Seven percent tuition hike foreseen at MSC

By Frank Rosa

Students will be facing a seven percent increase in tuition—the third increase in the last three years—along with increased college services as a result of Governor Thomas Kean’s proposed budget, according to last March’s New Jersey 100/1000 Study, author William Parzynski, a professor in the math and computer science department, said, “There is an extremely high demand for computer science majors, yet we had to turn many away at the beginning of the year.”

In addition to the cut, Dr. Elliot Minberg, vice president for administration, said, “It is not allocated to MSC for the purchase of computers last year in both academic and administrative areas due to a clerical error made by the state.” He said the school was not only unable to retrieve the money, but also lost the same amount in December.

Fred Mazza, a junior business major reacting to the cuts, said, “There is a cut from the funding of new business courses. I registered for 12 credits and got only three,” he said.

Although he is not pleased by the recent cuts, T. Edward Hollander, New Jersey chancellor of higher education, said, “The governor bent over backwards to minimize the impact of the budget reductions to the institutions and the students.”

Hollander was very thankful the cutbacks were not the three percent. See Seven percent hikes p.7

Threat of radioactive jewelry sparks concern

By Peter Stankov

A report about radioactive cloisonne jewelry in The New York Times has triggered the concern of campus retail officials. The article in the Jan. 26 issue of the Times stated, “The uraninite glaze used in some of the brightly decorated cloisonne type jewelry gives off a low level of radiation if there is gold or beige in the color pattern.”

Nancy Carver, assistant business manager at MSC, said she met with Harold Ostroff, Student Center director, and Dean Daniel Stepnowski, director of student services, to discuss the concerns. For WPC, this means that the pub will lose 40 to 50 percent of its business.

According to the Signal, the TSC newspaper, the importers of cloisonne jewelry, said, “Our public health goal is to minimize all unnecessary radiation exposure.”

Health department specialists projected that the New Yorkers to discard certain types of inexpensive jewelry because of the risks had found them to be radioactive. Still, McCormick said the jewelry would be destroyed.

The last time we purchased any of this jewelry was in February of 1981. We have no documentation to see who the supplier was,” McCormick added. He said, “We might have sold ten pieces in that time. It doesn’t sell very well.”

Irene Rodriguez, one of the vendors who sells cloisonne jewelry, said, “My importer has put all the merchandise through tests and they were negative.”

She said she would be receiving a letter from the importer certifying that her jewelry had been tested and found to be non-radioactive.

In the Times article, however, The New York Times Health department urged New Yorkers to discard certain types of inexpensive jewelry because of the risks had found them to be radioactive.

health commissioner has been educating the public about the risks of radioactive jewelry. Still, the jewelry found to be radioactive.

When paying more for their education, students will receive less for their money because the 1.5 percent cut, which amounts to $317,000, will force the school to reduce the number of adjunct teachers, cut back on the purchase of library books, and delay routine maintenance repairs of classrooms.

David W.Dickson, president of the college, said the cutbacks in the hiring of adjunct teachers, would affect the students most severely. “This will be responsible for eliminating a number of sections in courses with heavy student demands such as business and computer science, which are already restricted to majors only,” he said.

Glover foresees the pub closing in three years, when the proposals are enacted upon. The seven percent increase (two percent per year) will be in a holding pattern for the rest of the semester. For WPC, this means that the pub will lose 40 to 50 percent of its business.

Larry Glover, assistant director of auxiliary services, expect the pub to lose 40 to 50 percent of its customers.

Glover foresees the pub closing in two years, when the “grandfather clause” expires, but he expects to compensate for the loss when the proposals are enacted upon. Other area colleges are also in the process of changing their pubs to suit the new law.

Trenton State College has a committee comprised of four staff members and five students, under the supervision of Cindy Woolbright, director of student life, which is now formulating programming alternatives for its pub. One of the changes being considered is turning it into a “food and entertainment facility, which serves pizza, shows movies, and has dances,” according to The Signal, the TSC newspaper.

TSC’s Rat will remain in its present form until May 20th, the final day of the semester.

Similarly, Fairleigh Dickinson University is setting up a planning board consisting of campus fraternities and sororities.

Reorganization alters administrative chores

By Margaret Ready

Areas of the college administration have recently undergone a structural reorganization. "The Reorganization Plan," a restructuring of the MSC administration, was released in a memo from Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of the college.

Robert MacVane, formerly the vice president for academic services, has now become the senior assistant to the president for special projects. Dickson said MacVane's salary has not been decreased and that his new duties will include coordinating the events for MSC's 75th anniversary and commencement.

MacVane said, "We are in the process of getting a speaker" for the 75th anniversary." He hopes Governor Thomas Kean will attend the MSC celebration.

MacVane is also working in conjunction with the student affairs office in publishing a 75th anniversary calendar, listing the events that will take place as part of the year's celebration.

MacVane's former duties included working with the registrar's office and the admissions office. He was responsible for dealing with the centers of adult continuing education, the media center and Sprague Library.

MacVane has been with MSC for 22 years. He was also involved with the intra-collegiate academic programs, which are in charge of the second careers program, Educational Opportunity Programs, administrative support, and inter-collegiate academic programs, which include tutoring.

Another phase of the reconstruction involves the office of academic affairs. This new office is responsible for dealing with the centers of student services.

English tutors needed to aid weekend college

By Lori Henry

Are you a native English speaker, but don't have much time to spare on Saturday or Sunday? If so, the students of English as a Second Language (ESL) in the Weekend College need your help.

The English Conversation/Tutoring Project is looking for volunteers to assist non-native English speaking students in learning the English language. ESL students need help in conversation, vocabulary building and class assignments. Volunteers are asked to initiate conversation, explain common expressions and exchange cultural information.

This program has been in existence for three years and has proved to be quite beneficial to these students. "Many of these students do not meet native Americans and this program provides opportunities for the students to learn more about the American culture. It is a learning experience for both the student and the volunteer," said Dr. Alicia Savage, Assistant Director of the Intra-Collegiate Academic Programs.

Presently, there are 20 volunteers from the surrounding community who tutor these students, but the number of students who apply for tutoring is increasing and there are not enough volunteers. Volunteers will meet with the students one hour a week for six weeks at a mutually convenient time. ESL students are usually available on Saturday afternoons or Sunday mornings. Volunteers do not need to know a foreign language or be an English major.

If you are interested in volunteering, please contact Savage at 893-4431, or see her in Room 306, College Hall.

Spring semester begins with two more auto thefts

Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of the college, has changed the duties of former Vice President for Academic Services, Robert MacVane, to the assistant to the president for special services.

The SGA has invested our money in benefits for the students. Because so many students are commuters, they come to school and don't want to be bothered with anything else," Mark Spinelli, SGA president, said.

The SGA's job is to make students aware of its existence and its services. After that it's up to students to take advantage of the services.

David Stephens spins small fortune on Wheel of Fortune

By John Connolly

If you happened to be watching TV over the winter break, you may have seen MSC's David Stephens staring back at you from the set of WNBC's Wheel of Fortune. Who is David Stephens and what was he doing on your television set?

Although David didn't "break the bank," he did walk away with some very beautiful prizes valued at about $4,000.

Most game shows are located and filmed in California but, the Wheel of Fortune is one of the few shows that travels across the country to seek out possible contestants David heard they were in Philadelphia and traveled there in early December to try out.

Game shows generally want interesting people, a category David fits into quite easily. This professional magician, who enjoys fantasy games, collecting comic books and belongs to historical re-inactment societies, must have done well on his audition because about a month later, on Jan. 9 and 10, David was flying out to the west coast on what he called "a gamble."

"What people fail to realize is that the shows don't pay your way out to California," David said. "The $600 I spent traveling out there wiped me out financially. It was a very big gamble for me going out there but I am glad I did because it is a once in a lifetime opportunity and a unique experience," he said.

After arriving at the studio around one p.m., signing release forms to be on the air and going through make-up, the 5'8", 225 pound East Orange resident had to practice spinning the large wheel used on the Wheel of Fortune.

With his somewhat large size, David had no trouble setting the wheel into motion.

This was followed by a few hours of practice games and finally, some three to four hours after his arrival, the game began.

David seemed calm and relaxed and he even managed to joke with the host about his unusual interests. He admitted later he was a little nervous but, said he did not even realize he was on TV.

David relied on some of his magic to win the game and why not. He did come away with such prizes as a washer and dryer and a sleeper sofa.

He also received consolation prizes added to winnings but, this leaves David with one question, "What does one do with a case of lemon juice and Tuna Helper?"

Writing policy to be strictly enforced with freshman

By Dianne Szabo

At yesterday's SGA meeting, Harris Neckers vice-president of academic affairs, solicited comments concerning the new Writing policy which will affect incoming freshmen in Sept. 1983. The policy, which was passed by the board of trustees on June 10, 1980, states, "writing requirements must become part of courses throughout the college."

The policy suggests a minimum requirement of 1500 words per course. This requirement would be fulfilled through the writing of term papers, projects, and/or essay tests. Also, a course with a writing project would have to be completed in a student's junior year in order to graduate. For those who could not pass this requirement, a writing workshop would be set up.

Questions were raised by legislators as to the feasibility of this policy for courses in areas such as calculus and chemistry. However, most agreed that it is needed to improve the writing skills of all students, especially those who are not required to write many term papers, and whose exams consist mainly of multiple choice and true or false questions.

The policy, although passed in 1980, has not been properly enforced. This is partly due to opposition by professors and students. Pete Feinstein, government and Administration Committee Chairperson, brought up the point that the board could do something to help this policy along by asking professors to enforce it more strictly. He also said this policy could boost the academic standing of the college.

Concern was voiced by legislator Rob Thibault about Governor Thomas Kean's proposed budget, which would cut 1.5 percent of MSC's allotment from the state, and cause a seven percent increase in tuition.

Maureen Ryan, director of external affairs, said her committee is working on solutions for these budget cuts, one of which is raising the SAT scores.

In other business, a bill was passed calling for a student referendum to raise SGA fees from $2 to $3 per credit, up to 12 credits.

In order to get students out to vote for the referendum, Feinstein suggested the date tentatively be set for the week of Mar. 7, while more students would be staying inside the Student Center because of the weather. Voting will be open to all undergraduate students. Bills were also passed providing for the election of freshman SGA legislators in the last week of September, and for all SGA legislative appointments to be made in the first 30 days, or the first six SGA meetings of each semester.

Now you can see for yourself what everyone's been talking about.

Career services offers practical work experience

By Eileen Bruck

"I think the services provided by the Career Services office are invaluable. However, I would have benefited more if I had used them earlier instead of waiting until I was a senior. "You need not have to experience what this 1981 graduate has expressed. Get familiar with the office's programs and resources as a freshman or sophomore in order to give yourself plenty of time to talk to people who know about the work you are considering. Career Services Alumni Network, a listing of several hundred alumni in various careers, can significantly help you in that regard. When you give yourself enough time, you can change your mind (or major) if you want to.

Starting early also allows you time to do some reality testing. You will then be able to volunteer or do part-time/summer work in your area to check out your interests. Speaking of part-time jobs, one day last week our office listed several opportunities, including paste-up artist, photographer, campus sales representative, library assistant, computer programmer, secretary, and teacher assistant for emotionally disturbed children. Whether you are seeking work experience related to your major, testing out different work environments, or looking just for the job which produces income, Joan Reier will be responsible for part-time jobs, can help you. Come into the office and ask for the part-time/summer job registration form. That will get the ball rolling.

If you are having trouble making a commitment to a particular major, come to our seminars on choosing a major and identifying careers related to your major (any major, including psychology, classics, philosophy, French, finance, sociology, etcetera). Come learn how to identify the skills you've developed that are valuable to employers.

Attend seminars titled "Good Works: The Helping Professions and You" and "Business May Be Your Business, Too" or work in our extensive career library to discover career options related to your values and interests. Any one of these suggestions will help you begin planning your career.

It's your future. Plan early.

Seven percent hike

originally expected. If it had been, the chancellor said he would have had to eliminate salary increases for the next six months of this year besides passing on the reductions to the college. Hollander said, "The biggest weakness in this state is the lack of advocacy for higher education. Unless students are willing to become advocates for our colleges, the colleges will always be hard hit, and at the end, they will have to pay higher tuition."

Last Monday, Dickinson, who is also vice president of the council of state colleges, got together with officials from other NJ state colleges to plan lobbying efforts for a bigger budget for the new fiscal school year, which starts on July 1.

Dickinson expressed optimism that the colleges could recoup some or all of their losses by that time. The governor believes there can be legitimate cuts in other state operation. "Compared to other departments and agencies in NJ, the state colleges are very cost-conscious," Dickinson said.

Dickinson echoed Hollander's pessimism on NJ's overall attitude toward its academia, saying "higher education does not have the same clout in this state as highways and prisons."

"New Jersey doesn't encourage its students to remain in-state to further their education, like the other states do. Instead, a lot of students go out of NJ and never come back. It's what I call a 'brain drain,'" Dickinson said.

"An extensive study of the dollar appropriations by each state in the country revealed that all the states have been increasing their budget for higher education. For over the last ten years. New Jersey, however, has been giving nine percent less to higher education than ten years ago, even though we're one of the richest states in the country," Dickinson said.

It's your future. Plan early.

Raise in drinking age is needed to save teenage lives in New Jersey

The waves made by raising New Jersey's drinking age from 19 to 21 are beginning to be felt by college pubs and Rathskellers throughout the state.

Many college pubs will be able to continue serving alcohol for one or two more years, since the "grandfather clause" will still enable a large percentage of their students to drink. Unfortunately, when the grandfather clause expires, college Rathskellers, as they exist today, will become extinct.

William Paterson State College expects to close its pub in two years. When it does, at least 40 students who work at the WPC pub will lose their jobs. The pub will lose 40 to 50 percent of its customers in September, when the new freshman class enters the college.

Fairleigh Dickinson University, Trenton State College, WPC, and MSC have all set up some type of planning board to save their pubs, and all agree that to survive, major changes must be made.

While it is true that drunk driving is a problem with young adults, it is not a problem with drinkers of all ages. However, the bottom line of the new law is that it will save lives. When the drinking age was raised from 18 to 19 in 1980, the number of deaths due to drunk driving among young adults was significantly reduced. Now, with the legal drinking age at 21, those numbers should be reduced even more. Yes, bars, clubs, and liquor stores will lose money because of the law, as will other merchants. With the high unemployment rate, this law is particularly untimely for them.

But the facts must be examined. In 1981 there were approximately 25,000 alcohol-related auto deaths. One third of those involved 18- to 20-year-old drivers.

It is said that young drivers who abide by the law and control their drinking must be punished for the recklessness of their peers.

It is also unfortunate that there may no longer be a future for Rathskellers and pubs, where students can socialize after a long day of classes or exams.

But even if only one life is saved by the law, it will have served its purpose.
To the Editor:

had a question concerning a specific course and its relationship to the outline throughout my college duration. Without results, and because this was dealing with general education, I then visited the guidance counselor in College Hall. I had anticipated setting up an appointment with the secretary, and prolonging this dilemma until next semester. My assigned counselor found the time to see me right then and there.

By Patricia Winters and Mike Wujek

People at 21 shouldn’t drink either. My children didn’t drink until they were old enough. I think it’s the parents’ job to decide when their children should be allowed to drink. Going out to drink is not a good sport, it should be done at home with the family.

Ruth Gelber
Non-Metriculated/art

It’s not right. If I’m responsible enough to go to war, I’m responsible enough to walk down the block to have a drink. My parents allow me to drink at home with their approval. Drinking has been abused, but you can still have a good time while at the same time be responsible.

Andrew D’Addio
Freshman/undeclared

The reasoning behind the raise to 21 was because of the increasing amounts of deaths in the 18-21 age group. The object was to reduce that. Not all 18, 19 and 20 year olds are irresponsible. Newly licensed drivers used to be able to drink at 18. In my opinion, one good aspect of the law is that it gets the excitement of driving out of their system before they are allowed to drink.

Karen Saminski
Junior/political science

Irresponsibility is not the question. Not all 18, 19 and 20 year olds are irresponsible. Newly licensed drivers used to be able to drink at 18. In my opinion, one good aspect of the law is that it gets the excitement of driving out of their system before they are allowed to drink.

The Montclarion

The purpose of this letter is to inform the college community of the problems that have occurred with the Marching Band during the 1982 season. These problems, disagreements between the college administration and the Marching Band directors, are currently affecting the future of the Marching Band.

We, the members of the Marching Band Council, feel that there is still a great interest in this organization. Over ninety percent of the people who participated in the Marching Band this past season are still interested in participating next season. On the other hand, as a result of the problems, many non-participants believe that the Marching Band is not worth their time and effort and should be discontinued. It wouldn’t be fair to all those students who are interested in Marching Band to discontinue the band because of what the directors did. The students, including the council members, were not involved in what happened, so why punish the students for what they didn’t do.

We would like to thank everyone who has supported us in the past and hope that the entire college community will be able to see beyond the difficulties of this past season and give us their support as we plan for the 1983 Marching Band Season.

Theresa C. Steiger, Wendi P. Schultz, and Salvatore J. Sfraga, Marching Band

To the editor:

I have been on the MSC campus as the Episcopal College Chaplain since November 1982. In that time I have met with various people in administrative capacities. I have also helped them get situated and oriented. That has been enormously helpful to me. The Montclair Student Chaplaincy Council, which represents the recognized campus ministries and to which I belong, has also been helpful in getting started.

The Montclarion printed a fine article about me and my presence at the college. There is only one thing lacking, getting to know the Episcopalians and those interested in forming a student group.

I would like to help start an Episcopal Chaplaincy Group, under whatever title, that would meet to explore various religious, spiritual, social, and political issues from a Christian and Anglican perspective, but not limit ourselves to that. The group would also be open to those wishing to find out more about the Anglican (Episcopal) tradition in a non-proselytizing manner.

If you are interested in participating in such a group, please speak to me when I am on campus. I am the one wearing the funny white collar with a gray or black shirt. If you don’t see me use the sign-up sheet I will post on the Chaplain’s office door on the fourth floor of the Student Center. Or you can call me at St. Luke’s Church in Montclair (744-6220). We might even explore becoming a campus organization chartered by the SGA. Let me hear from you. I am on campus in the Student Center or Chaplain’s office 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Thursday mornings.

To the editor:

In spite of all the gripes I have heard about MSC, I still think it is the best of the NJ state colleges. Most of the grievances that students have are relatively unimportant to their studies as well as to their social lives. Such petty inconveniences as long lines at the bookstore, ice in the parking lots, and add-drop registration inefficiency are to be expected whenever large groups of people assemble for the purpose of education, business, etcetera. They are nothing more than characteristics of fast paced life on the east coast.

I am also tired of hearing about parking tickets. I have seen that whenever someone gets a ticket it is because he or she did not buy a parking decal, or was too lazy to find a legal space and walk a few hundred feet more. I have to park in the Quarry lot or by Clove Road most of the time, and the walk never hurts me if I miss the shuttle. If only one hundred people a day were to park wherever it was most convenient to do so, everyone would be inconvenienced to a great extent.

I like the business-like atmosphere at MSC as well as the modern campus. I gather from talking with students and professors at other colleges that most of our departments are regarded very highly, especially the math and business departments. We need cooperation. We don’t need idiotic complaints.

To the editor:

Looking back upon my annual visits to her office reminded me of her pleasantness and willingness to help me, even when it meant taking the time to look up seemingly trivial information in the masses of files in the Guidance office. Well, just as in the past, Mrs. DiVirgilio helped me work out this dilemma in her usual efficient demeanor, and I was able to take care of it this semester. It is reassuring to know that, in the hustle and bustle of college life, people are there to take the time. Three cheers for Mrs. DiVirgilio.

talents to the MSC campus last Friday and Saturday when they performed in Memorial Auditorium. The NTD's productions are intended for non-hearing audiences, presented "Parzival From the Horse's Mouth," a parody of the famous Arthurian hero and his quest for the Holy Grail.

The NTD was founded in 1967 by David Hays. He wanted people to look merely interpret their lines, but sign them as well. This task is remarkably fulfilled by Lizette Smith and Bari K. Williford, who make sure that every line of the play is seen as well heard.

"Parzival" is told from the point of view of the Fisher King, who in the traditional right. He prevails in the end however, by finding the Holy Grail, and curing the wound of the Fisher King, who could only be healed by Parzival's question, "What can I do for you?" The flats that were for quick changes were moved and allowed for quick changes in scenery. The colorful costumes were also designed for quick changes and helped to keep the action flowing in an even manner. The props were very inventive, especially the old aluminum buckets used as knights' helmets. Some of the actors become props, for example Sand Inchis briefly portrayed King Arthur's sword in the stone.

"Parzival" is not just about the quest for the Holy Grail. It is about the pursuit of happiness, the quest for the human soul and the search for individual peace of mind. The actors interact their feelings throughout the play by sharing their own personal "quest" with the audience. It was a moving experience because they let the audience know what it is like being deaf. They also expressed their loneliness and fear, as well as their political and social views. The performance was very entertaining, but more importantly it gave the audience an insight into the world of the deaf and how they perceive themselves. It also gave the audience a new way of looking at themselves and the world around them.

In the past, the NTD has won a Tony; made TV specials for NBC, CBS, and PBS; performed in all 50 states; made twelve tours of Europe; toured the Orient, Australia and New Zealand twice; and given more than 25,000 performances at schools and theatres throughout the world.

Young Transforms Sound

By Jim Benson

The release of Neil Young's latest album, Trans, serves to mark two major changes in his career. The first change comes in Young's leaving of the label that has recorded him, Trans, which he has been with since the release of his first solo album, Neil Young, in 1968. The second change is the release of the young Geffen Records. This change of labels for Young is far from being insignificant, as he is in the traditional Geffen, symbolic. In leaving Reprise Records, Young leaves behind a string of albums that have come to be known as "traditional" Neil Young classics and he embarks on Geffen with a dramatic and drastic change of sound. Trans, as an album is a combination of the new progressive and futuristic sound of Neil Young, while at the same time it retains some of Young's more "traditional" flavored songs (done to serve a purpose).

No two songs on the album represent these two distinct sounds better than "This Little Thing Called Love," and "Computer Age." "This Little Thing Called Love" is a trademark Neil Young genre, a pleasing-sounding country-laced rock song complete with steel slides recorded with a Trans single, represents only a small portion of the album and does not mirror even 70 percent of its material. "Computer Age" better identifies the majority of the songs on the album and is an example of the new dramatic change of sound for Neil Young. "Computer Age," along with six out of the album's nine songs, marks the first time Young has recorded with synthesizers, with an excellent product resulting. The sound of "Computer Age..." We'll Get Control..." "Transformer Man..." "Computer Cowboy..." "Sample and Hold" and "Mr. Soul" is very highly synthesized, with the lead and background vocals recorded through a computer, leaving the voice indistinguishable at times as that of Young. In some songs the only noticeable Neil Young quality or touch can be heard in the ever-present trademark sound of Young's machine-gun-like style of playing his black Gibson Les Paul guitar. "Sample and Hold" is another look at our future. The song is about ordering a "unit to sample and hold. Hair-Blonde, Eyes-Blue, Weight-110, Disposition-General" that the imperfect emotional relationship between men and women will someday disappear? "Perfection in every detail. Fabricated from the cue of the hair, to the tip of the nail. Because our units never fail, We know you'll be happy." Young's commentary on the future can best be summed up in the last lines of "Computer Age'"... And day by day, this horizon's getting clearer/Computer Age, Computer Age, Computer Age."

This new sound for Young may initially turn some off to the album (cries of "This isn't Neil Young" have already been heard), but with each additional listening Trans does have a tendency to grow on you. It is disappointing that some may not listen past Young's new sound, for in so doing, they will miss the message that "trans" is trying to convey. That message is prevalent in the general theme that runs through Young's new-sounding songs, one which exposes the reality of the world we live in and its projected future. These songs offer a picture of our high-tech computerized society, with its heavy dependence on machines for our most trivial daily routines. Young alludes that through this reliance we become dehumanized in the process, with the prospect of totally losing our humanity in the not-so-distant future. This theme is apparent in "We R in Control." With the lead vocal of the song being computerized, it sounds as if this could actually be a computer talking to us, telling us how they control everything—the data banks, the think tanks, the flow of air, the chief of Staff, the TV sky, the FBI—"the list goes on. The song's last few lines speak for themselves: "We will prevail and perform our function/We are in control/Chemical computer thinking battery."

Young's newer-sounding songs may offer us a look at where we are headed, whereas his "traditional" sounding songs tell us where we have been and possibly what we might tend to lose in the pending "Computer Age." The song "Hold on to Your Love" is telling us to hold on to our emotions and humanity in the face of the future. "Like an inca, perhaps a combination of "Cortez the Killer," is laced with anti-nuclear references and speaks out against the reality that our very future is threatened not only from losing our humanity to machines, but to losing our world in a nuclear nightmare. "The Gypsy told my fortune. She said that nothing showed. Who put the bomb on the sacred altar? Why should we die if it comes our way? Why should we care. About a little button. Being pushed by someone we don't even know?"

The cover of Trans also offers a hint of the two sounds of the album, and is a graphic painting of the message Neil Young is trying to send us. The cover art the Killer," is laced with anti-nuclear threats and from losing our humanity. The cover speaks for itself, but when Trans is listened to, the cover's meaning and Young's theme become more apparent. One of the highlights of Trans is Young's remake of his song "Mr. Soul," recorded by Buffalo Springfield. Recently we stripped the labels off our beer and asked young New Yorkers to try it. 8 out of 10 liked it. They said it was a good tasting, smooth beer.

When we tried it on more beer drinkers, they were surprised to find out it was Schaefer Beer. They said things like, “I’m shocked that this is Schaefer beer, because I really didn’t think that I liked it, and I honestly do.”

Today’s Schaefer is being brewed by the Stroh family, who have devoted their 200 years of brewing experience to making Schaefer better than ever. Try it. Today’s Schaefer will make a Schaefer drinker out of you, too.

Tell us about your naked beer test and we may print it. Write to: Schaefer Naked Beer Test, P.O. Box 1703, Grand Central Station, N.Y., N.Y. 10163.

Brown breaks high score as Squaws down SHU 66-58

By John DelGuercio

MSC's guard Tracey Brown surpassed Pat Colasurdo, moving into second place on the MSC All-Time scoring list in last Wednesday's game against Seton Hall University. Brown scored 24 points, boosting her lifetime total to 1,656 points.

With about 11 minutes and 30 seconds left on the clock, Brown sank a jump shot to give her a total of 1,648 points, pulling ahead of Colasurdo's 1,646.

In the game the Indians played a strong defensive first half, holding Seton Hall to only 23 points against their 34. The second half was marked by a slow conservative pace by MSC's offense, and at times an aggressive MSC defense to maintain their lead over SHU.

This game was successful and the Indians managed to hold onto the lead for the entire second half. Although Seton Hall did outscore MSC 35-32 in the half, the Indians never relinquished the lead and did not allow Seton Hall within three points. The final score was MSC 66, Seton Hall 58.

A major factor in the game came down to free throws. MSC was able to hit 16 out of 20, while Seton Hall managed only 6 of 11 from the line. This ten point difference helped MSC pull off the victory.

MSC's scoring leaders were Brown with 24 points, Sharon Ross with 18 points, and Jean Wohlgemuth with 12 points. Seton Hall's offense was led by Gloria Bradley who scored 16 points and had 15 rebounds.

Earlier in the week, on January 24th, the Indians went away to play Queen's College. Again they played a fine first half, taking a 45-26 lead. The Indians held onto the lead in the second half, despite a strong effort by Queens, who scored 42 points to the Indians' 31.

In this game Wohlgemuth scored 23 points and had 10 rebounds, and Brown scored 22 points to help MSC take the game 76-68. The Indians' record is now 12-6.

In Jan. 27's issue of The Montclarion, Team co-captain Mickey David won both the 1 mile and 2 mile race. Although the 1 mile was not won by a MSC runner, David ran the 2 mile in 9:08.

Indians break two game skid by downing Stockton

By Jim Coriddi

"This thing is not going to be decided until the last day of the season," MSC basketball coach Ollie Gelston said referring to the conference layoff picture.

Presently there are five teams jockeying for position in the NJ State Athletic Conference dogfight in which only the top four finishers qualify for the playoffs. The Indians, at this writing, are tied for third with Jersey City State College and Trenton State College (5-3). Glassboro State College leads the way with a 7-1 log, followed by William Paterson College at 5-2. The Indians manhandled a cooperative SSC team, 62-39. MSC brought an eight-point lead into the locker room, and increased that margin in the second half, as they connected on 62 percent from the field.

Hosting their third straight game, MSC finally proved that the basket does not in fact move when the home side is shooting foul shots, as they canned 20-28 from the stripe. Kevin Ketcho was perfect on all nine of his free throw attempts.

"In the Kean game our defense was non-existent. There was no intensity. We did not apply any pressure," said Gelston.

Conversely, the Stockton game brought out the best in the MSC defensive unit. The guards terminated the ball and the forwards were simply dominant. Coe was "just outstanding," according to Gelston. Coe had the chore of covering SSC standouts Mark Wanzer, an all-conference selection last year. Coe showed absolutely no defensive lapses.

Kean visited Panzer Gym on Saturday with the intent of avenging an early-season 25-point drubbing administered by the Indians. Revenge was ever so sweet as the visitors bolted to a 40-33 lead at the half, and fought off a late Kean charge to register a 62-54 shocker.

The Indians, playing without starting center Ty Durkac, suffered through a late in the game, 49-48, only to watch revenge was ever so sweet as the visitors bolted to MSC took the lead late in the game, 49-48, only to watch Kean (8-10) score nine of the next 11 points to ice it.

John Ziemba led MSC with 13 points, and Charles Coe and Robert Smith added 12 apiece.

Monmouth’s one point lead sinks swimmers

The women’s swim team have had two heartbreaks in a 74-74 tie against Trenton State College last week, and a loss by one point to Monmouth College on Saturday.

Against TSC, the team of Nancy Graebner, Cindy Lepore, Randi Pearlstein and Lisa DeNero claimed the 200 meter medley relay in 2:02.94, defeating TSC by 6 seconds. Graebner returned for three events, placing second in the 50m. backstroke with a time of 31.72, taking third in the 200m. individual medley and winning the 200m. backstroke in 2:33.33.

Lepore also placed in three events: the 100m. IM where she finished second in 1:11.53, and both the 50m. and 200m. breaststrokes.

Other top finishers for MSC were Frances DeRosa, who took third in the 1000m. freestyle and Lisa DeNero who claimed third and fourth places in the 50m. and 100m. freestyle events respectively.

The Taylor twins: Alison and Janet, were outstanding contributors to the
