MSC car theft rate is highest in the state

By Frank Rosa

Many of you who commute to MSC might feel secure about parking your cars on campus. You roll up your windows, lock your doors, and walk away thinking that nothing can happen to them in such a serene, well-guarded environment.

Beware. You may not always find your automobiles when you return.

According to statistics from the campus police and the NJ Division of State Police Uniform Crime Reporting Unit, the rate of car thefts at MSC for 1980, '81, and '82 have exceeded those of 1978 and '79. The number of car thefts in September (the busiest month for such illegal activity) has also increased over 1980's rate.

In 1978 and '79, MSC had 30 and 27 cars stolen respectively. The 1980 and 91 figures showed an increase to 35 and 42. As of October 24, the total for 1982 is 29 which, if prorated, would factor into 35 for the year.

There was a drop in car thefts in September from 12 in 1981 to eight this year. However, these numbers for exceed those of 1980, in which only three thefts occurred.

In September, the campus police face a number of other problems. Giblin said, "People are beginning to find out that they can do it. There's quite a grapevine among thieves."

In comparing car thefts on this campus to those in this municipality, county and state, MSC sizes up favorably. In 1981, MSC had one car stolen for every 243 residents, Essex County had one for every 70 residents, and NJ averaged one for every 145 citizens.

However, in relation to other colleges and universities in the state, MSC rates extremely high. The 13 NJ institutions of higher education with crime statistics recorded in the 1981 University and College Offense Data, MSC ranked number one in car thefts. The closest rival is Kean College with one stolen for every 644 students. Burlington County College and William Paterson College had the best records. BCC had no auto thefts among its 6,150 students, while WPC had only one among its 12,517 enrolled.

In evaluating the poor record, Rich points out, "This is an open campus. There are no gates to keepout intruders. We have a large campus to patrol and we can't be everywhere all the time."

Elaborating on Rich's statement, Sergeant Charles Giblin of the campus police said, "Some of it has to do with geography. Some of it has to do with the number of people assigned to patrol a certain area. Some of it has to do with the other kinds of things your officers have to do besides patrol the parking area."

"In order to make a true comparison, you have to look at all the functions on campus, how many emergencies the police have to attend to, how many doors have to be opened at a certain time, and how many special events have to be coordinated."

"Most colleges have controlled campuses where there's an attendant who has to give his permission before any­one enters the premises. We don't have it," Giblin said.

He also pointed out that in addition to the lack of control of access to the parking lots, the campus police face a number of other problems. Giblin said that the physical layouts of the college and its proximity to highways create an advantage for car thieves. He added that "sophisticated tools of the trade such as the lockjock, slimjim, and slam hammer" also aid the thieves.

Among the 13 colleges on the crime report for 1981, MSC had the fourth lowest number of total police employ­ees, with 34 (22 officers and 12 civil­lans) or one for every 463 students.

Burlington County College with one for every 769 students had the lowest. Rutgers University-Camden, with one police employee for every 133 students, had the highest.

Yet, even with these startling figures, college administration has cut costs. With 34 officers on staff, they are at the limit. "We've talked to the administration about increasing the number of campus police," says Giblin, "but it's just a matter of financial priorities."

Rich adds, "When I go up Clove Road, looking at all those cars just ripe for the taking and wondering why none of them aren't stolen, I think to myself that we must be doing something right."

Yet, as they might, the campus police still have a hard time apprehending the suspects and recovering the cars.

According to Giblin, since 1978 only 40 of the 163 cars stolen from this campus were returned to their owners. The 1979 Professional Motor Vehicle Theft and Chop Shop Report states that the small recovery rate among most areas of the state is mainly because 55 percent of the thieves are professionals who take the car to an illegal "chop shop" (usually run by organized crime) where it's imme­diately stripped of its valuable parts for resale. Rich said only 10 percent of the crooks are amateur "joyriders."

Right now, the campus police are on the lookout for a two or three-man team that has been stalking the area. Though there are no detailed de­scriptions of these men, Rich warns the students to "watch out for anyone who looks older than the regular MSC student and continually drives around a certain parking space."

Rich also suggests a number of things one can do to prevent automobile thefts:

1) Don't keep your car in one spot for an extended period of time.
2) Install an alarm system and an anti-theft device in your car.
3) Don't park in lot 28 at night. It's restricted to daytime use only.
4) If you see a crime being com­mitted, call campus extension 4111 to get police assistance.

Though most professional thieves will steal any car on order, Rich said, "In my thirty-year career on the police force, General Motors' cars have been stolen more oft­en." Regardless of its make, unscrupulous people will continue to discover new ways to pirate and profit from your car.

As Giblin stated aptly, "The only ones who lose out are the insurance companies and the victims."

Council looks at pluses and minuses of new grade scale

By Mona Sehgal

The MSC academic affairs council has been considering a plan which would implement plus/minus grades into the standard A, B, C, marking system. The proposal was prompted by the 56A and put forth to the faculty senate by Dr. Mark Koppol of the psychology department last spring.

Presently, "the idea is in limbo because of the enormous amount of monetary funding needed to secure the change," said Dr. Edward Boynton, president of the faculty senate. Ex-estimated costs for the re-programming of all MSC computers involved with grading will amount to approximately $65,400, according to the NJ Education Computing Network (NJECN). Alterations in school files, student handbooks and other on-campus records will increase costs another $30,000.

No extra money can be appropriated by the state legislature. Therefore, MSC will have to turn to its own administration finances. "This is simply a cut out of the question," said Dr. Garret, vice-president of academic affairs.

The MSC computers are programmed to handle only two-digit numbers. The plus/minus system will require the incorporation of a three-digit grading value. For example, 3.33 may be analogous to a B-, a 3.66 to an A-. This would necessitate the NJECN to establish an entirely new set of coded instructions for the computers.

Garret said students initially proposed a "plus" to be added on to the grades without its counterpart, the "minus." This would rid of the problem of installing a three-digit program. The B+ would correspond with a numerical value of 3.5 and the C+ with a 2.5. Although such a system is utilized in Rutgers' curriculum of general studies, it was rejected by the MSC academic affairs council.

A measure which the faculty senate is in favor of and plans to propose to the student academic affairs body, is to approximate the plus and minus into a two-digit number. Thus, a B+ would equal approximately 2.7, B- would equal a 3.3, and A- a 3.7.

If this proposal is adopted, it could go into effect within a year, according to Boynton. The matter will be coming up for discussion on November 8 during the academic affairs council meeting.

"The plan will "either be pushed forward or be put on the shelf,"" said Dr. Walter Duryea, chairperson of the academic affairs council of the Senate. "Our only problem is the present cost."

Although there exists a conflict over how to implement the new system of grading, the system is supported by Duryea, Boynton, and Garret.

If the proposal is passed, the addition of plus/minus grades will require faculty members to make finer judgments as well as provide professors with a greater range of grades to choose from.

Turnout undisputably low for Falkland crisis lecture

By Eileen Oleksiai

There was more than "standing room only," as advertised by the Latin American Student Organization. Fewer than 15 people attended the talk. The subject matter (Falkland Crisis) was forced onto the agenda by the speaker (Alexandro Borgia, journalist for the bilirunal newspaper "Inognito") warranting some small attention. The speaker for LASO attributed this to student/faculty apathy and said that the poor turnout would probably abort the series on Latin American politics. The MSC academic affairs council, while presided over by Academic Affairs President Dr. Edward J. Boynton, refuted this comment saying that the council had been set up for discussion on November 8 during the academic affairs council meeting.

"The plan will "either be pushed forward or be put on the shelf,"" said Dr. Walter Duryea, chairperson of the academic affairs council of the Senate. "Our only problem is the present cost."

Although there exists a conflict over how to implement the new system of grading, the system is supported by Duryea, Boynton, and Garret.

The Lancet cites poor Annex ventilation as illness cause

By Kathy Scorta

The Department of Environmental Protection checked the Student Center Annex last Tuesday for high carbon monoxide levels as a result of the Women's Center's move from the Annex due to ventilation problems in the building.

Dr. Connie Waller, director of the Women's Center, described the symptoms that she experienced. "I almost lost my voice and I had to clear my throat often, plus I felt generally unhealthy."

Waller's secretary was suffering from similar symptoms, and women's groups that met for two or three hours in the office complained of eye irritation.

Jerome Quinn, the director of institutional planning, tried to explain the problems in the Annex offices. "There is either excessive noise or trouble controlling the amount of fresh air in the office. This depends on how we have the system set. Usually the more fresh air let in, the more noise there is," he said. "We've had a building mechanical design firm and an architectural engineer in trying to fix it."

Quinn said that the new system still needs some fine tuning. "The Board of Health found some serious problems; now it's just a question of comfort levels," he said.

Waller wasn't sure what caused the problems, but thinks that it was the ventilation in her office. "In the summer we had no problems but I was only here part-time then. In September we were working full-time and that's when it started. My doctor said my symptoms were an allergic reaction to something but I don't know what."

The Career Services office and the SGA office have also been affected by the ventilation problems with temperature and air flow. The SGA office was described as "stuff" by one member. In the Career Services office some staff members experienced allergic reactions similar to those Waller described.
Panel discusses women and minority concerns

By Peter Paplnchak

Kops Lounge was the scene of a panel discussion entitled "Race and Sex in America" last week which was sponsored by the Women's Studies Department. The purpose of the discussion was to raise issues concerning the status of minorities and women in American society today.

Approximately 150 people listened intently as Barbara Chasin, sociology department; Anita Uhia, curriculum and teaching; Mary Holley, sociology department; and Myra Johnson, Black Student Cooperative Union president, presented some different perspectives of women and minority concerns. Laura Gordon of the sociology department was the moderator.

Chasin, the first speaker, emphasized the parallels between racism and sexism in American society by first pointing out the great discrepancies in income between black and whites, and secondly, between men and women. Chasin said that these discrepancies are reinforced through our present economic situation.

Chasin also noted the low status given to blacks and women for work which is "crucial to society." She questioned the reasoning behind mass media covering stories of supposed biologic and genetic inferiority. Such theories she said, tell women and minorities that the reason for their low status and economic inequality is "not within the system but within themselves." This she said was "unjust and wrong."

Chasin also discussed how physical violence is used in our society to oppress women and minorities. She pointed to the steady increase in rape and the disproportionate percentage of blacks killed by police, to emphasize their "lack of control over their own bodies." She said both groups have become socially accepted scapegoats and that scapegoating increases with rising unemployment.

Chasin urged those concerned to organize themselves and attack the economic problems which are the root of racism and sexism. She also called for the government to provide social services such as day care programs for working families and improved education for the poor.

Anita Uhia discussed the difficulty that Hispanics have "fitting in" with American society by first pointing out the great discrepancies in income between black and whites, and secondly, between men and women. Uhia portrayed Hispanic-Americans as "marginal people," trying to live in two different cultures. She exposed the problems faced in maintaining Hispanic traditions in a society which she said pressures people to rid themselves of their cultural traits. Uhia said an extra burden is placed on female children of Hispanic immigrants because they must deal with the traditional Hispanic feminine values of submission and passivity in a changing American culture. She added that western society must rid itself of its "preoccupation with color" and come to realize that "we all have more in common than separates us."

Mary Holley related her discussion to her personal experiences as a black woman growing up in America. She noted the advantages of realizing her black heritage while coming to terms with the "major culture." Holley also pointed out how ascribed characteristics can be "subverted" when people look at race rather than individual characteristics. The result of this, she said, is racist stereotypes such as "all blacks look alike."

Myra Johnson, the final speaker, gave her views on the difficulties faced by minority students here at MSC. She spoke of "isolation" on campus and how grievances concerning the problems of blacks and Hispanics are not being listened to. Johnson said that the artists chosen through Class One Concerts to play at MSC only cater to the listening habits of white students. She called for more black and Hispanic student involvement in the decision making process. She also urged the college to promote better group relations among students.
Out-of-hand party and more car thefts over last week

By John DelGuercio
During the week of October 25 through October 31, there were three incidents of car theft, two incidents of burglary, and two incidents of theft.

A car parked in lot 28 was stolen on October 25. On October 29, the second car was stolen from lot 30. The third car was stolen from lot 20 on October 31. At this time no arrests have been made by police, and none of the cars have been recovered.

One of the offices in Partridge Hall was broken into on October 26 and a table was taken from the room. On October 30 the Music Building was entered, and an instrument was stolen.

On October 28 two other thefts occurred. Both of these included the theft of personal property which was left unattended. The first was in lot 8, which is across from College Hall, and the second was in the Music Building. During this week, there was an unauthorized party and five incidents of criminal mischief.

Parties, which were in Clove Road Apartments, took place on October 31. Approximately 300 people were reported to be present. When the campus police arrived, many people moved outside into the parking lot. Members of this group threw beer bottles at the police; however, no injuries were reported. Soon after, the mob was broken up.

On October 28 a car parked in lot 24 had its windshield smashed. In Blanton Hall on October 29, at 4 a.m., a group of people took a table from the west lounge and threw it off one of the ledges. According to E.A. Johnson, assistant manager of the fifth floor, it is not known whether the table was thrown from the fourth or fifth floor, or who is responsible.

Three more acts of criminal mischief occurred on October 31. In lot 19 a car had its windshield smashed. In lot 29, unauthorized persons turned an unmanned police scooter. Also, rocks were thrown at College Hall and windows were smashed. Fire alarms went off seven times this week, four of which were in Freeman Hall.

The first occurred on October 26 at about 4:30 a.m. It was found, according to Sara Baxter, director of Freeman Hall, to have been caused by a student who had smoking a cigarette underneath a smoke detector. Later that day, at about 7 p.m., the fire alarm went off again. Upon investigating it was found to have been triggered by heat coming from a resident's cooking. During the night of October 28 another alarm was set off. This time the cause was not determined. On the morning of October 30 an alarm was triggered by a resident cooking inside a room. This caused the fire alarm to go off. In all these cases the residents had to be evacuated.

Finally, on October 25, stolen property was recovered. A car which had been stolen from Bloomfield was recovered on campus in lot 28. Also on October 28, a purse which had been stolen earlier was recovered in the Quarry, but the money which had been in the purse was missing.

SGA legislature to endorse civil rights teach-in

By Peter Stankov and Lisa Fochesato
At last night's SGA meeting the legislature passed a bill which endorsed a civil rights/racism teach-in which will be held on campus in the Music Building. According to Joe Fortunato, the attorney for the students involved in the shotgun incident with the Little Falls police, said that the teach-in was being held to "send a message to police departments, how they can and can't treat black suspects."

Harris Necker, vice-president of academic affairs, told the legislature that he met with the director of the library and discussed the possibility of extending library hours. According to Necker, this was already tried but poor student usage did not warrant continuation of extended hours.

Necker also addressed the possibility of utilizing unused classrooms as study halls for commuting students. He also suggested the reinstatement of the Student Library Advisory Committee. He said the purpose of this committee would be to work with the library staff to resolve problems that students may encounter when using the library.

Mark Spinelli, SGA president, asked all the legislators, Class I representatives, and the Class I Organization to evaluate their goals, to see where they are now, and where they will be going in the future. He said that certain organizations have had certain internal conflicts. He asked that these conflicts be worked out within each organization.

Students for Social Responsibility received a Class II charter. Delta Kappa Psi received a Class III charter. The Finance and Quantitative Methods Club received MTA funds of $195 for a trip to the New York Stock Exchange on November 17.

Audrey Rosenberg announced that television comedian Floyd Vivino, known as Uncle Floyd, will be appearing on her radio show on December 3.
Lecture states case for law students

By Jamie McHugh

Getting accepted to law school has always been a difficult task and attorney Tom Martinson addressed that problem last Wednesday in a lecture entitled, "How To Get Into Law School." The lecture, which was sponsored by the Political Science Club, was one in a continuing series of lectures to be sponsored by the group. Martinson, who is a graduate of Harvard Law School and is currently completing a Ph.D. in philosophy of law at Columbia University in New York, is the nation's foremost authority on the Law School Achievement Test. The highly fluent and articulate speaker has been lecturing students about the LSAT for the last seven years and is the author of How to Prepare for the LSAT as well. Martinson also lectures for BAR/BRI, which provides a course on how to prepare for the LSAT.

Martinson began by speaking about the sources of information on law schools. Some of these sources include the Political Science Club, the Official Law School Handbook by the Law School Admission Council, law school catalogues, and telephoning the desired law school. Martinson said that "every law school relies to a greater or lesser extent on the student's GPA and his LSAT score," but added that "no law school relies exclusively on these scores."

"Each and every law school rejects some students with high scores and accepts students with lower scores." There is flexibility in the process," he said. "But this doesn't mean that Yale will accept you with a 1.3 GPA and a 10 on the LSAT." (The LSAT score ranges from a low of 10 to a high of 50).

Martinson explained that students should only apply to a law school where they have a realistic chance of getting in. "Otherwise you are unnecessarily feeding the law school's coffers and wasting your own time and money," he said.

Martinson warned that "it's not easy to get into law school these days" and that prospective law students are "up against a very competitive group." He estimated that of last year's 175,000 law school applications, only 43,000 were accepted.
In the heart of the MSC campus there is a small “all-American” house which seems serene compared to the bustling activities of the students around it. Here, one can sit down, relax, and release all the fears, tensions, and problems that are part of being a student.

The house is called the Drop-In Center and its motto is: If we can’t help you, we’ll find someone who can.

The Drop-In Center was founded by an MSC student named Michael King in February 1973 and was originally set up as a crisis hot-line. There was an immediate positive response. The Drop-in Center was first located in Chaplin Chapter by College Hall and was moved to its present and convenient location between Richardson Hall and the Student Center.

The goals and objectives of the SGA-funded organization are to help college students cope with the everyday situations and problems on or off campus, to aid the students by forcing them to come in contact with their own ideas and feelings, and to become more aware of themselves. During the semester everyone is invited to attend any of the center’s informative programs workshops.

Peter Maramaldi, who is in charge of the center, said that all conversations are completely confidential. The counselors only offer suggestions and will not accept responsibility for any decisions that are made. When someone calls or goes to the center, a counselor pays careful attention to the feelings and ideas the person is trying to express and then attempts to help them solve their problem.

Each semester a series of posters and advertisements are sent out by the Drop-In Center to all students to encourage them to become a member of the staff. This semester the applicants went through a training session which consisted of a questionnaire, a number of role-playing calls and/or situations, and 40 to 80 hours of procedural training ending on October 2. Currently the center has a staff consisting of 19 individuals who are required to work 10 hours a week on a purely volunteer basis.

However, most staff members work an extra 10 to 30 hours a week, including an overnight shift for the center’s 24-hour service. The members are trained to aid people with problems concerning sexual assault, drugs, suicide, pregnancy, and more. They receive over 300 calls a week, which range in severity from loss of family pet to suicide and rape.

In addition, each staff member is required to gather information and list new referrals about sexual health, events on or off campus, and current psychological events and ideas.

The center’s staff feels that the cooperation at the college has been tremendous. The warmth and friendliness within the organization makes it a willing ear for troubled and nervous students who are too far from friends and family to talk. The Drop-In Center is not the “Enchanted Forest,” but rather a place for those who haven’t touched upon their own personalities.

The number at the center is 893-5271. The staff emphasizes that no problem is too small to be discussed.
Two legislators may soon be dismissed from the SGA

By Peter Stankov

Mike Miller, SGA vice-president, said last Thursday that two legislators were facing possible expulsion from the legislature. Miller cited inattendance at committee and weekly SGA meetings as reasons for the possible expulsion.

Miller declined to identify the legislators concerned but said that they were both appointees to the legislature. He said he has already written them letters of warning and that both legislators are aware of the situation. Miller said that one already expressed intentions of resigning because of a conflicting work schedule.

"The legislators are allowed three unexcused absences and two excused absences from any meeting concerning the SGA, including the main meeting and committee meetings. After that they receive a warning and then they are terminated," Miller said.

Miller stated that 17 out of the 53 legislators still have not turned in their schedules for committee meetings. He said this makes it impossible to know what these people are actually doing. "Three quarters of those 17 are probably going to committee meetings, but I don't know where they are or what they are doing," he said.

Miller emphasized that absenteeism is not a widespread problem in the SGA. "The legislators, for the most part, are great," he said. "They say they're going to be there and they're there. It's those few who ruin it for everybody else by not being there when they should."

Talk on law schools

Martinson stressed that exemplifying one's ability and motivation are of utmost importance to getting accepted. "Show them that you have the ability to be a law student by what you have learned throughout your college career (classes, job, extra-curricular, etc.) and your motivation (I always liked law, etc.)."

A letter of recommendation is also helpful along with the application.

Martinson also advised that students take the LSAT in June of their junior year. "This gives you time to get your application well organized and in on time," he said.

"Freshmen and sophomores should make sure that they take at least semi-difficult courses that are related to writing and English. Law schools are looking for a good background in writing and English," Martinson said.

Co-op corner is a new feature of The Montclarion spotlighting students involved in the MSC Cooperative Education program.

Cooperative Education is a unique educational opportunity. As a professional practice program, it offers students the chance to work in a career-related position in the private or public sector while earning academic credit. Co-op students receive a salary from the employer as well.

This is our first of a series of interviews conducted by The Montclarion staff with a current Co-op student, featuring them as the Co-op student of the month.

name: Joyce Scarlillo
major: Marketing employer: IBM, West Orange position: Assistant Account Administrator semester: Fall '83
Interview conducted by Lisa Cushline

Lisa: What are your duties and responsibilities in the position you now hold?

Joyce: "I make the preparations for the installation of IBM machines and make sure they get to the right place at the right time. I work with marketing representatives and take care of their accounts. I process orders, prepare contracts, and oversee accounts receivable, making sure there are no major problems with payments. IBM is divided into two departments, Office Systems and Data Processing. I work in the Data Processing area with computers."

Lisa: As a Co-op student at IBM, do you feel differently or apart from the mainstream of workers?

Joyce: "Although I'm not dealing directly with the actual marketing process, I am learning a lot about it by dealing with the marketing representatives. I'm asking them many questions and finding out what they do. I learn from them why a customer orders a specific item and how many customers' needs are matched with products. This job fits my personality because I am in a competitive environment. What I'm doing is a stepping-stone into the corporation."

Lisa: How would you compare the learning in this job to the learning in a classroom?

Joyce: "There is no comparison. No classroom could ever teach you what a real-life business environment can."

Lisa: As I understand it, you have a faculty member who evaluates your learning. What is your experience with the faculty in Co-op and what is their role?

Joyce: "The faculty coordinator is important to the student. My advisor Mr. Gilbert. He is allowing me, through my supervisor, to go outside my realm and learn about other areas of the corporation. He is helping me open my eyes and not be restricted in what I'm doing. He has come in and spoken to both my supervisor and myself about my job."

Lisa: In what ways has this experience affected your career goals?

Joyce: "I was offered a full-time position with IBM when I graduated in January 1983. Before I worked for IBM, I thought I wanted to go into advertising or marketing research after college. But now I realize I don't want to work in those areas. I plan on advancing in IBM. If I stay in the administrative area, I can advance into several management positions. If I can change from administrative, I would like to become either a marketing representative or a systems engineer."

Joyce: "Co-op has determined my career goals, and has helped me prepare for the job market while still in school. My experience at IBM has been extremely beneficial. I urge all students to join the Co-op program because it would benefit all your future endeavors."

The Co-op Education Office is located in the Student Center Annex, Room 104 and is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday to Friday and has evening hours Thursday until 7:30.

Equestrians horse around for the blue ribbon

By Janet Hirsch

On October 17, the MSC Riding Club held its seventh annual horse show at Jack Benson's Briarwood Farms in Oldwick, NJ.

Two hundred seventy-five riders from 22 colleges participated in several events which judged the riders on their appearance and ability to ride. Some of the colleges represented at the show were C.W. Post, Drew University, Pace University, Fairleigh Dickinson University, and Stonybrook University.

Many members of the MSC Riding Club received ribbons. Janine Janarelli, the club president, received a second place in her fence class, and two-time national champion and MSC alumnus Andy Schenke placed fifth out of 12 in his fence class and second in his flat class. Other MSC riders who received ribbons were Ellen Krentz, fourth place; Karen Dunn, fourth place; and Virginia Steindel, sixth place.

Riders competed on the flats, where they were judged on their ability to guide their horses through walk, trot, and canter exercises. They also took their horses over a series of eight fences, the heights of which are determined according to the riders' ability.

Etiquette is a very important part of a horse show. The riders wear proper hunt attire because they are judged on how good they look. The horses are groomed as well to add to the glamor of the event.

The riders don't know what horses they will be riding until that morning, when they have a drawing before the show starts.

The highlight of the show was the Challenge Cup. This is a special class which tests the riders' ability on the flats and over fences. The winner of this class received a silver wine cooler, a certificate, and a blue ribbon. Each rider accumulates points when they receive ribbons, and these points add up to help their team.

These points also help the individual rider to qualify for regional and national competition. Drew University had high point, which means they came in first place. The team received a trophy and a silver platter in recognition of their achievement. Stonybrook University was the reserve team, which means they placed second.
Help prevent thefts

Just as automobile travel has become a way of life for virtually all of us, so has the theft of automobiles become a way of life for the more unscrupulous of our society. Not a week goes by without a car being stolen from this campus.

It is time that we started striking back at those who would take our property. All of us can take small steps that will help thwart these thieves: locking car doors, taking keys with us when we go out that the installation of gates will be too costly. Granted, it will cost the college some money, but it will cost them much less than it costs the students who have their cars stolen.

So far this year 29 cars have been stolen from campus. Using a very conservative average price of $2,000, this translates into a total loss of $58,000— the actual figure is probably much higher. To carry it even further, at least 27 cars have been stolen per year for the past four years; a total of at least $200,000 in lost property.

Certainly the administration can invest a few thousand dollars to prevent the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars in student property. If they will not, we must lobby to force them into action. They are our cars that are being stolen, not theirs. Administrators Dr. Jean Armstrong, dean of students affairs, Dr. David W. D. Dickson, president of the college, and Dr. Elliot Mininberg, vice-president for administration and finance, should receive your complaints. Letters to this paper will also help convince the college that something must be done to curb these thefts.

Have you ever stopped to ask for directions to somewhere and after nodding your head in complete understanding your mind goes fuzzy, and you wonder whether the first turn is a left or right? Perhaps the problem is that you heard the explanation, but didn't really listen to it.

As we tend to view listening as a passive activity, it really is a skill to be cultivated. Half of all communication is listening, and many of the problems that we encounter in our daily interactions with others often result from a break in the listening process.

First, it is important to realize that there are different kinds of listening for different purposes. The ear you turn to your stereo after purchasing a new album is not engaged in the same way during psych class. Talking with your friends or family involves other dynamics as well. Music is more of a relaxed listening, and although serious music lovers pay careful attention to melodies, harmonies, and intricate instrumentalists, most of us use music as background sound and unwind and enjoy. If on the other hand, you "relax" mentally during a lecture, you'll exit with little recall of what was said.

When listening to information there are a few tips that can aid in understanding and remembering what was said. Since this isn't a dialogue, it is even more essential to actively participate in the listening process. Consideration is crucial. One step is to anticipate the speaker. If the lecture is on personality types, and you've read that there are many types of personalities, you are better prepared to listen and understand.

The listening patterns and pitfalls are observable in others. It is harder to see in ourselves. Next time you are talking to a friend, and you're sure that he is not listening, take a moment to think about what you are saying and how he is responding. If you find that you are not being listened to, try to suspend judgements. Learning to be an active, empathetic listener is worth the time and effort it takes. Are you listening?
Students speak

Do you think the preacher should have been allowed to continue preaching?

By Janet Hirsch

I don't think he should have been allowed to speak. He caused a commotion. He also didn't have a permit.

Angela Pucci
Junior/business education

He was given plenty of time to explain his message, and any more talk would have lead to chaos. The police had the right to ask him to leave.

Bob Cochran
Graduate/social sciences

I don't think he should have been able to speak at all. His comments were too offensive and insulting violence in the students.

Tammy Ginkel
Junior/office systems

Even though I believe in free speech, it was made obvious that he needed a permit. He should have followed the rules of the college.

Jim Carlton

Campus preacher conducts power play with mall talk

To the editor:
The preacher who came to campus claimed he was preaching the word of God. He was insulting, condemning, and judgemental. And he claimed he was sinless.

He condemned those who did not interpret scripture as he did and ignored those who quoted alternative biblical verses. He accepted only those biblical verses. He accepted only those biblical interpretations as he did and ignored those who quoted alternative biblical interpretations. He was a political pacifist because he believed that religious freedom was necessary to function. Conversely, as a responsible SGA legislator, I could not allow the SGA's unapproved surplus to be chipped at any more than it already had been during the anxiety-filled budget sessions of last spring. Torn between these two ends I felt it my responsibility not to act selfishly and place myself in a position where my morals and ethics could be questioned by the entire student body.

Point for point Ms. Schlander's attempts at rectifying events for the student body tell slightly less than the whole story:

WMSC-FM did indeed have two bans last year, the most recent of which M and technical staff had to deal with a financial crisis of no more and more college students into the armed forces, lured by promises of peace, and on the belief that even the Marines and Air Force in the past, I had no dreams about making ends meet. The money at WMSC's disposal, and insighted violence in the students. It is a very good thing he came to this campus so that people could see first hand an example of a growing political movement of religious fanatics who burn books, vote, lobby, and order other people how they should vote, and abuse God's name to back up their tyranny. This preacher is not alone. He came with a back-up committee. He is "paid" to go from campus to campus "preaching." There are thousands upon thousands like him in our country today. There is another political movement that opposes religious fanatics gaining power. They are People for the American Way. The director of the Student Center, the money at WMSC's disposal, and insighted violence in the students. This preacher is not alone. He came with a back-up committee. He is "paid" to go from campus to campus "preaching." There are thousands upon thousands like him in our country today.

This was not preaching for God. This was a political power play. This preacher stated that no Christian could become a political pacifist because Christ was the head of the Lord's army. He implied that no Christian could vote 'yes' on the nuclear freeze. He implied that no Christian could vote 'yes' on the nuclear freeze. He implied that no Christian could vote 'yes' on the nuclear freeze.

Get the Marines off campus

To the editor:
I would like to voice my strong objections to the presence of the United States Marine Corps and Air Force here on the MSC campus. I base this objection on my firm commitment to peace, and on the belief that even though MASC is a forum for learning and education, I do not think it appropriate to invite the teachers of war to our school.

I believe that continued budget cuts of the Reagan administration in education and student loans will force more and more college students into the armed forces, lured by promises of money and false guarantees. By coming to the MSC campus, the Marines and Air Force are taking advantage of those students because they know that thanks to the cuts and the economy, students are left with few options open to them.

Emergency vehicles should be present at football games

To the editor:

My purpose for writing this letter is to bring Saturday night's football game to the attention of everyone here at MSC. The setting: Sprague field, 8 p.m. on October 30th. The Montclair Indians were up against undefeated Trenton State College playing for the conference title. Montclair pulled out a big 25-13 win. But something occurred during the game that marred the victory.

During a Trenton State drive, co-captain and defensive end Brian Carlson was injured after a play. Obviously in pain, he had to lay on the turf until help arrived, because yes, you guessed it, there was no ambulance at the game. It took nearly 20 minutes for the emergency vehicles to get to the field.

In summary, I personally do not know why an ambulance was not present during the game, maybe there was a good reason. I just want to say that this kind of incident should never happen again. The injury was Brian's leg, and I heard he was going to be alright, but suppose he was knocked unconscious or suffered a spinal injury. Think about it.

Station chief in response

Going beyond Ms. Schlanger's tirade, it is a little known fact, except within WMSC-FM, that we received new record shelving in our new studios capable of holding about one tenth of our present record library. Instead of going out and buying, even at the lowest possible cost, the remainder of the shelves that should have been given to us as an integral part of the station, I inquired as to the possibility of receiving free shelves. This proved to be very fruitful. WMSC did in fact receive free shelves from the college store's obsolete bookshelf reserves. It did not cost the students one red cent.

The "promotional gifts" that Ms. Schlanger talks of were neither, and furthermore were never paid for out of WMSC's budget. Despina Katris, the present executive treasurer of the SGA, can testify to this. These key chains referred to were not "circulated" to our staff, but rather were distributed the student body. We purchased 1,050 of these chains. Having a staff of only 75 people and less than 200 key chains left signifies to me that quite a few more people received this public relations tool than Ms. Schlanger would have anybody believe. In fact, WMSC staff members gave the key chains away during freshman orientation and SGA Day. If Ms. Schlanger used her power of perception more astutely, she would have noticed that these key chains appear in places other than the radio station and on people other than station members.

What I do know is that I take personal offense concerning her inaccuracies and the fact that this whole situation has been brought up once again. Mark Spinelli, the current executive president of the SGA, in front of the SGA legislature, exonerated me. This has been proof enough for most people.

Again, the sums of money that Ms. Schlanger refers to are trivial and quite minuscule in proportion to WMSC's budget and the crisis we have weathered. I honestly wish that Ms. Schlanger had chosen her words more carefully—or not at all. In the interviews I gave The Montclarion, I never once implicated Ms. Schlanger for any wrongdoing, I just accept as truth what she dares to pass off as fact.

'My Favorite Year’ O'Toole shines in latest effort

By Geoffrey L. Gould

Richard Benjamin, directing his first film, has put together a wonderfully entertaining piece of work. Starring Peter O'Toole and newcomer Mark Linn-Baker, My Favorite Year is a masterful mixture of humor and pathos, concerning a young man trying to succeed in his new career, and a veteran movie actor trying to overcome his personal problems.

Set in 1954, My Favorite Year is the favorite year of young writer Benji Stone, who writes for the live TV program "Comedy Cavalcade." Linn-Baker is perfect as the rookie writer trying to better his status.

Young Benji finds himself the keeper of that week's guest, movie actor Alan Swann, marvelously portrayed by Peter O'Toole. O'Toole's portrayal of Swann is convincing as a lovable drunk who wears a tearaway suit, so that he can take quick showers to sober up. Although he puts on a vain exterior for those who expect it, he enjoys life, even if it is through a bottle.

Having always admired Swann's daring, Benji manages to keep Swan in check about 75 percent of the time. The two become quite close, even sharing the secret that both came from backgrounds that their peers might otherwise misinterpret.

Swann helps Benji to win over King's secretary K.C. Downing, played coyly by Jessica Harper. She is appalled by the sort of steps Benji usually takes to get her attention, and only Swann's advice can keep Benji's advances to a more subtle quantity.

King Kaiser's chief conflict is with a major mobster, Karl Rojeck (menacingly portrayed by Cameron Mitchell). Rojeck snarls, puffing on his massive cigar, while his sheepish lawyer complains that the "Comedy Cavalcade's" recurring character, named Boss Hijack, is based on Rojeck.

Although threatened, King goes on with the sketch, and manages to hold his own despite receiving mourning flowers in his dressing room and facing such problems as falling stage lights.

My Favorite Year is a fascinating movie because director Benjamin manages to retain a stiff sense of reality. While it is not a rollicking slapstick film or farce, its humor is true to the heart and laughs abound. The script, by Norman Steinberg and Dennis Palumbo, is solid, with believable characters and a good feeling left inside afterward.

It would not be at all surprising for O'Toole to receive a nomination for his portrayal of Swann. We love his bluster, yet we see it hides an inner pain that only he can wrestle with. We feel for him, through our laughter, when we realize his terror at confronting a live broadcast and a live audience. "I'm not an actor, I'm a movie star!" he cries in panic, just before air-time.

My Favorite Year is a film filled with warmth, and is a movie not to be missed.

In the men's intramural football championship, the Panzer Tigers defeated Out of Retirement, 24-19. The key to the game was "big plays." In the first half, quarterback Sean McCarthy rolled out and hit John Gagis with a 30-yard pass to close out the half. McCarthy said, "The key was the protection, Rick Gorab, Chris Sidler, and Ron Campbell all did a great job of blocking. They gave me the protection to pick out my receivers. John "the Snake" Gagis and Vic Signorello." On the defensive side all six players shined with excellence. Gary Brennan intercepted two passes, Rick Gorab had one. The biggest one, though, came with 53 seconds left in the game. Out of Retirement was driving for the scoring threat. It was Erbig's second interception of the game.

Gary Brennan said, "The rush was outstanding. Dave Drysdock and Eric "Mike" Piccolo did an outstanding job of getting to their quarterback. Eddie Glasspool played a great game at linebacker, making it easy for myself and the other defensive backs to sit back and pick off passes." The Panzer Tigers finished their season at 10-0.

In the coed intramural football championship game the Ultimates defeated the SILC team 34-30. Touchdowns were scored by Sean McCarthy, Judy Schuler, and two by Donna Emmons. Donna Emmons made a sliding catch off a pass thrown by Sean McCarthy for the first Ultimate score.

Later in the half, McCarthy, finding no one open, scrambled 15 yards for the second score of the half. The touchdown put the Ultimates up 15-9. SILC scored two quick touchdowns to even the score at the half.

In the second half the Ultimates got on the board quickly. Tim Dolan threw a touchdown pass to Donna Emmons for her second touchdown catch of the game.

Dolan again threw a bullet, this time to Judy Schuler, who made a diving catch for the final score of the game. John Gagis, wide receiver for the Ultimates, said, "A total team effort was shown by the Ultimates again, as was the case all year." The remaining team members, Steve Nahilla, Maryanne Podwick, Steve Will, Janice Austin, Tina Staines, John Gagis, Robyn Sayers, Pat Genco, and Gary Brennan also played well.

The Ultimates finished their season at 9-0.

The Indians shut out Trenton State College last Wednesday 2-0, defeating the Lions for the first time since 1975. Freshman John Ioannou was the only scorer; his first goal 87:35 into the game and his second two minutes later. He scored from Harold Charters. MSC goalkeeper Eric Nelson had four saves out of six shots on goal.

MSC 1 Glassboro 1

Saturday MSC tied Glassboro State College, the defending NCAA Division III champs. The Indians haven't defeated GSC since 1974.

GSC earned its only goal from a shot in the first half by Pat Lacroix, seven yards from the net after a scramble for the ball. MSC knotted the score on a similar play by Charters. This was Charters' first goal of the season.

The Indians clinched their first winning season since 1975 with an overall 8-3-2 record and a 4-1-2 conference record. The team will face Rutgers-Newark Saturday.

The Indians broke their undefeated record last Tuesday, losing to archrival Trenton State College 23-35 in a meet at Trenton with Seton Hall University and St. Peter's College.

TSC took first and second place overall with Patty Leisher finishing third for MSC, covering the 3.2 mile course in 19:14. Teammate Carla Gambill placed fourth behind Leisher in 20:01.

The next runner for the Indians was Dana Caruso, who finished eighth in 20:32, followed by Pat Salmon in 12th place running a 21:08. Amy McLaughlin was 16th in 22:24, Laura Frish was 20th, and freshman Cyndi Maddox placed 21st.

MSC took first, second, and sixth against Seton Hall and swept the top three places against St. Peter's. The Indians record is now 7-1.
Indians stifle TSC in bid for championship

By John Connolly

The Indians have all but won the NJ State Athletic Conference championship by defeating Trenton State College 25-13 in a battle of the unbeatens before 8,413 spectators Saturday night at Sprague Field.

The Indians (6-0-2 overall, 4-0 conference), have taken a full game lead over the TSC Lions (7-1 overall, 3-1 conference) in the run for the conference crown, with each having two league games remaining.

Jumping out to a 13-0 lead in the first quarter, MSC never looked back. The first strike came at 3:53 when quarterback Mark Casale found Ken Oliver from 14 yards out for the score. Oliver also had five receptions for the night, gaining 48 yards to raise his career total to a record 711 yards.

Cornerback Joe Banaciski then intercepted a pass from TSC's quarterback Bob Faherty and raced 34 yards from the four for the touchdown.

In the second quarter, place-kicker Dan Deneher booted field goals of 44 and 40 yards out to increase the Indians' lead to 19-6.

MSC narrowed the deficit to 19-13 midway through the fourth period on an 11-yard touchdown pass to Bob Sellari from Faherty. Faherty threw for over 315 yards, completing 22 of 46 passes for the Lions.

The tide seemed to turn in favor of the Lions as their defense sparked, but, led by the skilled running of Bob Vannoy, the Indians marched 57 yards on eight plays to put the game, and most likely the conference championship, out of Trenton's reach. Vannoy rushed for 158 yards on 24 carries, scoring the final touchdown with 3:14 remaining in the contest. Coach Fred Hill of the Indians said, "I was quite pleased with the way our kids played. Our offensive line did an excellent job against a supposedly good defense. We shut down their running game and we shut down the pass when we had to."

The victory over TSC extended Coach Hill's conference winning streak to 11 of 11.

This week the Indians will take on fans at Sprague Field. The Indians took the game and are now well on their way to the conference championship.

Rescue squad delay leaves player on field

It was a sight that sports fans hate to see—a player lying injured on the field. At last Saturday's football game over 8,000 fans watched Brian Carlson, a defensive end and co-captain for the Indians, lie in agony on the field for over 40 minutes waiting for the arrival of an ambulance.

According to Nina Geier, head trainer for the Indians, it is standard policy to have an ambulance at all games, but at Saturday's game the ambulance did not arrive at game time. "We noticed that the ambulance hadn't arrived at the kick-off and sent someone to the gym to call the Montclair squad, but they couldn't be reached by the police radio operator," Geier said.

Geier said that the trainers tried to reach the ambulance crew repeatedly but they were already answering another call. "I was very upset that we didn't have a crew at the start of the game," Geier said, "but we have very little control over them. They have a priority to answer emergency calls first."

After Carlson was injured, the Montclair squad was called again, but the squad was still not back from the previous call. Medic Seven, a squad based at Mountainside Hospital in Montclair, responded to the same call as the Montclair volunteer squad and could not answer the call from Sprague Field. The police operator then contacted the Little Falls ambulance squad, which responded.

Geier said that Carlson was not moved from the field because of the nature of his injury. "If an injury is cont. on p. 19
