Rape suspect arrested

by Mary Ann D'Urso

MONTCLAIR, Dec. 22--A female MSC student was raped at the close of last semester in Life Hall, Jayne Rich, chief of police said.

The suspect, 18-year-old Hezekiah Matthews, was arrested the following day by campus police officer Debbie Newcombe, Rich said.

Matthews had been living at the Children's Residential Center (Cedar Grove), Rich said.

According to a supervisor at the home, Matthews was away without official leave.

Donald Mack, a youth worker at the home, said that Matthews had been living at the center prior to his arrest. "He had no previous record," Mack said.

Both Rich and Mack stated that Matthews was not an MSC student.

Mack said he believed Matthews was employed by the center prior to his arrest.

"The center is for emotionally disturbed teenagers approximately between 13 and 18 years of age. Most of the kids don't have legal guardian. The majority of them are wards of the state, a few of them are sent here by the courts."

Rich said that Matthews was employed by the center last semester. He had been living here prior to his arrest.

"He had no previous record," Mack said.

"I am of course, very sorry that the tragedy has occurred, and I'm pleased that through the fine efforts of our campus police department, the rapist was apprehended," Jean Armstrong, dean of student affairs, said.

"This is our case all the way," Rich said.

Rich said that Matthews is being held for trial. He will be tried in Little Falls Municipal Court, though a trial date has not been set.

"The suspect has not responded to questioning," Rich said. She included that he is being defended by a public defender.

Armstrong said that a rape task force has been established. They will meet for the first time on Jan. 30 at 10 pm in Armstrong's office. Some members of the task force include: Dr. Edward Martin, associate dean of students; Dr. Constance Walker, who is in charge of the Women's Center, Jayne Rich, chief of police, and Dr. Lillian Rosenkranz, the college physician.

"The task force is trying to assess the security on campus and try to generate a mechanism or means to help women sensitive and protect themselves. If this involves workshops or courses we would certainly look into that in order to formally proceed in helping victims of such tragedies," Armstrong said.

The board also decided to reduce the money being held for trial. They will certainly look into that in order to formally proceed in helping victims of such tragedies. Armstrong said.

TAG cuts ahead

by Stephen McLean

Students receiving financial aid through the Tag Aid Grant program (TAG) may find a reduction up to 20 percent in their allocations for this spring semester.

The reduction would be the direct result of an added 4,700 students eligible for aid and Gov. Brendan Byrne's partial veto of a TAG bill requesting $5.6 million more for the program than last year.

Lawrence Marcus, spokesman for the department of higher education, cited poor economy as the reason for so many new students applying for aid and pointed out that increased enrollment in financial aid programs is occurring nation-wide.

Poor economy cited

In view of both these factors, the Student Assistant Board met Tuesday to draw up new tuition tables which would be compatible with the amount newly allocated to the TAG program. Tuition tables determine the amount of aid a student is eligible for on the basis of his need, his parent's income and the amount available in the program.

Marcus explained that since eligible students cannot be refused TAG funds, the increased enrollment in the program has forced the money to be split among a greater number of people, thus their reduction of students' aid.

$20 to $50 cuts

The board made a 20 percent reduction in the $20 to $50 cuts. The $5,200 students affected by this move would receive a between $20 to $50 less aid each semester.

The board also decided to distribute these cuts in such a manner that all equally share the burden, instead of an earlier proposed across the board cut back which most affected low income students.

There is some speculation as to whether the difference will have to be made up by the students expecting the aid, or by the colleges from their operating budgets.

Byrne disputes bill

The TAG bill, sponsored by Sen. Matthew Feldman (D-Teaneck), which would have appropriated $3.4 million to indemnify the dwindling resources of the TAG program, was disputed by Byrne according to Lawrence.

Byrne also proposed $100,000 less in aid to the state treasury, and $1,000,000 from the private institutions such as Princeton University and Fairleigh Dickinson. Byrne objected to, and vetoed the line of the bill.

Line item veto used

Byrne also reduced by $100,000 the sum of money to be transferred by the department of higher education from programs for the studies of teacher evaluation, equal opportunity, hiring practices, and premedical programs minority students. Byrne felt that these programs would suffer too much from such a reduction in their budgets.

Byrne said he would have preferred to have issued a conditional veto on the whole piece of legislation, thus putting it back into committee formation of scholarships, and he therefore opted to "line item veto the bill, thus side stepping the cumbersome legislative process."
Concerts may be canceled

NEWARK--There is still no word on whether there will be a 1980-81 season for the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra.

The season was initially delayed by striking musicians, who were protesting a management plan to cut the season and musicians salaries, from 31 to 23 weeks. A new contract was ratified in December, but there is still no season.

John Hyer, symphony executive director, says the board of trustees—in charge of raising individual and private funds to supplement government money—is still trying to raise about $130,000.

Hyer noted the season's concerts, scheduled to begin last October, could still be held if the money does not come in.

Radio refuses audit

NEWARK--The radio station at the New Jersey Institute of Technology has had its funds frozen and its phones removed by the Student Senate. The station reportedly refused to take part in the annual Student Senate inventory procedures.

A spokesperson for the station said that every January student Senate leaders take the keys from other student organization officers and take inventory in their offices. The radio station executive board refused to relinquish its keys, saying that they did not trust the Student Senate leaders.

The spokesperson indicated that the Student Senate president is at the heart of the controversy, but he said that he didn't feel there is a personal conflict.

At press time, the general manager was scheduled to appear before the Student Senate yesterday, after having been "subpoenaed."

Trenton facilities fail

TRENTON--Some students returning to the Trenton State College dormitories after winter break had no heat for two days.

Garfinke, a dorm resident, said that although dorms were available for Gov. Brendan Byrne to express his support of legislation to provide more funds for the group.

He said that he could not anticipate when a decision on this season would be made by the symphony's board of trustees.

Reasons for the board action are not clear at this time.

Bomb cancels movie

NEW BRUNSWICK--A feminist-terrorist group at Rutgers University has claimed responsibility for a bomb threat that led to the cancellation of a showing of an X-rated movie on the campus.

Misty Beethoven was canceled for both of its showings in the Voorhees Hall at Rutgers this weekend, according to a Daily Targum spokesperson. New Brunswick police are investigating the case, but no arrests have been made of any members from the group that calls itself the College Ave. Feminist Terrorist group.

School of conservation endangered

by Mary Ann D’Urso

MONTCLAIR, Jan. 28 -

Due to a lack of funding, the New Jersey School of Conservation at Stokes State Forest is in danger of being closed.

Currently there are companion hills in both the state and the assembly which, if passed, would place the school under the direction of the MAC’s board of trustees.

The school, located on a 240-acre tract of land in Sussex County, has been used since 1919 as a center for environmental studies for NJ colleges and public schools.

Over the past year, new costs have led to a $10,000 deficit.

John J. Kirk, the director of the school, previously requested a $30,000 subsidy from the department of higher education to offset the deficit, but his request was denied.

Wayne Dumont of Warren County introduced the bill in the Assembly.

Lettell of Franklin Township, special assistant to Hollander, was forced to dissolve itself as a result of the lack of funding.

Simonson, president of MAC, at its December meeting, voted to dissolve itself as a corporate entity in November.

Three of the five corporations--the College Development Fund, Alumni Association, and SGA--are generally understood not to fall under the umbrella of the school.

The department of higher education did not find the program to be fit in its priorities, as it has in the past.

Registration ‘best ever’

by Dennis Bloshuk and Susan Sichenzio

MONTCLAIR - Over 5,000 students showed up at Panzer Gym last week to schedule courses at person registration, according to Marshall Butler, Office of the Registrar.

Butler added that this year’s registration was the best ever with 98 percent of the students receiving full schedules compared to only 78 percent of the students receiving full schedules last semester.

In general, the students attitude to the registration process has been superb,” Butler said, “they have been cooperative and pleasant in an otherwise difficult situation.”

The busiest day, according to the Registrar’s Office, was Jan. 21 when 1,500 students showed up for registration between 1 and 3 pm.

One of the reasons for the difficulty in scheduling were the mathematics and business departments. The mathematics department experienced problems because two of their faculty members resigned at the last minute and the classes had to be canceled.

The business department was represented by faculty and a representative and enforced a rule for the first time that all nonmajors would not be admitted to major business classes, which resulted in more nonmajors getting the courses they requested.

Butler said that the registrar would be holding late registration today from 12-7 pm and no late registration fee will be charged. He added that 3,000 to 4,000 students are expected to show up for the late registration, which will be held in the Student Center Ballrooms.
ROTC under consideration

by Mike Davino

MONTCLAIR, Dec. 12, 1980 - The All College Curriculum Committee did not vote in an open forum held today regarding the proposal by Vet Reserves Officers Training Corp. (ROTC) courses becoming part of the curriculum at AMC.

Open forum held

Officers from the ROTC Instructor Group at Seton Hall University (SHU) made a presentation before a forum sponsored by the committee. About 40 people attended the forum which was open to the entire college community.

Officers answer questions

The officers fielded questions about the ROTC program, qualifications of instructors, affirmative action, and the contents of the proposed courses.

Col. Samuel Wilson, professor of military science at SHU, said, “The only goal of the ROTC program is to commission officers. Currently, SHU has a cross enrollment agreement with SHU for MSC students interested in being commissioned in the army.”

Bohn Hall cafe to be converted

by Dennis Bloshuk

MONTCLAIR, Jan. 14 - A resolution to modify the dining area of Bohn Hall, a report on “Accountability and Autonomy,” and resolutions regarding the death of two faculty members were the main topics discussed at the board of trustees meeting on Jan. 14.

According to a concept letter dated Dec. 10, 1980 there, is a proposed project to convert 9,500 square feet of the existing Bohn Hall dining area into office space, classrooms, and student recreational space. The reason for the conversion is because after the completion of Blanton Dorm the auditorium and kitchen area in Bohn Hall will become obsolete. The 9,500 square feet will be distributed in the following manner: 1,300 square feet will be used for office space for student housing; 2,500 square feet will be used for three 40 seat classrooms; 1,000 square feet will be used for bathrooms and corridors; and 4,000 square feet will be used as a central maintenance storage and work center housing.

The letter also states that the new classrooms in Bohn Hall will have these advantages:
1) Three of the existing six temporary classrooms in Stone and Freeman Halls will be returned to their original design use as recreational space.
2) The existing four classrooms in Bohn Hall will be designed for multiple uses, including use by students after regular class hours and also use for the college summer programs.

Army on the defense

Dr. Larry Stanton, of the philosophy and religion department, asked Wilson, “Surely you must feel defensive given the war in Vietnam and the history of the past 20 years. Some part of military training includes obeying orders. Are there any orders you wouldn’t obey?”

Wilson replied that the army has undergone a traumatic period and that legal orders should be obeyed.

Dr. Adele McCollum, a committee member from the department of philosophy and religion, raised questions about the qualifications of the ROTC instructors, and its compliance with affirmative action policies. Wilson said that MSC would have to approve the instructors, and that the army has always been a leader in equal opportunity for minorities.

Parking lost... ...parking gained

MONTCLAIR, Jan. 23 - The new parking lots at the end of Clove Rd., were opened for student parking on the first day of classes this semester. However, the upper lot next to Webster Hall is almost entirely devoid of parking spaces.

The main reason for the additional loss of space in the upper lot is the setting of a water line from Bohn Hall to the end of the lot, according to Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning. If the test was positive, the pipe would be covered. If the results were negative, more time would be spent on the problem.

The roadway between Webster Hall and the construction site as well as the areas in front of Bohn Hall and that West of Webster Hall, may not be used for parking.

The enforcement of parking and traffic regulations will be more strict than before the completion of the new lots. “We’re concentrating on cars blocking traffic and delivering,” Quinn said. “We’re ticketing and towing in critical areas. We’ve towed maybe five cars, since the beginning of the semester,” he added.

Although the new lots are finished, the lighting for them is not yet functional. The lights have been installed according to Quinn, but the meter must be turned on by the contractor.

There is a sign posted in the lot warning students that the lights are not working. When ready, they will only be lit until 11 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

When the new lot was opened it was added to the shuttle bus route. The shuttle bus arrives approximately every 15 minutes to pick up and discharge passengers before it stops at the Clove Rd. Apts.
MSC welcomes home the freed 52

MONTCLAIR, JAN. 28-
The treasurer’s report shows that the SGA anticipates $173,000 in income for the spring '81 allocations. However, this budget leaves no room for additional spending this semester. If extra money is needed, treasurer Scott Garrett said that the SGA has the options of going into deficit spending, cutting Class One budgets, or raising student fees. During this time, an attempt can be made to balance the budget. If the SGA goes into deficit spending, it will be the third year that it has been forced to resort to that.

Another subject discussed at the meeting was the possibility of the dorm visitation policy being brought up at a meeting of the review committee. The meeting will be held Feb. 2, 4 p.m. in the back lounge of Bohn Hall.

In a report from Andy McCormick, Vice President of Academic Affairs, it was learned that the Reserved Officers Training Corp (ROTC) may be coming to the MSC campus. The legislature had no objection to this although concern was voiced over whether or not the program would bring actual rifles on the campus. McCormick said there would be no ammunition provided for them. The firing pins would also be filed down. The establishment of the ROTC would, in all likelihood, require students enrolled in the program to wear uniforms on campus, as well as crewcuts.

With the creation of an ROTC program, MSC would become the second NJ college to have such a program. Students currently enrolled in the program have to go to Seton Hall University to take the required courses.

Several ideas for the future of the Rathskeller were discussed. In lieu of the recent troubles in the Rathskeller, it was suggested that the fulltime manager work at nights, since that is when most of the disturbances occur, so he might be able to have control of a trouble situation.

Other ideas to increase the Rathskeller’s patronage were brought up. These included wine and cheese nights, special nights for frats and sororities, and a big T.V. screen set up in one corner. The idea of sectioning off part of the Rathskeller for patrons below the drinking age was put off until fall.

There is also a definite possibility that prices in the Rathskeller will go up $1.00. The lowered rates this semester were only an experiment, and despite the decrease in the cost of beer and food, there was also a decrease in customers, thus a decrease in revenue.

The recent rape on campus brought up the question of holding a student awareness week concerning rape and assault. Although seminars on rape have been held, they were not well publicized. The SGA will hopefully get this awareness week organized soon, as it would definitely be beneficial to all MSC students.

Professor Mickelson dies

During her career as a teacher, she had two books published: "The Man Hardy's Reawakening: The Destiny of Nature," 1976, and more recently, "Reaching Out: Sensitivity and Order in Recent American Fiction" by Woman, 1979.

Dr. Mickelson served on various curriculum committees and was a pioneer in helping to establish English as a Second Language program (ESOL) at MSC. In 1978 she was accepted as a fellow at the McDevitt Colony in New Hampshire.

Mickelson taught such courses as "The Short Story," and "Contemporary American Fiction" to undergraduate students and a graduate course on Thomas Hardy, James Joyce, and D.H. Lawrence.

"Dr. Anne Mickelson was a dear friend of the faculty both in the English department and in the other schools on campus. She enjoyed our respect as a master teacher and scholar. The students who were privileged to study with her appreciated her genuine concern for their personal and educational growth. Her office door was always open," Dr. F. Clare Healey, chair of the English department, said.

Mickelson is survived by her daughter, Wendy Shapiro; and a granddaughter.

In lieu of flowers, donations should be made to the Sloan Kettering Neurology Service Fund No. 8161157, care of Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, 1275 York Ave., New York, NY 10021. They would be appreciated.

There will be a memorial service held in Montclair in the spring.

Claim ID’s

MONTCLAIR, Jan. 28—Student ID cards taken last semester have still not been picked up by approximately 500 students.

"The ID cards are being held until the end of this semester," Arlene Randall, a secretary in the department of Office Services, said.

Randall said that students should have their schedules or a cash receipt with them to verify that they are registered for the Spring 1981 semester.

Students may pick up their ID cards in Room 301, College Hall, between 8:30 am and 4:15 pm Monday through Friday.

Thanks to the combined, hard working efforts of Dr. Joan Schleede, chair woman of the MSC physical education department, Sanford Bieber, MSC’s chief athletic trainer, his staff and members of the physical education department, MSC has once again contributed its services to the Montclair community.

I the opening of a new sports medicine center at Mountainside Hospital last Jan., 15, 1981 marked the third time the hospital and the college have managed to combine their talents in the hope of benefiting MSC and the surrounding community.

In his unique union will provide each institution the opportunity to improve medical care and provide educational programs for the benefit of recreational as well as scholastic and collegiate athletes.

The impressive thing about this venture is that is strictly non-profit, the only hospital based program of its kind in northern NJ developed in conjunction with a college department of physical education.

Presently, MSC also offers special courses for students from the hospital’s School of Nursing and an exercise program for patients in the hospital’s Alcoholism Treatment unit, but they are not ignored by their professors when they rise in class. Their dogs do not run the other way when they come near. But they are ignored by an organization that bills itself as “students serving students.” The SGA has no outlet for the approximately 1,400 students who live off campus at MSC.

The off campus student is a baffling creature. He does not fit in with the usual picture of college life in the dorms, living away from home. He is not part of the dorm parties or midnight oil burning sessions. You rarely hear him complain about the food, because he cooks a lot of it.

The off campus student does not fit into the home picture of most commuters either. After a hard day at work, they do not settle down to mom’s dinner and homework. After all the housework is done, however, the housework isn’t done. Rent checks must be on time, and living conditions don’t come anywhere near being home, no matter how good a place you live in.

Also, when you live at home, and the heat goes off, or faces on the TV come on green, or the stove breaks, it is easy to lie to mom and dad, as you fly out the door to work, and they will take care of it (usually call and all). When you move into the dorms, you may have to worry about noisy next door neighbors, but you don’t have to worry about what possible kinds of people out there in Montclair, especially as decent landlords.

Don’t get me entirely wrong. There are some aspects of off campus living that are a thrill in a lifetime that I wouldn’t miss. I lived in one place where the landlord charged in to inspect the place while I was wearing a pair of underpants and a smile. My latest apartment just resumed the custom of heat in the winter after two weeks of picking coals off my chucks when I went up in the morning. I enjoy feeding for myself when the toilet begins over flowing at 7 am, and there is no one around to call.

Mire is not an isolated case, and the horror stories go on. Some students may be lucky enough to get a place where there is heat, kind landlords, and privacy, but don’t go looking for miracles. This is not the fault of the housing office, which does its best, with what it has. It is also not the fault of all landlords, because the landlords have a right to make rules when studens troop through their private living quarters, and students have a right to be annoyed if they obey all laws, and have more and more constantly imposed in them.

But where do the students turn when the problems become too much? The best kept secret on campus is the off campus student affairs department of the SGA. Two years, my roommates and I have heard promise of an organization, a support group to arrange social activities for off campus students (do you have any idea how dull it is to sit in a third floor apartment and do nothing in the middle of the night?).

We have also heard that this organization is going to look into problems of off campus students and direct them where to go for help, to either the Housing Office, the lawyer, or the best plumber in town. We could even use a directory to find other off campus students to develop some kind of social life.

But short of getting a new director for off campus student affairs, with every SGA administration, nothing new changes with the virtually nonexistent off campus student affairs.

There are 1,400 students telling you that off campus does not mean off limits.

Students speak

Do you think the time for add/drop registration should be extended?

"Yes, because sometimes the student does not know if he or she likes or dislikes the class until after a few meetings with the class. And the students should be able to add/drop a course for a longer period of time."

Robert Buchanan 1984 broadcasting

"Yes, but they should hire more teachers, to teach more classes at the time the student wants. Then this whole problem would be eliminated."

Barbara May 1983 speech and theater

"Yes, I do think they should extend the time for a longer period because they should give the students at least two weeks to see whether they want the course or not."

Davy Walters 1984 underlined

"Yes, there are too many long lines and crowds. Also the test date is usually after add/drop session and by then you know you can handle the course. It should be extended till the end of the semester with a full refund."

Robert Masabu 1984 physical education

Sustaining. In other words NJ does not subsidize in any substantial cost of building residence halls or running them, and therefore student rents and summer conferences must, by law, pay those costs. This is true for student centers as well, and applies to all state colleges.

Next, I'd like to put projected costs into better perspective. Residents during the last four years have benefited greatly from our being able to keep the meal ticket rates from rising. A 40 percent increase next year would only represent 10 percent per year since 1977, which is considerably below the inflation rate for food and labor. Therefore, current fourth year residents have been saved hundreds of dollars, and we will have meal ticket rates next year equal, or similar to those we would have had anyway.

As for room rents, that increase was an estimate and, unfortunately, the 15 percent your reporter quoted is too low. Construction costs have escalated rapidly, and the bonds which are sold to pay off the building (our mortgage) suffer from the same skyrocketing interest rates we see everywhere.

Add to this the escalating labor, equipment and supplies costs and it becomes apparent the rent increase will be more than 15 percent. In fact, rent will almost certainly be around $1,450 next year, depending on interest rates for bonds and bond anticipation notes. Some consolation can be drawn from the fact that Trenton State College has room rates that which are now $200 more than ours, board rates 25 percent above ours, and their rates continue to climb even without a new residence hall.

In summary then, it seems to me that our rates are not out of line with other state institutions, that Blanton Hall will provide the additional housing that students have needed for a number of years, and that the administration has done all it could not only to protect the pocketbooks of our students, but to provide those facilities and amenities which make MSC the fine college it is.

Thank you.

Stover gives better perspective

To the editor:

I would like to respond to the ‘Why Pay More’ editorial and the associated front page article in the Dec. 11 issue of The Montclarion. First I would like to correct the impression that there were errors by the college administration. The decision to build an additional residence hall was based on the fact that almost 1,000 MSC students are denied housing each year because of a lack of space. Also, the college has been losing good students to other institutions because we cannot accommodate them.

In terms of the suggestion that the administration ‘pick up the tab,’ housing has been legally mandated by Trenton for many years to be financially self amortizing and self sustaining. In other words NJ does not subsidize in any substantial cost of building residence halls or running them, and therefore student rentals and summer conferences must, by law, pay those costs. This is true for student centers as well, and applies to all state colleges.

Ruling open to interpretation

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Richard Zinsmeister’s letter which appeared in the Dec. 4 issue of The Montclarion. First I would like to reassure those concerned about the issues concerning the recent discharterment of a religious organization on campus; namely, Chi Alpha.

He believes that the religious organization and the people involved had their rights ignored and violated. This is not the case because their rights were not infringed upon at all. He feels as though they were violated he is overlooking the fact that this religious organization was chartered under the SGA and one of the SGA’s responsibilities is to oversee that its class organizations are abiding by the organization’s charter, as well as the SGA Constitution. It was discovered by the Constitutional Review Committee, as well as many other legislatures, that Chi Alpha was in violation of the charter. The legislature voted in favor of discharterment because of the issue that Chi Alpha violated the constitution. Zinsmeister mentioned the fact that at Seton Hall University he is free to exercise his rights to worship as he pleases, and to gather together with those who feel as he does. In my opinion, he feels that the discharterment of Chi Alpha will not allow them to assemble and to worship. This is by no means the case. The SGA cannot and means the case. The St IA cannot and will not allow them to assemble and worship. This is by no means the case. The SIA cannot and will not allow them to assemble and their assembly to worship. This is by no means the case. The St IA cannot and will not allow them to assemble and to worship.

He also feels as though there was a lack of understanding of the issues, and the influence of a few individuals’ selfishness may have swayed the legislature. I feel differently because this issue of Chi Alpha was discussed in committee for many hours, and it was discussed on the legislature for three hours. The entire meeting was a continuous debate on the merits of the case pertaining to this issue. Also, when the question was called to vote on this issue the legislators voted in favor of the motion. Obviously they were ready to decide. As for his opinion questioning the possible influence of spiritual individuals away from the legislature is a blatant and an offensive slap in the face to the legislators integrity and intelligence. These people, who represent the student body, are dedicated and responsible students acting in the best interest of their fellow students.

In conclusion, I would like to take this time to advise Zinsmeister to learn all of the issues before he attacks the legislators of the SGA. They weighed the issues of the case and they voted accordingly.

Student input urged
by David W.D. Dickson

During this semester the faculty, academic administration, and eventually the board of trustees will be considering proposals coming from the Faculty Senate for the consideration of the administration about the form of the new General Education Requirements for the college. I most sincerely hope that students will involve themselves most thoughtfully and vigorously in that process. Admittedly, students growing up in the pragmatic traditions of this country, and especially at this time when immediate economic satisfactions are primary in many minds, wonder why anyone should worry about general education rather than professional concentrations which may be more immediately related to one’s first employment. To develop immediately marketable skills is understandable, but only a small part of what a worthy undergraduate institution should be doing. The liberally educated man will succeed much more than the merely well trained man in answering those profound questions of: Who am I? What am I? Why am I? As we labor with these inquiries, we grow individually, not only in knowledge, but in wisdom, understanding, awareness of ourselves, and sensitivity to the great and marvellous wonders of human nature and of our universe.

A long time ago Aristotle, who had one of the most brilliantly comprehensive and analytical minds of the great intellects of the past, wrote about formal causes, material causes, and final causes. We must know what a thing or concept is ideally supposed to be, or its formal cause; we must study in what shape the idea is to take residence, or the material cause; we must know how the idea is to take shape, which is the efficient cause; and finally, what is the end or purpose of that with which we are concerned.

Our culture has been enormously limited by its excessive pragmatism, its concern about material and efficient causes, and its frightful neglect about the essential nature of things and the ultimate purpose of things. The mature college must work as best it can with its students, its faculty and society to excite them about the importance of the formal and the final causes. In other words, we need to be concerned with philosophy, or the true love of wisdom. That is worth four years of one’s life; it is worth tens of thousands of dollars necessary to pay for those four years; and it is worth the very best within each of us in the collegiate community to be faithful to that high calling which Socrates probably expressed as well as anybody when he said, that only the considered life is the life worth living.

Therefore, all of this discussion about general education is not merely pushing a few curricular checkers into new spaces; it is rather thinking and working through projects to the end of developing a vital program of general education—the primary reason for being of any college worth its name. I summon our student body to assist faculty and administrators in developing this truly important program.

Have accent will travel

by Stephen Kantrowitz

Standing in a single beam of light with her head thrown back, the tiny figure reached out with tender hands to the world who loved her. In a pulsating and guttural voice, the singer revealed her calling, touching our souls with sounds recognized throughout the world.

"I was Edith Piaf (1915-1963), one of the most beloved and talented performers of the 20th century. Her life, loves, and spirit, so remarkably expressed in her songs, are expertly and sensitively captured by Juliette Koka in her one-woman show, Juliette Koka Sings Piaf.

Koka has recently completed an appearance at Center Stage-Playhouse on the Mall, at the Bergen Mall in Paramus, NJ. The performance, Koka's first in NJ, since she began touring with the show in 1976, was in honor of Piaf's 65th birthday.

"Juliette Koka is both aware and excited about the new production. "I've read the script and believe it's a wonderful play. It will bring Piaf's music and life to even larger audiences. I'm looking forward to seeing it and I'm sure it will be a hit," she said.

Koka is presently working on some new material. "I'm learning the songs from the musical Piaf, and I also have a special project I'm beginning work on," Koka revealed. "I'm looking forward to touring in Juliette Koka Sings Piaf and looking forward to future performances. Montclair audiences will have the pleasure of witnessing this unique performer and an enjoyable production sometime in the near future. For as Koka puts it, "I have an accent and will travel.""
Dolly's first a bust

If a rating could be given to the movie 9 to 5 on that very same scale (9 am the worst, 5 pm the best) it would be an eight. 9 to 5 is a contrived, unfunny story that is 20th Century Fox's answer to the three musketeers. Fox seems to have wanted to make a good deal of money, so they put together Jane Fonda, Dolly Parton, and Lily Tomlin, three performers from different corners of the entertainment spectrum. It is surprising to see that Fonda and Tomlin would agree to be involved in such trash. The big question must be: did they read the script before they signed for the parts? Of course Parton must have jumped at the chance to work with such stars in her first movie.

The story evolves around three secretaries who jokingly plot how to do in their nasty, egotistical, chauvanistic boss, played adequately by Danny Coleman. Lily Tomlin plays her part as the veteran secretary brilliantly, getting in some of the best lines in the film. Jane Fonda plays a secretary experiment recently separated as well, all that could be expected in a character that is not funny. This was a disappointment because of Fonda's excellent comedic performance in Dick and Jane. However, she does have a funny scene where the man vs machine conflict is used in the shape of a huge xerox machine shooting papers at her. Dolly Parton plays a pistol-packing southerner who is chased around the office by the boss. The main flaw in 9 to 5 is that almost all of the laughs are contrived on cheap, slapstick humor, which attempts to hide the weak script. Although there are some funny scenes, the best are from Strother Martin, Kitty Carlisle, and仰中 is the 加州 University Medical Professor to carnivorous apes before your eyes, bulges and bumps appearing on his chest and arms, protruding forehead and hairy electrons, until the transformation is complete. Hurt, making his movie debut, is easily believable in his desire to try anything to find the absolute truth about life. However, Chayefsky's dialogue is more of a reading a scientific journal. At one point Hurt determines that "Our other states of consciousness are real as our waking states. And that reality can be externalized. In other words, if you stay in the isolation tank long enough you'll eventually become the people you've been hallucinating about.

Russell's direction is also choppy. The film seems to jump (loudly, especially in theaters with Dolby stereo) from one scene to the next. Hurt's psychedelic hallucinations in the tank come at you like a circus side show. Mutant-sized sheep, lizards which become females, fiery cosmos, and burning tar pits flash before your eyes in a mish mash of images supposedly contained in man's other states of consciousness.

The most disappointing aspect of the part hurled at Hurt is in its tired, humanistic ending. The meaning of life, it seems, can only be found through the power of man's other states of consciousness. Perhaps if the film were better left as they are. Despite these noble efforts, the movie still fell short of the kind of comedy and humor that the cartoon version had. This is simply not as funny as Olive Oyl the cartoon character. In spite other stick figure, oversized noses and broken bones were too realistic to be funny. Despite the actors' efforts to look as though they were having fun, the magical and humorous qualities it had as a cartoon were lost. Throughout the course of the film, almost every scene contained some sort of violence, whether it be Popeye using a man's head as a punching bag, or Bluto wrapping a lamp around someone's neck or squashing somebody's head. Even though the movie has some flaws, the actors who had the near impossible task of bringing these cartoon characters to life were better than I expected.

Williams was best as Popeye, sounding and looking very much like the pipe smoking, spinach eating sailor who mutters under his breath, "I ain't no doctor, but I knows I'm losin' my patience." Duvall also gave a good performance as the slightly scarred Ol' Olive Oyl. Just the right touch of peppiness and exaggerated movements made Olive's personality complete.

Although Robin Williams and Shelley Duvall looked amazingly like their cartoon counterparts, Popeye and Olive Oyl, something was missing. In spite of her stick figure, oversized feet, buggy eyes, and whiny voice douring, "Oh Popeye!" she simply was not as funny as Olive Oyl the character. In addition to being slow-moving, Popeye was excessively violent, especially for a movie rated PG. Again, when Popeye pummels his enemies in the cartoon, it's funny, but on film, the battered noses and broken bones were too realistic to be funny. Throughout the course of the film, almost every scene contained some sort of violence, whether it be Popeye using a man's head as a punching bag, or Bluto wrapping a lamp around someone's neck or squashing somebody's head. Even though the movie has major flaws, the actors who had the near impossible task of bringing these cartoon characters to life were better than I expected.
Top 10 this, top 5 that

by Bill Melo

I guess I'm just one of those people who like to organize things. I especially like putting things in lists. It seems to be a favorite pastime when I'm bored, and believe me there were a lot of boring days during the winter break. Since music is probably my favorite thing in life I suppose it was only natural that I made a music list. You know, top 10 this, top five that, etc. etc. So without further adieu I present the aforementioned list totally biased and subject to my own opinion.

Top albums:
1. EnterMont---Gang of Four (Warner Bros.)
2. Setting Sons--The Jam (Polydor)
3. Re/marq in Light--Talking Heads (Sire)
4. London Calling--The Clash (Epic)
5. Specials--The Specials (Chrysalis)
6. Fashion--David Bowie
7. Enola Gay--Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark
8. You Anticipation was a two sided marvel from one of the best bands of the year. The Delta 5 led by three females, and sporting two bass players put out three superb singles in 1980. Dancing marks the return of Generation X to the music scene.

The Gang of Four were an underground hit in 1980. Entertainment was a dance club favorite all year long. Although released in the groups native England in 1979 it surfaced in the states in the spring. It got very little airplay on commercial radio, but sold relatively well due to a strong promotional push and heavy club play. Ironically four of the five albums on this list were released in England in '79, only to be picked up for US distribution last year.

Top Singles:
1. You/Head--Anticipation--Delta 5
2. Dancing With Myself--Gen X
3. Too Many Creeps--Bush Tetras
4. Fashion--David Bowie
5. Enola Gay--Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark

You Anticipation was a two sided marvel from one of the best bands of the year. The Delta 5 led by three females, and sporting two bass players put out three superb singles in 1980. Dancing marks the return of Generation X to the music scene.

Top concerts:
1. Gang of Four--Hurrah
2. Swoosie and the Banshees--Palladium
3. Kid Creole and the Coconuts--Trax
4. Public Image Limited--Palladium
5. Talking Heads--Central Park

Gang of Four were simply awesome at Hurrah in May. They had the packed house dancing all night long. The Talking Heads show at Central Park also included Talking Heads from Japan, who were at least as impressive as the headliners.

There were clear and noticeable contrasts between the singing passages and the more frenetic moments. He earnestly dashed off the opening and closing of many songs. The Ritz was probably the best example of how not to run a club. This cavern-like place became the home of $10 cover charges, $3 drinks, and weekend punks. Two of the better clubs in the city closed during the winter break. Darrel and Tier 3 are both expected to reopen sometime this year. Through the summer, people will remember 1980 as the year of Bruce Springsteen, or the year in which Led Zeppelin broke. Flirt under the name the Year The Clash had a top 20 single and The Police were a hit at Madison Square Garden (MSG). And what lies ahead for 1981? Bands to look for include Au Pairs, The Dance, and Delta 5. I expect more clubs to open and close and commercial radio to continue to decline. In any event 1981 should prove to be an interesting year. I just don't know if I'm ready for the B-52's at MSG yet.

Welcome back for another semester of music, movies, theater and much, much more.

We, in the arts entertainment department of The Montclarion, would like for you, our readers, to make this section of the paper better and more fun to read. That is why we would like to have you write to The Montclarion (4th Floor, Student Center) or simply stop by the office and tell us what you find enjoyable reading; what you would like to see more or less of in the arts section.

In this way, we can serve you, MSC students, and others, with a better variety in the field of entertainment. We want to make this section as enjoyable as we can, so, your thoughts and opinions will be considered carefully.

Also, if there is an area of entertainment that you are particularly knowledgeable in, please make your presence known, as you will be gladly accepted as a member of our writing staff. Thank you.

Three "B's" delightful

by Stephen Kantrowitz

It was both a welcome and appreciative audience that greeted violinist Oscar Ravina at his recital in Meachaen Recital Hall, Ravina, a professor of music at MSC, delivered a delightful performance of works of Berkeley and Brahms. He was assisted by Ruth Rendleman, an associate professor of music.

Ravina's repertoire for this performance consisted of works by composers whose names began with the letter "B." The pieces were not only alphabetically related but stylistically as well. Each of them was considerably dramatic, nervous tension, emotional and dynamic contrasts were heard throughout.

Elegy by Lennox Berkeley, was essentially an introduction to the festivities that were to follow. The piece had a melancholy, dreamlike quality to it. Ravina played with a broad and clear tone, but sometimes was sparse with vibrato. The piece moved freely from one note to the next, which gave a texture of restlessness to the work. Because of the abruptness and fragmented sound, the peacefulness was often disturbed. Rendleman provided a capable and conscientious accompaniment.

The second piece was Sonata in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2, by Beethoven. The violin and piano are equal partners in the music making process in this work. Rendleman, however, didn't do justice to her part. She stuck too much to a passive, accompanying manner of playing, and underestimated Beethoven's wonderful piano part.

Ravina provided just the right amount of dramatic intensity to the music; he always provided the important support that is needed confidence. Unlike in the Beethoven, the unleashed great amounts of activity and fervor. Ravina also dipped into a reservoir of energy to ignite the piece. The second movement, a lyrical and peaceful contrast to the first, put to pasture the nervous tension and outbursts of violence. Ravina displayed a fine execution of the spiccato.

Professor/violinist, Oscar Ravina

Jailbird sprung
by Bonnie Jerbasi

There are very few quality writers like Kurt Vonnegut left to entertain us these days; to say that he is a rare and unique writer is an understatement. Once again Vonnegut has managed to capture a national best-seller--Jailbird.

Like many of his other works, Jailbird manages to bring everything to its absurd end. Leaving the life of Kilgore Trout behind, Vonnegut has chosen Walter F. Starbuck as an elderly man who is just being released from the Federal Minimum Security Adult Correctional Facility.

You don’t have to be Italian to like hot garlic bread, just as you don’t have to drive 30 miles to the shore to enjoy a delicious seafood dinner.

The Sea Shack on Politic Rd. in Hackensack has everything to please anyone who enjoys garlic bread.

Walking through the main door, you can see through a porthole a tremendous fishnet attached to the wooden partitions. A six foot stuffed shark and a blue marlin hang opposite each other above the beacon lights on the paneled walls. Finely formed coral and sea creatures in shades and colors make beautiful abstract decorations on the shelves of the partition.

The dining room is divided in half, separating the large families with their noisy children from the more intimate couples.

Once seated at the table it takes approximately three minutes for the hospitable waitresses to ask for cocktails and four minutes for the bus boy to rush over with a plate of celery sticks and radishes on ice, hot garlic bread, and a dish of butter.

The menu is enough to make you dizzy with its hot and cold antipasti, soups, entrees, and desserts. Recommended is the linguini and white clam sauce and garlic bread, and a dish of celery sticks and radishes on ice, hot garlic bread, and a dish of butter.

After serving tine for, of all things, Watergate crimes.

Through his unique humor and satirical comments Vonnegut manages to make us quite a few of his opinions on social and political life. His style is quick paced and easy to follow, his former computer-feeding techniques are not found in Jailbird (alas no arrows, pictures, or crude signs).

Starbuck is a lonely soul who has no one and nothing outside of prison. His wife is dead and his son has disowned him. But Starbuck has plans of his own--he did graduate from Harvard and even got a bartender's degree while he was in prison. So he heads for NY to look for work.

Scattered throughout the book are flashbacks to the early life of Starbuck. He describes in some detail the four women that he has loved during his lifetime and what went on with each one of them. One of the four was his mother, and another was his wife, Ruth, who he met in a concentration camp during the war.

Only Vonnegut can take such heavy and serious stuff and make you cry with laughter. In reference to the troops of NYC bag-ladies: "I found myself embracing a bundle of dry twigs that was wrapped in rags... My nose, thank God, had conked out by then. Noses are merciful that way. They will report that something smells awful. If the owner of a nose stays around anyway, the nose concludes that the smell isn’t so bad after all. It shuts itself off, deferring to superior wisdom."

Starbuck experiences it all—he goes from rags to riches and back again, all set against a milieu of America in the 1970's. Vonnegut takes a crack at this controversial decade and manages to put together a refreshing, insightful, and charming story of one man's struggle. So it goes.

Coaches take second title
by Bo Ritz

The Coaches, led by playoff MVP Rich "Tex" Forrester's team-high 17 points, held off a late surge by the T-Boners to win their second straight men's basketball championship in overtime, 52-51. It was John's only l points in the game that clinched the victory for the Coaches.

Before the game started, the Coaches were faced with a major problem. McKinley Boston, the team's leading scorer, was sidelined, due to illness. The Coaches were forced to play the entire game with just five players.

In the early stages, the game was close with both teams trading field goals. The Coaches jumped out to an eight point lead midway through the first half, led by the shooting of Charlie DePaolo. The T-Boners kept within striking distance thanks to the hot hand of Ron Jackey. Jackey hit eight of the T-Boners last 10 points of the half to keep them close. The Coaches went into halftime with a 26-20 lead.

The Coaches increased their lead to 12 points early in the second half on baskets by "Tex" and Frank Bender. They held the lead for most of the half. But the T-Boners refused to quit. Late in the game, they ran off a 12-2 spurt to put them within two points of the lead. Jackey's tip-in with just 16 seconds remaining in regulation tied the game at 45. After a time out, the Coaches worked the ball to DePaolo, but his 15 foot jumper fell short as time ran out.

In overtime, two baskets by Bender and a pair of free throws by DePaolo put the Coaches up early. Jackey brought the T-Boners back with two baskets of his own. Tex then hit a jumper from the corner to put the Coaches up 52-51 with 47 seconds remaining in overtime. The T-Boners brought the ball up and had two shots at the hoop but failed to convert. They were forced to foul and in doing so gave Mike Ritz two free throws (an intentional foul) with just seven seconds remaining on the clock. Ritz missed both to leave the Coaches with a slim one point lead. After another time out, the T-Boners worked the ball the length of the court to Mike Tropeano, whose last second shot from the corner fell short to give the Coaches the win.

Sidelights: Jackey led all scorers with 18 points, while Tropeano pitched in 11 for the T-Boners. Billy Muller was held to just two points and also fouled out late in the game. DePaolo and Bender had 13 and 12, respectively for the Coaches. It was a very physical game with a total of 29 fouls (nine for the Coaches and 20 for the T-Boners). This was the Coaches' second consecutive title. Both Muller and Tropeano were part of last year's championship team.

MSC, Mountainside dedicate sports med. center
by Ann Marie Miskewicz

Area sports celebrities, politicians, faculty and residents of the college community filled the Sports Center Auditorium of Mountainside Hospital on Jan. 15 for the dedication of the new Sports Medicine Center, located in the hospital's department of rehabilitation.

The center, a joint venture between the hospital and MSC, is the only nonprofit hospital-based program in Northern N.J. developed in conjunction with a college department of physical education. The program is set up to treat and rehabilitate injured players as well as to provide preventive measures.

We're here to service recreational athletes, not just scholastic and collegiate athletes," stressed Joan Schleede, chairwoman of MSC's physical education department. Schleede, along with Dr. Seymour Pedinoff, director of rehabilitation medicine at Mountainside Hospital, and other members of MSC's department of physical education, were instrumental in making the center a reality.

Pedinoff convinced the Mountainside Hospital's board of trustees of the necessary $12,000 needed for equipment, while Schleede provided the exercise expertise of her faculty, including Dr. George Horn, associate professor and specialist in exercise science, and Sandy Biker, certified athletic trainer. Also, a select group of MSC students working on independent studies or internships, will also assist in the program.

In his opening remarks to the approximately 200 people attending the dedication ceremony, Pedinoff, dressed in a three-piece brown suit, described the center as a "dream come true." He emphasized that it was here to help athletes and prolong their career in competition. Larry Dolby, former player for the Cleveland Indians and now director of community affairs for the NJ Nets said, "If we trained years ago as we do today, we'd probably still be playing."

The center will accept patients referred by a personal or team physician. If you do not have a personal physician, you can contact Pedinoff for an examination and he will assign one of his orthopedic specialists to prescribe treatment.

Equipment available at the center includes a Universal Gym, an Orthotron exercise unit, used in the treatment of joint ailments (knee, shoulder, ankle), and cardiovascular equipment for stress testing. You can use the equipment at no additional cost other than the attending physician's fee.

Other sports figures in attendance were former Yankee players, Yogi Berra and Gil McDougall; marathon runner Tom Fleming, Carol Blazejowski, former MSC alums and a member of the NJ Gems; and Kathy Motolina, coach of the Gems.

The sports medicine center is the third cooperative program between Mountainside and MSC. An exercise program for patients in the hospital's Alcoholism Treatment Unit has been developed in conjunction with the physical education department at the college. Special courses are also taught at the college for students from the hospital's School of Nursing.
Wrestlers improving with every match

by Mike Ritz

The MSC wrestling team lost to a strong Southern Connecticut State College (SCSC), 30-15 in a dual meet held in Panzer Gym over the winter break. The only bright spots for the Indians were Dave Drozjock at 158 and Art Sopelsa at heavyweight. The Indians record now stands at 2-6.

At 118, Jim Pavia got things started for SCSC with a convincing 22-8 victory over Mark Maleck. Pavia wore his opponent down to earn a five point win. The Indians got an early six points on a forfeit to Rodney Smith. This was the last time MSC led in the match. After the forfeit, SCSC took control of the match with three consecutive wins.

Ron Ing at 134 deconsed Tom Massello, 7-2. Ing took control of the match early on in the second period and held on to win. Rick Babbitt followed Ing with a fall at :59 in the second period at 142. At 150, Matt Melli ended the string with a 15-8 decision over Dan DaCunto. DaCunto had a chance late in the match when he had Melli on his back, but reversed him.

Drozjock broke the string with a 10-4 win over Tohe Corey. At 167, SCSC's Dennis Seeman, his face covered with a mask to protect a broken nose, beat Ed Allemand, 12-2, to give his team another four point win. Bob Eming put the match out of reach with a 6-5 win over John Antosiewicz at 171. Eming trailed 5-1 going into the final period and came up with five points on an escape, a takedown, and a near fall to get the win.

At 190, Charlie Valois of SCSC put the icing on the cake when he pinned Pat Fazzani at :46 into the first period. SCSC led 30-9 at this point. MSC heavyweight Art Sopelsa ended the match with a fall of his own at 1:28 of the second period to bring the score to the final 30-15.

In other matches over winter session, MSC came up with two victories over Kean College (Kean) and Upsala College (Upsala) in a triangular meet. The Indians routed Kean, 45-9. Winners included Maleck (forfeit), DaCunto (default), Drozjock (3-0), Antosiewicz (fall 2:45), and Sopelsa (fall). They defeated Upsala 28-21 in a tight match. Winners included Maleck (forfeit), DaCunto (13-2), Drozjock (8-2), and Sopelsa (fall 1-9).

Softball tryouts

There will be an organizational meeting for anyone interested in trying out for the MSC women's softball team on Wed., Feb. 4 at 3:30 pm in the Brown Lounge in Panzer Gym. Tryouts will be held on Sat., Feb. 14 (10 am-12 pm) and Sun., Feb. 15 (4-6 pm) in Panzer Gym. All interested students are urged to attend.

Tennis physicals mandatory

Those interested must call Lois Cooper of the Athletic Office prior to Feb. 2 to set up a time for the physical. The number is 893-5233 and you must leave your name, social security number and phone number.

Indians fall to GSC

Glassboro State College (GSC) overcame MSC in the first half when Steve Selby sank two buckets ending a 14-14 tie. Selby went on to score 10 of the next 12 points for GSC.

Jeff Johnson led MSC with 13 points, Ron James of GSC was high scorer with 17.

Smoke Signals

Worswick breaks record

Freshman Scott Worswick of Springfield, NJ broke the MSC 500 yard freestyle record previously held by Pat Farley (5:30:54) in 5:27.97. Worswick also captured the 1,000 yard freestyle and 200 yard freestyle event, in the recent meet against Seton Hall University.

Senior Steve Dempsey captured the 200 yard breaststroke and was also a member of the winning medley relay team. The team's record now stands at 3-1.

IM refs needed

The intramural department of MSC is looking for men and women interested in being officials or scorekeepers for the spring semester. Officials and scorekeepers are paid through the Financial Aid Office in conjunction with the IM department.

Added incentives are a biyearly banquet, rookie referee and referee of the year awards, and a jacket after two years of service.

For more information, contact McKinley Boston, director of intramurals, at 893-4411 or Mike Pucciarelli, head official, at 893-4710.

Smith falls all-American

Rodney Smith, MSC's standout wrestler at 126 pounds, pulled off a remarkable upset victory over Rutgers University's (Newark) Ron Jones last month. Jones, an all-American and a 1980 NCAA qualifier at 118 pounds, was undefeated in dual of the 13 events, however.

Duriske puts away shot

MSC's Rich Duriske hurled the shot 42 feet to take first place in the shot put event of Seton Hall University's (SHU) invitational track and field meet, at the air dome on the South Orange, NJ campus last month. SHU dominated its own meet, winning eight of the events.

The marathon will begin Fri., March 20 at 6 pm and continue until Sat., March 21. Anyone interested in playing in the marathon should contact the SLIC Office at 893-5245.
Indians make run at playoffs

Gelston calls for team effort

by Paul Huegel

"That one hurt," Coach Ollie Gelston said disappointedly after his surging Indians dropped an 87-85 double overtime game to conference rival William Paterson College (WPC) last Saturday in Wayne, NJ.

"The name of the game is winning on the road," the coach stated. "We blew a key game.

MSC led 85-83 late in the second overtime, but let it slip away on jumpers by WPC's Clinton Wheeler and Ted Bonner. Bonner's winning shot came with three seconds remaining and iced the victory.

In regulation, it was Bonner again hitting a jumper with 11 seconds left to send the game into overtime. He had 24 points on the night, second only to Wheeler and MSC's Jeff Johnson's 25.

"We played very well vs WPC but we let the game get away from us," Gelston noted. "We had six opportunities to win down the stretch but failed to capitalize," he added.

The Indians' record now stands at 8-7 with six games remaining—all of which are conference games. The Tribe presently rests third in the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference behind Jersey City State College (JCSC), and WPC.

"If we play with the same intensity every night out, we'll make the playoffs," Gelston predicted. "We can't afford one game when we don't come to play," he added.

MSC's Jeff Johnson's 25.

Although Johnson and forward Ed Riche have been the Tribe's two hot hands this season. Gelston feels there won't be a "key" man down the stretch.

"It has to be a team effort. If one guy doesn't do his job, we aren't going to win. That includes a sub that plays only four minutes," the coach noted.

The remainder of the Indians' schedule looks as follows: Sat., Jan. 31, Kean College (8 pm) home; Wed., Feb. 4, Ramapo College (8 pm) away; Sat., Feb. 7, Trenton State College (8 pm) home; Wed., Feb. 11, Jersey City State College (8 pm) away; Sat., Feb. 14, Stockton State College (8 pm) away; Tue., Feb. 17 WPC (8 pm) home; Sat., Feb. 21, Glassboro State College (8 pm) away.

Squaws capture key tournaments

by Ann Marie Miskewicz

The Squaws coasted to their fourth win in a row, when they captured two key tournaments over the last two weekends. This past weekend, the women traveled to Connecticut for the University of Connecticut (UC) Tournament as they bested the host team, 75-54. The week before the Squaws beat the University of Massachusetts (UM) 79-63 in the Syracuse Tournament in Syracuse, NY.

In opening round action of the UC Tournament, MSC rolled to an easy 66-49 win over Colgate with all the Squaws getting the opportunity to play. Senior forward Pat Fixter had 16 of her 24 points in the second half to lead the Squaws.

In the final game against UC, the Squaws' tenacious defense controlled the game. Sophomore guard Sharon Ross led the defense with four blocked shots, while her backcourt partner Tracey Brown led the offense with 24 points. Fixter, Ross, and Brown were named to the all tournament team and Brown also captured MVP honors.

At Syracuse, the girls became the future answer to a trivia question, as they played the first women's game in the newly built Carrier Dome against the University of Rhode Island (URI). After a halftime lead of 33-31, the women outsored URI 44-32 in the second half to gain the 77-63 victory. Brown led all scorers with 22, followed by Fixter with 20, and Ross with 14.

The final game against UM, saw the Squaws against three players at 6 feet 4 inches tall. In the past, the Squaws have had trouble getting rebounds from their taller opponents, but this time they did an excellent job boxing out to win the game and the tournament, 79-63.

Fixter led all scorers with 21, followed by Brown with 20, and Ross and Debbie O'Brien with 13. O'Brien shot nine out of 10 from the foul line in the second half. Brown and Fixter captured all tournament honors.

The women's record now stands at 12-5 with a key game coming up this Saturday against Seton Hall University. Game time is 3 pm in Panzer Gym.
