Iran sympathizer captivates crowd

by Mike Davino

"I've received threatening phone calls; people have told me they would like to cut my throat. People in my hometown Brookline, MA won't talk to me. I can't even cash a check there," Alyssa Keough, daughter of 1 of the American hostages in Iran said.

Although her father has been held hostage by Iranian militants for the past 6 months, Keough said she is somewhat sympathetic with the Iranian people.

Keough and Leslie Gelb, former assistant secretary of state, were the speakers at a lecture on the Iranian Crisis sponsored by the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA) on May 6.

Keough said she has been threatened and harassed because of her outspoken views on the hostage situation and her Iranian boyfriend.

Keough was critical of the government's handling of the hostage situation and said many of the other hostage families are also unhappy.

Gelb was also critical of some of the government actions, but defended others.

Keough said some of her best friends were Iranian and she understands their situation. "I had very mixed feelings. I spent 3 months in Iran while the Shah was in power and tasted the oppression the people felt," she said.

"At the 1st state department meeting my sister and I were the big mourners. None of our questions were answered," Keough, a college freshman, said.

Keough said an article in the Star publicized her relationship with her boyfriend, an Iranian cadet, who was being trained in the US.

"Many of the families are unhappy with the way the government is handling the crisis. Many were against the Shah's visit to the US, as I was. I've seen documents saying hostages could have been taken. The government knew about the possibility," she said.

"The families don't want to see any more military action to free the hostages. The families met with the government this weekend and will work more closely with it in the future," the added. She said she could not give details because reporters were present at the lecture.

Gelb, who left the state department last July, said he couldn't understand why the government attempted to rescue the hostages. "The way I add it up, there was less than a 50% overall chance of success," he said. He added that he shared former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's objection that the other American citizens in Iran would be in danger if the attempt had succeeded. "It would have been the same situation made even worse," he said.

Gelb said, "It's true the embassy cabled the US and said there would be trouble if the Shah were allowed into the country, but there was nothing to my knowledge about the possibility of the embassy being stormed." He added that he had mixed feelings about allowing the Shah in. He said the Shah was a valuable ally because of his work in stopping the spread of nuclear weapons and letting the US have intelligence posts in Iran to gather information on the USSR.

Keough compared her feelings towards the Iranian people to those of a Vietnam War POW she met at a state department meeting of the hostage families. She said the former POW did not hate his captors.

When asked about Barbara Timm's visit to Iran to see her son Kevin, also a hostage, she said, "People have to understand the position she was in, being in Iran at the time of the rescue attempt. She couldn't disagree with the Iranians; she would have been killed. She is a mother and housewife, not a political analyst."

Grad students spared fees

by Chris Carroll

The referendum which would have possibly made graduate students pay SGA fees did not pass because 20% of the student body failed to vote on the question, Nader Tavakoli, SGA president, said.

The referendum, which passed in the actual voting during April 26-30, failed because only 1,036 undergraduates were in favor of the bill and 314 were opposed to it. A total of approximately 2,226 undergraduate votes would have been necessary for the bill to be considered.

According to the SGA constitution, "Amendments to the constitution must obtain a majority of the votes cast in a campus wide election providing that at least 20% of the student body vote to become valid."

If 20% of the undergraduates voted and a majority of these votes were in favor of the bill, "The board (of trustees) would have to finalize it because the trustees are the only governing body that can assess fees or increase fees," Tavakoli said.

"I think it would have been unfair to assess fees to students who wouldn't have the motivation to use them," Tavakoli said.

Scott Garrett, the legislator who submitted the bill to the SGA vice president, Michelle Gierla, said that he felt there were 2 main reasons for the bill. The 1st being the fact that graduate students take advantage of services that they don't pay for. "In the case that we didn't check, they (graduates) are getting services they haven't paid for," he said.

Garrett cited The Montclarion and the use of the Drop-In Center as examples of such services.

The 2d reason why Garrett was a proponent of the bill was because he felt that graduates should be involved with SGA sponsored activities. Having graduates pay SGA fees would "entitle them to go to the functions they aren't entitled to now," he said.

Trips sponsored by the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA) and the College Life Union Board (CLUB) are examples of such functions, he said.

As it stand now, graduate students cannot participate in SGA activities, they can't be members of any Class 1, 2, 3, or 4 Organization, nor can they hold an office in the SGA, Tavakoli said.

"The problem that I saw was that it would be difficult for graduates to take advantage of the activities that undergraduates do because they're not here on campus as much as undergraduates are," Tavakoli said.

"As far as the SGA is concerned, they are outsiders," he said.

Bob Rice, a graduate student at MCG, said he wouldn't like it if the referendum passed. "Graduates usually don't take advantage of any Class 1 Organizations because they are usually employed fulltime elsewhere and only go to school parttime," he said.

If the referendum had been passed and accepted by the board, graduates would pay the same SGA rates that undergraduates pay: $2 per credit hour up to a maximum of $24 per semester. They would have also been made eligible for participation in all SGA activities and they would be able to hold office in any SGA organization on campus, Tavakoli said.

"The input that I got was that they (graduates) were either indifferent or for the bill," Garrett said. "Unless something phenomenal happens, we'll have to wait till next year to put the referendum on the ballot again, he said.

Kean gets woman for VP

(Union, NJ)—The position of vice president for academic affairs at Kean College (Kean) has had its 1st Black female appointment. "She is the 1st minority in the history of Kean ever appointed to such a high position," according to John O'Reilly, editor-in-chief of the Independent, Kean's newspaper. Dr. Vera King Farris, a middle aged Black female, was appointed on April 21, 1980 after her qualifications were reviewed by the Kean administration, O'Reilly said. From 1970-72 Farris served as the director of the Institute of Innovative Teaching and Counseling for XJ. In 1973 she became an associate professor of biological sciences at the State University of XJ at Brockport, and was also the assistant to the academic vice president, and later the dean of special programs at the university. She has served as chairman of the middle states association of colleges and schools in NYC and is currently a National Danforth trustee for the children's TV workshop in NYC. According to O'Reilly, Farris replaced Dr. Stephen Hasleton in the position of academic vice president and will begin her term in September 1980.

Students vote on new gym

(Wayne, NJ)—Students face a possible increase in tuition fees at William Paterson College (WPC) as a result of a new gym facility bill. The $3.8 million facility is projected to increase the students athletic fees by $2.50 per credit per student, according to Sue Merchant, the news editor for the Beacon, WPC's newspaper. Students, however, have the final say and they will vote on the bill on Tue., May 13, 1980, Merchant said.

Iranians want last gunman

(Iran)—Iran's revolutionary government says it'll ask for the extradition of the only gunman surviving the siege at the Iranian Embassy in London. But British Prime Minister Thatcher is said to be determined to resist the request. Police sources say the gunman will be tried in Britain for murder and kidnapping.

Meanwhile, police today put the final toll in the embassy siege. Seven people were killed—5 gunmen and 2 hostages. The final toll was made known after firemen removed the remains of 3 bodies from the burnt out building.

Meanwhile, Iran's Ayatollah Beheshti says the end of the Iranian Embassy siege in London won't speed release of the American hostages. And he says a parliamentary debate on the fate of the Americans won't be held at least until mid-June.

Carter declares crisis

(Fort Walton Beach, Florida)—The "Boat Flotilla" has now brought nearly 18,000 Cuban refugees to Florida shores—enough for President Carter to declare a state of emergency in Florida. The President issued the order today less than 24 hours after getting a request from Governor Bob Graham. The action is designed to speed federal assistance to areas impacted by the mass migration of Cubans.

Election rules violated

(Camden, NJ)—A presidential candidate for Student Congress was disqualified and reinstated after breaking the election guidelines, according to Fredrick Brancock, a news editor for the Rutgers Gleaner, the Rutgers University (Camden) newspaper. John McGraw, the presidential candidate, was seen distributing campaign literature near the polls on election day and was disqualified, Brancock said.

The previous Student Congress president, Tom Tompkins, then vetoed the entire election results, but was told that he could not do this and the results were revalidated. McGraw won the election, but is faced with a permanent letter of reprimand on his file for the rest of his school term at Rutgers, Brancock said. NJ news compiled by Anne Cannan

Surplus of $200,000

by Mike Davino

The Quarry Development and Student Center Annex Projects have a $200,000 surplus.

Barring unforeseen difficulties in construction, the money will be used for smaller projects, including a sidewalk from the bridge over the railroad tracks near the Clove Rd. Apartments to the main campus.

"Although it seems like a lot, in terms of the overall budget, the surplus is relatively small," Jerome R. Quinn, director of institutional planning, said.

"Because it is so small, we’re not going to spend it until construction proceeds further and we are sure it is not needed for an unanticipated construction problem. For instance, when you move a large amount of earth, it is possible to run into rock, which would cost more to excavate," he continued.

"In October 1979 when we advertised for bids on the project, they came in over our $21 million budget. We cut out a 3d softball field, additional parking at the apartments, and various other items. When we advertised again for bids in January 1980, we came in $200,000 under budget," Quinn said.

Quinn said the Student Center Annex and Quarry Development Committee made several recommendations for possible uses of the money. He continued, "One of the items is a sidewalk from the bridge over the railroad tracks near the Clove Rd. Apartments to the main campus. This will cost around $100,000. The 2d project is the construction of 2 concrete wall paddle ball courts near the apartments' parking lot to the new athletic fields." He added, it is possible the college may receive federal funds for the railroad crossing.

"The committee submitted its recommendations to the administration, and they were approved," Quinn said. The committee consisted of Quinn, Nader Tavakoli, SGA president; Thomas Sternowski, director of student activities; McKinley Boston, director of intramurals; William Dioguardi, director of athletics; Joseph McCinty, engineer in charge of maintenance; and students Lisa Burkhardt and Brian Cge, Quinn said.

Grappling with grievances

by Lori Jersey

At the present time, each of the 6 schools at MSC has its own procedure to follow in the event that a student should have a grievance against a faculty member. These procedures involve formal steps students must take to adjudicate a grievance.

Also, at the present time, a proposal for a unified academic grievance procedure drawn from the collected procedures of the 6 schools, is being reviewed, according to Dr. Irwin H. Gawley, vice president for academic affairs. The unified procedure has been proposed in an effort to simplify grievance procedures, Gawley said.

The proposal incorporates elements common to the procedures of the 6 different schools. The unified procedure would be as follows: 1st, the student approaches the faculty member with the grievance; 2d, the student may arrange a private conference with the chairman of the department, who will arrange a formal hearing between the student, the student, and the faculty member; 3d, the chairman renders a written decision, which may be appealed, to the dean of the school. The dean will render a written decision which may be appealed to the vice president for academic affairs, who renders a written decision and enforces it.

The proposal is tentative and will be published in the spring 1981 Schedule of Courses booklet, Gawley said. If it’s approved, the booklet will just mention that each school has its own grievance procedure.

Dr. Mary F. Bredeimeier, president of the Faculty Senate, urges students to use the correct grievance procedures for their own benefit as well as to prevent injustice to faculty members, whose professional reputation may be harmed by "discrimination of unproven charges."

"Students have a responsibility to file grievances correctly, and use the correct procedures in case of a concern for faculty rights states, "The Faculty Senate urges students to seek redress of any grievances through formal channels, and urges all segments of the college community to exercise caution before publishing, or otherwise making public any such grievance before it is formally heard."

Bredeimeier said, "The grievance machinery is thereto provide justice for both students and faculty members. Both should be aware of these procedures to prevent frustration for students, and injustice to faculty members."

"Students have a responsibility to file grievances correctly, and use the correct procedures in case of a concern for faculty rights states, "The Faculty Senate urges students to seek redress of any grievances through formal channels, and urges all segments of the college community to exercise caution before publishing, or otherwise making public any such grievance before it is formally heard."

Bredeimeier expressed concern that, in recent cases, some students have presented their grievances to the campus community through the student press and the Internal Relations and Committee Against Racism (INCAR), instead of following correct procedures. In her view, the faculty members of INCAR who advise students should apprise them of their right and responsibility to file grievances in the manner which will be most likely to result in fairness for both students and faculty."

by Chris Carroll

Avery Johnson, a junior at MSC arrested on April 24 in College Hall, has not been expelled from MSC because the college is only "dealing with allegations" in this case, Edward Martin, interim dean of students, said.

Johnson, a resident of Irvington, NJ was arrested after the MSC campus police received a report that he had a controlled dangerous weapon in his possession. He was sitting in Martin’s office when the arrest was made by Little Falls, Montclair, and MSC campus police officers.

Regarding his status as a student, Martin said that no action by the college has been taken thus far. "We have not raced to take any action," he said. The college is "just letting the legal process takes its course," he added.

Johnson is presently being held in the Passaic County jail awaiting grand jury action, Sgt. William Hotaling of the MSC campus police said.

Martin has not taken any action in the case because he does not know what the courts will decide and he is busy with other student related matters. The incident was a "relatively routine matter if you remove the allegation that there was a weapon," he said.

Martin explained that the college doesn’t have "very many rules to violate," but that "continuation of such rules could jeopardize enrollment at MSC." "I would be willing to throw a person out of school to save his life," Martin added.

Incidents involving students "quite infrequently occur," Martin said. When they do occur, "most discipline is done by the students," he said.

Martin said that part of his job as an administrator is to "fine tune the behavior of the college."

The senate resolution concerning faculty rights states, "The Faculty Senate urges students to seek redress of any grievances through formal channels, and urges all segments of the college community to exercise caution before publishing, or otherwise making public any such grievance before it is formally heard."

Bredeimeier expressed concern that, in recent cases, some students have presented their grievances to the campus community through the student press and the Internal Relations and Committee Against Racism (INCAR), instead of following correct procedures. In her view, the faculty members of INCAR who advise students should apprise them of their right and responsibility to file grievances in the manner which will be most likely to result in fairness for both students and faculty."
Monitors muddled

by Lynn S. Zlotnick

Confusion and lack of organization are the reasons the $60,000 MSC TV monitor system hasn't been working for 2 years. It did work yesterday for Telcrad 14, as it has in the past, and it will hopefully operate on a regular basis beginning in the fall, according to Tom Stepnowski, director of student activities.

No one was appointed to assume responsibility for the monitors since their purchase 2 years ago. Lack of supervision and confusion over who should censor the broadcast data are the reasons they remained inoperable.

No one was appointed to assume responsibility for the monitors.

Stepnowski says that Mike Bobrowicz, chief engineer at WMSU, has been in charge of supervising the operation of the monitors. John Diglio and Bill Puskas, engineers at the media center, will advise repair procedures for the monitors and do some small repair work.

The administration will fund all repairs and expenses from the college's operating budget, Stepnowski said.

According to Stepnowski, the SGA, student activities, and the administration couldn't decide who was responsible for funding repairs, doing repair, and supervising operation of the system. As a result, MSC TV's weekly videotaped shows were never broadcast over the monitors, even though it was mechanically possible. Also the system's faulty microprocessor could not be repaired until the organization financially responsible for the repair was decided upon.

"All problems have now been resolved, and the monitors will be working next semester if the microprocessor is repaired in time," Stepnowski said.

Debbie Thomson, executive producer to Telcrad (8 hours of student TV programming produced by the broadcasting department), said that she knew that it was possible throughout the semester to run videotapes on the monitors.

Thomson said that a supervisor from student activities has to be present in the system control room before any videotaped shows are aired.

"But we could never get hold of a supervisor or if we wanted to broadcast," Thomson said. Thomson added that she is frustrated. "I kept asking who was responsible for supervising the monitors, but no one ever knew. We were able to broadcast only once on the monitors in March," she said.

Stepnowski said that it is unfortunate that MSC TV wasn't able to broadcast because a supervisor wasn't available. He added that he hopes Bobrowicz's appointment solved that problem.

Diglio said that he couldn't help Thomson, "I wasn't able to broadcast because a supervisor wasn't responsible for operating the monitors and I didn't have a key for the control room," Diglio said.

Thomson said that she got special permission to air Telcrad 14, but the weekly shows were too much of a hassle to broadcast because she could never find a supervisor. "Now that Bobrowicz is supervising the monitors, I hope that MSC TV's shows will be aired next semester," Thomson said.

SGA President Nader Tavakoli doesn't believe that censorship will be a problem in the future. "Bobrowicz will supervise the operation, but the SGA will have priority over what is broadcast on the monitors," Tavakoli stated.

He added that a compromise was reached between the SGA and the administration. "SGA information will have first priority on the monitors, and the administration has the right to censor anything considered pornographic or damaging to MSC's image," he said.

Stepnowski stated that although the weekly broadcast is slanderous, libelous, pornographic, or damaging to MSC's image, it is protected under freedom of speech and press. He said that a special committee to view the information will probably be formed.

Diglio said that the warranty on the monitors ran out last year and that it was not used because of past censorship problems. "When the warranty ran out, there was no more free servicing of the system," Diglio said. He added that he determined who was responsible for financing repairs, the system remained broken.

Diglio explained that it was determined months ago that only the character generator (CG) was malfunctioning. "Bobrowicz pinpointed that the microprocessor in the CG was at fault, but that has nothing to do with the system's ability to play videotapes. Tapes have always been able to play on the monitors," Diglio said.

"Hopefully, the monitor system will be fixed by the summer so we can experiment with programming," Stepnowski said.

According to Stepnowski the job of a representative is to discuss the problems on the campus with his constituents and then present those problems to the legislature.

The SGA legislature meets every Wednesday afternoon at 4 pm in the 4th floor meeting rooms.

Legislative petitions in

by Janine M. Torsiello

Petitions for the position of SGA legislators were due yesterday at 4 pm.

Jay Stufofsky, representative at large, explained that there are 3 different types of legislators, those who are elected by the department, those from their school, and representatives at large.

Stufofsky said elections for legislators will begin on Sun. May 11, 1980 and end on Tue. May 13, 1980.

In a telephone interview, Stufofsky explained the requirements for becoming a legislative candidate. He said if a person is running from his department to represent the department, they need signatures from that department on their petition. If he is running from his school he needs 30 signatures from that school on his petition. He must also maintain a minimum cumulative average 2.5.

Stufofsky stated representatives at large are generally appointed in the fall by the SGA president and voted on by the legislature.

Stufofsky said there are approximately 54 seats in the legislature including those elected and appointed. He said there is no real campaigning as there is for other SGA offices.

He added they are special elections in the fall for incoming freshmen to elect representatives.

According to Stufofsky the job of a representative is to discuss the problems on the campus with his constituents and then present those problems to the legislature.

The SGA legislature meets every Wednesday afternoon at 4 pm in the 4th floor meeting rooms.
Auto accident erupts into fight

by Chris Carroll

A fight was reported outside Partridge Hall on May 2, at 11:30 pm by officer Milton Wormley. A male said he was attacked by 3 other males after an exchange of words. The victim allegedly parked his car on the sidewalk West of the building, then drove his car backwards, jumped a curb, and flattened a tire. Three males who were walking on the sidewalk yelled at him to watch out for the people in the area and a verbal dispute began. The victim allegedly opened the trunk of his car, took out a jack, and swung it at 1 of the males and a fight began. The parties were separated by campus police officers. The victim stated that he would seek medical attention for injuries he allegedly received. Officer John Johnston filed the report.

Criminal mischief was reported by Sgt. Charles Giblin on May 3 at 11:30 pm. A Cushman electric scooter was reportedly being driven around the campus grounds. The vehicle was eventually located on the walkway between Parking Lots 12 and 14. While the scooter was unattended, several persons pushed it over a cliff in the lower parking areas, where it fell about 30 feet. A resident assistant (RA) from Bohl Hall reported the incident and it was reported. The vehicle was recovered and it sustained damage to the front end and the undercarriage.

Four students in Freeman Hall and 2 in Wohn Hall, were reported last week. A female in Freeman Hall reported that a male entered her room and removed $16 from her desk drawer. The victim was asleep in an adjoining room when she heard noise in her room. Voice communication was made with the male, but no visual contact was made. The building was searched by campus police officers, but the suspect was not found. Another female in Freeman Hall reported that a male entered her room when she was in the bathroom and removed $20 from her purse. The female allegedly caught a glimpse of the suspect and the roll of the suspect was made by the campus police. In Bohl Hall, a resident had her wallet stolen after she allegedly left her room unattended. The student reported that her driver’s license, her social security card, and her bank and credit cards were missing. Everything else in the room seemed intact, the report stated.

Another wallet was stolen from a student’s room in Bohl Hall when the resident was across the hall from her room. The resident stated that her driver’s license, her social security card, and her check cashing card were missing. There was no report of cash or checks missing.

A student was transported to Mountainside Hospital on April 30 at 5:30 pm after the student sustained a minor head injury during a sports activity. The student was taken to the emergency and transported to the hospital in an ambulance. Sgt. William Hotaling filed the report. A female student, who cut her hair and colored it, was also transported to Mountainside Hospital on April 30 at 11:04 am. The student was working with a saw in her jewelry class when she cut herself. Officer Albert Sager filed the report.

Operations budgeted

by Debbie Reynolds

The SGA legislature passed a $103,550 SGA operations budget at yesterday’s meeting. This budget for the 80-81 fiscal year reflects a $4,500 raise in the legal aid lawyer program, a $2,600 raise in the legal aid plan, $350 in the bilingual plan, $1,500 increase in the cafeteria line, and a $2,600 raise in the legal aid program, A $1,500 increase in the banquet line, and a $4,500 increase in the general purpose budget was passed for an appropriation for the SGA entertainment fund. The General Corporate Board summer expenses were passed for an appropriation for up to $2,117. This includes up to $600 in the Summer session, $350 in the Bingo program, and $350 in the Summer session.

Student Intramural and Leisure Council (SILC) had its $17,300 budget passed. This is an increase of $979 over last year and will be used to purchase a typewriter. Players budget for $19,850, a decrease of $2100 of last year’s budget, was passed. The major reason that the organizational budget is in such good shape is due to “a very good year” as far as box office sales go. Ron Naples, president of Players, noted there may be a problem due to the resignation of the Forensic Committe’s coach. The new coach may have to be paid for his services whereas the other coach’s services were voluntary. This clause was not taken into consideration in the budget.

Music and Arts Organization Commission (MAOC) was granted a Class 2 charter. The Paralegal Association was also granted a Class 2 charter. This new organization will provide information to the paralegal students who are members of that minor. They will also sponsor a Spanish program.

Phi Chi Theta, a fraternity to promote women in business was granted a Class 4 charter. The Student Organization (ISO) was granted a Class 2 charter. Delta Kappa Psi, a fraternity for male business and economics majors, was granted a Class 3 charter.
The walls have ears

They do it in Russia.
They did it in Germany.
What they did was to control the people. Admittedly it was on a much larger scale than it is on this campus, but the same type of murmurings can be heard.

The TV monitor battle has been decided and the students, who paid for the majority of this prestige project, are deprived of 1 of the few opportunities we have to exercise the responsibility we will be expected to exhibit in a class, or to park illegally. Why not give us a chance—let us cut our most complicated decisions are whether to cut class, or to park illegally. Why not give us a chance—let us try to utilize the years of education and advice that have been heaped upon us.

The issue of “MSC’s image” is getting a little blown out of proportion. MSC’s image should be dependent on the students who pass through this institution. Why must the higher-ups assume that students have no innate taste? This attitude is condescending and for the most part untrue.

The decision to have the programming for the TV monitors censored by people other than the students shows a lack of confidence in us. The TV monitors would be a small concession, considering that it will only air on this campus and not the national networks.

A little trust goes a long way and the lack of it is never quite forgotten.

A lesson in diplomacy

We would like to add our voice to those who admire and applaud the fast and efficient manner in which Great Britian, with the help of their very talented commandoes, made quick work of the terrorists’ action in their country. We can only hope that Jimmy and his advisors will take note. The rest of the world already has.

On Second Thought/Meryl Yorish

Settling foreign affairs

I have a solution to the hostage situation in Iran. Actually, I think I’ve come up with several solutions—all of them nonviolent and fair.

I’m really tired of the constant bickering, just think of these poor 50 guys, wasting away for over 6 months in the same damn place—no movies, no dates, no TV (American, that is), no holidays, no paychecks, and (I shudder to think about it) no Coca-Cola. Nothing but the same old thing, day in and day out—gun-toting captors and screaming fanatics marching by. I ask you, is that living?

In any case, I think that the best way to settle this problem is by some sort of contest, and the following are my modest proposals to settle the stalemate. Although many people think we should give them Nixon in exchange for the hostages, I can tell you now that even if they would accept the deal, I somehow get the feeling that he wouldn’t go along with it—just a thought, mind you, but I think I’m right.

How about a marathon between their president and ours? Carter has been running for quite a while now, and Bani Sadr looks pretty fit. The winner gets the hostages, and the loser gets landslided the next time he runs for office.

We could sponsor a religious fervor contest, of which our religious leaders can whip a crowd into the biggest frenzy. I suggest pitting Billy Graham against Khomeini. He really knows how to work an audience. We’d have to put a condition on this I, though. No bull—unless Graham gets to perform a faith healing for each 10 flagellations.

We might try putting Bani Sadr in a Groovey Marx Lookalike Contest. If he wins, he gets a rubber duck. If an American wins, he gets the hostages and $500.

You could also sponsor a tug of war between Bani Sadr’s Cabinet and Carter’s. Our Cabinet has had plenty of experience in pulling unwilling objects to their side (i.e. Congress).

My personal favorite is a flip flop contest. Carter and Bani Sadr would have a limited amount of time—say 10 minutes—in which to change their minds. The subject would be (naturally) foreign affairs. The 1 who flip flops the most in that time period gains custody of the hostages.

I’d also like to see an international version of Family Feud—starring the Carter and Khomeini families. Don’t you think Miss Lillian would be great? “Now, Billy, put down that beer and answer the question!”

Wouldn’t you just love to see the Ayatollah give the most popular answer to “Name something you find in an embassy?" (And the number 1 answer is—ambassadors. Isn’t that strange? Sorry, your craziness, ‘spies’ was not even on the list.)

I’m sorry if some of these ideas seem a little strange, but if you weigh them you’ll find they’re not much more unreasonable than others coming from Tehran. In fact, some of them make even more sense.

I just wish that the militants and Khomeini would just sit back a moment and see how ridiculous they really are. Condemning the siege of their embassy in London as “terrorism” while still maintaining that their siege is not only lawful, but necessary, right, and just. I can’t believe that their tongues don’t turn black and fall out at such barbecued lies.

Never mind. Instead of saying what I really feel (some people would undoubtedly yell “racism”), I’ll just tell you this.

I’m certainly not going into the diplomatic corps. I think I may join a monastery after all.

Meryl Yorish is the assignment editor.
Students Speak

Students know where they can go

MSC: getting better every year

by Dr. David W. D. Dickson

Our economy may be in the doldrums and our foreign affairs in a depressed condition, but MSC is alive and well.

Improvements in the physical plant are evident all about us. The artificial turf on Sprague Field is beautiful and even more serviceable than anticipated. The earth has already been turned for an addition to the Student Center; this and the adjacent Lawton Blanton Dormitory will together provide another quadrangle. Work is also beginning on the "greening" of the Quarry. Playing fields, a small building for lockers and showers, more and safer parking lots and new landscaping are under construction. Before the end of the summer a renovated Life Hall will provide at long last good facilities for television instruction and a new art gallery. Already resplendent in its spring beauty, our campus will be even more beautiful and considerably more useful by the fall of 1981.

More important yet are new developments in our curriculum. New concentrations are now, and soon will be available in applied sociology, community and industrial psychology and bilingual legal aide programs. Before summer we expect the Board of Higher Education to approve new graduate programs: a Master of Business Administration (MBA) and a Master of Education (ME).

Currently, some faculty members are hard at work shaping a new general education program to assure that all our students are profoundly and broadly educated and not merely well trained in marketable skills. Within the next year, the board's requirement that all students be tested to assess their competence in basic intellectual skills will assure that our graduates will be proficient in computation, the English language, and clear thinking.

From external funds the curriculum and teaching department has developed two programs to provide services to secondary teachers in Newark, N. J. By September 1980, a new associate vice president for academic affairs and possibly 4 new deans will be at work to spur curriculum reform and lively intellectual exchange among our faculty and students, heralding a new decade of intellectual vitality for this college.

This has also been a notable year for extracurricular activities. Our football, lacrosse, and women's soccer teams have had superlative seasons while debating and public speaking teams have been successful in numerous tournaments. Musical, dramatic, and journalistic groups are better than ever.

Certainly there is much important work still to be accomplished. We are far from our ideal of achieving intergroup understanding and trust. Yet, on the whole, this has been a good year. Accordingly, on May 28, 1980 some 10,000 people gathered to honor our 1980 graduates who will have abundant reason to "Hail Montclair."

Dr. Dickson is the president of MSC.

Police upset by administration's definition

To the editor:

Incredible. That's the only word I can find to use in response to the logic of administrators who will not arm police officers until there is an overt danger to the campus police and the campus community. An event where does this expertise come from? Administrators, untrained and inexperienced in police functions, can justify such statements? What is "overriding danger" as compared to run-of-the-mill danger? And what does it take to "convince" the college that campus police should be armed? The killing of a police officer? That line of thinking fits in well with the old "traffic light after the child is hit" syndrome.

Of 567 municipalities in the state, MSC has a crime rate greater than 268 municipalities. Using the administrations unilateral definition of "overriding danger," then 268 towns would strip their police officers of their weapons. But even the most crime free town in the state would not expect its police to respond to incidents unarmed.

Potential. That is the key word. A recent incident at MSC illustrates this. The suspects criminal history includes 6 car thefts, 4 robberies, 3 armed robberies, an assault with a firearm, a sexual assault, a drug offense, and a atrocious assault and battery with a gun. If there is not potential "overriding danger" in approaching a character like this, then I suggest that the college administrators try their hand at "Organic Chemistry." In the Farsi issue, the Toussis have had a conference with Dean Fleischmann, the appropriate MSC officer, who is satisfied that the quality of the examination taken was equivalent to the credit by examination awarded to students. This validation by a college officer is required in all cases when a student requests credit by examination.

The organic chemistry situation involves the amount of class time an instructor can devote to questions from individual students when their technical language proficiency is below the norm for the class. Both the department chairman and the dean have discussed the situation with the students, offering to facilitate a change to other sections of the course where their needs might be better served. This offer was refused. The students have elected to remain in the present class, and they have been assured by the dean that they will be afforded the same privileges as the other students in the class, but that they must assume the same responsibilities. The dean is satisfied that his actions have addressed the situation in an understanding and fair manner, and that no further review is necessary unless significant new information becomes available to support the allegations of the students.

As to the new demand, that an impartial 3d party review the grade in "Organic Chemistry 2," the college will absolutely not allow it. If the students wish to grieve the grade they receive in the course, that is their prerogative, but prior review is a serious breach of academic freedom.

Finally, any request for review of the organic chemistry grade issued must be processed through the official student academic grievance procedure of the School of Mathematics and Science. No other route of appeal will be recognized by the College. Had this procedure been followed originally, the problem probably could have been resolved with a minimum of adverse publicity

Steve, who is better known as ‘Hawk,’ opened the hood of his 1967 Chevy while leaking oil. Luckily, it wasn’t oil we were leaking, but water. From where I was positioned, the fan looked like it was doing a dance and on top of that the bearing had broken loose.

“At 1 am heading South for Hollywood, FL on the NJ Tpk., the trucks were whaling the sound was getting louder and louder. We knew we were on the way to the beach so we decided what the heck. We jumped back into the car and went to the beach.”

Laughing at the up and down, Kalajian reminisced. “We prepared ourselves...”

...and Hawk, they shivered the night away in the cold Chew.

“In the morning we walked 8 miles to the nearest parts store and bought a water pump for $30. By 12 pm, we packed the car up again and left for Hollywood.”

The organized junior said. “I have a book called, “Tunnies things that have happened to me and my buddies since I was wearing some article of clothing that had MSC on it. Of course I was prepared so I took a black magic marker and made MSC across my chest.”

“The Button sponsored different events and the different colleges like Rhode Island, Rider, and MSC, to name a few, competed against each other. The MSC students were psyched on winning all the events.

“The event which stands out in my mind, which of course was won, was the erotic banana eating contest.”

Hesitantly Kalajian continued, "This was a real pisser. The girls had to eat a banana as erotically as possible; however, MSC won on substitution.”

This has not been a good season for the Major Theatre Series. This is due in part to the selection of plays this year which, to say the least, have not been “popular.” This is true of the current production, Yerma, a classical tragedy by the Spanish playwright Federico Garcia Lorca. However, this production of the work is so beautifully performed it should be seen despite the fact it is not well known.

Yerma is the story of a woman’s desperate need for fulfillment. This woman, Yerma, played by Lorrie Conlon, longs for a child. The core of the conflict is the internal struggle within Yerma to account for her sterility. The play raises the question of personal responsibility in the character of an old woman, played by Ruth Leopold, from whom Yerma seeks advice.

In this production, the director, Dr. Jerome Rockwood of the MSC theater department, has chosen to emphasize this existential theme by portraying the character of Yerma as barren. The blocking, costumes, and set all reflect this idea of Yerma as outside of life. In contrast to the rest of the villagers, who are filled with the vibrance of it. The entire cast of this production of Yerma has done an excellent job of bringing this directorial conception to fruition on the stage.

For example, Conlon, as Yerma, is the essence of coldness and sterility. She is new to the MSC stage and in her debut performance must be commended for doing a masterful job. She does the best any actress can do given this interpretation of the play.

By the same token, Stephen Clark, as her husband Juan, is filled with the insensitivity and indifference necessary to justify Yerma’s growing hatred of him and her final act of brutal violence toward him at the end of the play.

In contrast to the darkly drawn characters of Yerma and Juan, the portrayals of the villagers are light and airy and provide the humor in the play.

Most notable among these are Leopold as the old woman, cynical yet compassionate, Michele Tauber as the gossip laundress, and Sharon Cullen as Tauber’s sidekick. The laundress scene, in fact, is well orchestrated and adds much needed comic relief to the play.

However, the most exceptional bit of acting in the play is the work of Steven Greenberg, as Victor, Juan’s best friend and the object of Yerma’s repressed desire. In this role, Greenberg has successfully mixed sensuality with love, loyalty, and innocence. His performance typifies the highest values of Greek art: simple yet beautiful. This cannot be said of the set, though. John Figola’s set is a hodgepodge of varying levels. The precariously placed platforms appear to have been thrown on the stage like a deck of cards. In and of themselves these platforms, with the exception of the color, which is a murky mixture of green and yellow, are visually appealing. However, they are not functional. The actors are miraculously able to move on the set despite its dangerous potential.

Figola is a master of lighting, and his considerable talent in this area is apparent in Yerma. His lighting design enhances the mood in addition to just providing focus for the actors. The opening lighting cue, for instance, is breathtaking.

The single most enjoyable aspect of this production is the lifting Spanish guitar music played intermittently throughout the show. It was composed and performed by Howard Greenblatt of the MSC music department. It beautifully enhances the mood created by Figola’s lighting and Rockwood’s stage pictures.

The costumes, as always, are beautiful. Joe Bella demonstrates a clear insight for the characters and the clothes of the pre-Spanish Civil War period. Rockwood’s directorial interpretation of Yerma as an individual shirking responsibility for her predicament is no more defensible than viewing her as a tragic heroine victimized by fate. However, to take the latter classical view of tragedy would have engendered a lot more sympathy for Yerma. Also, it would have strengthened audience identification with her, added a humanistic element, and made Yerma a lot more playable. Rockwood’s Yerma is a frigid mannequin, nothing more.

The play is currently in production at Memorial Auditorium through Sat., May 10, 1980, at 8:30 pm, with a matinee Friday at 2:15 pm.
So what's up, Doc?

by Dirk Bender

XNTS, A play by Tom Troupe. Directed by Stephen Zuckerman. Set design by Tom Neece. Lighting by Roger Morgan. At the Biltmore Theater.

THE CAST

Familia Mattioli, Greg Childs
Rose Kirk, Lorna Peterson
Author Kirk, Hamford Hove
Claudia Faith Draper, Anne Twomey

If you're the sort who places any faith in the psychiatric profession, then there's a new play on Broadway that's likely to make you storm out of the theater, fuming about the cardboroal representation of a state hired shrink. It should be added that the deliberate stereotyping doesn't bother this reviewer in the least—in fact, the villainous characterization is long overdue. At worst, analysts have in times past received the "lovable buffoon" treatment on the screen and stage. In XNTS, Dr. Herbert Rosenthal is a cruel, thoughtless, rubber-stamping, manufacturer of madness, ready to send Claudia Draper back to Bellevue's mental ward for the rest of her life on the basis of a 50 minute session.

XNTS is set in a courtroom atop Bellevue, where sanity cases are heard. The separation of acts is repeated through court recesses, and while we are exposed to a private conversation between lawyer and client, some of these seem strained and artificial. Both between the client and her parents, most of the dialog could be lifted from the fictitious transcript. The charge is manslaughter, in this case of a journalist who got that violent to handle.

In her Broadway debut as Claudia, Anne Twomey cleverly captures our hearts and minds as she jaunts into the courtroom smiling, and appears, out of her pretty little head. Her performance at 1st reveals only a dreamy reaction to Thorazine. As the drug begins to wear off and her situation becomes more desperate, Twomey injects a new rush of life into the play. When she takes the witness stand, the absurdity of Rosenthal's diagnosis of paranoid schizophrenia becomes apparent; of course she's not frightened. "All of you can hurt me," she explains, "and some of you will." Her circumstances—a husband who skipped out on her, no marketable skills, and the ambition for acceptance into law school—lead her into the position of call girl, in which she claims to have made $18,000 in 5 months.

All that Claudia wants to be tried as a sane individual. So it goes with the play's message—the human will is a powerful force, often underestimated and never fully understood, least of all by those who claim to know it best.

XNTS marks another Broadway debut, that of playwrite Tom Troupe. The swift action and crisp, pungent dialog (when Rosenthal is at a loss for words—"a 50 minute session") betray his journalistic background with The New York Times and Post.

No profession comes out entirely unscathed—even the fairly heroic Lawyer Levinsky reminds Claudia at the play's end that the $18,000 she earned will go for his fees—"I have a house in the Hamptons to pay for, you know." But if you're willing to have some of your confidence in our legal and medical system roughed up a bit, while being entertained by a well oiled, believable cast, see it.

Deadhead's delight go to heaven

by Mark Breitung

Since their switch to the Arista label, it seems the Grateful Dead have been trying to confuse their fans. Only the hard core Dead Heads have stuck with them through the commercial, and at times syrupy, sound of Terrapin Station and Shakedown Street. With these recent projects, however, they have been creating new audiences for themselves as well as losing some of their old audiences.

The main difference between these 2 albums and their newest release, Go To Heaven, is the presence of a new band member—keyboardist Brent Mydland. Mydland seems to have given the Dead the shot in the arm that they needed, putting an end to all rumors that the band is, indeed, dead. They are going in a different direction, but at least it's a positive move. Mydland provides a great deal of energy to the music, not only in his songwriting, but also in his musical ability; he manages to fill in for both Keith and Donna Godchaux, who left the band last year after a lengthy period of ranching and trucker performance. Since their style guru, Stankosky, also seems that all the other band members have gotten better.

The 1st song on the album is "Alabama Getaway," a bouncy, Southern rock tune that will probably become as popular as last year's "Good Lovin'". This is followed by a Mydland composition entitled "Far From Me." I think the major complaint people will have about this song, as well as the other Mydland song, "Easy To Love," is that they both sound a little like the Doobie Brothers or Fleetwood Mac. Still, they're excellent songs, and beat strong trademarks of the Dead (i.e. Garcia's solos, staggered drum beats, etc.).

Rhythm guitarist Bob Weir has contributed 3 songs: "Feel Like A Stranger," "Lost Sailor," and "Saint of Circumstance." They all show Weir at his top songwriting form. "Lost Sailor" is a laidback, drifting tune that is almost reminiscent of "Playing in the Band;" it's a moderately loud rock; and "Stranger" recalls "Estimated Prophet" from Terrapin with a catchy dissonant riff. The best cut on the album is "Atrea," penned by lead guitarist Jerry Garcia and lyricist Steve From "Circumstance." It's a dramatic work and contains great nonsymphonic origins. It's a dramatic work and contains great contrasts between dark and light.

The performance was lacking in several aspects. First of all, there were some technical problems. In the 1st movement, the windwoods sounded a bit flat and somewhat nasal. The strings were too soft in some sections, while overpowering in others. In the 2d movement, the cellos were somewhat flat, and there were some problems in the horn section.

Secondly, and far more important, something was obviously lacking. Hyman's interpretation of the piece, in all but the last movement which was solid and exciting, was rather dull. Tchaikovsky can sound rather monotous if not played with the right amount of emotion. Such was the case.

The 1980-81 season of the New Philharmonic promises to be both varied and interesting. I hope the orchestra is able to recognize its weaknesses and improve to a degree that will make their concerts more inspiring. I wish them a lot of luck.

Serial is a movie that attempts to poke fun at adults who feel that the best way to bridge the generation gap is to act as high school adolescents. But its attempts are feeble. The basic fault of the movie is that the story was written too much on the surface. Although the subject is very interesting, the movie's musical score contains appropriate lyrics such as, "It's a changing world, but it's still fun." Sure, it's a changing world, but if Serial had come out about 5 years back, it would probably have been a smash hit. It's too early to tell what will happen now, but I'm not sure that it will make the same impact on society as it might have back then.

The other asset is the music. The movie's musical score contains appropriate lyrics such as, "It's a changing world, but it's still fun." Last, but not least, the executive of a very prestigious company in San Francisco parades as a member of a homosexual motorcycle gang on weekends.

Throughout the movie the women spend their days holding consciousness-raising meetings where they say anything that is on their minds—even if it hurts someone else. In 1 particular scene, the women are discussing their sex lives openly as the cleaning women look on, astonished. Thinking that this Black maid would be totally ignorant concerning female sexuality, they asked her how her sex life was. Totally confused over the problem and the need for talking about it, she said, "Well, I don’t know what you ladies are saying, but last night I had 7 orgasms."

In the end Harvey, Kate, and Joan are the only characters to realize that order and responsibility would help them to feel that their lives had some meaning; not that sex 5 times a day with multiple orgasms is the prescription for a perfect marriage.

The characters are shallow and very, very flat. There is nothing more known about these people than that they live every day to keep up with the changing times.

Also, the foul language is disgusting. Although there are no real sex scenes to speak of, the bad language makes up for them.

The creators of Serial made 2 correct moves, though. The 1st is to have the film set in San Francisco, which is well known for being the home of people who do not follow the mainstream of society. The background scenery is beautiful. The frequent scenes using the Golden Gate Bridge and the ferry added much color to the movie.

MSC sticks it to SSC

by Terry Mullane

On Tuesday, the MSC women’s lacrosse team chalked up its 3d win of the season by defeating Stockton State College (SSC). The 1st year Squaws consistently attacked the weaker Ospreys throughout the game, scoring 23 goals to SSC’s 4.

Up until now, the Squaws have been a club sport, funding many of their own expenses. This is their 1st year of varsity competition. Many of their opponents have an established lacrosse program. For example, Trenton State College (TSC) (which MSC lost to 11-9 earlier in the season), has competed on the varsity level for over 30 years.

Fifteen seconds into the game, MSC started their scoring assault of the stick of Diane Massing. Senior cocaptain Patti LoPresto and attack player Roz Goldschmidt added 2 1st half goals a piece, as the Squaws produced their highest output of the season. When the halftime buzzer sounded, MSC headed to the locker room leading 15-1.

In the 2d half, cocaptain Pep Wood and defender Sue Rird led a tenacious Squaw defense, limiting SSC to just 3 goals. The MSC offense continued to sparkle on goals by Marianne Cappuccio, Wood, and Bird. When the game ended, the scoreboard read 23-4 in the Squaws’ favor.

MSC was led by the team’s leading scorers Goldschmidt and Massina, with 6 and 5 goals, respectively. Wood and LoPresto added 2 goals a piece. Nilsa Ramirez displayed fine goal tending with the assist of defense woman Mary Carrigan.

Today, MSC will host Centenary College on Sprague Field at 4 pm. This will be the Squaws’ final game of the season. Come watch Coach Jan Beiber’s Squaws “stick it to ‘cm.”

PASS THIS TEST AND YOUR SUMMER IS MADE

QUESTION:
Name the place where you can go this summer to play and learn racquetball for free... train like an Olympic athlete on the latest Nautelis and Paramount equipment, beside expert sports trainers... jog on an indoor track... disco... relax at wine and cheese parties... sauna... steam... whirlpool...

AND ALL THIS FOR ONLY $199.

Squaws 'have guts'

by Meryl Yourish

The women's softball team has guts. They battled their way back from losing the 1st game of the division 2 Eastern Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (EAIAW) playoffs and won 4 straight—including 3 in a row on Saturday.

MSC eliminated West Chester State College (WChSC), 7-1 on Friday after losing to LaSalle College (LaSalle), 1-0. On Saturday morning, they breezed past Central Connecticut State College (CCSC), 9-0. Then came the grudge match—the Squaws faced a cocky LaSalle at 1 pm in a game they had to win to stay alive. They knew they were better than 8th seeded LaSalle—"bush league" was the most popular phrase the Squaws were using to describe them.

MSC roared out of the starting gate with 3 runs in the bottom of the 2d. Rightfielder Kim Volanoski hit a 1 out grounder that went right through the 3d baseman's legs. Van Cauwenberge followed with a bunt that was thrown past the 1st baseman, allowing Volanoski to reach 3d. A passed ball put Van Cauwenberge on 2d, and hot hitting Terry Kulik (7 for 16 in the series) smashed a grounder short of the 2d. Designated hitter Terry Romanowski hit a high fly to left that the leftfielder dropped, to drive in a run.

LaSalle's pitcher, Laura Frieze, who had treated fans to an exhibition of disco dancing before the game, treated MSC to an exhibition of bad pitching by giving Robin Krause and Judy Popadaniec bases loaded walks. Frieze got the hook, and in came Vic Smith, the pitcher who had beaten the Squaws on Friday. Smith got Bonnie O'Connor to bunt and for the force at home, and Nancy Oleyx flew to right to end the inning.

LaSalle came back in the top of the 3d with 2 runs on 4 walks and an infield hit off pitcher Val Julian. They tied it up on a protested play in the 5th. With 1 out and women on 1st and 3d, LaSalle's batter bunted, O'Connor checked the runner at 3d, and threw to 1st for the out. The batter knocked down Popadaniec (covering at 1st), and a run scored before she could get up and throw the ball. MSC claimed interference but the 1st base umpire overruled and said that the runner was not out of the baseline.

The score remained tied until the bottom of the 7th. Popadaniec led off with a chop to 3d which went past the 3d baseman into left field. Frieze, no longer wise, threw the ball over the fence behind 1st, and Popadaniec went to 2d. A wild pitch to O'Connor sent her to 3d with no outs, and sent the already frenzied fans and team into hysterics. O'Connor responded with a long smash to deep right center, scoring Popadaniec with the winning run, 4-3.

MSC blew them away, 11-3, in the final game of the series an hour later. The Squaws collected 11 runs on 11 hits, 8 walks, and 3 LaSalle errors in a game highlighted by the 6 run 5th inning. Julian pitched her 3d victory in 2 days—the win over WCS on Friday and back to back victories over LaSalle—to improve her record to 9-2. The Squaws will meet old rivals Seton Hall University (SHU), who upset 2nd seeded Ramapo College (Ramapo)—to decide the division 2 Eastern Regional champ at the University of Rhode Island on Fri., May 9, 1980. The winner of the 2 out of 3 game series advances to the finals in Sacramento.

MSC's Robin Krause covers bag as runner is forced at 3d. Judy Popadaniec bases loaded walks. Frieze got the hook, and in came Vic Smith, the pitcher who had beaten the Squaws on Friday. Smith got Bonnie O'Connor to bonte to short for the force at home, and Nancy Oleyx flew to right to end the inning.

I M Highlights

by Mike Ritz

There were no games played last week in the men's and coed softball leagues due to rain and bad field conditions. Play resumed this week with men's quarter final games and coed semifinal games.

The mixed 2-on-2 basketball tournament was held last Monday. The tournament consisted of 8 male female teams. Bob Zaworski and Terry Romanowski defeated Randy Meissner and Mary Johnston to capture the tournament crown.

Coming events: The men's 1-on-1 basketball tournament will be held on Mon., May 12 and Tue., May 13 in Panzer Gym at 7:30. Applications are now available in the SHU Office, 4th floor, Student Center.

Tribe toppled

A 385-402 loss to Ramapo College (Ramapo) dropped the golf team into 2d place in the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference (NJSCAC) last Tuesday at Spook Rock Country Club in NY. Ramapo now holds sole possession of 1st place and is ranked number 3 in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA).

This was MSC's 1st shot for a title since Coach Pete Famiano took over. The Tribe is now 11-2 on the season.

The Indians were led by team captain Mike Canning and juniors, Dave Rechow and Chris Lowe, who all shot impressive 78s.

MSC's final 3 men, Pat Romano, Bill Andrews and Jim Schubert shot 88, 88, and 81, respectively.

Indians gain playoff berth

by Paul Huegel

The baseball team earned a berth in post-season play as they upset both Upsala College (Upsala) and William Paterson College (WPC) over the weekend.

It appears that the Tribe has finally peaked and is beginning to live up to their preseason boasts. Their recent success can only be analyzed as a total team effort. The pitching has been practically untouchable, and the bats have been reloaded with additional rounds of extra base hits.

MSC's record presently stands at 16-12.

Fri., May 2, 1980

MSC's ace, Glenn "Preacher" Roe, chalked up his 4th victory of the season as the Indians nipped WPC, 6-4, at Pittser Field.

The Tribe broke a 2-2 deadlock in the 4th inning to put the game on ice. Cocaptain John Guarino singled home 2 of the 4 runs scored in the inning.

Second baseman Bill Slawinski notched his 2nd home run of the year.

Sat., May 3, 1980

In Wayne, the next day, WPC got their revenge as the Pioneers routed the Tribe, 15-7. WPC pulled ahead 11-2 with 6 runs in the 4th. MSC battled back, but to no avail.

Joe Ross hit his 2nd home run in as many days. This 1, his 9th as a Pioneer, set a new WPC record.

Sun., May 4, 1980

While the hurricane winds were upsetting the tents across the campus at Carnival, the Indians were doing a little of their own upsetting.

Upsala brought their number 2 national ranking (for division 3 colleges) to Pittser Field. They left with their 2nd defeat of the year, 9-6.

A pair of Bob's proved to be too much for the cocky Vikings. Bob Fortunato continued to yield the big bat for the Tribe. His 3 hits on the day, drove 4 runs across the plate.

In the bottom of the 4th, he singled in a run that contributed to MSC's securing an early 8-3 lead.

His triple in the 2nd produced 2 more runs, and, in the 7th, he single scored a 4th run.

Joe Ross hit his 2nd home run in as many days. This 1, his 9th as a Pioneer, set a new WPC record.

The Tribe scored 6 runs in the 6th and blasted 16 hits against the hapless Gothics.

MSC's Tony Sabato hit a solo shot over the left field fence on route to a 3 for 4 day at the plate.

SMOKE SIGNALS: Playoff action begins this afternoon when the Tribe hosts Glassboro State College (GSC) at 3 pm on Pittser Field. During the season, MSC dropped a close 5-4 decision to GSC.
