Library re-opens following asbestos removal

By Jess Rothenberg

"The library, which re-opened on Jan. 30, 1984, is completely safe from asbestos contamination," Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, said.

Quinn referred to several air-monitoring reports furnished by Kassaian and D’Angelo, the environmental consulting and engineering firm which tested the library during and after the asbestos removal process.

One half a fiber per cubic centimeter is the most asbestos allowable in the air over an eight-hour period, as mandated by the U.S. Department of Environmental Protection, and the test readings showed that only nine out of a thousand parts of a fiber per cubic centimeter were present in the library atmosphere, according to Quinn.

The staff of the library returned to work on Jan. 23 in order to reshelve books and prepare for the Jan. 30 opening.

The total cost of removal of the asbestos and replacement with new insulation material was $270,000, according to Quinn. These funds were taken from the Deferred Maintenance Fund, which is now exhausted for this fiscal year, which ends in June 1984," Quinn said.

Quinn added that no other asbestos removal projects are scheduled for this year, but in case of an asbestos emergency, extra appropriations might be available from the state for that purpose.

The N.J. Department of Health prepared a report last semester outlining all the buildings on the MSC campus which contained asbestos. According to a report issued last year by Allen N. Koplin M.D., M.P.H., Attorney State Commissioner of Health, other buildings at MSC contain asbestos are Stone Hall, Panzer Gymnasium, Power House, Life Hall, College Hall, Chapin Hall, Bond House, Bohn Hall, Memorial Auditorium, Me-Eachern Music Building, Webster Hall.

"President Dickson and his cabinet decided that the library was the number one priority," Quinn said.

Jeff Cantwell, site supervisor for Falcon Associates, Inc. of Bristol, the firm responsible for the asbestos removal, explained the process.

"The asbestos was removed one section at a time from the library. First each area was enclosed with plastic walls in order to form barriers and air filter systems were installed.

"Then workers wearing protective suits went the ceilings down and scraped off the asbestos. The asbestos was then placed on plastic bags on the floor and safely disposed of in a dumpster which would be taken to an approved landfill site in South Jersey. Any asbestos in the area was caught by the filters," Cantwell said.

After the removal process was complete, new plastic was put on the floor and the new insulation material without asbestos was sprayed onto the ceilings. Cantwell added that students who looked at the ceilings won’t notice any difference because the new material looks the same as the old but doesn’t contain asbestos. The plastic ceiling gratings were cleaned and re-installed.

"The work on the ventilation system had nothing to do with the asbestos removal, but as long as the building was closed for repairs, we figured we would kill two birds with one stone," Quinn said.

He added that the $70,000 included the installation of a new return air fan because the old one was broken. Ducts were also installed to control the noise from the new fan. The price included balancing and adjusting the whole ventilation system, which will be completed in the middle of February.

"Students shouldn’t worry when they see openings in the library ceiling because that is due to the continuing electrical work surrounding the adjustments to the ventilation system and has nothing to do with the asbestos removal," Quinn said.

In an unrelated incident, a water main break outside the library caused some flooding of the basement of the library, in the reading room and periodical sections, on Jan. 16. The break was fixed and the rugs in the periodicals room have dried out.

Casale drafted by USFL but may hold out for NFL

By John Connolly

Senior Mark Casale became the first player in MSC’s history to be drafted by a professional football team when he was selected by the USFL’s New Jersey Generals in January. However, Casale may pass up the USFL and wait for the NFL draft in May.

The Indian quarterback, who was drafted in the tenth round, said there are two reasons why he will most likely hold out for the NFL. Both Casale and his agent feel they can get more money in the NFL than the Generals are presently offering and Casale said, "It has always been a dream of mine, since I was a kid, to play in the NFL." I’m not greedy, but I feel I can get into the NFL," he said. "If don’t make it, I can always fall back on the USFL next year.

Casale feels confident he will be drafted higher than the tenth round in the NFL draft because a number of NFL organizations have been interested in him. The Washington Redskins are atop the list. Casale spoke with Redskin head coach Joe Gibbs last week. He said Gibbs will be flying up sometime next week to meet with and check out the Redskin prospects.

Other NFL organizations who have shown interest in Casale include the Dallas Cowboys, Seattle Seahawks, Cincinnati Bengals, New York Giants and Los Angeles Raiders.

Casale, who set 16 Indian records while engineering MSC to a 26-4-2 record during his college career, was scheduled to graduate in December. Playing in either the NFL or USFL would interrupt his studies. However, Casale said he definitely wants to earn his degree, even if it means coming back to college during the off season.

The 6-3 225 pound Union resident expressed payment by MSC but a decision has not been made as to whether a payment will be made by the college and the contractor may be putting in a claim to its insurance company. He added that the $1,700 is under the deductible of MSC’s insurance plan, and therefore no claim was made by the college.

"In addition to the asbestos removal costs, $70,000 worth of modifications were made to the ventilation system in the library," Quinn said.

"The work on the ventilation system had nothing to do with the asbestos removal," Quinn said.

Male student assaults officer while waiting on bookstore line

By Maria Ferrer

An MSC senior pleaded guilty to simple assault on a police officer in Little Falls Municipal Court last night.

Mark Thomas Walsh, 26, was accused of unlawfully attacking Roger Terry, 34, a Montclair police officer. The officer received facial injuries.

Walsh, who was released on $2,500 bail, paid the officer an additional $1,000 in restitution for dental damage. The student was also temporarily suspended, according to Edward Martin, associate dean of student affairs, the maximum suspension period is 10 days.

According to an employee of the bookstore who witnessed the scene on Jan. 25, Walsh was apparently on line to get into the bookstore. Upon entering, officer Terry, in charge of admittance into the store, instructed Walsh to leave his book outside the entranceway. The witness claimed Walsh was evidently on the wrong line because he wanted to return a book, not make a purchase.

The officer then pointed the student in the direction of the employees who could assist him. Several words were exchanged between the two men as Walsh walked towards the book returns desk. Walsh then walked back towards officer Terry and said a few words. Terry pushed Walsh against a glass wall. Walsh punched Terry in the face. The two men fell to the floor fighting, and were separated by students.

The witness said Walsh resisted arrest and Terry said, "Give me your wrists or I'll shoot you!"

Tonya Bell, an employee at the bookstore, who also witnessed the scene, explained came from deer hunting.

"I want to do is get my book and I'm out of here," Terry then said. "The only thing I want you're going to jail," and then proceeded to handcuff Walsh.

Walsh's attorney pleaded with Judge J.J. Gavenda that Walsh had no prior penal record and would graduate in May.

Gavenda asked Terry if he thought Walsh should go to jail. Terry answered, "No your honor."

Walsh did not receive a jail sentence, but will serve a 30-day probation period and pay the restitution of $1,000.

After the hearing, Terry said, "I was an unfortunate incident."

Walsh said he is "anxious to get back to school."

Bill A-893 Falls Again in N.J. Senate

Bill A-893, which would allow the student representative to the board of trustees at each state college the right to vote on board issues, failed for the second time in the state Senate during the Jan. 9 session. According to Bill Solomon, president of the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA), the bill failed because several lame-duck senators left the session before the bill came up. Although extensive NJSA lobbying seemed to insure the bill's passage, the vote still fell two short with 19 for, seven against, and 12 abstentions.

Solomon now plans to consult with the writer of the bill, state assemblyman Byron Baer. "It's just a question of re-working the bill to make it more attractive to the Senate and perhaps, more in the interest of the students," Solomon said.

"The bill is one of the issues that will be discussed at the upcoming NJSA conference, scheduled for Feb. 3-6 at Kean College.

School Closed?

The following radio stations will announce the closing of MSC in the event of bad weather. All are AM stations:

- 710 WOR New York
- 1310 WJL Asbury Park
- 1450 WCTC New Brunswick
- 1510 WRAN Dover
- 1590 WFRA Plainfield

In the event of icy conditions, steep inclines (i.e. Webster Road) and certain Quarry roadways will be closed between midnight and 6 a.m. These roads will be cleared for use during peak traffic hours.

Two Named to Board of Trustees

Luis C. Aguero of Edison and Philip H. Thayer, Jr. of Mendham were installed as members of the MSC board of trustees last week.

Aguero, whose term runs until 1988, is president of Technical Associates, Inc., Consulting Engineers and Contractors, Union. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree in electrical engineering from Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta.

Thayer is a retired member of the technical staff at AT&T Bell Telephone Laboratories, Murray Hill, where he was executive director of Computing Technology and Design Engineering. He received his Bachelor of Science degree in physics and his Master of Arts degree in Communications Engineering, both from Harvard University. Thayer's term runs until 1987.

Appointed by the N.J. Board of Higher Education and approved by Gov. Thomas H. Kean, the two new members bring the MSC board of trustees' membership to nine voting members. Non-voting members include representatives of the college's alumni, faculty and students.

Get Your ID

ID's are necessary for various library privileges, all athletic events, swimming pool and tennis court usage, and on-campus cultural events. To get your ID bring your schedule or a tuition receipt voucher to Room 125 in the Student Center Annex. Publicity Seminar

The SGA Public Relations Committee will sponsor a seminar on publicity on Feb. 10. The seminar will be held in Rooms 411-414 of the Student Center from 2 to 4 p.m. All clubs are urged to attend. For information call 493-4202.

First Week of Semester Ends with Two Assualts

By Maria Ferrer

On Jan. 25 a police officer in charge of admittance into the bookstore was allegedly physically assaulted by an impatient male student on line. The officer received injuries to his face and head. The assailant was arrested and released on $2,500 bail. He is now facing an indictment and possible jail sentence.

At approximately 2 a.m. on Jan. 26, an employee of the N.J. broadcast station on Clove Rd. was assaulted by three males wearing ski masks. The employee, who was searching the grounds after hearing suspicious noises, was knocked unconscious by the three suspects, who fled from the scene.

A 1974 Mazda, worth $4,800, was recovered on Jan. 25 in Lot 28. The car, which had been stolen in Harrison, was found with the engine running. Police believe that the culprits then stole a 1974 Pontiac, worth $2,500, which had been parked next to the recovered auto.

Also in Lot 28, on Jan. 23, the remnants of a new auto were found. Among the remains were the rear end, the sides, the roof and dashboard of the car. Police suspect the car had been stolen and stripped of valuable parts that can be resold.

A radio was stolen from a parked car in Lot 28 on Jan. 25. The approximate value of the radio is $200.

On Jan. 27 the window of a parked car was smashed in order to steal several belongings. The jewelry and clothing taken are said to be worth $200.

A theft in a Webster Hall room occurred Jan. 23. Sixty dollars was stolen from the resident's suite. There were no indications of forced entry.

On Jan. 29, a Freeman Hall window was smashed by a male with his fists. The male fled the scene bleeding. Police believe the incident was the result of a lover's quarrel.
The Drop-In Center, (an information, referral and peer counseling service) is staffed entirely by student volunteers. The caliber of the service offered to the student body cannot be maintained without you. If you want to help people, learn more about yourself, and do something constructive with your time for 10 hours (min.) a week, this could be the toughest non-paying job you have ever loved.

While the training is rigorous and the commitment level high, the experience will be carried throughout your life. The Drop-In Center is a good place to grow for students of all majors. We will teach you the lost art of listening as you learn by doing.

Administration office hours extended for night students

By Jim Morrison

Recognizing how difficult it can be for evening and weekend students to find time during the day to conduct business at the college, the Office for Student Affairs has arranged to keep some of the administrative offices open on Thursday evenings until 8 p.m. this semester.

Dr. Jean Armstrong, vice president for student affairs, said when the SGA approached her concerning the need for night students to have access to administrative offices during the evening, her office had already begun to put together a supplemental schedule for extended hours.

Thursday was selected because the greatest number of students attend classes that evening. Armstrong said that the 8 p.m. closing allows for optimal utilization because students attending early classes can visit either before or after classes; those with later classes can arrive earlier to use the facilities before their classes begin, and for those students who do not have a Thursday schedule but who work during the day, the extended hours should allow them to conduct their business without taking time off from their jobs.

Armstrong said she will send bulletins to the pertinent departments as a means to inform the student body of the extended hours. She said those offices that are routinely open one or more evenings a week, such as the Health Center, will not be affected by this new schedule.

Viewing her own office as "kind of an ombudsman office for evening students," Armstrong said it can serve to direct students with problems to the proper channels for guidance. Either Armstrong, Edward Martin, associate dean for student affairs, or James Harris, assistant dean for student affairs, will alternately be available in the Office for Student Affairs to assist students. While 'drop-in' business will be accepted, it is recommended that an appointment be made beforehand to facilitate students' schedules.

"This is a great thing for night students!" Gloria Caboy said. Caboy is a Second Careers honor student who has earned 98 credits the "hard way" by attending night courses for more than five years. She said, "It's about time they started paying attention to the evening students," and added, "I hope they don't stop here."

Victor Niedbalski, president of the Weekend College Student Association, said, "It's not only good for night students but it's also good for weekend students.

While Armstrong does not foresee any further changes being made at this time, she said, "If evening hours prove of real service to the students, I am hopeful to find ways to open facilities further."

In addition to the Office of Vice President for Student Affairs, the Financial Aid Office, the Revenue Office, the Office of the Registrar, and Admissions Office will remain open in College Hall. Career Services, in the Student Center, will also stay open until 8 p.m. on Thursday evenings.

Foreign policy symposium dressed by Counselor Orlanda Moncada from the Nicaraguan mission to the U.N. and Father Raoul Comesonas, who works in a Latin American refugee center in Union City, N.J.

Commenting on U.S. support of "military regimes" in Paraguay, Chile, Uruguay, El Salvador, and Guatemala, Moncada said, "The U.S. does not care about democracy but only wants to keep its puppets in control in Central and Latin America."

He added that U.S. intervention in Nicaragua is blocking that country's attempts to build its own society. "A real democratic society is one in which people make power," Moncada said.

Comesonas gave a "thirdparty" view of the Central American conflict. He cont. from p. 3 said there is "no clear answer" to the conflict and the U.S. should not be proposing all the solutions to the Central American problem. He suggested that the U.S. should not unilaterally withdraw from the troubled areas but should instead help bring about economic reforms which would encourage democratic reform. "The U.S. should help bring the mainstream of the people against the death squads of the right and the terrorism of the left," Comesonas said.

Commenting on the Kissinger Commission Report on Central America, Comesonas agreed with the report's statement that "we have no choice but to respond to the present situation in Central America."

Job choice should be made by trial and error

By Eileen Bruck

Benjamin Franklin claimed death and taxes were two of life's certainties. He probably should have added work to his list. Most Americans spend 80 percent of their adult lives at work and some 38 hours per week at their jobs. In the past, most people pursued the work of their families, and occupational choice was restricted by class, sex, race, or social position. Several factors, including educational opportunities and laws against discrimination, have eliminated many of these barriers to career selection. Today's students have more career paths to consider than any generation before.

This great range of possibilities can be vastly alleviated by beginning to take action early in your college career by developing awareness of yourself, the world of work, and academic options. One other important point to note is that there is more than one career possibility for each person. Career counselors in the Career Services Office help students, during individual and group sessions, identify their skills, interests and values, and plan short- and long-range goals. Current articles and books on thousands of job titles and industries can be found in Career Service's extensive office library. Information is available about employment trends, salaries, nature of work, education required, entry-level positions, and advantages and disadvantages of a particular career. It is even possible to talk to people who are now working in a career that may be under consideration. The "Alumni Network" has over 300 graduates who have volunteered to talk about the work they do.

Doing some reality testing can also help with career decision making. Taking a part-time job or volunteer experience is a unique opportunity to observe a work setting at close range and see how it feels. Career Services receives notices every day about part-time and volunteer positions.

Come into the Career Services Office and get started planning your future. The office, located in the Student Center Annex, Room 104, is open Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and on Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Appointments are not necessary to use the library and look in the part-time and full-time job books. All career-planning and job-hunting seminars require no pre-registration. Individual counseling sessions need to be scheduled in advance.

Chi Alpha granted charter after extensive debate

By Chris Worthington

At last night's SGA meeting, the Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship was granted a Class IV charter.

The group has been under attack since Dec. 8, when SGA legislator Jerry Boyle wrote a letter to The Montclarion urging his fellow legislators to vote against the charter's renewal. Boyle said he had been informed by former members of Chi Alpha that "members of Chi Alpha believe and "preach" to the members of the organization that the Elks, the Masons, the Lion's Club, the Rotary, the Kowian Club, Optimists International, the Knights of Columbus, the Knights of Pythias, or any other civic or fraternity or country club worships the devil." Boyle also wrote, "if the SGA re-charters Chi Alpha, we would not only be condoning these nonsensical attacks, but would also be helping Chi Alpha indirectly."

Steve Expamer, campus pastor of Chi Alpha, responded to Boyle's accusations in a letter to The Montclarion on Dec. 15. He said, "I don't mind people criticizing our views or beliefs, but I do get upset when people make unfounded statements that are slanderous."

Ping pong loses to flea market

To the editor:
Welcome to the Montclair State College Flea Market. We combine both your educational goals with your consumer needs. In aisle one, we carry a wide variety of personal items like cosmetics, hair accessories, lingerie, and costume jewelry. In aisle two we carry only the very best headbands and a full line of rock and roll buttons. Happy shopping.

Believe me, I am not against the school making money. I would like to believe that the more money the school makes, the less our tuition would be. I know that’s not the case though.

What I am against is the schools blatant disregard for its table tennis playing students. Our ping pong table was sacrificed for peddlers selling cut rate merchandise.

While ping pong may not be popular with everyone on campus, this so-called flea market (on Monday there were only two vendors to be found) is the first step in the administration’s long range plan. Their goal is to eventually turn the Student Center into a drinking man’s bar, and reap the off top.

What about the Rathskeller? Turn it into a drinking man’s bar, and reap the money from more drinks served. The bookstores? Barnes and Noble does a better job, let them open a branch on campus.

The real money is here, but it’s not in useless trinkets. It’s in the institutions that the school runs so inefficiently. How does McDonaldland State College sound to you?

Support the United Jewish Appeal

To the editor:
As leaders of MSC’s 1984 United Jewish Appeal (UJA) campaign, we would like to take this opportunity to describe the nature and function of UJA.

UJA is the largest Jewish fundraising organization in the U.S., and we are concerned with raising funds to meet the humanitarian needs of Jewish people in Israel and throughout the world. The UJA is a nonprofit, nonpolitical organization. Therefore, none of its expenditures are directed towards military or political activity.

Funds raised by UJA are transmitted to its beneficiaries. The Jewish Agency for Israel, the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, United Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, and the New York Association for New Americans.

Less than 5 percent is spent on administrative costs.

The funds support rescue and relief programs for Jews in lands of oppression, and they finance the development and maintenance of absorption, educational, social welfare, housing and job training programs for Jewish immigrants to Israel and other countries.

We join proudly with our fellow leaders throughout the free world and see our commitment as one which will enrich our own lives and those of Jewish people now and in the future. It is our hope that as leaders of the United Jewish Appeal Campaign at MSC, we will be able to educate other students in the understanding of these needs. Stop by our UJA information table in the Student Center on Feb. 21 and 22 or the Jewish Student Union, Room 407.

‘Shining Star’ drive a success

To the editor:
There were many surprised children and happy families this holiday season because of Montclair State College’s response to the “Shining Star” Christmas gift drive. Over 170 youngsters were the recipients of our generosity and sharing.

I want to say thank you to those who assisted in this drive: Mary, Fran, Kathy, Judy, Brian; Alpha Phi Omega; the Drop-In Center; the residents of Stone Hall and the Newman Community.

Look for the “Shining Star” again this year. A belated wish for a joyous and healthy 1984.

The Price of books is not stacked in the students' favor

By Kathy Gilligan

For most of us, the ordeal is over. But the irritating images of bookstore lines and prices are not yet forgotten. The basement floor of the Student Center yet resounds with the audible, though fading, grumblings of the last two weeks. Though the grumblings may fade, their cause remains, and the question persists: Why are the prices of textbooks continually a threat to the financial well-being of college students?

To find the answer to this perplexing question, I telephoned an editor at Addison-Wesley, a large textbook publishing house in California. This editor was more than happy to answer my questions, and to fill me in on some of the particulars of textbook manufacturing and publishing, and I'd like to pass this information on to you.

The easiest way to talk about textbook prices is to compare textbooks in relation to bestsellers. We've all seen the McDonald-like claims gracing the covers of bestsellers: "Over 1,000,000 copies sold in the U.S.!” It doesn't take too much reflection to realize that this kind of boast has never appeared on the covers of textbooks and never will.

For any particular textbook, the number of books sold will range between 2,000 and 10,000 copies. A publisher would consider himself lucky, indeed, to sell 5,000 copies of a textbook. All this means is that the market for textbooks is limited, and the more limited the market, the less chance there is of making a profit. One way to bridge the gap between manufacturing costs and profits is to charge more for any item in a limited market.

Because textbooks are a limited market, there is a high degree of competition among manufacturers and publishers. I was told that new technologies, such as word processing and electronic typesetting, have created an even more competitive business. Needless to say, like any other competitive business, the invisible hand of planned obsolescence is present.

For example, the concepts for first and second year calculus textbooks have not changed in years, but the textbooks themselves have. Though the use of new technology, newer books can include three or four color graphics, and color photos, along with more illustrations and examples. Consequently, it is no longer surprising to find that, upon bringing back your “Calculus I” text to the bookstore for a refund, you can't get it. Your textbook has become the equivalent of obsolete. Although this may prompt you to question whether your class has become obsolete too, never fear: the competition has simply produced a sleeker, flashier text.

For lovers of irony, it is interesting to note that the new technologies used in manufacturing, were initially supposed to bring the costs down, and thereby decrease textbook prices. Instead, the use of typesetters, word processors, and computers that have made it easier to include four color graphs and diagrams, have had the adverse effect of raising prices.

Beyond planned obsolescence, there is regular, everyday obsolescence. Evolving theories in fields such as computer science, medical science, and current history account for the obsolescence inherent in these texts. It is the costs of continual updating that you pay for when you buy the new textbooks.

The costs involved in publishing break down in this manner. Ten percent goes to the author as a royalty. Another 25 percent goes into plant costs, which includes overhead and warehousing. The largest amount, 40 percent, is spent on manufacturing costs. Manufacturing includes the editing, proofs, paper, binding, glue, and wages for everyone from the editors to the typesetters. What is left, 25 percent, is the maximum profit a publisher can make on the sale of the texts.

After all is said and done, a publisher usually sells the texts to college bookstores at a 20 percent discount. This means that a book selling at a bookstore for $20 probably was sold by the publisher for $16. Of course, this may not always be the case. What happens when the texts reach the bookstore is another matter entirely.

The point in writing this column was an attempt to soothe your feelings still haunting the Student Center corridors. The next time you try to sell a text back, and can't, remember planned obsolescence. When you find yourself paying $35 for a $50 page softcover text, take a look at that flash. Maybe you can take some comfort in knowing that you're keeping a lot of editors, typesetters, and binders well fed. Maybe.

Computer aids happy to help

To the editor:

This letter is in response to a letter to the Editor entitled "Computer Aides Offer Little Help" (Dec. 15, 1983). I, as a computer lab assistant, found this letter offensive, not to mention, untrue.

First of all, let me say that the views I express are strictly my own. I am not a spokesman for the computer lab assistants. I would like to answer the charges brought by "Name withheld by my request."

Just to make one thing clear, lab assistants do not hate business majors. Your professor is correct, we are there to help you if you run into a problem. However, we are not there to take you by the hand and guide you through every detail. If you have ever been in the Computer Center toward the end of the semester you would see why this would not work.

We try to help as many people as we can. It is not fair to help one person for twenty minutes while ignoring another. We cannot spend hours explaining the hows and whys, this is the job of the professor. It seems to me that many business professors do not spend adequate time explaining to students how to use the computer. If you got the impression that we thought you were a nuisance, don't take it personally. The reason for this is that it can get on one's nerves after several days of explaining what the professor should have taught you in the first place.

Secondly, when one of us is explaining something, write it down. This way you have it the next time. I have had the same person ask me the same question day after day, and I have explained again, and again.

I do not know everything about every aspect of the computer, no one does. A point brought up in the article was that "name withheld" was given wrong information and lost the program. If there is no manager around to help with a question, which would you prefer: an educated guess which may solve your problem, or an "I don't know" which gets you nowhere?

To avoid these and other problems let me make a suggestion. If you do not have straight in your mind why you should type something, ask the professor when he/she is explaining it, make him do his job. If then you still are having problems we will be more than happy to help you.

States with traditional bottle bills have made inquiries about New Jersey's methods because they realize the need to recycle solid waste beyond simply beverage containers.

The proposed bill would impose a $1,000 fine on the store's responsibility to proof the k, cf which would punish persons under the age of 21 who are caught buying liquor by revoking their driving licenses for one year, and imposing a $1,000 fine to get it back.

Letters

"I think it's a terrible idea, especially when it comes to the license. One doesn't necessarily have to do with the other."

Debbie Will
Sophomore/physical education

"That's a stiff penalty, but we need a law to that effect. We have to get them to stop buying it if they're under 21."

Brian Gabriel
Junior/economics

"First, we need better preventive measures. We have to get to the root of the problem and find out why our young are drinking, whether it's emotional or psychological. Then additional laws would help, but the punishment need not be so extreme."

Tomaso Jimenez
Junior/political science

"That's going a little too far, now. They should concentrate on the driving aspect. It should be the store's responsibility to proof the kid."

Tim Wescott
Senior/marketing

"That's a stiff penalty. Buying it doesn't necessarily mean you're going to drive. Getting caught drunk driving, now that's something else."

Marcia Robertson
Junior/community health

Teacher opposes bottle bill

To the editor:

The Bottle Bill now being considered by the NJ legislature is vehemently opposed by many active conservationists. The proposed bill would provide deposits only for beverage containers. It does nothing for broken bottles, dented cans, or containers of wine, juice, liquor or mayonnaise and completely ignores newspapers. That is why Oregon had to double its Youth Little Patrol after that state's bottle bill was passed.

Furthermore, recycling glass currently yields enough profit to finance not only glass recycling but also the recycling of newspapers and aluminum. People who have worked hard to set up comprehensive recycling programs in NJ, especially in Montclair and nearby towns, are distressed by the prospect of years of effort being undermined by the proposed bill.

Pretenders are back in the running with a new, polished sound

By Mark Breitinger

When the Pretenders first appeared on the rock scene, their eponymously titled debut LP, audiences were somewhat taken aback. Here was a band that forged their own sound, intertwining elements of pop and punk into a new sound that owed more to sheer guts than musical talent. Their soaring rhythm section of Pete Farndon and Martin Chambers formed a rock-hard foundation for James Honeyman-Scott's undisciplined guitar thrashings and Chrissie Hynde's strutting vocals. The resulting sound was so aggressive, that you couldn't help but listen.

However, the band's critics dismissed them as a one-hit curiosity. Many pointed out that the group's lack of instrumental ability, and Hynde's questionable vocal prowess, would result in a short-lived career in the rock world. The commercial failure of their 1981 Pretenders II album, as well as the tragic, untimely deaths of both Farndon and Honeyman-Scott, seemed to strengthen these predictions.

With the release of their long-awaited third LP, Learning to Crawl, the Pretenders are clearly back in the running. The band that forged a new sound, and always has been, Chrissie Hynde. She performs with an aggressive sexuality, a unique vocal style and most of all, she projects herself as a unique and compelling personality.

In the trendy world of rock'n'roll, Hynde is a woman who is not afraid to show what she feels inside, even when those feelings are ugly or violent. Sometimes, Hynde could make her audience believe that sadistic struts like "Tattooed Love Boys" had a deeper meaning than the lyrics conveyed, and that those meanings had great importance.

On Learning to Crawl, Hynde has not compromised or obscured her personality whatsoever. Still, it's a very different record for the Pretenders. It includes a collection of pop tunes about life and love, and is full of charming instrumental touches like the jangly acoustic guitar that opens "Back on the Chain Gang," their 1983 hit single.

With Malcolm Foster on bass and Robbie MacIntosh on lead guitar, this is a new band led by a new Chrissie Hynde—a mother who has learned a whole lot more to life than success and sex. "Middle of the Road," the album's opener and current single, is a contemplation of the apathy that grows from living comfortably. "When you own a big chunk of the bloody Third World, the babies just come with the scenery," Hynde calls out, her voice dripping with scorn. But eventually the lyrics convey her own desire to get out of the fast lane. "I'm not the way I used to be. I've gotta get up early. Feed baby." This song is as much an ode to family life as "Back on the Chain Gang."" (dedicated to Honeyman-Scott) is a call-to-arms, with its in-the-face-of-all-odds determination, and belief in justice.

Although the record was produced by Chris Thomas, who has done all the Pretenders' work in the past, the music is almost completely free of the tense nervousness that was previously associated with this band. Guitars now interlock and weave around each other, rather than clashing and stuttering. And the rhythm section, though energetic, never "whomps" like it did on the first album.

There is also a wider variety of styles on the new record, including the Led Zeppelin-style hard rock in "I Hurt You," Motown rhythm and blues in "Thin Line Between Love and Hate," country shuffle in "Thumbelina," and the by now familiar "2000 Miles," which is the most beautiful song Hynde has ever written. To top it all off, the album even includes "Back on the Chain Gang," and its B-side hit, "My City Was Gone."

So, despite crushing opposition from all sides, Chrissie Hynde pushes through once again, emerging triumphant. People are saying that Learning to Crawl is going to be the surprise hit of the year, but it really shouldn't be any surprise. Few bands have worked harder for it, and few are more deserving. Having been knocked down again and again, the Pretenders are finally back on their feet and learning to walk.
Hitchcock classics critiqued

By Patrick Kervran

Upon viewing two of Universal's re-released Hitchcock classics, Rear Window and Vertigo, something strange occurred to me. How could two films, made only four years apart (Rear Window—1952 and Vertigo—1958), and both starring James Stewart as an obsessed man, be so utterly different?

Rear Window features Stewart as Jeff, a magazine photographer laid up in a wheelchair with a broken leg, who spends his idle moments watching his neighbors from his Greenwich Village apartment complex. The lovely Grace Kelly plays Lisa Fremont, his high fashion girlfriend who is eager for marriage.

Jeff and Lisa make a beautiful, though somewhat eccentric couple. Indeed, one starts to wonder about Jeff's mental condition when he initially rejects Lisa's advances rather than stop his peeping. Their relationship is treated in a light-hearted manner, as are all the major conflicts in the film, assuring us that all will work out well in the end.

There is nothing, however, light-hearted about Vertigo. If Rear Window could be summed up in two words, they would be funny and intriguing, Vertigo would have to be labelled sober and disenchanting. Stewart plays detective John "Scottie" Ferguson, who becomes obsessed with the "suicide" of his lover, which he feels responsible for. While half catatonic with despair, he meets a woman who greatly resembles his lover, and cruelly makes her over to look like the woman, only to find out that they are one and the same. Kim Novak plays the Madeleine/Judy dual role, and if it sounds confusing, it is. All mystery is taken away from the film in Judy's revealing flashback, leaving the film a study of Scottie's mental collapse. He becomes totally despicable by the film's end.

Add to this the fact that Scottie and Madeleine/Judy's relationship makes the film seem truly dated when compared to Rear Window. Picture Madeleine and Scottie embracing on a California beach, kissing in time with the crashing waves on the background. This scene was met with groans and laughing in my viewing audience. It is not the passion of the relationship that makes us uncomfortable, but the detachment we feel from the couple.

If you're any sort of film buff, by all means see both films, but be warned that Vertigo is for die-hards only. Also keep an eye out for Hitchcock's Rope and The Trouble With Harry, both due to be released soon.

Following the VYupe Cup the Indians	toucnced Albany State (75-66)
and arch rival William Paterson State College (77-68). It was in the WPCS victory that Gelston broke the all-time New Jersey coaching record of 368 wins. About his 25th season as a successful coach, he said, "I'd rather concentrate on the team, they're the ones who matter."

Concentration seems to be the key. The Indians have resumed their winning streak and are leading the conference in scoring with a 20.6 average. Kelly scored 12 points apiece, two last-second shots fell short and the team failed to tie up the game.

Emery leads the Cosmopolitan Conference in scoring with an average of 13.8 and rebounds with 8.2 average. "To break the loss pattern, Cirello said, the team will "look to press more and work on our passing and shot selection."

The Indians have participated in two races this season. They are presently averaging 82 points a game and playing consistently well. Smith is shooting 21.6 points per game. Second in scoring is Charlie Cox at 55 percent. Senior point guard Sal Genco continues to lead the team in steals and assists while Zimba and Ketch's strong outside shooting is a major factor in MSC's recent winning streak.

Junior Brian Gabriel and 6'7" center Ty Durkic are big contributors to Gelston's game plan, which has been paying tremendous dividends.

Another motivating achievement was the selection of Genco and Smith as players of the week during break by the N.J. Coach's Association and ECAC.

Ski racing arrives at MSC
It's fast! It's wild! It's exciting! It is the MSC ski racing club," read the poster designed by Mark Colino, which began the search for membership back in September. Along with myself and Stu Gohd, Mark began his arduous trek through red tape and countless work sessions in the "RAT" to make ski racing at MSC a reality.

The first contact with the college was through McKinley Boston, director of campus recreation, and SILC. The weekly meetings in October with Boston provided invaluable guidance and a proposed SILC affiliation. The MSC ski club also offered assistance to the SGA for taking an active role. Without the assistance of legislator Johnny Lobasso and the SGA, the club would not have been able to proceed.

The actual training took place on dry land twice a week during the fall. Now that the white stuff has arrived, the team practices on Wednesday nights and races on Saturday nights at Hidden Valley. With myself as coach and car pooling (Mark's car), we are trying to behave economically, knowing that we are on a tight budget.

It is our wish to compete in an invitational meet at Hunter, N.Y., at the end of the season. To support this, we are planning a fund raising bash sometime soon. So please watch for it and come and have yourself a heck of a time to support your local gate eaters (ski racers).

We have participated in two races and are a very young team, with a majority of our racers experiencing their first races. (Yes, this an excuse and a good one too). The only racer determined enough to brave the 10 below wind chill and place was freshman sensation Chris Matera.

In our second race, the MSC ski racers placed 10th out of 12 teams with Frank Sava, Joe Potter, and Suzanne Greco placing respectively. Some fearless efforts were turned in by Colino, Gohd, Madera, Regional Carlifella, Jeff Buncy and J.T. Hardgrove.

Tom Stewart is the coach of the MSC Ski Race Club.

Andy Press - New sports info director
Ohio University. Before coming to MSC he was employed at the Meadowlands Sports Complex.
Press succeeds Dick Stahlberger, who served on an interim basis for the last one-and-a-half years. Stahlberger has been associated with MSC Sports Information on three different occasions for a period of 25 years.

The appointment of Andy Press as sports information director at MSC has been announced by William P. Dioguardi, Director of Athletics. Press came to MSC in September 1983 as a graduate assistant in sports information. The new MSC sports information director is a graduate of Ohio University.

When you're in a tight spot, good friends will help you out.

When you pulled in two hours ago, you didn't have this problem. And with a party just starting, the last thing you wanted to do was wait around another two hours.

Neither did the rest of the guys.

So when they offered to give you a lift, that's exactly what they did, proving not only that they were in good shape, but that they were good friends.

So show them what appreciation is all about. Tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.

Wrestlers suffer tough winter break

By Kathy Scorenini

The MSC wrestling team’s winter break was highlighted by two victories, taking Simpson College of Iowa and Kean College in a tri-meet.

Despite having no competitors in three of the 10 weight classes, the Indians defeated both teams by comfortable margins. Kean totaled only 18 points to MSC’s 35 and the Indians defeated Simpson 33-20.

Freshman Dave Van Tine added two victories to his outstanding record of 18-1 pinning Simpson’s Mark Holbrook in 4:14 and Kean’s Ed Russell in 3:37. Van Tine’s only loss of the season was due to an injury that forced him to withdraw from the match.

Dan DaCunto, at 150 pounds, has also been successful this season with WNE’s Scott Clark by a commanding 15-3 decision, following with a narrow 5-3 win over Dave Zembauer of Southern Connecticut.

DaCunto, who wrestled at two different weight classes, won against all three teams. Against WNE at 150 pounds, DaCunto pinned Rich Dennetiri in 2:08, moved up to 158 to pin SCS’s Joe Talkenelli in 3:57, then took his third victory by an 11-3 decision over Wilkes’ Glen Whitman in the 150 pound class.

Cannon, the sole winner for MSC against Trenton, once again came in the 134 pound weight class, defeating WNE’s Scott Clark by a commanding 15-3 decision, following with a narrow 5-3 win over Dave Zembauer of Southern Connecticut.

DaCunto, besides a win by forfeit by Dave Van Tine, were the sole scorers in all three matches for the struggling Indians. WNE totaled 36 to MSC’s 14, SCS won by a score of 35 to 15, and Wilkes kept the Indians to a meager four points to take the win 65-3 after MSC forfeited five weight classes.

Wrestlers Rob Cannon, and Dan DaCunto added to their winning records over the weekend when the MSC wrestling team competed in a quad meet against Wilkes, Western New England and Southern Connecticut State Colleges.

Coming off a devastating 44-3 loss to Trenton State College earlier in the week, the Indians fared no better, losing to all three teams by considerable margins.

Cannon, the sole winner for MSC against Trenton, once again came in the 134 pound weight class, defeating WNE’s Scott Clark by a commanding 15-3 decision, following with a narrow 5-3 win over Dave Zembauer of Southern Connecticut.

There is little question that Mark has the talent to make it in the pro ranks. The fact that he was selected in the USFL draft in January is proof in itself. Anyone of us who braved the freezing Saturday nights at Sprague Field know number 17 has what it takes.

Also, the pros know he has what it takes, as evidenced by the number of NFL teams interested in Mark and especially the Super Bowl Redskins. Mark feels he has a good chance to be drafted by the NFL team with the winningest record, since Redskin Headcoach Joe Gibbs is coming up to MSC next week to meet with him.

Mark has the size (6 feet 3 inches and 225 pounds), strength, speed and arm to earn his keep in the pros. More importantly he has confidence and desire. Mark is following a dream, you can’t fault anyone for doing that. Even if his NFL shot doesn’t work out, Mark, as he did with the Indians, will scramble out of the present defeat and complete his dream. If not in the NFL, then in the USFL.

Gymnasts defeat two Division I schools during successful winter break

By Kathy Szorenti

The women's gymnastics team continued their successful season with three victories during winter break. Two of the wins were over Division I schools.

The first of the three victories was somewhat of a surprise when MSC outscored Division I powerhouse, Princeton University, 146.05 to 140.65. Princeton placed second behind teammate Meredith Galloway in the uneven parallel bars. Galloway scored an impressive 7.95 in the uneven bars as well as fifth in the vault and third in the beam.

Two of the wins were over Division I powerhouse, John's by a score of 80-59. The Indians won a game against Glassboro State College.

The team then played the University of South Florida on Jan. 14, a game in which they lost 80-64. Emery scored her third place with a score of 6.77. Jill Mandell performed well to earn a 6.9.

The team ended winter break with a commanding victory over fellow Division II school, Glassboro State College.

Winning the all-around with a score of 31.10 followed by Bossier with 30.85 and Vertes in third with 29.30.

Galloway tied for second with Vertes in the vault behind Bossier who won the event with a score of 8.6. Bossier also won the uneven bars with a score of 8.1 with Margie Breznak turning in a strong performance for second place and a score of 7.85. Galloway followed in third.

on the beam, Galloway scored an impressive 7.95 to win the event with Bossier right behind with a score of 7.7. Jill Mandell performed well to earn a 6.9.

The floor exercise, Galloway placed second to LIU's Maryann LaMeda, losing by three tenths with a score of 7.1. Vertes' strong performance earned her third place with a score of 6.75.

The team will compete in a tri-meet this Friday away, against Hofstra and Ursinus.

Loss of seniors hurts squad

Inexperience shows for lady hoopers

By Anna Schiavo

The loss of experienced players to graduation last spring has largely contributed to the numerous losses suffered by the women's basketball team this season. "Basically, we are a very young team, with a lot of young players who do not have much game experience. We've lost a lot of close games that we really should have won, but that's where inexperience hurts. Key mistakes at the wrong time is our weakness," head coach Micki Cirello said.

The Indians began a disappointing winter break with a 3-9 loss to Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU) on Dec. 15, 75-61. However, MSC went on to beat Long Island University (LIU) on Dec. 18 by a score of 75-66.

The team was in the University of Rhode Island Christmas Tournament from Dec. 27-29. The Indians lost the first game to the host team by a score of 75-66. Debbie Emery scored 23 points and Kelly had 17. "They out rebounded us and we had 26 turnovers while they had only 12," Cirello said. The second game was against Perdue. At half-time the Indians were down by only three points, but despite the efforts of Emery, who scored 21 points and Kelly, who scored 16, the team lost to Perdue by a score of 70-56.

The Indians won a game against Concordia of Canada by a score of 57-59. The Indians then travelled back home to St. John's (ranked 15th in the nation) on Jan. 3. Sixteen points were scored by both Emery and Mary Pat Sherwood. Lisa Long led the team in rebounding with 10 but, despite these efforts, the team lost to St. John's by a score of 80-59.

A Florida road trip started off on a victorious note when the Indians beat Stetson University on Jan. 12 by a score of 83-72. Emery scored 30 points and Kelly had 17. Long led both teams in rebounding with 16.

The team then played the University of South Florida on Jan. 14, a game in which they lost 80-64. Emery scored 26 points and Kelly had 11.

The next day MSC met the University of Tampa for a close game in which they lost 80-70.

"I know we improved in practice during break but I didn't know how we would be judged," coach Tim Marotti now. "Indians are just starting to achieve a lot closer than it was, and I didn't expect to beat them because they had such a good team last year," he said.

Leading the Indians in all but one event was Wendy Bossier, who defeated last season's state champion, Tracey Moore, in the the all-around competition with a score of 31.85. Bossier won the vault and the balance beam. Tied with Moore in the floor exercise and placed second behind teammate Meredith Galloway in the uneven parallel bars. Galloway scored an impressive 7.95 on the uneven bars as well as fifth in the vault and third in the beam.

Pam Vertes placed third in the all-around, receiving high scores in the vault, the bars and beam, placing in the top four in each event.

Other strong performers in the meet were Valerie Vogler in the vault, scoring an 8.0 for third place, Margie Breznak took fourth in the uneven bars, and Karen Lukach scored a 6.65 in the floor exercise for fifth place.

The Indians hosted Long Island University (LIU) for their second vault break victory, easily defeating the Division II school by a score of 147.00 to 120.00.

Galloway led the Indians this time, winning the all-around with a score of 31.10 followed by Bossier with 30.85 and Vertes in third with 29.30.

Galloway tied for second with Vertes in the vault behind Bossier who won the event with a score of 8.6. Bossier also won the uneven bars with a score of 8.1 with Margie Breznak turning in a strong performance for second place and a score of 7.85. Galloway followed in third.

On the beam, Galloway scored an impressive 7.95 to win the event with Bossier right behind with a score of 7.7. Jill Mandell performed well to earn a 6.9.

The floor exercise, Galloway placed second to LIU's Maryann LaMeda, losing by three tenths with a score of 7.1. Vertes' strong performance earned her third place with a score of 6.75.

The Indians topped the Profs by a score of 150.50 to 120.95 with many of the gymnasts earning their best scores of the season.

Bossier once again won the all-around with a total of 32.30 points, while Galloway and Vertes tied for second with 30.85 points.

The newest member of the MSC squad in Joann Pia, who scored an 8.5 in the vault to win the event, slipping ahead of Bossier who had an 8.4. Bossier went on to win the uneven bars, beam and floor exercise events.

Other top performers for MSC were Margie Breznak in bars, scoring 7.8 for second, Mandell on the beam, and Vertes taking third on the beam, fifth in the floor exercise and tying Galloway for third place in the bars.

The team will compete in a tri-meet this Friday away, against Hofstra and Ursinus.

Ex-hurler appointed baseball coach

Kevin Cooney, outstanding hurler for the Indians in the early 70's, has been named Head Varsity baseball coach at MSC, announced by William P. Dioguardi, Director of Athletics.

Cooney replaces Fred Hill, who compiled a 148-91-2 record in seven seasons as head coach before accepting the same position at Rutgers University this past season.

The Indians new mentor is the tenth coach in the 54 year history of varsity baseball at MSC, and just the fourth head coach in the last thirty years.

Cooney served this past fall as MSC's Head Baseball Coach where he guided the Indians to an outstanding 17-1 mark, the best record for an MSC fall squad in their 15 year history.

"Coaching at the college level had been a career goal I had set for myself when I got out of college. It is an added plus starting here, because of the tremendous success the program has had," Cooney said.

Cooney pitched for MSC from 1970-72, finishing with a career mark of 18-3, which included a 9-0 season in 1972. Both achievements are current records at MSC.

Cooney spent two seasons in the Minnesota Twins' organization. An resident of Budd Lake, N.J., Cooney served as pitching coach under MSC's Carly Anderson in 1975 and 76. Helping the Indians to playoff appearances in both seasons.

The continuity of successful baseball teams is owed to the fact that William Dioguardi, Carly Anderson and Fred Hill have been at the helm for the last thirty-four years. Cooney believes. "This has added to the stability of the program and I am happy and thankful that I could add my name to that list."
Men hoopsters on winning streak; crush Rutgers Newark by 31, 91-60

MSC 91 - Rutgers Nwk. 60

By John Connolly

The men's basketball team won its fifth straight game last night by crushing Rutgers University of Newark by 31 points, 91-60.

It was all MSC, as the Indians controlled both ends of the floor to jump out to a 22-6 lead with 12:09 remaining in the first half. With the Raiders being completely outmatched by MSC, Coach Ollie Gelston was able to let all the Indians see playing time. Robert Smith led the Indians with 11 points while every MSC player was able to score against the inferior Rutgers defense.

The Raiders' only highlight during the contest was the play of Darryl Parrawood who led all scorers with 26 points.

MSC's Bryan Gabriel stole five Raider passes to lead the Indian defense, which held Rutgers to 27 halftime points. MSC had 45 points at the half. Senior Kevin Ketcho had 11 points while every MSC player was able to score against the inferior Rutgers defense.

MSC on the rebound

By Jennifer Luke

The women's basketball team opened its season with a 10-0 streak and after suffering a three-game skid, is now back on top by winning its fifth straight game last night against Rutgers, Newark.

With the return of co-captain Chris Mann, MSC, (15-3) is at full strength and gearing themselves for the New Jersey State Athletic Conference playoffs and a NCAA bid.

Coach Ollie Gelston said of his team's three consecutive losses to Stockton State, Trenton State, and Rider, "Sure, we had a midseason slump. Every team is bound to, but we're over that now."

He believes that the Indian's greatest advantage is that they are a veteran ball club. "These kids have played with each other for four years, they know each other's personalities and styles to a tee," he said.

Over winter break MSC defended its traditional Yule Cup Classic championship with victories over Division II Kutztown State, and previously unbeaten Upsala, ranked third in Division III. Forward Bob Smith contributed key points in the Kutztown win while senior John Ziembra won overall MVP for the classic.

was also the first player ever drafted from the New Jersey State Athletic Conference. He hopes being drafted will "make kids realize that they don't have to go to a big school to make it. They can stay home and go to school here." Casale said.

One of Casale's greatest accomplishments came this past season when he surpassed 6,000 career passing yards, making him the leading passer in New Jersey collegiate history. Some of Casale's other credentials include nine interceptions in his last 522 passing attempts and only three in 292 attempts in 1982 to lead the NCAA Division III. "People say I'm nuts (to hold out)," he said, "but I believe I have a good chance to play in the NFL. So why not take a shot?"

By Bob Stevens

The women's swimming and diving team continues to be a dominant force in the NCAA Division III, on the east coast. The Indians are 9-2 and are riding an eight meet winning streak.

Head coach Greg Lockhard's squad, by virtue of an 86-54 victory over last season's New Jersey Athletic Conference co-champions Trenton State College, captured the NJAC championship with a perfect 4-0 conference record. The team is now setting their sights on the Metropolitan and NJAIAW championships.

MSC tied Seton Hall University for the Metropolitan championship last season and this will be the first time the Indians participate in the Metro championships. The teams that are entered in both of these meets compete in Divisions I, II and III, yet Lockhard realistically expects a top three finish in both meets. A reason for his high expectations is that their schedule includes a majority of Division I and II teams. This season, MSC beat two of three Division I opponents and finished 1-1 against Division II schools.

Lockhard said that the scheduling of Division I and II schools is "quite beneficial. It gives our swimmers the opportunity to compete against other top athletes which in turn brings up the performance of our team." The talent laden team features junior Janet Taylor, a four time All-American, and junior Cindy LePore, a two time All-American performer. Taylor specializes in the sprint, freestyle and backstroke events and is the MSC 50-yard freestyle record holder. This year Taylor has won 16 out of 18 races entered and is expected to qualify for the National Collegiate Athletic Conference championships.

Freshman Doris Weder has been another key performer in the Indian's season. Weder competes in the sprint, freestyle and butterfly events. This year she has won 15 of 18 races and should also qualify for the NCAA championships.

Lockhard feels that both Taylor and Weder are a tremendous asset to the program. The Indians' coach said, "When I enter Taylor or Weder in an event, I usually expect them to win. They are both excellent team performers in that they're extremely versatile, which adds to the team's depth."

Both Taylor and Weder along with Lepore and Lisa DeNero are members of the 200 medley relay team which is undefeated in six meets this season. Along with the 400 freestyle relay, both should qualify for the NCAA championships.

Over the last three seasons, MSC has proven to be an eastern power in Division III as shown by their 25-5-1 dual meet record. Lockhard is looking forward to the Metropolitan championships, which will be held at Fordham University between Feb. 3-5, and the NJAIAW championships at Monmouth College on Feb. 10 and 11.
