Library staff claims asbestos hazard remains unrectified

By James S. White, Jr.

Library personnel and students alleged that Elliot Mininberg, vice president for administration and finance, and Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, did not adhere to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reports in dealing with the asbestos problem in Sprague Library. The EPA said, "any exposure to asbestos involves some risk and no safe level of exposure has been established."

Mininberg and Quinn repeatedly maintained that asbestos levels in the library are "not unsafe." Mininberg cited Occupational Health and Safety (OSHA) standards for workers in an industrial setting to back up his claim. Library personnel, however, said that OSHA standards do not apply to the library.

Janet Bosciano, vice president of Communications Workers of America Union (CWA), said the union is filing a grievance against the administration to force them to recognize the EPA report.

Mininberg: "We have to take chances. If we don't, we'll wipe out everything that you and I enjoy."

Mininberg admitted that the (OSHA) guidelines do not apply to the library, but said, "What do you suggest we use?"

In reference to the EPA report, Mininberg said, "Everything is a hazard. Exhaust is bad. Are we going to stop driving? We have to take chances. If we don't, we'll wipe out everything that you and I enjoy."

Asbestos: the white powder that won't make you high

By Frank Rosa

The public was unaware of the dangers of asbestos until 1964, when Dr. Irving J. Selikoff, director of the Environmental Science Laboratories of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine, released a study of 632 insulation workers in Paterson, NJ. The study found the group suffered from unusually high cases of asbestosis and cancer caused by inhaling asbestos.

Since then, many extensive studies have been made on the matter. They believe that once the particles get into the air, it is virtually useless to get rid of them. Contact with a person who works with asbestos may likely cause that person to inherit those diseases.

However, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in their March 16, 1979 Guidance Document to Asbestos-Containing Materials in School Buildings said the "EPA and the scientific community believe that any exposure to asbestos involves some health risk."

community believe that any exposure to asbestos involves some health risk. No safe level of exposure (or threshold exposure level) has been established. Further, it is impossible at this time to confidently estimate the exact degree of risk associated with low-level exposures.

Cut in notice may prompt teachers to strike

By Frank Rosa

A teacher's strike this semester may be the result of an amendment proposed by the board of higher education, which would reduce the number of advance notice days given to tenured and untenured faculty before being laid off.

If a strike does occur, Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of the college, said he will keep the school open.

"No responsible administrator can agree to a strike because strikes by state faculty are illegal," Dickson said. If the strike goes beyond three days, Dickson said the semester could be extended to June 30, if necessary. Although graduation ceremonies would be held on May 25 as planned, seniors would still have to finish up the term in order to receive their degrees.

Whether dormitories would remain open or not has still not been resolved.

The problem began in January of 1981 when the board voted for the State College Reductions in Force Regulations (RIF), which allowed state colleges to reduce their faculty, tenured as well as untenured, in the case of a "fiscal exigency." The Council of NJ State College Locals, the union representing MSC and other state college faculty, had not been invited to negotiate the proposed regulations, and subsequently, sued the state. But the state supreme court voted in favor of the board in August of 1982.

A strike by state college faculty at that time was averted by a stipulation in the 1976 contract between the state and the union which required that tenured teachers be given 195 days notice and multi-year contract employees 180 days notice prior to job termination. The union regarded this as a safeguard for the faculty because it made it more costly for the colleges to fire tenured teachers.

On March 17 of this year, the board proposed an amendment to the RIF regulations which would reduce advance notice for tenured and untenured faculty to 45 days, the same as most other state civil service employees are given prior to layoff.

The impetus behind the proposal was the current financial stability of the state colleges. Earlier this year, the state colleges suffered a 1.56 percent cut in state aid.

Dickson said at present neither MSC nor any of the eight other state colleges are financially strapped to have to fire tenured faculty. But, Dickson said, if another budget cut is imposed on the state colleges, it could force some of them to declare a fiscal emergency in order for the state to allow them to fire faculty "in some fields of study that might be in less demand."

According to T. Edward Hollander, chancellor of the department of higher education (DHIE), in his memorandum to the board, the old, longer advance notice requirements would have hampered the colleges in doing that.

"In order to affect economies through the layoff of personnel," Hollander said, "the state colleges would have had to declare a fiscal exigency and send out layoff notices by Nov. 15, 1982 in order to effect a layoff on or about June 1st of 1983 under the existing provisions of the contract. Since the salary savings from a layoff in June would be very small given the fact that the academic year is almost over, a college would be compelled to substantially increase the number of persons laid off in order to balance its budget. This would, in effect, shut down the colleges."

Dr. Catherine Becker, faculty union representative at the college, said, "We will be the only state in the nation where the chancellor can call a fiscal emergency at his whim. He wants to negotiate the proposed regulations, but the union has the legal right to strike."

The union regarded this as a safeguard for the faculty because it made it more costly for the colleges to fire tenured teachers. The board has already indicated that it will keep the school open.

Dr. Ruth says ignorance is biggest problem in human sexuality

By Lori Henry

"Sexually Speaking," WVNY's sexual talk show, faced numerous topics on issues ranging from intercourse to abortion. Dr. Ruth Westheimer, a noted sex therapist, was the Sunday night talk show, spoke about sexuality to MSC students at a lecture sponsored by CINA recently.

She talked about birth control, herpes, premature ejaculation, sexual intercourse, masturbation and menstruation. Her presentation was witty, candid and educational. She spoke openly about sexual functions and dysfunctions. Westheimer made the audience feel relaxed and comfortable.

She entertained the audience while educating them, too.

Westheimer preached against the pill because in 1967, when it was introduced as a form of birth control, researchers did not know about the many side-effects. Although there is no perfect form of contraceptive, she said insurance and the diaphragm are the best contraceptives. While talking about birth control, she also mentioned abortion. "Abortion should not be used as a form of birth control. But, abortion is still available for contraceptive failures," she said.

Westheimer has a philosophy about teaching human sexuality. She makes it a point never to ask a personal question or put someone on the spot during the course or class discussion. However, she said she will always find time afterward to talk privately to someone with a personal question or problem.

According to Westheimer, ignorance is the biggest problem in talking about human sexuality. There are so many myths and falsehoods about birth control, pregnancy, sexual diseases and other topics of sexuality. People are afraid to ask a question about something they are confused about because they fear others will laugh at them, she said.

Presently, she is a professor of human sexuality at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. She also teaches at Adelphi University and works as a therapist in private practice. Westheimer was once an instructor of the Planned Parenthood Association, where she was compelled by recurring questions on sexual matters to train as a sex therapist at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

About two years ago, while at Cornell University, she was asked to address "IF I can prevent an unwanted pregnancy, then I've done my job." She talked about birth control, her patients and the. Westheimer was once an instructor of the Planned Parenthood Association, where she was compelled by recurring questions on sexual matters to train as a sex therapist at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Proceeds will be awarded to the NJ chapter of the National Association of Blind Athletes. The chapter hopes to compete in the national championships for the blind in June, which will be held in Missoula, Montana.

Last year, transportation, hotel accommodations, and uniforms cost $15,000, according to Angelo Montagnino, head coach in the chapter. He anticipates the marathon will decrease the number of students it can help, but people have been very generous and continue to raise money with additional fundraising.

If the chapter is successful in the national championships, it will then compete in the International Olympics held every four years. The next international meet is scheduled for 1994.

SILC sponsors marathon to benefit blind athletes

By Corrine de Moell

The Student Intramural Leisure Council (SILC) held the Sixth Annual Volleyball Marathon recently to benefit blind athletes. SILC is expecting to raise at least $5,000—comparable to last year's figure of $4,300 from the marathon.

The team pledges, due by April 15, are estimated to raise the total from $2,000 to $5,000, according to Lisa DiBiscegle, SILC's president.

Sponsors paid each participant $1 for every hour played. Teams included the SGA, Alfa Kappa Psi, Kappa Lambda Psi, and groups for area high schools. WMSC provided non-stop music.

Seperate dean's list proposed for MSC's part-time students

By Cathy Clarke

"Part-time students feel they are neglected by the administration and by the SGA. This is one reason why I believe they should have their own Dean's List," Mark Spinelli, president of the SGA, said.

Spinelli and Dr. Roland Garrett, vice president for academic affairs are trying to devise a dean's list for part-time students. "If all goes well, the list will be put into effect for the fall semester," Garrett said.

Some would have liked to have gone to school recently but weren't accepted into the program when they graduated high school.

Garrett said the administration has not decided on a specific number of credits that would be required before a part-time student could be considered. "I don't know how many credits, but Garrett does know that the required grade point average would be 3.5, the same as it is for full-time students. A student who takes just one course and receives an A would not be eligible.

Mike Carbone, a part-time student, proposed the idea of a Dean's List to the SGA. "Right now the only recognition part-time students receive is through the Second Careers Club soon to be changed to the Non-Traditional Careers Club, to encompass all part-time students, not just the older students," they need to know that the administration does show an interest in both full- and part-time students. There are a few quirks that need to be ironed out first, but I think the chances of it being installed are good.

According to Spinelli, most part-time students are over the age of 24, have full-time jobs, and are night students, too. "I think the chances of it being installed are good."

A junior art major said, "It's great. It will give part-time students initiative to work harder."

"Young people are on a natural high. Why accelerate it with drinking?" Angela Perun, assemblywoman from the 17th District, said during Alcohol Awareness Day, held recently. The one-day program emphasized the danger of drinking and driving, and was sponsored by the office of the dean of student affairs and the SGA.

According to James E. Harris, assistant dean of student affairs and co­ordinator of the program, the purpose of the day was to focus attention on the implications of alcohol use and abuse in our society and on our campus.

Harris said alcoholism is an issue that people don't want to confront "even from an information standpoint."

"Most students who drink and drive don't realize their potential to cause harm to themselves and other people. We could all be victims," Harris said.

He added that Alcohol Awareness Day is only effective if people take part in the program. According to Harris, "People just don't participate. We must re-think our methods of getting students involved. We must go when they can't avoid us."

During the day the Rathskeller did not serve any alcohol.

Bruce Myers, a sophomore fine arts major and a bartender at the Rat, said many students should have attended the day's activities in order to become "aware of the psychological and physical effects of alcohol."

Michael Miller, SGA vice-president and a co­ordinator of the program, said, "Personally, one of the reasons that I stopped drinking dealt with an Alcohol Awareness Day that I attended. It can be effective only if students want it to be."

Latin American Literary Conference recently held at MSC

By Jackie Lola

International and national writers and critics attended the sixth annual Latin American Literary Conference at MSC recently attended by over 300 people, including students and professors, took part in the day-long conference entitled "Dimensions de su literatura" ("The Southern Cone: Dynamics and Dimensions of Its Literature"). Some participants came from Arizona, South Carolina and New York, as well as Chile, Argentina and Canada. Included writer Gonzalo Rojas and sociologist Juan Corradi.

Corradi delivered a metaphorical short story, in which he pointed out the unfortunate situation of writing in Spanish. He asserted that the university should lead the charge to combat the injustice of not being supported by the government and to fight for the rights of the writer.

Dr. Rose Minc, professor of Hispanic literature at MSC, initiated the idea of an international event six years ago, and is the chairperson of the executive committee.

"They're fearful some of these ill-tempered, judicious, wicked, old presidents will get rid of some of these rabble-rousers who don't kiss their toes regularly."

"The board went from no activity to radical activity without exploring any alternatives," Becker said. "Many faculty members could earn higher salaries in industries other than teaching. It's truly disgusting."

Dickson said he sympathized with the union. "Some 17 states have cut tenured faculty. I hope it doesn't happen in New Jersey."

Dickson said the amendment issue will be raised at a meeting of the council on April 12 and at the MSC board of trustees meeting on April 14. If a strike does occur, Dickson said his office will notify the students through flyers, memorandum and the media.

In the meantime, both sides are hoping the students understand their position. "In the long run, the students will suffer more than anybody else," Dickson said. "I think that's very unfortunate."

"I think the students should consider the consequences of this action," Becker said. "Will faculty still be able to speak out on subjects that may anger the administration? Without protection, the faculty's ability to speak freely without reprisals will be greatly eroded. If that happens, you will attract less able people to the state colleges."

"Only hope it's not too late to prevent a strike," Becker said.

Asbestos in Sprague Library

The EPA's finding are supported by Dr. Irving Selikoff, an authority on environmental cancer at New York's Mt. Sinai Hospital. Selikoff predicted that more than 200,000 Americans will die before the turn of the century because they were exposed to asbestos in earlier years.

When presented with this information, Quinn said, "I can't comment on that. Ask Selikoff about alcohol and sugar. They're dangerous too." Quinn said tests were conducted on Nov. 19 to determine the asbestos levels in the air at Sprague library and Bohn Hall. The method of testing used, phase contrast microscopy, was cited by the EPA as being deficient.

In a memo sent to library staff on March 17 Mininberg outlined a "management system" to be implemented "immediately." According to the memo, carpet areas in Sprague should be vacuumed with high efficiency vacuum cleaners; linoleum floors should be wet mopped; and shelves should be dusted with damp, disposable cloths to minimize asbestos dust in the air.

In addition to these measures, Dennis McDonough of the New Jersey Health Department told library personnel on Nov. 23, 1982 that a monthly monitoring system will be implemented along with a safety training program.

"What about the damp mopping? What about the vacuum cleaners? They haven't done anything," said Ethel France, a library staff member.

France, Bob Richardson, non-print media librarian, and Boscaino maintain that the safety measures specified by Mininberg and McDonough have yet to be implemented.

Quinn said, as far as he knew the measures were being carried out. Mininberg said, "We're doing the best we can."

Citing what they perceived as past administrative indifference to library problems, library sources said they were pessimistic about getting results, and that the administration will act only "when they are embarrassed enough."

"We had threatened that if they didn't do anything about the air conditioning we would picket the graduation with all the parents here," Boscaino said.

Janet Willowdale, library worker, said she didn't feel the administration was intentionally ignoring the problem. She went on to say that administrators are not the "bad guys" and that Mininberg had not "hedged or anything of that sort."

"Ideally the library should be closed, but what are you going to do in times like these when people aren't going to be paid?" said Willowdale.

Other library staff members said they would be willing to close the library "if that's what it takes to alleviate the problem."

Janet Burma, vice president of the conservation club, said she is presently working with the SGA to find out why "the problem wasn't taken care of a long time ago, and why their planning to control rather than eliminate the problem."

Health effects of asbestos

Asbestos is a Greek word meaning "inextinguishable." It is a fibrous material which conducts neither heat, noise, nor electricity.

According to the Encyclopedia of Occupational Health and Safety (EHOs), asbestos was first used in Finland in 2,500 B.C. to make clay pots more durable. Today, it's used as a main ingredient for roofing sheets, pipes and tiling; as a heat insulator for boilers and pipes; as a fireproof coating for clothes, curtains, and was used in hair dryers. It is currently used in the nose cone of space ships. It's most commonly applied by spray.

According to the article, "Left in the Dust," in the March 1 issue of The Village Voice, the two main diseases associated with asbestos are asbestosis and mesothelioma.

Asbestosis is the most common of these diseases. It takes five to 10 years to surface in the body. The symptoms of asbestosis are shortness of breath, and some chest pain. However, diagnosis in its early stages are inconclusive.

Mesothelioma is the most painful and lethal disease attributed to asbestos. It's a cancer of the lining of the lungs or abdominal cavity which is caused by microscopic fibers in the asbestos which measure as small as a 250,000th of an inch. See Effects of asbestos p.9

1983 Graduates must work harder to find employment

By Janine S. Myatt
The present recessionary period has caused vast changes in the employment process. Major employers are laying off massive numbers of employees (and not necessarily only those "last hired"). Additionally, many also have hiring freezes in effect. That means that the members of the class of 1983 will have to work much harder to help themselves find employment than did prior classes. The difficulties are increased for African and Hispanic Americans who are also faced with the persistent barriers of discrimination.

Furthermore, the recent government movement toward the weakening of Affirmative Action will permit corporations to implement whatever hiring practices they choose. We cannot afford to relax and depend just on our college degrees, race, and Affirmative Action.

We must see to it that we develop the skills that employers in our particular career field will be looking for. We must keep in mind that there are so many qualified individuals unemployed that the employers can list as many qualifications as they please and there will be candidates who can meet those qualifications.

We must see to it that we meet those qualifications and effectively market ourselves. We must have the most "effective" resume possible and energetically communicate our competency to the employer during the interview.

According to Linwood McDaniel in Business Week's Guide to Careers, "Success within the corporate structure is not easily obtainable by anyone and the margin of error is not wide enough to cover average candidates; to be chosen, minority applicants must often appear to have superstar ability or unique credentials."

To pull ourselves up to these standards, however, requires a great deal of planning and preparation—planning that should start as early, or earlier, than freshman year.

The corporate world has its written and unwritten rules and its captains and team players, and thus has often been compared to a game. As in any game, the four factors that are essential to success are getting into the game, knowing all the rules of the game, knowing the key players, and being able to compete.

Referendum fails for third consecutive year due to low voter turn out

By Mona Sehgal
The SGA referendum failed for the third consecutive year because of low student voter turnout. Approximately 11 percent of student voters were needed in order for the referendum to pass. The referendum would have raised SGA fees from two dollars to three dollars per credit.

Two percent or about 300 additional votes did not register because students did not know how to use the machines. They mistakenly returned the voting lever to the original position when they should have left the lever down. Students who will be graduating can get measured for caps and gowns beginning next week in the MSC bookstore.

While seniors are preparing for graduation, MSC is getting ready for its 75th anniversary. Dr. Thomas Stepnowski, director of student affairs, said that all MSC clubs and organizations must submit what they plan to do for the celebration by May 1.

Fifteen hundred dollars was appropriated for the annual SGA banquet to be held in May. Weekend College was appropriated $5200 for the Latin carnival to be held on April 17. The Human Relations Organization was granted a renewal of its Class I charter and the karate club was granted a Class II charter.

Another hazard of asbestos is asbestos corns. These are warts which penetrate the skin, usually around the fingers or under the eyelids. In the latter case, if the warts are not removed, a person will eventually go blind.

In one survey, six out of ten people with high exposure to asbestos will die. As quoted in The Voice, "Twenty-seven million Americans with significant exposure—plumbers and shipbuilders, boiler-makers and auto mechanics—can anticipate a death rate 50 percent higher than the general population and cancer death rate three times as high. Asbestos-related cancer will claim 200,000 victim by the century's end, or about one every hour."

Beth Hannigan’s flowing red hair is her ‘mane’ attraction

By Eileen Olekslak

In the 60s, growing one’s hair long was usually considered an act of rebellion. The number of long hair enthusiasts in the 80s, however, has dwindled considerably and their focus has shifted from a defiant to an aesthetic nature.

This is especially true for Beth Hannigan, a junior office systems major, who abandoned her Farrah Fawcett hair-do about five years ago for a look that she says is more natural and ultimately more beautiful.

Beth arrived at the decision to grow her hair with the help of her hairdresser, George Michael of Madison Avenue, whose long list of clients include Liv Ullman and Valerie Harper. His motto is, “If you have long hair, we love you. If you want to grow your hair long, we’ll help you.”

For Beth, the result of her effort has been mostly positive. Michael said she looks even more striking because of her hair color, which he calls cherry silver. Beth just calls it “plain red.”

“I figure that it’s my turn now I get such a positive response and that she says is more natural and ultimately more beautiful,” Beth Hannigan’s flowing red hair is her ‘mane’ attraction

Michael said he is very pleased with the work he has done with Beth. Thus, he uses her as a model in many of his hair presentations. In fact, Beth was on location when Michael was being interviewed on 20/20. “I only hope that the scene I managed to get in does not end up on the editing floor,” Beth said.

Beth has toyed with the idea of modeling, but has been told many times that because she is only 5’5” she really is too short for the profession. “I was approached by a local photographer who took a few rolls of film of yours truly. He told me that there are many alternatives to high fashion modeling and that for some reason, there is demand for red-heads. He said he’s going to show my pictures to the producer of the new movie, Ups and Downs. I’m not going to get excited until I get some actual offers. Until then, I have enough to keep me occupied.”

Indeed she does. Presently, Beth has a part-time job with IBM, which she obtained through Career Services. She trains secretaries how to use electronic typewriters and coordinates computer and word processor seminars. She said she loves to teach and is even involved with a volunteer tutor program at MSC through which she helps a bilingual student learn the English language.

For exercise, Beth likes to run. So far, she has worked her way up to two miles a day and is hoping to reach the six-mile mark by summer.

Beth has also developed an interest for target shooting. “It takes an extreme amount of concentration and also a fair amount of skill, but I do find it very relaxing. I know this may seem like an unusual pastime, but it really isn’t something out of the ordinary when your dad’s a cop.”

In addition, Beth likes to write. She is a transfer student from The Berkeley School at Garret Mountain. While there, she was a co-editor of the school newspaper. For a semester now, she has been eager to write. Finally, she made the decision to join The Montclarion. Look for her upcoming feature article on student defaulter.

Summer advanced registration changed

There has been a change in the advanced registration procedures for the 1983 summer sessions. Students who register during advanced registration, which runs from April 4-15, will be mailed a bill on April 28, 1983. Payment of tuition and submission of completed financial aid forms are due back in the business office by May 6, 1983. Tuition must not be submitted along with the course request form.

Advanced registration materials will be sent to graduate, part-time and weekend college students who were enrolled in the Summer 1982, Spring 1983 or who are newly admitted students. Full-time undergraduate students who are eligible to take summer courses must pick up their course request form in the office of the registrar. These students must present their college I.D. card to obtain a form.

Students who submit their bills with payment by the May 6, 1983 deadline will be scheduled. The established time frame does not allow for extension of payment. These students will be sent schedules on May 23, 1983. This will give any student who does not receive a full schedule the opportunity to attend in-person registration with a priority time. Students who receive the courses they requested through advanced registration will not have to attend in-person registration and will use their schedule as an admit slip to class.

Students who do not take advantage of advanced registration are advised to follow the procedure for in-person registration as described in the “Summer Sessions” booklet.

The Media must show greater concern with the news they report

In print journalism, cracking the "big story" is every reporter's dream. In TV journalism it's getting that spectacular piece of film footage. But today, especially in TV journalism, a line must be drawn as to what is newsworthy and what is not.

According to an article in Time magazine, an Alabama television station recently received a telephone call from someone who said "If you want to see somebody set himself on fire, be at the square in Jacksonville in 10 minutes."

There were only three people in the newsroom when they received the call at WHMA-TV. Having to make a quick decision, they decided to cover the story and notify the police. The news people went to the scene and set up their cameras. When the caller approached them, he doused himself with lighter fluid and set himself on fire.

The TV cameras were rolling. Thirty seven seconds later one of the film crew leaped forward to extinguish the burning man, but to no avail. A nearby fireman extinguished the flames a few seconds later, but the man had already received second and third-degree burns over half of his body. WHMA showed the edited film footage the following evening on its news program.

What happened at WHMA is tragic and raises a number of questions as to what should and should not be covered. The decision to cover a story such as this was a desperate one, but definite guidelines pertaining to these situations must be set up. Everyone working for the station or newspaper must be aware of the potential hazards that could arise in dealing with stories of this kind. Yes, first amendment rights must be protected, but the media must carefully consider when a story is news, and not a cruel display that will only be encouraged by the media's attention.

I was on campus last week and discovered a heart-breaking thing: college life actually goes on without me. Sigh. And here I thought MSC would fall apart without someone pointing out its flaws every week—in writing.

I went to the Rat for solace. "Merry! You're back! I knew all those rumors about your graduation were lies."

"Not true, Rich. I'm just slum—er, visiting. What's new? Why are all those penants on the walls? Did the athletic department start bringing home souvenirs or are the Ivy League banners just wishful thinking?

"They're supposed to add atmosphere. Can't you feel the improvement?"

"No."

"Oh. Well, have you been keeping up with the news? What do you think about the deadbolts in Partridge Hall?"

"I'm surprised that nobody caught on to the real reason behind them. Rich. The fire hazard wasn't the first."

"What do you mean?"

"How many professors have offices on the fourth floor? How many are up for tenure this year?"

"Really, Meryl, starting a fire just to prevent a few professors from getting tenure is a bit drastic, don't you think?"

"Oh, there wouldn't have been a fire. That's not necessary. Being locked in Partridge is enough. Think about it; you're a professor at this college, working late on a Friday night, nothing but leaving the college for a weekend of peace and quiet on your mind. Then you find your personal office being invaded. It's enough to cause anyone heart failure, and some of those professors are getting on in years."

"I never thought of that; guess I would be cheaper than tenure."

"You know it. Minniberg's no fool."

"Do you think he's got a shot at the top spot now that Dickson's made it official?"

"Not a chance. He should know by now that search committees don't pick in-house candidates any more. The last administrator to rise up through the ranks was probably Blanton."

"Were you here that long ago? I know you spent more than four years here, but didn't Blanton have 22 years at MSC?"

"You know, Rich, for someone who's on the 10 year plan, you make an awful lot of noise about the time I took to graduate. When's the 1985 yearbook coming out? Will we see it by the end of the decade?"

"You don't have to get nasty about it. Forget it. What about Armstrong? Will she have a chance?"

"That's a tough one. I don't think so, but even if she doesn't, it will hardly matter. So many departments have been restructured under student affairs that some people have started to call her The Dean Who Ate MSC? If she keeps it up, nobody will even notice that MSC's changing presidents."

"That's not very nice."

"I don't have to be nice any more. I'm not a student."

"Did you catch the big news of last semester?"

"You mean the faculty senate censuring Dr. Dickson? Yes, I read about it."

"And?"

"For an organization that's done absolutely nothing in the past to influence the way Trenton allot our money, they've got an awful lot of clout to blame all our financial problems on one man. It's not Dickson's fault that he hasn't got the power of a Bloustein."

"Yes, but he's president. Don't you think he could have done more?"

"Short of kidnapping the governor and holding him for ransom, no. I think Dr. Dickson did his best. You can't ask for much more than that."

"And given the choice between academic excellence or an abundance of money, I would choose the academics. More money doesn't necessarily buy you better teachers. Only better-paid ones."

"I think you're being awfully hard on the faculty senate."

"Really? What did they do during the student strike? How effective were they during the teachers' strikes? Where were they when Trenton raised tuition year after year after year? They have a new president and suddenly they're roaring like tigers. Better watch out nobody puts a match to them."

"You haven't changed, Meryl," Rich sighed. "Sure I have." I assured him. "I'm not as nasty as I used to be."

To the editor:

I am writing this letter because I was enraged after reading a letter to the editor by Mr. White (The Montclarion, March 17). He compared the students who fought against the financial aid cuts to "children just notified that they were something horrible. Has he forgotten his history? If it had not been for such revolutionaries as Jesus of Nazareth, Thomas Jefferson, and Martin Luther King, Jr., the world would be in a much worse state.

Next he wrote, about the fight against the cuts, "we lost ourselves in the thickening weed of anti-Reaganites." This is not the students' fault. If President Reagan did not do so much to offend the people he serves, these students would never have gotten lost. As for the students' proposals, which he said were "...breat of new ideas..." he is right. We want to maintain the old ideas. (Now who is the revolutionary?)

Mr. White goes on in his letter with an idea that is a marvel of conceit, that the current system, that is base on some type of academic test. As a future educator, I reject this idea. While some schools in the poor sections of Newark or Jersey City...
To the editor:

It is to my understanding that as of fall 1983 an upperclassmen dormitory will no longer exist. Freeman Hall will be considered a residency hall for all students—including freshmen.

As a resident of Freeman Hall, I strongly disagree with this decision. I feel the upperclassmen should have priorities, as well as privileges, and having their own dormitory is one of them.

Most upperclassmen are more serious, mature, and settled down. On the other hand, freshmen tend to be inexperienced and feel the upperclassmen should have their own dormitory.

Services of the Women’s Center

* The Women Helping Women (W.H.W.) program is a peer counseling and referral service located in the Student Center, Room 421. It consists of a group of 15 women counselors of various ages who have been carefully chosen through an interview process, and trained in counseling techniques.

The peer counseling commitment includes an intensive weekend training seminar and four counseling hours weekly in the W.H.W. office. Personal growth, as well as helping others, is a benefit of being involved in the program.

The counselors gain awareness of societal pressures and institutional processes that place stress on both men and women. Though initially formed to meet the needs of non-traditional female students, the service has many traditional students, staff, and community women as clients, on both a drop-in and call-in basis.

The office is open Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For further information, call 893-7130.

* Three new student members of the Women’s Center Advisory Board are: Jodi Walsh, Sharon Caruso, and Cathy Orszum. They serve as student representatives of the Drop-In Center.

* On Monday, April 4, and Wednesday, April 6 a table will be set up in the Student Center Lobby. Information about the Women’s Center and its programs, the Women’s Studies minor, W.H.W., and Students for the Awareness of Gender Equality (SAGE), will be available. Materials from off-campus organizations will also be on hand.

I recently had a photography show in Gallery II in the Calcio Arts Building, and I was surprised by the immature actions of some people.

Gallery II provides a valuable space in which MSC students can display their artwork and receive critiques and comments from faculty members and students. I am not an art major and appreciate constructive criticism, but some of the four-letter epithets I received had nothing to do with photography, and were better suited to a bathroom wall.

It also hurts to see my prints, which I have spent time, thought and effort preparing, scribbled on and ripped off the walls. I hope I’ve brought this problem to the attention of the art department and the students. Please help keep Gallery II an open forum for the serious critique of art! Thank you.

Reagan’s stand on big business and environmental protection, and see who is doing the real polluting.

I would like to point out that these speakers urge social reform and civil rights. It is possible that Mr. Intorre would like to see us return to attitudes much like the pre-civil rights attitudes?

It is this type of belligerent nationalism that conjures up attitudes reminiscent of Hitler’s.

We would like to conclude by agreeing with Mr. Intorre on one point, that is that no one can fertilize the right-wing side of the fence like G. Gordon Liddy.

To the editor:

In reference to Mr. Intorre’s letter to the editor (The Montclarion, March 17) we would like to say that we too are conservatives, but instead of being right-wing extremists, we favor a more middle of the road course. We favor hearing such lecturers as Dick Gregory, Ralph Nader, and Abbie Hoffman. Not because we totally agree with them, but because we are open minded.

We realize that they may not have all the answers, but at least they know what the questions are. Stating that any of these speakers are unpatriotic, or care less about our country is a lie. As to his notion that they are polluting the air, I suggest that Mr. Intorre take a good look at President Reagan’s stand on big business and environmental protection, and see who is doing the real polluting.

The Uncle Floyd Show's first album is devoid of any humor

By Frank Rosa

On January 29, 1974 an obscure, young vaudevillian named Floyd Vivino made his first appearance on an equally obscure station in West Orange known as WTVG (now WWHT in Newark) in the boondocks of television's vast wasteland known as UHF. Through his comic guidance and door-to-door salesmanship, "The Uncle Floyd Show" became a cult classic in NJ and eventually the highest rated UHF program in the history of the medium, with over 100,000 regular viewers. Recently, a collection of songs and comedy bits from the show were assembled in a record album aptly entitled "The Uncle Floyd Show Album."

Produced and arranged by Floyd's brother Jimmy, recorded at the Bola Studios in Totowa, and distributed by Mercury Records, this lp represents an unfulfilling synopsis of a show that became the pride of the Garden State before the Meadowlands became a major sports center and Atlantic City became a gambling mecca.

Side one starts out nicely with the familiar "Uncle Floyd Show Theme," a crazy carousel of sounds in the Spike Jones tradition. However, the whole album goes down the tubes from there. "Oogie's Boogie," sung by Floyd's little sponge-headed puppet, is a stupid composition called "On the Boardwalk." It sounds more like his impression of Bruce Springsteen—singing an original little ditty that wrongfully takes the place of the usual, lively banter between the two.

From there, we go to "September in the Rain," a nice old standard that would sound much nicer on another place of the usual, lively banter between the two.

Next up, Rooney does his famous Mr. Oh Yeah. Instead of an ancillary comedy routine, we have to settle for his poor imitation of Jimmy Durante singing. Oh, no. "Josephina Please No Leans on the Belt" is an old Italian novelty song that should please the old Italians in his audience. "Felicia No Caplesha" would have pleased them more, however. The Vivino Brothers Band combines with three other musicians to do "Alabama Jubiliee." They seem to be having a wonderful time. If only the same could be said for the people listening to this album.

Floyd ends the album with Jacques DuCrow, a gawking frogman, accompanied by the Tidy Bowl Man, who inexplicably gets flushed down the toilet bowl. It is perfect metaphor for this album. All totaled, there are only four good tracks out of 16 on this lp. Four out of 16! For a slick fielding shortstop, it's a respectable batting average for an album, any album, it's a lousy output.

A year ago, NBC telecast "The Uncle Floyd Show" during the graveyard hours and, shortly afterward, cancelled the show. In mid-February, Uncle Floyd took his last bow on Channel 68. Now, WHT broadcasts the "best" of Uncle Floyd, Triumph, during the graveyard hours. "The thrill of the fight, killing's such a noble deed/and John said 'love is all we need.'/ should we forget or pause a moment to regret where have we been."

Canadian rock band 'Triumph's'

By Julius Spada

Rush, the most popular band to come out of Canada, is running into strong opposition these days from the Toronto based band Triumph. Triumph consists of Rik Emmett on guitars and vocals, Mike Levine on bass, piano, and organ, and Gil Moore on drums and vocals.

Their latest album Never Surrender combines all of the characteristics that have been attributed to them throughout their eight year existence. Their style of music is loud, crisp, and precise. Rik Emmett's fluent style of guitar playing and his clear voice are as steady as ever on this album. Ricky's name was spelled from its original Rick, on an earlier Triumph album decided to have it legally changed to Rik. "I've had enough experience with music business bureaucracy to know that it would be easier to change my name than to get the album corrected" he said. All avid readers of Hit Parader magazine know about Rik from his "Rocktoons" cartoons that are frequently featured in the magazine.

To date, Triumph has put out six albums (six in Canada, and five in the U.S.) five of which have gone gold, and two of the five later achieved platinum status. They have come a long way from their first concert appearance at Simcoe High School where they performed for the small fee of $750 in 1975.

Marshall Tucker Band boogies

By Dean A. Cannarozzo

Categorizing the music of The Marshall Tucker Band is as difficult as predicting what Bob Dylan will do on his next album. Their newest release Just Us further exemplifies their diverse and buoyant sound.

Born in the early '70s, "Southern Boogie" bands were distinguished by prodigious guitar solos termed "jams." Newer trends in the music business mandate greater concentration on the quality of recording rather than the quantity. The Marshall Tucker Band has not succumbed to this recent trend.

The Marshall Tucker Band has changed by adding greater vitality, and this change is most evident in Just Us. Lead singer Doug Gray valiantly displays his variegated vocal range through the beautiful soft ballad "Wait For You," and the rocker "8:05." Lead guitarist Toy T. Caldwell is limited to elided guitar riffs in both "Testify" and "8:05," which seem to fit well. Saxophonist-keyboardist Jerry Eubanks fills all intervals with soothing horn notes. Most impressive is the performance by drummer Paul T. Riddie. Crisp highs and acute beats with the high hats are clearly defined in both rock songs: "8:05" and "Long Island Lady."

The remaining members of The Marshall Tucker Band are George McCorkle (electric rhythm and acoustic guitar), Franklin Wilke (bass), and newest member Ronnie Godfrey (piano and vocals). Together they complement each other to create their distinct sound which is so hard to classify. If one could place The Marshall Tucker Band in one category, it would probably headline under "fun." That is what Marshall Tucker is, and Just Us is simply an embodiment of this assertion.

The play will be presented at the Studio Theatre here at MSC. There will be two performances, the first on April 8 at 8 p.m., and the second on April 9 at 8 p.m. There will be free admission to both shows.

On April 8, students of MSC's theater department will stage a production of Eugene O'Neill's A Moon For the Misbegotten. "I'm doing this play for an independent study," said Katie Gans, who has a lead role in the production.

Series of books will explore many fundamental human rights

The Rights of Prisoners by David Rudovsky, Alvin Bronstein, and Edward Koren; The Rights of the Critically Ill by John Robertson; The Rights of Gay People by E. Carrington Boggan, Marilyn Haft, Charles Lester, John Rupp and Thomas Stoddard; The Rights of Women by Susan Deller Ross and Ann Barcher. $3.95, published by Bantam Books.

These four books, to be published April 1, are the first in the American Civil Liberties Union Handbook series that is designed to inform people of their rights and how to defend them.

They are, in effect, "how to" books on constitutional and legislative rights and provide an abundance of useful information for the groups for which they are designed.

The books are written in a question/answer format and are organized into chapters concerning general rights. This format works quite well. Information about specific topics is easy to find, because the authors wrote in plain English rather than legal jargon, making the book easy to read.

Because of the nature of the books, most are not going to be of interest to the general population. However, The Rights of the Critically Ill, because it deals with a relatively new question of rights, is likely to draw an audience whose needs have not been met by previous books and may also attract those with a casual interest in the subject.

One of the most fascinating aspects of the rights of the critically ill is the living will. The living will, which is not recognized in this state, states an individual's wish not to receive "extraordinary medical care" in the event of a critical illness or serious injury. Without the presence of such a will, or the failure of the state to recognize such a document, a doctor may be able to force treatment on a patient who does not want it.

As with the other books, the issues are too involved to go into detail about here, but they receive full and clear treatment in the books.

The books are, of course, not objective, but this is an attribute rather than a fault. One would not buy a book on individual rights if it was ambivalent toward those rights, and the books are obviously aimed at those readers who are interested in furthering the cause of equal treatment under the law.

Bantam and the ACLU are planning additional books in the series, which will include: The Rights of Crime Victims, The Rights of Indians, and The Rights of Students. If the current titles are an indication, the new ones will become a must for all interested parties to read.

Tennis team wins opener against Drew
The men’s tennis team won their opening match of the season against Drew University with a score of 5-4. MSC had difficulty taking the match, losing four of the six singles matches but swept the doubles. Lawrence Davidson and Tom Leslie took the first match 6-1 and 6-3, followed by the winning combinations of Geoffrey Lawes and Randy Stein, and Vince Russel and Joe Staunton.

Indian softball sweeps double header
MSC's softball team took both games of a double-header against Kean College last Saturday to raise their record to 5-2. Carol Dorozio (1-2) pitched a fine game, allowing only four hits, one walk, and two runs to take the victory for the Indians by a score of 4-2. The Indians took an early lead of 3-0 when they scored two runs in the third inning and maintained it by stopping small rallies by Kean in the fifth and sixth innings.

The second half of the double-header was a low scoring game in which both teams managed a total of only seven hits. The difference was seven walks by Judy Zamo of Kean, who allowed all three of the Indians’ runs. Debbie Emery (2-0) pitched a good game for MSC, allowing three hits, one walk, and one unearned run. The Indians topped Kean 3-1.

Baseball team takes first home game
Dan Olsson pitched a three hitter to give MSC's baseball team a 26-1 victory over NJIT during spring break. The game was a blowout with the Indians scoring five runs in the first inning, highlighted by a triple by Steve Lipinski which knocked in two runs. The lone NJIT run was a homerun by Steve Sofman in the top of the first.

Golf team has undefeated spring break
The MSC golf team remained undefeated over spring break taking three matches. Their first win was over Kean College by 367 strokes to 425 strokes. All five of the Indian golfers beat their opponents, and Mike Knight had the best performance of the contest with 73.

Against Trenton State College, the Indians claimed their second victory by a score of 378 to 411. All five MSC golfers had fine performances with Jerry Martino and Charlie Cowell leading the Indians with 74 followed by Mike Knight with 76. Jim Schubert and Mark McCormick had 77 each.

The Indians topped William Paterson College easily with a 386 to 471 score, McCormick totaled 74, Deux Zeller had a 76, Schubert totaled 77, Martino had a 79 and Knight trailed with 80.

Laxmen by one
trade-off was good for another pair of goals by Mario Moraga of MSC and Matthews again for Maritime, but the pattern was broken by a goal off the stick of Mannit. Guastella then rallied with a goal on a play similar to his first goal of the period, only this time he scored with the help of midfielder Ken Williams. After another Maritime goal late in the quarter, MSC held a slim 6-5 lead at halftime.

Maritime saved their best effort for the final period. The visitors scored three successive times to tie it up at 11-11. The loss of their lead brought the Indians onto the field with a rise in intensity and Oxley scored again. MSC's lethargy not only enabled Maritime to tie the game, but also to take the lead with a goal by Mike Rohan leaving the Indians with four minutes to come back.

Oxley converted a long pass from Chris Strazza, knotting the score once again and setting up an overtime possibility, but freshman Kurt Sahlistrom ended Maritime's hopes of victory by scoring with 33 seconds left in the game.
Laxmen axe FDU over break romping to a 21-10 victory

By Jim Fritz

The men's lacrosse team played their most crucial game of the season against Fairleigh Dickinson University (Madison) at Sprague Field over spring break. The Indians have only defeated FDU once in nine years and they wanted this win for a shot at the NCAA playoffs. The Indians came through with a 21-10 victory over the Devils.

The first quarter was extremely close as each team continually traded goals. Kurt Sahlistrom kept MSC alive with three goals while FDU tallied with three as well. Kevin Oxley's goal with an assist by Sal Guastella early in the period gave MSC a 4-3 lead at the end of the quarter.

In the second period, MSC took the lead on goals by Jerry Jacob, Chris Strazza and Mario Miraga. Goalie Steve Dudasik shut down FDU's attack with superb saves to keep MSC ahead. By the end of the first half the score was 7-5, MSC.

Things looked different in the second half as the Indians came out strong. Terry Golden began the MSC lacrosse romp by winning six consecutive face-offs. The Indians used this advantage, scoring four quick goals.

With runners on second and third, Dana Fintel reached first base on an error, scoring both Baginski and Hughes. With Fintel on first and two outs, Ziccardi singled to move Fintel to third. Whidden followed with a walk to load the bases, but Klein then grounded out to the pitcher to end the inning.

The Indians struck for two more runs in the second inning, highlighted by DeLuca's RBI single and consecutive errors by Lehman infielders resulting in the other run. The Indians struck for two more runs in the third when Klein began the rally with a two-out walk. Smith then followed with an RBI double to deep left-center field. With Smith on second, Dietrich then singled to left field, scoring Smith. The rally ended when DeLuca grounded out to short to end the inning.

In the meantime, starting pitcher Carol Dorozio was nothing but fantastic. In the four innings she pitched before being removed because of the inclement weather, she struck out an amazing seven batters, while walking only one.

Dorozio was constantly ahead of all the batters and continuously frustrated the Lehman team, which was only able to get one hit off of her. In the second inning, Dorozio struck out the side as the Indians supplied her with a commanding 8-0 lead.

While so much is being said about their hitting and pitching, the Indians' aggressive base running must also be taken into consideration. The Indians stole an impressive five bases during the game and were caught only once. Altogether it was a very impressive outing for the Indians, about which Olson was very happy. "We played very well today and our pitching was fantastic. I hope we continue our strong hitting and our aggressive base running," Olson said.

Season opener victorious for men's lacrosse by one over Maritime

By Frank DiPietro

The MSC lacrosse team opened their season with a narrow 14-13 victory over New York Maritime lead by team co-captain Kevin Oxley's seven points and two assists. Oxley's nine points of the game brought him within 11 of the MSC all-time scoring record of 167 points.

Midfielder Jerry Jacob opened the first period with an unassisted goal followed two minutes later by Oxley with two points. Kevin Manritti earned Maritime's only goal of the period between Oxley's first two points of the game.

MSC's last goal of the first period came after a fast break by the Indians. Oxley quickly ran the ball up the middle to the Maritime zone, passing it to the left corner of the net where MSC's Sal Guastella speedily put it in. The Indians led 5-1 at the close of the first period.

Guastella scored the introductory goal of the second period with the aid of a deflected shot and immediately Maritime answered with a goal of their own by Mike Matthews. That perseverance looking for an opening in their tight defense. Maritime's goalie blocked an attempted shot but cleared the goal to an awaiting Indian, enabling Doug Matthews to score unassisted.
