolling on the floor, throwing tantrums, and being just plain clumsy.

It appears that the institution of marriage certainly has its ups and downs. Sexual inadequacies and lack of communication seem to be two major dissatisfaction problems. Nick was more concerned with himself and his business concerns than with Jan. Malcom was a typical, yet humorous male chauvinist who got completely bent out of shape after his wife hinted that her mind wandered during their “interludes” in bed.

Although “Bedroom Farce” may not leave you with a very comforting view of marriage relationships, it will definitely exercise your funny bone.
Nightclubbing

Meadowbrook mania
by Anthony Ciavatta and Louis Turano III

"Hey you over there, get on that chair. A disco's made for dancin' and not to sit and stare, especially the Meadowbrook!" The Meadowbrook Disco on route 23 is a theatrical event in which the audience becomes a part of the performance.

Descending the steps leading to the dance floor, the resounding beat from the music below grows deeper, as one enters into a world of fantasy. Like the drifting fog of a mystical night, smoke fills the dance floor, creating an aura of devious delight. Illuminating the Sassooned scenery are colored lights, flashing lights, revolving lights, and neon lights, all interacting to dramatically enforce the tempo of the music with violent flashes and sweeping revolutions.

If the purpose of a night spot is to act as a meeting place for young ladies and gentlemen, then the Meadowbrook is perfect.

Every character imaginable can be found at the Meadowbrook, from the John Travolta "disco duck", to the elegant brunette with a long blond with skintight pants, to the girl or guy of your dreams, to Travolta "disco duck", to the blonde with skintight pants, to the "Brontosaurus". The Meadowbrook in Cedar Grove provides a place for thousands to let themselves loose.

50's, a theater always filled to capacity. He plans to bring in live acts on one out of every six Thursdays. With pictures of the days gone by hanging behind him, Morelli had this to say on the future of disco?"It has taken six years to get where it is now. It will stay here for two more years, and then take six years to go back down." When asked what he felt of those who think disco is dying he answered, "Have them come here one night." Morelli's creation is sure to change their mind.

The Meadowbrook Disco opens at nine on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday nights, and is open Sunday afternoon for a teen disco.

Bill Bruford
One of a Kind
Polydor PD-1-6205

This album certainly settles the original U.K. controversy (if anyone happens to know about it or care) and the fact is that Bill Bruford and Allan Holdsworth were right and that Eddie Jobson and John Wetton were wrong. Having left the original U.K., Bruford recorded the very promising Feels Good to Me, while U.K.'s release this year, watchamacallit, I forgot the name of it (I think it's Danger Money, or something like that...ed.), turned out to be a bad joke.

Bruford's new vinyl is definitely fulfilling song of the aforementioned promise. Here, the percussionist has established himself as a composer and has all but served most of his ties with progressive rock and is about to enter into mainstream fusion. One setback on this album, and it's an ironic one, is that in this, a drummer's album, there are no solos. Stranger than that yet, Bruford's drumming itself is more standardized in its context, than ever before, as opposed to his days with Yes and King Crimson, when he used a more embellished, sometimes avant-garde approach to his playing. He partially makes up for this with his interesting marimba and vibraphone overdubs. Jeff Berlin is a bassist to be reckoned with. This is a good record, not without its faults; like that it still sounds more like a guitar disk than a drum disk.
Kean is next tribe test

by Kenneth Lang

When MSC takes on the Squires of Kean College (Kean) this Saturday night, it should mark their second straight victory on the astroturf surface. MSC, which comes off a 10-6 loss last Saturday afternoon, should have no problem with the Squires.

Kean is quarterbacked by Jim Handy. In the Squires' 31-7 victory over New York Tech (NYT) last week, Handy completed 10 of 17 passes for a total of 159 yards. Handy played for two touchdowns, one to sophomore Nick Boyer and the other to junior Mike Thomas. The pass to Boyer was a 50-yard toss, while Thomas caught his pass from five yards out.

Despite the excellence of Handy at quarterback, the Squires are a young and inexperienced team. With the addition of 12 freshmen to go along with 15 sophomores, the team is undergoing a rebuilding year. Last year, the Squires were 2-7 and figure to finish with a similar record this season.

For the Indians, despite the 10-6 loss to East Strrousburg State College (ESSC), there were bright spots. The team played well in a losing effort, and the defense was excellent as usual. Against the Squires, the offense should look to return to its successful performance against Wagner College (Wagner) of two weeks ago.

The Indians' hopes of an unblemished season have gone by the boards, but the next two games should prove important tests in the schedule. Besides this game, the Indians will be playing Seton Hall University (SHU) at Giants Stadium one week from Saturday. The game was played in a torrential rain and the score was not indicative of the way MSC dominated the contest.

The Squires will be relying once again on Handy to control the offense. Handy received a threat from all people, Daniels in the off season. Daniels was a transfer student from Brooklyn College and was converted to a halfback from quarterback.

The Indians will be led by Scott Fischer once again. Since replacing Joe Rebholz in the second week, he has moved the offense very well. Going up against a tight ESSC defense, MSC was not able to capitalize on a couple of breaks. Still, the margin of victory was the close since the two teams have played each other.

Game time is 8 pm. The game is a New Jersey State College Athletic Conference (NJSCAC) game, so it does have some importance. In another important battle, the Profs of Glassboro State (GSC) play the Gothics of Jersey City State (JSC).

The women's fencing team will begin practicing for the 1979-1980 season. Anyone who is interested is invited to the tryouts. No previous experience is necessary. The practice times are Monday 6-9 pm and Tuesday and Thursday 4-6 pm, in the small gym. Contact Donna Olson at 893-5251.

Men's 3-on-3 basketball tournament will be held on Oct., 9-10 in Panzer Gym, starting at 8 pm. Applications are due in the Student Intramural and Leisure Council (SILC) office, located on the fourth floor of the Student Center on Oct., 3 at noon.

Anyone interested in joining the MSC Ultimate Frisbee Club, please contact Tom Mongelli at 790-3210 or Paul Lancia at 956-8872. Any staff member interested in becoming an advisor for the club, please contact either of the above people.

Men's basketball meeting today, Sept. 27, at 7 pm in Panzer Gym.

Swimming Pool Hours will be increasing starting Oct., 1. Monday--Wednesday--Friday from 2-4 pm. Free swimming for faculty, staff and students.

Tickets are on sale for the MSC-Seton Hall University (SHU) game in Giants Stadium. Student tickets are available in the Athletic Office for $2.

The MSC soccer team added two victories to their record, and are now 3-0. They defeated New Jersey Institute of Technology (NJIT) 1-0, and Pratt Institute 5-4.

MSC will play Seton Hall University (SHU) at Giants Stadium. Students are urged to come out and support their team. The Indians are 2-1, and will be playing their second game in the conference.
Athlete of the Week

by Andy Kaye

Mary Tuffy is a truly versatile athlete. In high school, she played basketball, field hockey, tennis and softball. At MSC her intercollegiate participation has been “limited” to basketball and tennis. It is her magnificent play on the tennis court that has earned Mary Tuffy this week’s MSC Athlete of the Week honor.

Last year, Tuffy started playing first doubles with Sandy Eberwein. The combination immediately clicked as they reeled off four straight victories to open up the season. They went on to post a 9-2 record and they placed fourth in the state tournament. “We work very well together,” Tuffy noted. “We’re both very aggressive players and we’re both very good net players. We’ve learned to anticipate and coordinate each other’s moves.”

That anticipation and coordination paid dividends last week as the twosome won their first two matches of the season. Their 6-3, 6-2 victory on Monday aided the team’s romp over Upsala. They anticipate and coordinate each other’s moves. “We’re both very aggressive players and we’re both very good net players. We’ve learned to anticipate and coordinate each other’s moves.”

The junior from Trenton has, with her partner, certainly gotten the attention of the Past Time Permanant Female Athlete of the Week. “We tried flag to see if it would resolve some of the problems we had last year with the injuries in touch. We tried to find a safer way of playing, but flag is very vulnerable, tact more than touch,” Mike Ritz, league supervisor said, “the reason for the change is that it was too physical and the chance for injury was greater than in touch. In last year’s men’s and co-ed touch football leagues, there was a total of 1,157 injuries, majority of them occurring in co-ed by freakish accidents. In the first week of the flag football league, a broken collarbone and a dislocated jaw occurred in men’s, while a severely sprained ankle happened to a woman in co-ed.”

McKinley Boston, director of intramurals issued a memo to team captains in both leagues. “It is the belief of the league supervisors that SILC’s switch to touch football because I thought it was well run and it was one of the better things I’ve ever been involved in that SILC’s done.”

The switch back to two-hand touch will also take a lot of the pressure off the officials. “Two-hand touch will definitely aid our referees because the games were getting out of hand and ending up as tackle games rather than a competitive flag football game,” Mickey Corpora, head of officials said.

Bill Neiman another referee had this to stay. “Anytime a referee is put in a position of making an added judgement call, it leads to controversy. You have to distinguish between whether the man is tackling the person or trying to grab his flag.”

Terry Mullane, a referee for the past three years added, “Going into the season, I felt it would be easier officiating a flag football game rather than two-hand touch. As it turned out in many instances, I thought the flag was grabbed when it actually wasn’t and premature whistles were blown stopping the play when it should have continued, or vice versa.”

Squaws tennis team toppled
by Jeanne Keenan

The trip to South Orange on Thurs., Sept. 20, was not an encouraging one for the MSC women's tennis team. In the midst of an actively attentive Seton Hall University (SHU) crowd, the Squaws lost the match 8-1.

Sandy Eberwein, a four-year veteran of the squad said of the match, "We were aware that we were up against high caliber, scholarship players which caused some anxiety. But I feel that the final score did not reflect the true abilities of our team. The loss came as a result of a few weak serves, and a bit of inconsistency."

The opening first singles match started off slowly and ended with a loss for Sue Brown of MSC, 3-6, 3-6. Despite a handicap of a constantly watering, allergic eye, Mary Lynn DeFeo played a strong match, but lost to Donna Dourney of SHU 3-6, 5-7, at second singles.

Pat Flynn of MSC fell subject to the strong forehand of Maureen Lynch during the third singles match, and was quickly defeated, 0-6, 2-6. During the early minutes of the fourth singles match, Janice Lee of MSC was winning 4-1, but Tina Sullivan pulled ahead to win the match, 4-6, 2-6.

Sandy Eberwein at fifth singles, and Mary Tuffy at sixth singles, lost their matches due to serving troubles. The matches were lost, 4-6, 1-6, and 0-6, 3-6, respectively.

There seems to be no stopping the unified playing abilities of that incredible first doubles pair of Sandy Eberwein and Mary Tuffy. They saved the team from being shut out by alternating sides of the court with ease, and defeating their opponents, Maria Kenny and Joann McCabe, in an intense tie-breaker, 5-7, 6-2, 7-6.

Lee Ann Lewis and Pam Carpenter of SHU proved to be a tough duo in a heated second doubles match by defeating Janice Lee and Pat Flynn of MSC, 2-6, 3-6. Under somewhat dark skies, the third doubles match took place. Roe Manghisi and Donna Chell of MSC volleyed impressively against Lauren Fairbanks and Karen Karosy, but took the loss, 5-7, 2-6.

The Squaws are itching to get a grip on their rackets and swing into a full-fledged season. However, the rains are dampening their spirits with two cancellations early in the season. The season opener against Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU) is rescheduled for Oct. 10 on their courts in Teaneck. The match scheduled for Sat., Sept. 22 against the University of Delaware is rescheduled for Wed., Oct. 24, at 3:30 pm at home.

Hopefully the hurricanes causing heavy rains will subside, and the Squaws will be motivated to add a few more wins to their split record of one win and one loss.
Warriors squeak by Indians

by Ken Lambert

In perhaps their effort of the year, MSC lost a close 10-6 decision to Division II power East Stroudsburg State College (ESSC).

Once again penalties by the Indians were their downfall. MSC was penalized seven times for 73 yards. Two of the penalties were at times when they were driving for scores.

The big play and backbreaker for the Indians was a 47 yard pass from quarterback Barry Kennedy to wide receiver Bill Seidel at the 8:45 mark of the third quarter, to give the Warriors a 7-3 lead.

Twice the Tribe was inside the ESSC 20 yard line, but were denied the endzone both times. It was not a case of the Warriors stopping the Indians, but the Indians stopping themselves on either penalties or turnovers. "We played a super ballgame, we hurt ourselves with penalties. The one time in particular was when we were penalized 15 yards when we were inside their 10 yard line," Head Coach Fred Hill said.

MSC scored the first points of the game at the 8:28 mark of the second quarter. After a stalled drive, Keith Sahlin kicked a 20 yard field goal to put the Indians up 3-0, and that's how the first half ended.

The second half was a defensive struggle as both teams managed to trade field goals. Sahlin kicked his second of the day at the 0:46 second mark of the third quarter to cut the ESSC margin to 7-6.

The Warriors scored their field goal at the 9:57 mark of the fourth quarter. Wide receiver Jamie Meier returned the kickoff 37 yards to set up the field goal. Scott Taylor made good on a 30 yard attempt, and this took a little of the spirit out of the Indians.

One of the standouts for the Indians was offensive guard Paul Tortorella. Tortorella did a good blocking job, and an outstanding job of keeping ESSC's little All-American defensive end Ray Yakavonis away from the flow of play.

Quarterback Scott Fischer moved the team quite well, but penalties against them hurt. "We played fundamental football, as good a game as we've played here offensively and defensively," McKinley Boston said.

"The one thing that the team lacks is confidence," Boston added. "Defensively we wanted to see what we could do with our backs against the wall, we held them and this goes a long way towards building confidence," he headed.

Free safety Jerry Agee picked off a Kennedy pass, but was unable to return it. Agee dove at a poorly thrown ball and came up with the big interception to stop the drive.

The Indians take on Kean College on Sat. Sept., 29 at 8 pm at Sprague Field. They will try to get back into the win column, on their way to perhaps another New Jersey State College Athletic Conference (NJSCAC) title.
