Unions at odds

by Naedine Hazell and Mindy Goldstein

The New Jersey Education Association NJEA is seeking faculty support in its move to oust the American Federation of Teachers AFT from its position as the collective bargaining agent for MSC faculty.

AFT negotiations were to meet today with the state to discuss demands for the faculty's contract renewal according to union literature.

NJEA's organizer here, Jon Sobecki, thinks a change of unions is necessary because "Morale is low among faculty and nonteaching professionals." He feels the AFT has not provided quality representation.

Sobecki said that during the 1979 contract negotiations, the AFT said it was impossible to get both cost of living raise and to retain salary increments. He said a few months later other state unions received salary packages with salary increments and cost of living raises.

Sobecki also feels the NJEA provides better training for its members. He cites a two week labor school the NJEA conducted at MSC this summer, at which bargaining and grievance strategies were taught.

According to a union fact sheet, the AFT's current demands include: an 18 percent salary increase for all employees on July 1, 1981 and again on July 1, 1982; an automatic cost-of-living adjustment every three months; all dental and eye examinations to be paid for by the state; elimination of promotion and tenure quotas; and a moratorium on the hiring of adjuncts.

Support cards have been sent to MSC faculty by the NJEA. If 50 percent of the faculty sign the cards, the state Public Employment Relations Commission PERC must hold a collective bargaining election.

The AFT, countering this effort, has sent faculty a notice saying "Don't sign that NJEA card."

Regarding the AFT notice, Sobecki said, "The AFT doesn't want an election. To me that is non-democratic. People should have a say as to who is going to represent them."

Barbara Hoerner, a staff representative for the AFT, said the NJEA represented MSC faculty prior to 1973. She claims that voting on contracts under the NJEA was restricted to members only, whereas the AFT allows members of the bargaining unit to vote on contracts under the NJEA. She said there were no grievance committee meetings, the AFT holds regular meetings with representatives from the eight state colleges. She also said faculty had no input into the old NJEA contracts. She feels that the AFT is a more democratic organization.

The amendment to the TAG bill comes as the department of higher education passed its new recommended budget for the 1981-82 academic year. The $596.4 million budget, adopted Friday, represents an overall increase of 8.2 percent over last year's budget, including a 4.6 percent increase to the state college sector and a 25 percent increase to the private college sector. The plan also calls for a forced decrease in enrollment at Rutgers University and the state colleges while allowing the state's 17 county colleges to increase their enrollment by 3,000 students.

The amendment as adjourned until Mon., Nov. 10, but Brown said the amended version of the bill will not be voted on until sometime in December.
Paper burned

(NEWARK, NJ)--Members of the Black Organization of Students BOS stormed the office of the Observer, Rutgers University's student newspaper, in a fury over a cartoon it printed last week. They burned close to 1,000 issues, according to John Fatteross, editor-in-chief.

"About 30 students, not a delegation, stormed the office, calling it a 'lily white' paper and saying there weren't enough black writers," Fatteross said. BOS was formed in the early 70's to combat racism, he added.

The cartoon in question was a caricature of Paul Robeson, an early civil rights leader, after whom the Student Center is named. "Uncle Paul sez... come to the WRNZ general meeting..." is the caption that caused the black students' outrage, Fatteross explained.

Fatteross said he had a "sense of outrage" over the incident. "Our intent was harmless," he said. "The Observer has lots of Black writers. You can't tell a person's color by the by-line."

"It was meant only as a trademark, a symbol of endearment. I can't believe anyone could be offended by it," Al Knight, the cartoonist, said.

"We are demanding to be paid for the burned issues. The paper is published with student fees. It is not sold." Fatteross said. "We want 25 percent of SH70, which is what it costs to put out 4,000 issues," he added.

Debate plans settled

(WASHINGTON, D.C.)--President Carter and republican candidate Ronald Reagan have finally decided to debate each other on Tues., Oct 28, in Cleveland, OH. The League of Women Voters reported that the nationally televised debate will be 90 minutes long and consist of two parts.

The first part of the debate will consist of questions from the four panelists, and the second half will include rebuttals from the candidates and responses to the rebuttals. There will be a brief closing statement from each candidate.

Athletes charge racism

(POMONA, NJ)--Eleven Black football players at Ramapo College Ramapo claimed racial discrimination when they were dropped from the team, Lynn Black, editor-in-chief of Argus, SCU's weekly student newspaper, said.

"The coach is not thinking of us as persons," Black quoted the players as saying. "They are asking for a minority coach and a Black captain if they are reinstated," she added.

Black said the team coach had explained that the 11 in question had not attended practices and were simply not ready to play.

"They felt they didn't get to play even when they did attend practices," Black said. "They are wanting to see if they will be reinstated," she added.

SHU dorms searched

(South Orange, NJ) -- An internal warrant was issued for the search of student dormitories at Seton Hall University/SHU after the theft of a couch and two armchairs which were later recovered, the Sentinel, SHU's student newspaper, reported.

Phil Harrman, news editor of the weekly, said the newspaper is conducting an investigation into the legality of such a search. "The American Civil Liberties Union/ACLU said the search seemed excessive," he said.

"It is a dangerous incident in that it may set a precedent for other such searches," he added.

The search warrant for Boland Hall, a 400 room dormitory, was signed by a university vice president after the furniture disappeared from the office of Sue Hailman, an assistant director there.

Hailman said the warrant was issued because "There was a strong likelihood the furniture did not leave the building." She said the search was probably illegal, he said.

Anderson bought NJ

(NEWARK, NJ) -- Independent presidential candidate John Anderson accused President Carter of using federal funds to try to buy votes in NJ.

In an interview with the associated press Tuesday, Anderson said vote buying was Carter's goal in awarding a $4.5 million federal grant for a new water pipeline for the North Jersey drought area.

CLUB is a class 1 organization of the SGA
Religious group under review

by Mary Ann D’Uro

Followed by an investigation by The Montclarion into allegations made against Chi Alpha, a religious group on campus, the SGA will place the organization’s Class III charter into the Constitutional Review Committee, which will decide next week whether or not to change Chi Alpha to a Class IV Organization or to decharter the group completely.

Last week The Montclarion reported that Chi Alpha, and hence the SGA, was threatened with a law suit by a disgruntled MSC student complaining that the religious organization constituted a church established on state property—interpreting this as a violation of the law of separation of church and state.

In a well known case concerning the separation of church and state, Justice Black summed up the Supreme Court’s majority view on this issue as follows: “Neither a state nor the Federal Government can pass laws which aid one religion, aid all religions, or prefer one religion over another.”

The committee’s decision concerning Chi Alpha’s charter may effect other religious based groups on and off campus, such as Newman House, the Jewish Student Union/JSU, and Intervarsity Christian Fellowship F. “Religious organizations are

Programs accessible to the handicapped

by Mike Davino

Now that the defeat of last November’s higher education bond, MSC was forced to seek alternative means of complying with Federal law mandating that college facilities be made accessible to handicapped students.

In order to comply with the Federal standards, MSC has assigned classes to buildings that are already accessible to the handicapped and is bringing support programs to students who cannot reach existing programs because of barriers in the older buildings on campus.

A bond issue allotted $700,000 to MSC—which it had since learned to do without—may provide the funds needed to make campus buildings fully accessible to the handicapped.

“Under Federal law, commonly known as Section 504, colleges are required to make their programs accessible to handicapped students,” Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, said.

“One way to accomplish this is to make our facilities accessible by making physical improvements such as installing ramps and elevators. We estimated it would cost $700,000 to make the older buildings on campus accessible and planned on using money from the bond issue. Unfortunately it was defeated by the voters last November,” Quinn said during a telephone interview.

“Another way to meet the Federal requirements is to

Sexual assault charge dismissed

by Beth Winkelmann

The attempted sexual assault charge against James L. Lewis was dismissed during his probable cause hearing last night. Lewis will remain charged with aggravated assault on an unidentified female classmate. He has been ordered to appear before a Passaic county grand jury for indictment.

Last night in Little Falls court, Judge John J. Cavenda said that he was satisfied that there was probable cause that the aggravated assault occurred, and that Lewis caused it to happen.

Gavenda dismissed the attempted sexual assault charge because the victim could not identify the area where it occurred.

MSC police officer Lee Buchanan testified that although the victim was unable to determine the exact location of the alleged attempted sexual assault, she did identify the spot where Lewis’ car was parked when she allegedly hit her over the head.

According to a campus police report, police laboratory technicians searched Lewis’ IMF 203 and found what they believed to be concealed dangerous substances. Also found was a gold cigarette case and a wooden pipe, both with marijuana residue, seeds, and leaves in them. Lewis was given a conditional discharge and will be on probation for six months for this offense.

Lewis’ bail for the aggravated assault charge will remain at $10,000, according to Cavenda. Dennis L’Huff, attorney for the suspect, informed the judge that a bail bond had been set.

The victim, a brown haired young woman, was asked by Lewis if she wanted with her money. After this occurred, the victim said, Lewis drove her to a wooded area off campus and choked her and dragged her out of the car. She stated that she pleaded with him not to hurt her, and she drove her back to Normal Ave., where she was released.

She then stated that she walked to the white information booth on College Ave. and asked for help. Police from the Assembly of God Church and private individuals.

Newman House, located off campus on Valley Rd., is funded by the archdiocese of Newark. Father Herter, director of Newman House, said Newman Hour provides counseling and worship services to students wishing Catholic guidance. He is provided for solely by the archdiocese. The Jewish Student Union /JSU, a Class III Organization of the SGA, makes no claim to religious affiliations, but rather exist to socialize through cultural programs, lectures, and dances. Joy Klaind, adviser, said, “Klaind came to MSC through the Jewish Community Federation, Alan Worshinski, of the Rutgers’ Newark Jewish Students Services said.

Another of the student’s complaints is that the nature of Espamer’s source of income, namely donations made by Chi Alpha’s members at the organization’s Thursday night meetings and Sunday morning worship services. Espamer had commented that the students had told him the right thing to do was what people want with their money.

The SGA’s rationale behind reviewing Chi Alpha’s charter is that it may be in violation of the statutes governing Class III Organizations. Because only Class IV Organizations are entitled to have national affiliations, and because Chi Alpha, a Class III Organization, is affiliated to the Assembly of God Church, the question has arisen as to whether it is constitutionality of its charter.

If Chi Alpha is made a Class IV Organization, the club would be entitled to meeting space in the Student Center and the legal protection of the SGA. However, if Chi Alpha is dechartered completely, it would not be allowed to meet in the Center and, if involved in a law suit, would be forced to fend for itself.

The procedure would follow for any organization under the SGA.

Solar grant awarded

by Mary Ann D'Urso

MSC recently received a $40,000 grant—one of the largest in NJ—from the department of energy to develop a system making solar energy economically feasible for installation in private homes.

Winfield Parsons, of the industrial education and technology department, will head the program assisted by William Goetchius, a research technician, and a student at MSC. MSC is contributing $12,000 to the existing $40,000 grant. The project will be located at 1011 inside the administrative lab for the duration of the project.

The system would employ parabolic solar collectors that could provide constant year round power at a substantially lower cost than existing systems. The basic principle of parabolic solar collectors is the concentration of light on a single tube going through the focal point of the parabola. The light falling in the tube is then converted into heat. Heat produced from the concentrated light is absorbed by the liquid inside the tube, which is then pumped into a person's house. The heat can then be used as a substitute for conventional sources of heat such as gas, oil, coal, or wood. Most people in this area use the heat energy from their solar collectors to heat their homes, tanks for home heating.

In order for the parabolic collectors to work efficiently they must be aimed directly at the sun. Hopefully research will yield a low cost, durable tracking device that will lower the cost of the system.

Students adding in the research phase are already building and testing these tracking systems.

The next phase is the development of vacuum tubes. The copper tube that the sunlight focuses on will be encapsulated by a clear glass tube sealed at both ends and pumped down to an excellent insulation of the heat collected in the tube. It is hoped that this process will increase efficiency by as much as 30 percent and add only minimally to the overall cost of the system.

The third and final phase is the mass production techniques necessary to build the fiberglass shells. The more that can be built in a shorter time period the cheaper the price of the system will be.

The research findings will be published in the form of a book that will describe the results and the innovative techniques developed.

Municipal tickets increased to $10

by Mary Ann DeFlore

Dr. Elliot I. Minnberg, vice president for finance, announced last Wednesday night's meeting of the board of trustees that the time for violations of the two hour parking limit on the streets of Montclair has been increased from $2 to $10 by Montclair town officials.

Also discussed at the meeting were the under representation of minority faculty in public universities and colleges during a presentation made by Anita Walters, affirmative action officer at MSC. The trustees resolved to form a task force to aid in the hiring of minority faculty and discussed the recruitment of minority students.

The trustees announced the results of a test conducted to measure the asbestos level in areas of the campus containing this fiber. "The asbestos levels are well below the federal regulation level," Minnberg said.

Referring to the increased parking violation fee, Minnberg said that many Montclair residents were disturbed because of the number of cars belonging to MSC students parked on their local streets. Minnberg attempted to explain the parking situation on the MSC campus in an attempt to resolve the residents complaints.

Ken Brown, student representative, was asked to explain the students' role in improving the hiring of minority students at MSC.

He said an SGA recruitment team was formed consisting of SGA legislators and the Catin American Student Organization LASO. "They will work with the Admissions Office to recruit more minorities," he said, adding "Multiracial groups of students are going out with the Admissions Office to recruit." Ernest May, chairman of the trustees, suggested to Brown that a student and minority student also be asked to sit on the Affirmative Action Task Force. These attempts at further increasing the minority faculty and student populations at MSC are in response to a board of higher education affirmative action resolution requiring the boards of trustees at public institutions to identify practices which are preventing the hirings of minority faculty. Walters reported that there has been a statewide decline in the hiring of minority faculty.

Minnberg also told the trustees that a parking consultant has been hired to review the MSC parking situation. It is hoped that the consultant will find ways to improve parking accommodations for handicapped persons and visitors and to generally improve the parking situation throughout the campus.

Career Corner

Senioritis strikes

by Peter Prichard

"Senioritis, a gnawing sensation experienced by many college seniors that can develop during the vacation after graduation, and return with a renewed commitment to find a job. Another option is to take advantage of the following resources while in school with the hope of gaining employment at graduation school or finding a job prior to graduation.

Senioritis strikes

Those students not planning to go to graduate school can take advantage of several employment related services which are available at MSC.

The Office of Student Teaching and Educational Placement, Room 001 in Chapin Hall, provides assistance to students in the process of applying to graduate school. A large number of articles, brochures, and pamphlets which discuss graduate school realities are also available in Career Services.

Bill debated

by Meryl Yourish

Yesterday's SGA meeting ended in controversy last night. The Appropriations and Government and Administration Committees cosponsored a bill at the request of Scott Garbett, SGA treasurer, that would require any Class I contract to carry both the president's and treasurer's signatures. Currently, only the president's signature is required to validate a contract. After a lengthy debate, a recess was called to cool temperatures down. Quorum was called after the recess, and was not present.

The cricket club was granted a Class III charter for 1980-82. The lacrosse club was also granted a Class III charter. A bill was passed establishing a Trek, a day to remember the American hostages in Tehran. There will be a brief, nondenominational service starting at noon in the Student Center Mall. President David W.D. Dickson, Father Kenneth Herber, and Brian Cote, SGA president, will speak at the service.

The health professions club was given a conditional discharge and will be on probation for six months. Officer Robert Williams is investigating. The battle isn't over Due largely to the student strike of several weeks ago, Students of NJ state colleges won a battle in the fight over Assembly bill 1972. But the war is not yet won.

Albert Burstein (D-Tenafly) generously amended the bill to allow $1.8 million in tuition increase, instead of up to $4.5 million. It's nice to know that he's returning some $3 million to us, but there's a slight problem.

We're still paying for a debt we didn't incur. Whether we pay $1 million or $100 million, the fact remains—state colleges underspent their Tuition Aid Grant/TAG programs. We're still being penalized for administrative errors by the board of higher education.

Another problem is that some $200,000 will be transferred from the management and administrative services budget of T. Edward Hollander, the chancellor of higher education. Making Hollander pay for his own errors by the board of higher education is a good idea, but that money was supposed to go to improvements that would benefit all of the state colleges. No matter which way we turn, we're being robbed.

The fight is far from finished. The SGA intends to keep up the lobbying effort, and we urge you to do your part. Call your assemblyman, or even stir, write them. Let them know you are not satisfied with the amended version. Show them that you really care about the horrible state of higher education spending in NJ. Tell them that we deserve to be better than 47th in the nation in per capita spending on education.

We're doing all we can. Right now, the rest is up to you. We're asking you, once more, to stand up for your rights.

Well done

We would like to applaud the athletic department, specifically Dr. Leonard Lacsene, Dr. Joan Schleede and Tim Sullivan and all their students, for their work with the NJ Special Olympics. It isn't often that the campus community takes an active part in such worthwhile endeavors as last week's Special Olympics.

The expressions on the faces of those participating in the event said more than any article could.

This day should be an example to those cynical critics who claim that humanity no longer has a heart and that college students are apathetic and jaded.

One year ago, on election day, less than one-quarter of the eligible voters between the ages of 18-25 exercised their right to vote. That was the year that MSC lost over $12 million it would have received if voters had approved a higher education bond issue.

In fact, the number of eligible voters that turn out on election day has declined steadily since 1960—which is most of our lifetimes.

Now you probably are saying to yourselves, "Oh, I'm not going to read this if it another stupid article telling me to go out and vote."

Well, this is not another stupid article telling you to go out and vote. It is an important article telling you, the MSC student, professor, or staff member, that you are (use a technical political language) a real need if you don't go out to vote on Nov. 4.

I can't understand what is so repulsive about going out to vote, with the possible exception of Ronald Reagan. I'm sure more than 22 percent of you went to the dentist last year. Why is it you can motivate yourself to have some guy with bad breath lean over you and inflict pain, but you can't motivate yourself to enter the nice little booth and pull a few levers? It's the same result. If you neglect to go to the dentist, your mouth stinks and your teeth rot. If you neglect to go to the polls, the government stinks and the country rots.

You know now you are going to vote, because I can't stomach any of the choices. Now I'll admit, I would just once like to vote in an election where I have a hard time deciding who to vote for because they are all so good. This seems to hold true for SGA elections, right up through US presidential elections.

But staying home on election day, and then sitting around complaining for four years, isn't going to change that.

Which brings me to the next excuse people use to get out of voting, and to me, this is the worst. "What difference is one vote going to make? My vote doesn't count." My friend, if you believe that, then you obviously need a geography lesson, because this is Montclair, not Moscow.

The whole principle this country is founded on is that you have a say in who sits in office, and you can tell them how you want them to rule. Don't tell me you can't affect legislation. When was the last time you wrote to your elected official? And how can you say your vote doesn't count when you pull a lever for the candidate you want? You are telling the government what you want, and that isn't as easy as it sounds. Never take that right for granted until you see, first hand, what life without voting is like in Eastern European countries.

It doesn't take a lot to be an informed voter. All it takes is listening to your morning news on your favorite radio station on the way to school. Listen to mom and dad at the dinner table, or pick up the literature circulating around campus. Even if you can't jump up and down enthusiastically about any of the candidates, one will have a platform you at least partially agree with.

I think the thing that scares me the most about voter apathy is that one year less than 10 percent of the country will make it to the polls. And someone will come along and suggest that if we let him take office, we won't have to bother with voting anymore. All the bored students, busy businessmen, lazy teachers, and uninterested housewives will let him take over, and he will eliminate voting, then columns like this, then your favorite Sunday services, then your choice of career, then...

Secretary of State Donald Lan told me that there are two ways to change a government: one way is with ballots, the other is with bullets.

Please, let's keep it with ballots.

MSC divided over chartering

by Georgia Panagakos and Phil Lanoue

Do you think the SGA should charter religious organizations?

“No, because MSC is a state institution, and the state should not supplement religious activities.”

Diane McGinley 1981/ business administration

“I think that religion should not be chartered. It should be a free organization where anyone can join.”

Betty Caselino 1983/computer science

“Yes, I think it should. I don’t think that religious organizations should be any different than other organizations.”

Chris Gregers 1984/marketing

“No, I think that people should practice what they want without being in an organization. I think organizations are something to hide behind. Religion should be run only on its own.”

Art Penny 1981/political science

“Sure, I think so. I think that if a group can get enough people, I don’t think they should be denied a chartered organization.”

Marc Vallero 1984/business

“I think so but it is still an organization. It’s still an organization if it’s within the school limits. So, I believe it should be chartered.”

James Carlo 1984/communications

“No. This is not a religious college. If it was, it should have been named Saint Montclair State. If they want religion, they should have gone to a religious college.”

Joe Natoli 1981/psychology

Past performance also an issue

To the editor:

This is in regards to Phill Karali’s comments on Jimmy Carter (“Carter: a man of integrity?”) in the Oct. 2 issue of The Montclarion.

I applaud Mr. Karali’s efforts, but believe the point could have been hammered home a bit harder. Four years ago, Carter ran and was elected on the platform of cutting inflation at home, establishing a clear foreign policy, and his ever famous crusade of human rights. He has failed on all counts.

First, by his own admission inflation is running wild and is now seemingly uncontrollable. In fact, the only things Carter has done for inflation are: (1) change the formula for computing it and (2) increase it.

Secondly, to this date we have yet to establish a clear foreign policy. While Carter tries to figure out how to deal with Iran, Russia knows exactly how to deal with a country like Afghanistan.

On human rights I simply ask what rights the Americans being held hostage for almost a year have. What has Carter as President done for our country? He’s given us inflation, unemployment, and recession at home, and embarrassment worldwide.

Folks, it’s simply not an issue of integrity; it’s a question of past performance.

Critic questioned

To the editor:

This letter, like others you have probably received, appeared in The Montclarion on Sept. 25, containing a review of the recital by Barbara Holmquest on Fri., Sept. 19, which was written by Stephen Kantrowitz.

How any publication could continue to employ someone as a musical critic is beyond my belief. This is a musical review, not a political one.

The audience was far from the most enjoyable and worthwhile event. The audience was far from shortchanged.”

Trivia contest is a teaser

by Regina Brzek

"Question 11," bellowed the master of ceremonies/MC. "In what movie did Julie Andrews win a best actress award?"

The heads of the seated contestants bowed in unison as they hastily scratched out what they thought was the correct answer. "OK," he continued, "does anyone need more time?"

No one replied. Everyone seemed to have that smug, confident look on their faces. They all knew that the only movie Julie Andrews could have possibly gotten an Oscar for was...

"Alright," said the bearded MC. "Does anybody have the correct answer?"

"The Sound of Music," blurted a contestant from the back of the room.

"Wrong," said the MC, shaking his head from behind the podium. A chorus of grunts and moans rose from the long tables where the contestants brainstormed for answers.

"Anyone else?" questioned the MC.

A tall, intelligent looking young man, with a closely clipped haircut and wide glasses, spoke from the front tables. "Was it Mary Poppins?" he asked, somewhat unsure of himself.

"Correct!" beamed the MC. One voice from the far left corner of the ballroom mumbled, "I always do that. I knew the right answer. Why the hell didn't I write that down?"

And so the same pattern followed through the remaining 20 questions asked last Wednesday afternoon at the movie trivia contest sponsored by the Student Intramural and Leisure Council/SILC. Eleven contestants braved out the teaser-test held at noon in Ballroom C of the Student Center.

"It's a lot of fun," Charlee Bannon said, the small redhead in charge of the trivia contests. Being an MSC student is the only requirement necessary to enter. "Just come on down!"

The movie contest was one of the several trivia games yesterday's was sports, and next week's is a popculture contest for those without a field of concentration. A possible TV cartoons trivia contest is being mulled over.

Twenty questions are being asked for a possible accumulation of 163 points. The MC calls out the questions and the contestants answer them on scrap paper. The participants get to compare their accumulative scores with their rivals as the scorekeeper chalks the points beside their names posted on a blackboard. A bonus question is thrown in to give the contestant an opportunity to bet his points with the chance of gaining or losing the same amount he bet.

"We get our questions from a few trivia books, even from the 6 pm news, and we bounce the questions at each other up in the SILC office," Bannon said, smiling.

Cash prizes are also awarded at the games. First place wins $15, second place wins $10, and third place wins a SILC T-shirt.

Michael Price, the guy with the Ivy-league look who popped the Poppins answer, won first place in the movie trivia contest with a score of 120. "I just love movies," Price said. "I guess I just have a good memory for that kind of thing."

I knew the correct answer to questions about movies that I haven't seen since I was a kid."

Price said that he often refers to trivia with that of the few trivia books, even from the 6 pm news, and we bounce the questions at each other up in the SILC office, Bannon said, smiling.

Here's a chance for you to match your skills at movie trivia with that of the contestants. Following is a list of some of the questions from last week's movie category.

1. She played the mother of Charles Foster Kane in Citizen Kane. What is her name?
2. From what movie is the famous routine Who's on First by Abbott and Costello from?
3. What was Sachs (Hunts Hall) full name in the Bowery Boys?
4. What is the real name of the actor who played the alfino in 1958 movie God's Little Acre?

5. What was the name of Rosemary's baby?
6. What is the brand of James Bond's cigarette lighter?

HAPPY HALLOWEEN!
Indians salvage Homecoming, 28-0, as rain does its thing

Defense denies WPC

Quarterback Joe Rebholz threw three touchdown passes, and tailback Bill Grundy ran for a fourth as MSC avenged last season's 7-7 tie to William Paterson College/WPC, 28-0. It was the Indians' fifth straight victory since their opening game loss.

The rain that persisted up until five minutes before kickoff may have deflated the pregame balloon liftoff and any anticipated tailgating parties, but it did not hold back the Indians' defense as it recorded its second shutout in six games.

Rebholz, who did an outstanding job playing in place of an injured Scott Fischer, hit receiver Don Lewis for 10 yards and a touchdown on the Tribe's first possession of the game. Kicker Keith Sahlin then added the extra point to make it 7-0 and put him in the MSC record book once again.

With that point, Sahlin became the holder of every career, seasonal, and game kicking record in MSC history.

Tailback Mike Horn also entered the books on Saturday at Sprague Field when his 60 yard run around left end in the first quarter put him ahead of Tony Valpone's 1,191 career rushing yards. His total of 152 yards on the night gives him a career total of 2,018—the first player in MSC history to rush for over 2,000 yards.

Chris McGrath caught a five yard Rebholz flip, also in the first quarter, to give the Indians a 14-0 lead at halftime. The score, however, should have been double that.

Touchdown strikes to John Jefferson look alike Terry Porter, and Grundy were called back on holding calls in the first half, and the question began to arise as to whether MSC would beat itself.

Turnovers, too, kept the Indians' defense constantly on their toes as the wet astroturf made the ball difficult to hang onto.

The surprisingly large crowd (considering the rain) that flocked the wet benches at Sprague Field, saw the Tribe come out strong in the second half as Rebholz found wide receiver Dave Reavis six yards away in the corner of the end zone. Minutes later, Grundy scrambled over from the four to give MSC a comfortable 28-0 lead in the third quarter.

From there, the Indians' defense—as it had done all game and has done all season—totally shut down the Pioneers' offense.

Led by all-America linebacker Sam Mills (9 tackles) and a hard hitting defensive secondary, the Tribe limited WPC to just 137 yards on the ground and 157 total yards.

MSC tries for its sixth consecutive victory on Sat., Oct. 25 vs Central Connecticut State College at 1:30 pm in Connecticut. The Indians return home on Sat., Nov. 1 at 8 pm vs conference rival Trenton State College.

Two for the books

Tailback Bill Grundy struggles for additional yardage en route to his 151 yard performance.

With his 152 yards, senior tailback Bill Grundy became MSC's all time leading rusher.

Goldie Hawn is, without a doubt, one of the best comic actresses of our time. She has captivated audiences with her unique brand of humor ever since she first appeared in Laugh-In, and her latest movie, Private Benjamin, is a study in excellence.

Hawn plays Judy Benjamin, a rich young Jewish American Princess who has everything—a car, a nice house, a wealthy husband. Victor resents Walter and the furniture appraiser. F'sther is caught in the middle between the two. Walter feels that he is not the price of furniture. On the contrary, the price is the price of furniture. Miller is concerned with how much people's lives are really worth. Miller reaches the conclusion that each person ultimately makes his own decision for selfish reasons, and ends up with whatever life he has bargained for.

The highlight of the evening is the production by Ed Thom as Solomon. Speaking with a thick Yiddish accent, Thom added life, wit, and humor to the play. In what could have easily been a talkative, longwinded production, Thom's wonderful stage presence and rapport added sparkle and vitality.

The Price is a play about obligations. The two main characters are Victor Franz and his older brother, Walter Franz, who have different paths in life. Victor chose to give up his education and take care of his father, who needed his help. Walter decided to continue with his education and become a successful doctor. During the moments of high drama, theatergoers were quite believable. But for the part. He was wrong for the part. He took too passive an approach and was unable to achieve the depth of sympathy and empathy he should have.

One improvement Kennedy made on the original production was his very effective conclusion to Act I. Miller has a story to tell, a reason to take action, or the option of a shoddily placed intermission after Walter meets Solomon. Kennedy wisely chose to end the act with Walter arriving unexpectedly, and finding Victor being paid by Solomon. Putting this break at such a feverish climax added an element of surprise and intrigue.

The actors at Cafe Theater's production of The Price, although not into new shapes, still missed the mark. In a play that relies on a great deal of dialogue and not much action, a director needs excellent actors and interesting and original touches if it's going to be entirely successful. These subtle and not so subtle touches were missing from the production at Cafe Theater.

Characters in contrast

The debut of a new novel frequently goes unnoticed, unless it is written by a well known and talented writer. Real Presence by Richard Bausch does not go unnoticed. "Real Presence is about a priest, old and bitter, who is waiting out his death in a small town in Virginia. The priest is conscripted, Vincent Shepherd, a man suffering from a lack of faith. His days are routine, uneventful, and "peaceful", until the Bexleys come looking for shelter. Duck Bexley, the head of the family, is terminally ill and looking for work to support his large family. Shepherd, against his personal feelings, takes them in.

The conflict that arises between Shepherd and Bexley poses many problems to Shepherd's previously peaceful life. Shepherd, although desperate, still has his pride. At one point, he offers to paint the church in return for shelter, yet Bexley refuses the offer. Shepherd is so wrapped up in himself that he cannot see the plight of others; he cannot see a man (Bexley) who has been driven to desperation. His main thought is, "Oh, could you all please take these people off my hands so I can have what little peace there is left to me?"

Shepherd's preoccupation with himself and the desperation of Bexley climaxes in an ending which many readers will find difficult to foresee until very near the end. The ending, however, is not a letdown.

Bausch has created a novel which is complex in characterization and offers no easy answers. The character of Shepherd provides the reader with a priest who basically wants nothing to do with other people. Shepherd is more worried about his own life than anybody else. In contrast, Bexley is concerned about his family; however, men who are driven to desperation do desperate things.

In Real Presence, Richard Bausch has made a stunning statement about a man who must come to terms with himself and another man drive to desperation. This is Bausch's first novel, and if it is any indication of the untapped talent of this man, we can look forward to more excellent novels in the future.
Assortment of pop treats

by Bill Melo

For people who follow new music closely, the name Rough Trade is a familiar one. The organization started in 1976 as a record shop and eventually expanded to become a record label, releasing some of the best music on either side of the Atlantic.

Rough Trade records have always been different. The label has stuck to its principles of presenting challenging, new music to a greater number of people than ever before. To this end, Rough Trade has expanded its operations by setting up shop in San Francisco, thus allowing the American audience an opportunity to buy Rough Trade product at the cheaper domestic prices.

Another example of this dedication to a new, recently released Rough Trade compilation album entitled Wanna Buy A Bridge? A Bridge? The record contains 14 songs previously unreleased in the US, from such diverse bands as Delta Fives, Spuzzenergi, and Stuff Little Fingers/SLF.

The music on this record is not your standard fare; be forewarned. You will not find Billy Joel or Styx sound-alikes on this record. What you will find, though, is a lot of exciting music. The album starts off with Alternative Ulster by Northern Ireland’s S.L.F. S.L.F. plays a fiery brand of rock, most reminiscent of early Clash, mixing political references with the fury of punk. Another band who makes music with a political slant is the punk oriented Pop Group. We Are All Prostitutes, their first single on Rough Trade, is included on Bridge.

Diversity is the key element on this record. From the funkiness of the Pop Group to the lighthearted balladeering of Robert Wyatt, this record is a winner. Also of note is the contribution of women to the music on this album. Of the 14 artists represented here, no less than six have women playing major roles. In fact, two of the bands, Kleeneex (now known as Lilliput) and the Raincoats, are all female. Other groups such as Delta Five, whose Mind Your Own Business single included on this collection is a dance club favorite, are fronted by women.

Furs possess creative spark

by Maureen Baker

Many rock fans, whose tastes having developed, are yearning for something more involved in the musical scope. One such band, The Psychedelic Furs, was contracted by CBS records and has recently released an LP simply titled The Psychedelic Furs.

In 1977, England was being bombarded by the punk movement, and that year the Furs decided to expand the movement by adding their own bit of kinetic energy to the wave. Their first single, We Love You Pulse, was released in 1979 and was soon followed by another, Sister Europe.

By 1980 when the LP was released (including all three cuts from the singles), college and undergraduate play catapulted the album sales and airplay so far as to chart them as No. 18 on the British charts as a new entry.

The Furs have been convincing in their statside tries, also charting nationally in Toronto, Chicago, Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and NY.

The Furs seem to possess a creative spark necessary to ignite mass consciousness—just read any fanzine or music review, and you’ll see the psychedelic proof.

The team has a healthy respect for the music they play, often which occurs across an automatic, yet remarkably alluring; all six performers are incredibly provocative.

The Furs’ approach to describe the songs separately, because every one offers illustrous genius (lyrically and musically) on a different wavelength; yet they remain very contemporary (“psychedelic”) having nothing to do with the era).

An LP that truly live the L.P. The tension and emotional value emitted in melodic patterns and each shimmering vocal proves guaranteed.

You can experience the magic of the Furs at Aldo’s Hideaway in Lyndhurst, NJ. on Oct. 23.

WASCI will also feature an interview with the band on this date from 8-10 pm.

Forbert goes electric with third LP

by Ilan Strasser

Steve Forbert: "Little Steve Orbis", but fortunately, I think Will fall into the minority of listeners.

The new album pulsates with the type of energy that is readily apparent at a Forbert concert. While I did not see Forbert at his recent WMSC interview, hearing this album after the fact makes me wish I had. The songs are performed with the mildly cynical Cellophane City to the sentimentally inclusive "We Love You Pulse", and downright hilarious I’m An Automobile, but never once is the continuity lost. I cannot imagine a live album by Forbert sounding any better or any more poignant.

The new fans that this album will pick up will find themselves almost at a loss when they return to Forbert’s first two albums. Still, the wide range of Forbert’s musical style (he can play anything from steady rock to lovely ballad to funky skiffle) will give anyone ample opportunity to revel in Forbert’s unique and persistent musical posturings. Steve Forbert’s music is George Thorogood (& The Destroyers) gone one better. While The Destroyers are master stylists who also manage to play any musical form extremely well, there is a real lack of excitement to their music. The work does not sustain itself. But Forbert’s eclectic, humorous, and often pointed vision hits right on the mark.

The Loveliest sentiments on the album are presented in A Visitor, which closes out the LP. Forbert sings: "And yes I am a lonely man. I think I am here upon this circumstance called Earth, and all I am here for is to take this form: I am shooting through the universe at birth, If I can become the great unified force that everyone proclaims it to be, it will be Steve Forbert who helps lead the way to that coming together. I don’t know about you, but for my money, this straitforward and realistic approach to life is about the best morality lesson I’ve ever heard. And it’s fun to be learning it from him.

"Little Steve Orbis"

Necessary 1/10/80

Now that he has gone electric with his third album, Steve Forbert threatens to enlarge his already sizeable audience. An acquaintance of mine who has thrilled to Forbert’s music since the beginning was not impressed with the new album, Little Steve Orbis, but fortunately, I think Will fall into the minority of listeners.

Tarrago, Liddy pace Indians, 3-1

Booters notch second victory

by William Delorm
Forward Alvaro Tarrago scored twice, and sweeper Paul Liddy converted a penalty kick to give MSC its second victory of the season, 3-1, vs New York University (NYU), Friday at Brookdale Park.

Liddy's goal, at the 41:12 mark of the first half, proved to be all the Indians would need to subdue the wireless (0-10) Violets. Midfielder Gary Holt was taken down inside NYU's penalty box to set up the score.

The Tribe's leading scorer, Tarrago, gave MSC a rare lead just 14 minutes into the match when he outran the Violet's defense and fired a loose ball past an out of position NYU goakeeper.

Tarrago's second goal of the game and his fifth of the season came 31:26 into the second half. After taking a perfectly timed pass from midfielder Team Connors, he used the NYU goalie, catching him flatfooted, and pushing the ball into the left corner of the net.

"We moved the ball better in the second half than we have since our opener vs Mercy," assistant coach Rich Neumann commented after the game.

A lot of MSC's success at moving the ball can be credited to Australian midfielder Wally Broder and "Kamikaze" forward Jeff Greulich.

Broder played one of the best games any Indian has this season. His quick, one touch passes kept NYU defenders running crazy, and his in the air was rivaled only by the high flying Liddy.

Greulich, who started the season as a second string fullback, was brought into the front line vs Kean College last week. His job was primarily to harass opposing fullbacks and goakeepers into making costly mistakes in front of the net.

Thus far, he hasn't caused that bag of an error, but he has given opponents enough body contact to have them concentrating on him and not the ball. Twice on Friday, NYU's goalie found himself eating dirt with Greulich on his back as he tried to hang onto MSC shots.

NYU's lone score came with only seven minutes to play, when Jinnah Ali headed an indirect kick past a lunging Mike Tropeano.

"Lucky shot. It just hit his head. He didn't even realize it went in," Tropeano commented in disgust after losing his shutout.

"All we needed was a win," head coach Phil Santiago stated afterwards. "Now they're (the players) talking about knocking off Trenton and Glassboro. And we can do it," he added.

THROW INS: MSC's victory followed a two hour team meeting the day before in which the players and Santiago told each other just how it felt about the team, their teammates, the season, and the coaches. Obviously, something was discovered—like how to win...The Indians outshot NYU 19-8...Tropeano made seven saves in an easy afternoon in net...The Tribe's next home game is on Sat., Oct. 25, 1980 at 11 am vs Ramapo College at Sprague Field.

"On Wednesday night, Oct. 29, the Indians will face one of their toughest opponents all season when they take on Trenton State College under the lights at Sprague Field. Game time is 8 pm.

MSC holds soccer clinic for very special athletes

by Paul Huegel

Under the sponsorship of the NJ Special Olympics, more than 600 NJ mentally retarded athletes of all ages participated in a state wide soccer clinic at MSC on Oct. 15.

Special Olympics—the largest program of sports training and athletic competition for the mentally retarded—is a year round program in 95 percent of America’s counties. It’s success has been made possible by the love and dedication of hundreds of thousands of volunteers who know that the mentally retarded have important contributions to make in society. MSC can take pride in saying they are part of the success of Special Olympics.

MSC has participated in soccer clinics for the mentally retarded for the past five years. Previous clinics were at Brookdale Park. Last Wednesday’s was the first time the event was held at Sprague Field. About 120 MSC students, mostly physical education majors, helped as referees and trainers for the participants who had already played soccer at their schools and institutions.

This program, based on a grant from the Bureau of Education for the Handicapped of the US department of education, is developing means for mentally retarded persons to make a successful adjustment to leisure situations through educational experiences that include physical education and recreation.

The Special Olympics is an international program of physical fitness, sports training, and athletic competition for mentally retarded children and adults. It is unique in that it accommodates competitors at all ability levels by assigning them to “competition divisions” based on both age and actual performance.

The program contributes to the physical, social, and psychological development of mentally retarded participants. Through successful experience in sports, they gain confidence and build a positive self image associated with success rather than failure.

Mentally retarded individuals eight years of age or older are eligible to participate in Special Olympics. There is no upper age limit.

The Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation created Special Olympics.

The program is operated by Special Olympics, Inc., a nonprofit, charitable organization located in Washington, DC.

Special Olympics is a volunteer program. Over 315,000 volunteers provide the manpower for Special Olympics. They come from high schools and colleges, service and women’s clubs, parents, groups, youth agencies, sports, physical education and recreation, among others.

Special Olympics is sport in its truest sense. The goal is not to win, but to try; to experience, not to conquer. No time is too slow, no distance too small to earn a hug, a cheer, or a sincere “well done.” No records are broken in Special Olympics—except those for courage, determination, and sportsmanship.

Since its beginning, Special Olympics has grown remarkably to the point where now more than 1,000,000 special children and adults are participating. Each year, the retarded have a chance to show their families and communities just how much they can accomplish. This was the case last Wednesday at MSC.

Special Olympics offers 15 official sports—basketball, bowling, diving, frisbee, gymnastics, floor hockey, hockey, ice skating, Alpine and Nordic skiing, soccer, softball, swimming, track and field, volleyball, and wheelchair events. Of these, MSC offers clinics in soccer and basketball in February, and track and field in the spring.

Dr. Leonard Lucenko, state coordinator for the soccer competitions, Dr. Joan Schleede, chairwoman of MSC’s physical education department, and Tim Sullivan, state coordinator of the Innovative Sports Skills Instructional Program, all members of the physical education department, coordinated the soccer clinic.

“I feel the clinic is an excellent learning experience for my students and is valuable to both them and the participants,” Lucenko commented. “About 98 percent of my students volunteered their services,” he added.

“This was a great opportunity for students in the physical education department to partake in a national project and work with mentally retarded children,” Sullivan noted. “Also, I feel it is great anytime the college can work with the community and the community can rely on the college,” he added.
