MSC car thefts increase and campus police employees decrease

By Frank Rosa

Car thefts continue to rise while the number of campus police face a manpower shortage and the new gates along Quarry Road remain broken.

According to campus police statistics, as of April 10, 16 cars have been stolen from the college's parking lots this semester. If the thefts continue at this rate, the count for 1983 could reach 56, the highest in the college's history.

"These people are doing a dedicated job for little thanks," Rich said. "That's why I get steamed up when we get kicked around for something that's not our fault."

Cause of fire in math building is unknown

By Mona Sehgal

A fire, which broke out last week in the first floor corridor of the math and science building, is under investigation. "The cause could be related to a chemical aspect or a malicious aspect," Chief Edward Pomponio, of the Little Falls fire department, said. There were no serious injuries.

Camus students alerted the fire department at approximately 1 a.m., Friday morning. According to Pomponio, one of the doors in the building was locked, and anyone could have had access to the building.

Richard Lynde, dean of mathematical and natural science, said, "There was also a broken window in the back of the building which wasn't boarded, and should have been. Vandalism in this building has been a problem."

Joseph McInty, director of maintenance, said, "As far as I know, the windows were boarded. We sent carpenters up immediately."

But Pomponio supported Lynde's statement that at the time of the fire, the broken window had not been boarded up. It took 20 minutes to get the fire under control. It melted the main glass drainline, which is connected to all the chemistry laboratories. According to Lynde, repairs will cost under $2500 and take one week. Until then, the labs cannot be used.

The room was also used for storage of research data. George Rottter, of the psychology department, said, "Ten years of very solid work went up in smoke. It was a stunner."

Rottter, a director of research for the Foundation of Human Sexuality, lost 10,000 answered questionnaires relating to sex education, nine of the ten copies of a 600-page analysis, and hundreds of articles collected in the past ten years.

Minor damages included charred walls and a few burned file cabinets. According to Pomponio, there were also two minor injuries. One fireman suffered an eye injury and another suffered from smoke inhalation.

Parking signs on Valley Road may be changed to avoid confusion

By Denise Newman

MSC students are receiving parking tickets without really knowing why. Signs along Valley Road behind Bohn Hall read "Parking by Permit Only." Students mistakenly believe their campus parking stickers are valid for that street. However, these spaces are reserved for area residents with Clifton permits.

Rich Hoffman, director of services for the SGA, has asked the Clifton police to replace the signs with ones that read: "Parking by Clifton Permit Only," in order to clear up the confusion. The Clifton police officer in charge of traffic, Lt. John Kwasnik, said that it is the college's responsibility to make the students aware. He said the signs were approved by the state at least five years ago and that this problem was probably not foreseen. Kwasnik said, "I can't conceive how students think the college is selling space on city streets."

Hoffman said, if necessary, the SGA will pay to have the signs corrected. Presently he is looking into cost estimates for such an operation.

Bilingual education is supported by linguistics professor

In the U.S. there has been continuing controversy over bilingual education. James S. White Jr., junior political science major and The Montclarion reporter, and Dr. Milton S. Seegmiller, chairman of the linguistics department, discuss this issue and its importance within American society.

Q: Steve, the popular perception concerning bilingual education is that it does more harm than good. For example, why should we prepare students who ultimately hope to teach in their own language until they master the dominant language well enough to be instructed in it?

A: Well, the principle of bilingual education is that you dump a student into a school system where he or she doesn't know the language, that student is going to miss out on some very important early instruction, until he or she learns the language. So the idea is to teach the student in his or her own language, at the same time that he or she's being taught him or her English.

Q: And to do this would be to handicap the student.

A: Without a doubt.

Q: And subjects such as math and science can be taught in any language?

A: Right.

Q: Nothing is lost in the translation...ah...so the student could stay abreast of his peers in those areas while mastering English.

A: Exactly. The purpose of the program is to allow students to be taught in their own language until they master the dominant language well enough to be instructed in it.

Q: Well, makes sense, but are you not ignoring the previous generation of immigrants? They did just fine without bilingual programs.

A: But...

Q: Just a sec...ah...the typical pattern of immigrants in this country is as follows: the family enters the country, the kid goes to school, and within a year he knows the language. Now what's wrong with today's kids, can't they hack it?

A: Well, things are different today. There are sizable minority areas where you can live your whole life without ever learning the language of the dominant culture, places in New Jersey that are uniformly Spanish-speaking communities. So, the kids in that situation don't have a chance to learn the language quickly.

Q: There's quite a bit of hostility toward the notion of granting certain students preferential treatment.

A: Yes, the whole set of theories is known as blaming the victim. Why?

Q: But you feel your main adversary is the notion of giving students preferential treatment.

A: Yes, there are people who say "if they're [minorities] gonna go to our schools, then by God, they better learn to speak our language. We shouldn't coddle them. Why waste money? If they're gonna live in this country, they better learn to speak the language."

Q: Now, where will they learn this, ah...language?

A: That's the question, and that's why I think we need bilingual education.

CINA is a Class One Organization of the SGA
SGA candidates restricted to $500 for campaign spending

By Margaret Readdy

A $500 cap has been placed on campaign spending for this year’s SGA executive board election.

Pete Feinstein, chairperson of the Government and Administration Committee, said, “The cap was set in committee last year. Originally it was overruled but then was debated again because, ‘In past years people have spent over $1000.’”

Feinstein said the cap was proposed because, “In past years people have spent extra amounts of money—over $1000.”

“On the 20th and 27th of April we require that candidate’s campaign manager, candidate, or challenger to have campaign materials verified. Both the rule, what are you going to do—count each poster?”

Howard Leon, a member of the Government and Administration Committee, said, “I see that (enforcing the rule) as a bit of a problem. There are lots of ways to get around the law. However, you can see how much a person is generally spending.”

Spinelli, who said he spent “no more than $300” on his presidential campaign last year, stressed the importance of volunteers in a campaign.

Mesuk said, “I don’t think it’s right to limit how much candidates can spend because no limitations are set on the total amount spent in state or federal elections.”

Leon said, “Even though MSC is a microcosm of a world in which politicians spend millions on their campaigns, we want to take measures to avoid campaign overspending from occurring.”

Mark Spinelli, SGA president, said, “It’s going to be hard to enforce this rule. The cap is unjust; however, I did not vote for it.”

Lynn Mesuk, director of SGA public relations, said, “Candidates could easily forge receipts. Concerning enforcing the rule, what are you going to do—count each poster?”

Robert Jackson, a lieutenant in WPC’s campus police force, said he had no explanation for this drastic rise.

Rich urged those who suspect a crime is being committed, to call extension 4111 on any of the 29 emergency phones on campus.

Study day before exams under consideration by administration

By Lidia Willmberg

“Students find it difficult to start exams right after classes end,” said Spinelli. SGA president, said. In response to this, the students have requested a study day prior to exams. “They’d like to see library hours, and possibly office hours, extended,” he said.

The problem with such a proposal would be fitting it into the school calendar. However, the school year consists of approximately 160 days, 14-15 weeks in the fall and the remainder in the spring. Allocating these days would mean that the semester would begin a day early or end a day later. “This would create a problem in the fall, since under employment contracts, faculty do not start prior to 9. And extra day at the end would carry the semester into January,” said Garrett, vice president for academic affairs.

“Such a study day would be a chance to get a head start on the next term. It would be especially useful when you’re rushed for time as it is trying to cram for two or more finals in one day,” said Larry Annunziata, sophomore accounting major.

“Such a calendar committee would be formed which would include student representation,” said Garrett. The school calendar is decided in advance, so the program will not be implemented this semester.

Spinelli said the SGA has received no feedback from Garrett’s office. A final approval must come from Dr. W.D. Dickson, president of the college.

New phone service to be offered to all MSC students by SGA

By Mona Sehgal

A bill that would formally announce the SGA’s opposition to a faculty strike and condemn any strike vote, was voted down by the SGA. The strike issue involves a reduction in faculty pay, which was voted down by the SGA. The strike issue involves a reduction in faculty pay, which was voted down by 195 to 45 days.

Robert Jackson, a lieutenant in WPC’s campus police force, said he had no explanation for this drastic rise.

Rich urged those who suspect a crime is being committed, to call extension 4111 on any of the 29 emergency phones on campus.

The Montclarion, Quarterly and LASO were granted $510 by the SGA in order to find out specific needs of part-time students. Morrisson said, “The biggest problem facing the 3,200 part-time students, is the lack of administrative services at night.” They would like to know what players, LASO, and other on-campus organizations are doing, but they’re not there at night.”

The Montclarion, Quarterly and LASO were granted Class I charters. The college radio station which changed its name from WMSC to MSC-FM, was also granted a Class I charter.

La Campina, MSC’s yearbook, was given an approval of its $48,000 budget, the highest among the Class I organizations. The Conservatory Club, a Class II Organization, was appropriated approximately $55,50 to purchase masks and distribute them among students to protest the presence of asbestos on campus.

Consumers can be exploited by rental agencies

By Jayne Moran

A big consumer complaint concerns apartment rental agencies. If you are looking for one, you have an extra task to perform. There are thousands of apartment rental agencies. The services these agencies conduct is stated by many students. These activities include examining listings and contracts. However, the services offered by these agencies can cause problems. It is important to know about the services these agencies offer.

By Margaret Readdy

A notable contrast is the salary level for professors. Puerto Rican universities pay their professors $10,000 less than the base salary level for American universities. Yet, professors at MSC are required to teach 12 credit hours per semester, while Inter-American requires only 15 credit hours per semester. Vargas said, "In Puerto Rico, they keep you working! I have more free time at MSC."

But, Vargas and his colleagues always found the time to chat and get to know each other. On the other hand, Vargas said MSC professors seem to be in a hurry. Vargas said, "People walk faster here!"

Vargas has taken advantage of MSC's close proximity to New York City by visiting Greensich Village. Vargas said, "New York just generates energy. As you travel closer to it, you can feel this energy."

This is the first time Vargas has lived in this region of the United States. Vargas has sought to return to Inter-American for 13 years. He felt the exchange would be a good opportunity for a change in environment, to learn new teaching methods, and to meet people.

By Jayne Moran

Many students seek the services of apartment rental agencies. If you are interested in finding an apartment, you need to be aware of the services these agencies offer. The services offered by these agencies can cause problems. It is important to know about the services these agencies offer.

What some rental agencies will do:

1. Charge you a fee.
2. Supply a phone number to the consumer for a fee. They state in their contract that:
   - a. There is no guarantee that the client will find an apartment.
   - b. They provide information only. The listings have not been inspected by them.
   - c. The listings have not been inspected by them.

What you should know about many rental agencies:

1. Most often, the published list has been compiled from listings in local newspapers.
2. They state in their contract that:
   - a. No guarantee of an apartment's availability is given.
   - b. They provide information only. The listings have not been inspected by them.
   - c. No guarantee that the client will find an apartment.

Before you sign—decide what you are getting for your money.

Ancient art form of acupressure relieves stress through massage

By Jim Sexton

Talib llutzi is a teacher and practitioner of the ancient Japanese art of Shiatsu acupressure in Montclair. Shiatsu is essentially acupuncture without the distress of needles. Instead of puncturing the skin, a series of massages are strategically applied to the body. The key to Shiatsu is knowing where to administer the pressure.

According to llutzi, there are approximately 350 meridians, or channels of energy, which flow through the human body. Each are directly tied to the vital organs. "Think of this energy in terms of a series of rivers flowing through the body. If a blockage occurs in the meridian, the cause may be stress and the body falls into a state of imbalance. This water energy becomes stagnant. Thus, a person is more susceptible to illness. Acupressure massage keeps the channels open, which in turn maintains the necessary energy current throughout the human system."

llutzi stressed that Shiatsu is not a diagnostic medical science in the western sense. The emphasis is not to treat a symptom, but rather to examine the cause of a ailment. Using a holistic approach, the Shiatsu therapist takes the entire body into account, and not just the injured area.

She said, "The hands are like jumper cables, and in those hands lie the capability to heal through touch. We naturally hold an injured area of the body, and Shiatsu merely extends that inherent tendency into a technique. Shiatsu will help a person overcome fatigue, stiffness, stress, nervous tension and headaches."

llutzi said Shiatsu acupressure is a valuable alternative to the drug-laden western system of medical treatment. "Many people have come to me who are afflicted with cholitis, ulcers, and intestine problems because their doctors can't seem to do anything else but prescribe cortizone. It is the eastern belief that the body can heal itself if it is properly maintained (i.e., limited intake of fatty foods and daily exercise)."

Bermuda

The rest of the week went relatively smoothly, but further complications occurred Saturday, our final day in Bermuda. Betty woke us at 10 a.m. to tell us that our taxi, which wasn't supposed to arrive until 3:30 p.m., was ready to take us to the airport. We quickly packed and were ready to go in 45 minutes, when we were told the taxi was not for us after all. We were then informed that our plane was delayed until midnight, and no one had bothered to tell us the day before. We were kicked out of our apartment at 11 a.m. to make room for incoming groups and had nowhere to go until our departure time.

At the airport, our flight was delayed again until 12:30 a.m. The plane chartered for the return flight was smaller than the one used for our arrival, and a handful of students were left on the Bermuda Airport runway.

Looking back on spring break '83, we can't help but laugh. It certainly was an "adventure in travel."
Stephen Adubato is first MSC alumnus to run for the New Jersey state assembly

By Diane Szabo

For the first time in the history of the college, an MSC alumnus will be running for the state legislature. Stephen Adubato Jr., who graduated from MSC with an undergraduate degree in public administration, will announce his candidacy for the seat of State Assemblyman for the 30th district on April 21.

When a student at MSC, Adubato was actively involved with the SGA, and in 1979 went to Trenton as spokesman for the Tuition Task Force (TTF) to lobby against Gov. Brendan Byrne's proposed state college tuition hikes. Through the TTF's efforts a $44 hike was cut in half to $32.

"Most people wonder why I chose to make my announcement for candidacy at MSC, because it is so difficult to get students out to vote. Students tend to feel that they are outside the political system, and don't think their votes count. However, working as an adjunct professor, and being with the College Outreach Program of the Port Authority, I'm still as closely tied to students as I was five years ago," Adubato said.

Adubato said, "Tuition increases at state schools may be necessary, but they shouldn't be higher than the rate of inflation. At Rutgers tuition has increased 80 percent in the last five years, whereas the average increase was less than the annual seven percent inflation rate in the state. Why should students be made to bear the burden of inflation more than others?" Adubato will be spending a lot of time at the colleges in the area to try to register students to vote, and get them to participate. "Hopefully, my candidacy will be something that students will take the time to look into to encourage them to go out to vote, which is a goal in itself," Adubato said.

"The opportunity presented itself to me to run as the Democratic candidate for the district. We need more Democrats in the legislature now because too many votes are going against what we want to accomplish. It's a shame that with the third highest per capita income in the nation, NJ should be ranked 48th as far as spending on higher education goes."

Adubato also said, "We simply cannot afford not to spend more on higher education. Since Gov. (Thomas) Kean has frozen the budget on public education, that means we don't have any more money to spend than last year, and that means we haven't got money to spend on high technology, like computers. Students will graduate without proper training to be employable."

Adubato said his life has been geared toward politics. Aside from his academic background in public affairs, his uncle, Michael Adubato, was a NJ assemblyman for 10 years. His father founded and operates the North Ward Center in Newark, a multi-service social agency. Adubato's grandfather was the director of the first Boys Club in Essex County.

"I guess you could say that my entire family has been an inspiration for me to go into public life. He also served as campaign coordinator for Peter Shapiro when he was running for Essex County Executive. "Working on the campaign for someone like Peter Shapiro, who is nationally recognized as one of the outstanding young politicians, and seeing the excitement and enthusiasm of all the people involved, naturally rubbed off on me."

"I look forward to running, and hopefully winning my district in the assembly, to put to use all the things I've learned in school, business, and politics. There are no guarantees that I'll win, but I am confident. I feel that I have many contributions to make in the public and private sector."

Student views Bermuda trip as an "Adventure In Travel"

By Lisa Hall

For my friend Lynne and I, spring break was a week we had daydreamed about as early as last fall when the advertisements for Bermuda were first tucked up on billboards across campus. The trip, sponsored by CLUB, seemed like too good a deal to pass up. The trip, however, was riddled with complications from the very beginning. We made our reservations for the vacation in February. The woman at the sign-up table had very little information concerning details such as where we would be staying, the airline we would be flying with, or even what airport we were flying out of. We were instructed to attend a meeting on March 15 in order to receive our bills and other necessary information. The meeting never materialized. Finally, chairman of Today Adventure for CLUB and co-ordinator of the Bermuda trip, informed us that this was due to a computer shut down at the travel agency. He requested that we return to the Student Center ballrooms the following Wednesday, three days before departure, to get everything in order.

That Wednesday we were greeted by a tired-looking travel agent from Adventures In Travel, the agency MSC had contracted. They not only had our bill wrong, but our accommodations also. Endlessly was of no help because the price he gave us was different from both those of the travel agent and the woman who booked us in February. The prices kept going up, and we ended up paying $49 more.

On Friday March 25, I was greeted by Lynne and I by someone who identified herself as Sue, from CLUB. Sue informed me that there was a "slight delay" of almost two days due to a tropical storm which kept the first flight of Bermuda Airport's only runway. We have been promised a refund for the days lost, but not for reseating a code of how or when we will be refunded.

After a 4 hour delay, we left from MSC at 11 am. Monday, We checked in at the airport where we were told about our motel. We then boarded the Arrow Airways plane with two student groups from New York University and the University of Delaware. After a two hour flight, we reached Bermuda and all ill feelings harbored against Adventure In Travel and CLUB temporarily disappeared.

Upon entering our apartment, Lynne and I were upset after explaining to four different people exactly what accommodations we wanted, but no one gave us what we had written it right. We spent half the afternoon of our first day trying to get in touch with Bruce Maurier, the Adventure In Travel representative in Bermuda. When we did, he was very sympathetic to our problem and promised us cash back for the extra money we paid to get a quad room for two, rather than the double we were given. When we saw Bruce later in the week, he was rude and acted as though he did not know what we were talking about. We practically had to pull teeth to get the money he promised.

We then settled into our apartment, promptly and appropriately renaming it "the dump." It was a small, dingy room with two tiny beds, a chair, and a dresser. The room was cold at night and always damp, as water from the water to the bedding smelled like rust. The kitchen was a horror in itself, and the bathroom was not much better. We had to crawl after cockroaches from the sink, and the bathroom was crawling everywhere. Lynne, who is deathly afraid of cockroaches, spent one night with hairballs in her mouth from what we could see in the kitchen cabinet. The next morning, there were splotches on the remnants of clothes that met their match with my bedroom slipper.

New solutions needed to stop the increasing auto thefts at MSC

Cars are stolen from parking lots in shopping malls all the time. Now it seems as though MSC has become a shopping mall for car thieves.

Already 16 cars have been stolen this year, and things don’t look positive for the remainder of the semester. If the rate of thefts were to continue, approximately 58 cars will be stolen from campus this year, giving MSC the honorary title, “Most Cars Stolen From a NJ Campus.”

Yes, it is difficult to monitor a campus as large as MSC, particularly its enormous parking lots. But it is not impossible.

William Paterson is in close proximity to MSC. It’s about the same size as MSC, but has had only one car stolen in 1982. Even though WPC had six cars stolen this year, the situation there is not nearly as bad. WPC’s campus police check cars regularly and “put stickers on cars if the doors are unlocked.” It seems as though WPC police find the time to walk around the parking lots and monitor them closely. As a state college, WPC’s budget has been reduced as has MSC’s, yet they seem to have enough police to keep car thefts relatively low.

Chief Rich has suggested that students install “protective devices in their cars, lock car doors, and be suspicious of anyone driving around the parking lots constantly.” These suggestions are well intended, but won’t solve the problem. Students often drive around the MSC parking lots for 25 minutes searching for a parking space. If the campus police received a call for every such student, they would certainly be busier than they are now.

It’s time for the college to take action. Students shouldn’t have to buy “protective devices” for their cars simply so that they can park at MSC. We should have a secure system that can take an active stance against car-thefts. New solutions must be reached, and the administration must find a way to beef up the police force. Meetings should be set up so that the campus police can find out how other state colleges have been deterring car thefts. At this point, telling students to “lock car doors” is almost an insult.

A close look at the culture of JSU

By Andy Smith

What is the JSU and why should you become involved with it?

The Jewish Student Union is a Class III organization of the SGA. With a current membership of 380, we give students of similar interests a chance to meet, mingle and socialize. Our organization is open to the entire campus, and no not everyone who comes to our events or stops by our office is Jewish.

The diversity of our events runs a large gamut, providing many opportunities to get involved. These include four general membership meetings per semester, our annual traditional holiday festivals, and provocative discussions and controversial speakers depending on your viewpoint.

Some of our highlights this year have included a Purim party, featuring professional mime/actress Sasha Nanus of TV’s Guiding Light and Another World, a model Seder, which gave students and faculty a chance to experience the traditional Passover meal and festival, and a Latke blast, our annual Chanukah party. We also have Yochanon Ramati, of the Israeli Knesset, who led a discussion of the media coverage of the recent events in Lebanon. Also, there were two Bagel Nosh/Coffee Houses, and our annual United Jewish Appeal Campaign.

Upcoming events include our involvement in Spring Day: A Holocaust Remembrance, featuring the renowned Reverend John Graul; Israeli Independence Day; and our final meeting, at which time elections will take place and be followed by a party.

The JSU is associated with the Alliance of Jewish Student Organizations. This organization gives students from local colleges (Rutgers/Newark, Kean, Drew, Fairleigh Dickenson, Seton Hall, NJIT and MSC) the opportunity to meet in a social atmosphere. Events have included a number of dances, swims, and a weekend at Kutsher’s Country Club in the Catskills. Still upcoming is a Ladies’ Night Dance on April 23 and the annual spring picnic.

The JSU also helps to subsidize leadership training. In addition to local seminars, students were sent to seminars in Los Angeles, Israel, and Chalet Vim in New York this year.

Students are encouraged to and do stop by our office on the fourth floor of the Student Center. Room 417. The office is used for weekly board meetings and as a lounge by students. It’s a great way to meet fellow students and develop friendships. We have a full-time advisor/friend in Joy Kurland, who, along with other students, can help advise on seminars abroad, counseling with clergy, etc. Our phone number in the office is 893-5280. Give us a call.

To the editor:
I would like to address the letter written by Diane Carter, concerning the group which meets to discuss race relations, which appeared in last week's Montclarion. The letter left me with mixed feelings. The least of which is irony, the most being shame. I was appalled by the ignorance that a) allows the group to exist, and b) to think that group has any significance or will, in any way, shape, attitude, or form to affect race relations on campus. And I believe the group's first course of action, if they mean to improve it, should be to practice what it professes to preach.

My first knowledge of this group came many weeks ago when Karen Dyton, an SGA legislator, approached me after a meeting and asked if I were interested in a group, being formed by Dean Harris, concerned with racial issues on campus. I agreed, and approached her shortly before the group's first meeting to get its specifics. It was then that I was told not only that I was unwelcome, but that I was forbidden from attending and that it would be a closed meeting. The only reason I was given was that I "was not the kind of person (they were) looking for." I was told nothing more. Now, I will not accuse or even speculate on why I am the wrong kind of person. I couldn't for a moment believe that it would be because I am Jewish, or because I am white, or even that I hold views differing from those of Dean Harris or his racism group. But I do believe that racism is prejudice that results in discriminatory behavior, and that I have been discriminated against. Therefore, am the victim of racism by the very group wanting to prevent it.

So, as a result, I fully agree with the statement made by Diane Carter that "ignorance is the major barrier" in combating racism. Now I hope they come to realize that, so I do not have to organize a group to deal with the poor race relations in Dean Harris' group.

Howard Leon
Sophomore/broadcasting

Editors note: The Montclarion regrets that all the letters to the editor received by the paper, cannot be printed. Due to the large number of letters received and limited space, it is impossible to print every letter.

Student is not the 'right type'

To the editor:
I know there's not a book with the answer to my question, but I hope there's a teacher who can sympathize with it. The question to which I am referring is, why should college students be required to take such a numerous amount of general education courses?

First, I feel it is a waste of hard-earned money. Everyone knows how expensive school is. Each year our tuition increases, and with that increase, fewer and fewer students can afford to attend school. Why should students have to work so hard for something that isn't absolutely necessary when there are so many other ways in which their money could be spent? If fewer general education courses were required, the tuition might decrease, and more students would be able to afford college.

Time is a very precious factor for all students. The time and effort you have to put into some of those classes is ridiculous. Some courses demand as much concentration as a major course would. It is senseless to spend so much time and to put so much effort into a class that has nothing to do with your major and will have no influence on when you graduate.

Required letter writing is unfair

To the editor:
It seems unfair that students should have to be required to write a letter to the professor for a grade, but it also places a burden on a newspaper such as The Montclarion. The editorial staff of The Montclarion likes to vary the letters they print in content and length, which makes it difficult to get a letter published. More importantly, The Montclarion only has a certain amount of space allotted for letters to the editor and it is not fair for The Montclarion to feel pressured to publish all the class assignment letters received.

It should be sufficient that a student who has the requirement of writing a letter to the professor for a grade. The student, thus, has done his/her job and has removed the pressure from The Montclarion.

You've proven that hard work pays off and your degree places you on the first rung of your ladder to success. It has taken years of effort and cost a small fortune to get you this far, and now . . .

YOU'RE LOOKING FOR A JOB!

Welcome to the club. We all know that a degree is no longer a passport to a good job. The people who are most qualified are not the ones who get the best jobs. The best jobs go to the people who are most skilled at job-finding.

Most people begin the job search without proper preparation and continue to repeat the same unrecognized mistakes. Soon, they become discouraged, wondering why things aren't working out.

WILL YOU BE IN THIS LANDSLIDE MAJORITY?

THE JOB YOU GET WILL DETERMINE THE QUALITY OF YOUR LIFE FOR YEARS TO COME.

THE PLAN YOU CHOOSE TO FOLLOW IN YOUR JOB SEARCH WILL DETERMINE THE JOB YOU GET.

EXECUTIVE BUSINESS SERVICES will teach you job-getting methods that produce results.

Our course is an organized plan of action, based on careful preparation methods and proven tactics. There are no short-cuts or magic formulas; it takes work to get the job you want.

We will teach you what you need to do and how to do it.

Bryan Adams' new album is rock that's 'sharp as a knife'

By Rich Hango

Bryan Adams is one of those performers whose music you've heard for years, but whose name never quite sank into your memory. His first album, named aptly Bryan Adams, passed by without a musical whimper. He began to get notice with the song "Lonely Nights" from You Want It—You Got It and "Don't Let Him Know," a tune that Prism recorded last year. Cuts Like A Knife has received frequent airplay from the radio and video cable. Adams' threat to produce a record titled, "Bryan Adams Hasn't Heard Of You Either," may have finally paid off.

As do many other performers, Adams, along with his collaborators Jim Vallance, writes about relationships and the love shared between the two people involved. The difference comes in the bittersweet love that presents itself, which results in situations that detail at best a chaotic bond, or one that is definitely on the skids. The songs "Take Me Back" and "Don't Leave Me Lonely" explore the emotions involved in these deteriorating relationships, both express the realization that it is all over, but also the desire to keep trying. The title track "Cuts Like A Knife" contradicts this theme by examining the breakup with a "Yeah, it hurts now, but it's all for the best" attitude. In addition, Adams alludes to other previous works. "The Only One" comes as a sequel to the previously mentioned "Lonely Nights," and the song "Let Him Know" presents the other side of "Don't Let Him Know."

Bob Clearmountain and Adams are responsible for the production of this album, and they will work. Described by Adams as a genius soundmaker, Clearmountain combines the excitement of live performance with that of polished studio techniques. Keith Scott (guitar), Dave Taylor (bass), Mickey Curry (drums), and Tommy Mandel (keyboards) who comprise his touring band, combine with Adams' own guitar, keyboards, and vocals to produce a rougher, more vital sound than most records produced today. The results "sing" for themselves and the media is recognizing that Bryan Adams exists.

For the new album Adams chose songs more upbeat than those previously recorded. Adams calls his sound "heavy metal pop." He had an attitude that he wanted to express, which gave the album an edge that his earlier records lacked. The difference is apparent, since both sides of the album flow coherently without any song spoiling the momentum. The performance is so exciting, that it is on a par with a live performance.

Bryan Adams will be playing with Journey during a large part of their North American tour. In addition, he will be playing four shows on May 9 and 10 at Greenwich Village's Bottom Line.

Gandhi sweeps the Oscars while Spielberg and E.T. go home alone

By Michael Devereux

The big winner at Monday night's Academy Awards presentation was Gandhi, which received eight Oscars. Monday night's losers included Steven Spielberg, Paul Newman, and a home town audience that was subjected to three hours of poor presentations. Pat Dillon and Kristy McNichol, and shoddy musical numbers.

In the contested categories, Richard Attenborough's Gandhi edged Steven Spielberg for Best Director honors. Spielberg, who looked a bit upset, was surprisingly a bridesmaid once again. Louis Gossett Jr., the over zealous drill sergeant in An Officer and a Gentleman, received the award for Best Supporting Actor. John Lithgow, who played a transsexual ex-football player in The World According to Garp, may have been a better choice.

While Jessica Lange won the award for best supporting actress in Tootsie, it's generally assumed that it was a consolation prize for her not winning best actress in Frances. While her role in Tootsie was admirable, by winning best supporting actress, she actually eclipsed Kim Stanley's excellent portrayal of Frances Farmer's mother.

Meryl Streep was a sho in for best actress. Her role in Sophie's Choice was demanding, and so thorough that her competition was pale by comparison. While Dustin Hoffman's Tootsie was the early favorite to win the Oscar, Ben Kingsley's portrayal of Mahatma Gandhi got the credit it deserved. Paul Newman, who was the redeeming quality behind The Verdict, didn't have much of a chance in his sixth Oscar nomination.

In a hotly contested race for Best Picture, Gandhi, again got the nod over E.T. E.T., Hollywood's biggest moneymaker of all time, was considered to be a "childrens film." Gandhi was more of a "serious effort." Tootsie was lost in the shuffle.

Other films that were lost in the shuffle were Diner, whose original screenplay was better than Gandhi's. The Road Warrior, which was Australian, and therefore seemed like it was not important.

Although E.T. did win four awards, they were technical awards for audio and visual effects. The Honorary Award went to Mickey Rooney, who was once a well known child star.

King Kong fights inflation on 50th anniversary of movie

By Timothy Fyfe

The marking of the 50th Anniversary of the national release of King Kong has been celebrated this past week with countless revivals of the 1933 classic in area theaters and a showing on television this past Sunday. But no celebration matched the plans of the Empire State Building, the same building where Kong spent the last moments of his cinematic life.

Just as Carl Denham’s plans to showcase the captured ape on Broadway went askew with Kong’s escape, real life mimics art. A giant, air-filled replica of Kong, which is perched on the northwest corner of the building as a monument to the classic film, has become more difficult to inflate than getting James Watt to listen to the Beach Boys’ songs. Kong has been plagued, not with WWI biplanes, but with rips and tears in his massive rubber body. These inconveniences have prevented the organizers of the Kong festivities from fulfilling the reunion between Kong and one of the seven engineering wonders of the modern world.

On April 7, a plaque was dedicated commemorating the gorilla’s climb up the building at a party held on the 86th floor observatory. Also featured were Kong memorabilia and a recorded message from Fay Wray, the screaming blonde object of Kong’s affections, who is the sole survivor from cast and crew. King Kong remains a classic romantic adventure, capable of exciting contemporary audiences as much as the first-day crowds that gathered at Radio City Music Hall when the movie opened there 50 years ago in the midst of the Great Depression.

Even though critics have come to interpret King Kong as an oppressed worker rebelling in an industrialized society, others have even detected racial (Kong is subdued in the jungle and exploited in civilization) and sexual (the Empire State Building as a Freudian phallic symbol) clues as the key to understanding Kong. But co-producer and director Merian C. Cooper reiterated shortly before his death in 1973 that, “was escapist entertainment, pure and simple. A more illogical picture could never have been made.”

The movie was made in just over a year at a cost of $672,000, which was ambitious for the time. Kong was made by Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack, who met in WWI Russia, along with special effects genius Willis O’Brien. Made entirely in a Los Angeles studio, the film has come to earn the Empire State Building a special place in the heart of the two million visitors it receives annually. King Kong grossed $1.7 million in its original release and saved RKO studios from bankruptcy. The hot-air ape is now scheduled to be inflated sometime this week.

New York City is celebrating the 50th anniversary of King Kong by inflating a giant Kong replica which is perched on top of the Empire State Building.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER M/F
Larry Bouchard: Hey! We had a blast Tuesday night! And if I'm a Jessica Lange, then you're definitely a Richard Gere! Are black mesh shirts really your type? Pam and Jane.

Rob Thibault (alias writer, editor, photographer, biker, domestic, sometimes-student, etcetera, and blah, blah, blah...): Happy birthday to you! A quarter of a century, plus one, today. Many happy returns from your often-times roommate, Pam.

Bob Tobias: Are you ready, are you ready for this?! It's your personal personal! Hello, how are you? I'm fine. Hope to see you soon. Love, Pam.

Greenwald: Thanks for publicizing my mistake in graphic arts. Mom. P.S. Who taught you photography?

Lynn: Make sure you wear a pantsuit tonight. Dresses can be very cold on a motorcycle!

Patrice F.: Where have you been lately? I've got lots to tell you, as usual! See ya soon. KC.

Judy: Happy birthday! We're not getting older, we're getting better! Rob.

To the Free-basers: Good luck, hope you make it to the Series. We'll be there to cheer you on! Love, JCNM.

Despina Katris: Go for it. I am behind you 100 percent. Alvaro.

Sandie: I don't like Kosher food; will you give me some burgs at your wedding? The Biker.

To the gang: Thank you for making my birthday special. Love ya, Susie.

To the Bartells: Two halves are better than one! From the 106 B-Buds.

Supposed Sly Fox: When do we get to see this wealth, or these brains? There's nothing up your sleeve but your arm! We like Action! Alteregos.

Give Canon a shot—where? The Biker.

Moogie: Good luck Friday with your physical. I'll be thinking about you Thurs. night. Too bad you'll miss out on dancing. Little Friend.

To the people that are sitting on the stage for the Spring Ball—don't fall off!

Judy: Happy Birthday! I hope it's a good one. Lynn.

Happy Birthday, Rob! Don't worry, you're not an old man yet.

Madelyn: A new beginning. Like the sun rising out of the morning sky, bringing light to all that is dark, it's a new beginning—between us. Michael.

HRO: I still love you, but I've just taken a sabbatical. Be well, all, and most importantly, be real! Peace! Samuel.

To the one the Nobody knows. When will it end? (Never, I hope). It's only the beginning of what I want to last forever. But something must be done about the Tiny Terror.

By James S. White Jr.

Jim White was arrogant when it came to his athletic ability, an elitist who felt nothing but contempt for the masses to whom sport meant little more than recreation. Whenever he played ball with "civilians," his designation for the rabble, he tended to bully. He once floored a doctor at the YMCA, smashing his face and glasses with a thrown elbow, and then said, standing over the fallen doctor, in flat, Nazi-like tones, "Not only am I bigger and stronger than you, I will knock you out."

But standing next to Ed Lowry, White felt small, impotent, as insignificant as the kid who never gets picked when choosing up sides for football.

Now for the million dollar question. Ready? Who is Ed Lowry? You have ten seconds......five.....give up?......ask the guy next to you......time. Okay, I'll let you in on the secret.

Ed Lowry is MSC's premier athlete. He's our Sir Lancelot who mounts his horse and rides boldly into the fray. He won the 1983 national collegiate weightlifting championship, soundly defeating competitors from much larger schools-Brigham Young in Utah, University of Missouri, Michigan State, to name a few—but the college for some inexplicable reason pretends that Ed doesn't exist.

That MSC refuses to recognize this champion, much less grant him the accolades he so richly deserves, is sad enough; but the vexation grows considerably when coupled with the knowledge that Ed could have easily won the championship the preceding three years, his only obstacle being the funds necessary for transport. The college, acting on the assumption that Ed doesn't exist, declined to scrape up the few hundred it would have cost to finance the trip. Consequently, Ed missed out, as did MSC.

Ed is a man of intelligence, wit, and enterprise. He's a world class athlete who majors in political science. To fill in the gaps he is opening a nightclub called Mickey's in Belleville. From all of this we can deduce that Ed possesses an easy mobility, gliding smoothly between the worlds of academics, aggressive competition, and business.

At a workout with Ed at the Essex County Racquet Club's weightroom, a vast facility which is spread over two tennis courts, White watched the athlete approach the bar. Whuumph! Red faced, muscles rigid, the cords of his neck pulled taut. Ed lifted nearly 400 pounds over his head. Frightening. He did it again. The steel bar was bending under the weight. Whuumph! He did it again. WHUMPH! Up..Up..Up. Ed was like a crane swinging steel girders into place.

"Come on, Ed! Get it up," Phil Grappili, Ed's mentor, urged him on. Grappili is a legendary figure, a winner of three Olympic silver medals in 1968, 72, and 76 for weightlifting, and is the only athlete to win medals in four consecutive Pan American games in 1967, 71, 75, and 79. His collegiate records still stand, and he went to MSC. Who is Phil Grappili?

Ed Lowry won the 1983 national weightlifting championship for his weight class. He represented MSC in the competition. Lowry, aside from pumping iron, will be opening a nightclub called Mickey's in Belleville.

dash last week to add to her success with the relay.

Frisch is also a product of the 7-1 1982 cross country team, taking third in the 400 and helping the 1600 relay team to over come SCS. Kim Wood, Cyndi Maddox and Sharon Keas joined Frisch to run a 4:11.2.

Noval holds the 200 meter school record with a time of 25.2 and ran a 26.4 to take first place against SCS. Noval has qualified for nationals twice in her career at MSC.
Undefeated women's track team victorious at Middlesex

By Kathy Szorrentini
The women's track and field team claimed the Middlesex Community College Relays team title, after eight Indian relays placed in the top four of their events. Senior, Kim Shelley, led the Indians in the weights, and the strong distance squad of Dana Caruso, Cyndi Maddox, Patty Leisher and Carla Gambill gained valuable points for the MSC victory.

Shelley joined teammate Pam Donaldson, to take first place in the shot put relay. Donaldson had the best throw of the meet, tossing a 32'2'. Shelley followed with the second best of the day, a fine effort of 30'10. Dawn Smith threw a 30'6" in the discus relay.

Caruso, Maddox, Leisher and Gambill pooled their efforts for first place in the distance medley with a time of 13:40.8, and returned to take second in the 4 x 400 meter relay in 1:27.8.

The Indian sprinters brought home two-third place finishes in the sprint medley, and the 4 x 400 meter relay.

Laura Frisch, Sharon Kears, Tracey Brown and Gaye Novell sped to a 4:35.2 clocking. Kears, Novell, Brown and Jon Wood made up the 400 relay, running a time of 50.8.

In the high jump relay, Wood cleared 4'10" and Karen McMurry leaped 49' to finish third. In the long jump, Brown and McMurry combined a 6.79 meter effort for the Indians.

Coach, Michele Willis, was happy with the team's finish. It being the first time the Indians have won the Middlesex Relays. "We did well, but our individual performances could have been better," Willis said.

Indians qualify for Nationals
Willie's emphasis on individual performance paid off last week, when five members of the team qualified for the NCAA National Championships in a meet against Southern Connecticut State College.

Patty Leisher returned from an outstanding cross country season to qualify in the 5,000 meter run with a time of 18:07.13 seconds and the national standard. Leisher was a national qualifier last year in both spring track and cross country.

Jean Weiglesworth threw 40.9 meters, to earn a trip to the championships and holds the school record in the javelin, breaking it last year for the first time since 1970.

The 4 x 100 meter relay team sped to a 50.2 second qualifying time, two tenths under the national standard. Sharon Kears, Tracey Brown, Laura Frisch and Gaye Novell made up the winning team.

Kears added nine points to the Indian victory over SCS, taking the 400 with a time of 59.9 seconds flat, and is looking to break the school record of 58.1 this season.

Brown picked up two third place finishes in the long jump and the 100 See Middlesex Relays p. 23

Tennis team takes two keeping undefeated record in NJSSAC
The men's tennis team scored two victories over Jersey City State and Kean College, maintaining their undefeated conference record.

The Indians topped JCS, 6-3 with two of Jersey City's points earned by default. In singles, Tom Leslie won 6-2 and 6-2, Randy Stein won 6-2, 7-5 and 7-5 to take the win. Vince Russell took a quick 6-1, 6-1 victory and John Tomanello won the final three sets to win 4-6, 6-2 and 6-1.

In doubles, MSC swept all three matches with one of them by default. The team of Leslie and Stein took their match 6-2 and 7-6, and the second win by Russell and Staunton, 6-0 and 6-2, lead to an easy victory.

At home MSC took on Kean Tuesday afternoon, sweeping all six singles matches to take the contest 6-0. The doubles matches were rained out.

Lawrence Davidson faced the strongest player from Kean who gave him little trouble as he took the match 6-4 and 6-2. The other five matches were easily taken by the squad, with Joe Staunton shutting out his opponent 6-0 and 6-0. Russell took a quick 6-1, 6-1 victory, Geoffrey Lawes won 6-0 and 6-1, Leslie picked up a 6-2, 6-2 win, and Stein won 6-2 and 6-1.

MSC rallies in ninth to win 8-4

With the score tied 4-4 in the ninth inning, second baseman Jim Hill, who went 3 for 4, cracked a two-run single to knock in the winning RBI. Steve Lipinski and Mike Nicols each singled, adding two more runs to cap a four run rally. Junior, righthander Greg Bachison relieved Paul Nelson in the fourth inning, pitching the remainder of the game to gain the win and up his record to 3-0.

Bachison has been making a strong showing on the mound, boasting an E.R.A. of 1.17 after 15 and 2/3 innings pitched in 16 games. The team's record is now 12-5.

Laxmen rally unsuccessful as
MSC falls to Villanova, 17-11

The men's lacrosse team dropped a close, hard-fighting game to the Villanova University Wildcats last Saturday to lower their record to 3-3. Despite a fine performance by goalee Steve Dudaski, who saved 14 of 33 shots by Villanova, MSC lost by a score of 17-11.

The first period was marked by strong defensive play as neither team scored until halfway through the quarter. With 8:42 remaining on the clock, Tom Haggerty of Villanova scored to break the silence and minutes later, duplicated the feat to give the Wildcats a 2-0 lead. The Indians came back to score twice before the period was over. Kurt Sahlistron, with an assist by Kevin O'Leary, made the first, and Jerry Jacob followed one minute later to tie the score.

Baseball tops Kutztown by eight
The MSC baseball team defeated Kutztown last Thursday 18-10. In the fourth inning, with the score tied at nine-all, the Indians scored four runs to put the win out of reach for Kutztown. The inning was highlighted by a run-scoring double by Mike Nicolas. Nicolas was four for four with four RBIs. Greg Bachison, who took the mound in the third inning to relieve starter Todd Carnevale, got the win up to his record to 2-0.

Women's track takes ESSC by two
The women's track and field team topped East Stroudsburg State College 87-56 with five members taking two wins each, and two relays claiming victories.

In the field events, Jean Wohlgemuth won both the javelin and the high jump. Kim Wood pulls ahead in the 100 meter hurdles to help the Indians defeat SCS last week at MSC. Wood sped to a first place finish with a time of 16.8 and ran the second leg of the winning 1600 m. relay team.
