The U.S. government has been covering up the asbestos problem for more than 40 years, according to William Rossnagel, company president of one of the nation’s largest asbestos testing firms, Rossnagel and Associates.

Speaking about the asbestos problem at MSC last week, Rossnagel said that the government could have saved many lives if it would have alerted the public to the asbestos threat. He said, “The government knew since 1937 that asbestos is deadly. They knew then that asbestos had effects which lead to asbestosis or mesothelioma two decades after contact, but they didn’t care at all to make warnings about its dangerous properties widely known.”

Rossnagel said the U.S. government kept quiet on the asbestos matter because the nation’s industries relied heavily on asbestos for their products. “With asbestos being used for over 3,500 household and industrial products, there was no way the government was going to resist industrial lobbyists and regulate its use,” he said.

Elaborating further on asbestos, Rossnagel said that asbestos becomes hazardous when it is airborne. “This happens very easily because asbestos is oftentimes loose and unsecured.”

Liddy devoted much of his lecture to explaining espionage and spying. “A nation’s spies are essential; without them, you are blind and deaf,” he said. Explaining espionage and spying, Liddy said, “Our nation’s adversaries, rather than enemies. On the other hand, the Soviets teach students ‘hatred for the enemies of socialism.’ According to Liddy, ‘If that term is good enough for them, it should be for us.’

Regarding military might, Liddy claimed that the Soviet Union “leads us in everything except aircraft carriers,” and cited specific figures to support his references.

Rossnagel outlined a list of causes for airborne asbestos that included shoddy construction work, sloppy maintenance, roof and pipe leaks, building vibration, and even vandalism. However, Rossnagel assured the audience that the three buildings he tested at MSC during the last two summers, Botwin Hall, Watergate Hotel, and the McEachern Music Building are completely safe having satisfactory levels of asbestos in the air.

Watergate felon claims spying is routine procedure

By Dianne Traflet

Making no apologies for his involvement in the Watergate scandal, G. Gordon Liddy said at MSC this week that he would still confess spying to further the cause of a candidate he supported.

Liddy was convicted in 1973 for his participation in the wire-tapping and burglary of the Democratic national committee headquarters, located in the Watergate Hotel in Washington, D.C.

During the lecture, sponsored by the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA), Liddy addressed the topic of “Public Perception versus Reality.” Throughout his speech, Liddy drew much laughter and applause from the audience of more than 400 people.

In his opening statements, Liddy said he was grateful for CINA’s introduction because he recalls times when he was only acknowledged by the words, “Will the defendant please rise?” Liddy, who is the author of the bestseller Will, explained how people are leading a life of illusion today. One example is the practice of using uncommon titles for places and occupations.

He said he spent time in nine prisons, all of which were inaccurately termed penitentiaries. “No one was penitent, certainly not I... Prisoners were referred to as inmates, as if this were some kind of fat farm.”

This type of misrepresentation takes on many forms, Liddy said, explaining that Americans frequently call the Soviets adversaries, rather than enemies. On the other hand, the Soviets teach students “hatred for the enemies of socialism.” According to Liddy, “If that term is good enough for them, it should be for us.”

Regarding military might, Liddy claimed that the Soviet Union “leads us in everything except aircraft carriers,” and cited specific figures to support his references.

Liddy devoted much of his lecture to explaining espionage and spying. “A nation’s spies are essential; without them, you are blind and deaf,” he said.

The former Watergate conspirator explained his role as an FBI spy under J. Edgar Hoover. He said that the FBI would penetrate safe of embassies, photograph secret materials, and return them precisely as found.

Liddy spoke of the clandestine operations in which he participated, including his futile attempts to recover certain highly classified documents, later known as the Pentagon Papers. Liddy differentiated between that incident which was a classic national security operation, and the Watergate break-ins which were for political intelligence purposes.

According to Liddy, the latter type of operation is one which he would perform to help a candidate with whose cause he agrees. While Liddy was working for Nixon’s campaign, he was responsible for two break-ins of the Watergate complex, the purpose of which was to gain secret information from the Democrats. By recording phone conversations, and interpreting conversations in rooms, Liddy said he hoped to discover what tactics the Democrats might use against the Republicans.

Liddy said it was his fault that the operation failed because he had neglected to take into account the building’s main vulnerability—a lone clean-up man. “This person, who happened to be working late that night, discovered the presence of Liddy and his accomplices and called the police.”

In the subsequent Watergate trial, Liddy was sentenced to 20 years in prison. However, President Jimmy Carter commuted his sentence, and Liddy served two and a half years.

Liddy said political intelligence activities, such as those in which he participated, are still going on today. He said, “What I want you to do is disillusion yourself. Understand the nature of man; understand the system,” he told the audience.

After his lecture, Suzanne Feuer, senior psychology major said, “I enjoyed listening to him, it was very amusing. But, I also found it a bit frightening because Liddy was so persuasive. Although I had always felt very strongly about the Watergate scandal, I suddenly found myself seeing his point of view.”

The lecture lasted three hours.

Senate wants plan changed

By Linda Longo

The faculty senate outlined its objections to the state college fiscal autonomy proposal at last week's meeting.

In a letter to T. Edward Hollander, chancellor of the department of Higher Education (DHEC), the senate said there should not be a centralized admissions policy nor should there be central control over academic program planning.

In addition the senate was opposed to the membership of the chancellor on the state college boards of trustees saying the inclusion of the chancellor would create undue influence. Finally the senate said the proposal's suggested contracts between the state school and the state college are unclear and don't convey specific information regarding autonomy implementation.

Since the letter was issued on Oct. 19, Dr. Wayne Bond, faculty senate president, and the chancellor has modified his proposal. One of the changes includes the replacement of the suggested contracts with legislation to "accomplish the proper transfer of autonomy."

Dr. Jean Armstrong, vice president of students present at last week's meeting and said, "I fully support whatever degree of autonomy the state college can achieve. It can serve our college and students very well."

The chancellor will present his most recent proposal to the board of higher education tomorrow and a final decision may then be made regarding implementation. Hollander said the plan would create a central board of governors who "would centralize operational responsibility to each state college so that each would have more fiscal flexibility."

Another issue discussed at the faculty senate meeting concerned the suggestion of the board of trustees to eliminate a faculty commission to inspect the quality of the liberal arts programs in New Jersey. The faculty commission to the board of trustees, said this would be a intrusion into the academic freedom of individual colleges." Other faculty members said the recommendation would be a great threat to academic freedom.

An ad hoc committee was formed to draft a motion on censure. The executive members of the faculty senate will review and approve the censure motion which will then be sent to the chancellor, commissioner of the DHEC. The faculty agreed that an immediate and strong response should be made as soon as possible.

CBS poll MSC students

By Jim Benson

To measure student opinions of the presidential candidates, CBS-TV News was at MSC Sunday night during the second televised debate between Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale. A crowd of approximately 30 students gathered in the Freeman Lounge to watch the debate.

Several field producer for CBS and a 1982 MSC graduate, said, "We went to see if the debate changes any minds with which people may have chosen MSC because, for the first debate, we only went to one home for reactions. This time we went to five homes - one on the broadcast were: Delia Mutla, freshman, business administration; Lisa Bussey, sophomore, accounting; Frank Leggett, sophomore, business; Eric Van Dewall, freshman, business administration; and Donna Querques, junior, business administration.

The SGA logo contest and received $69.71. Atrium. For further information contact the interviews."

 svc. said she was happy with the student responses. "There were some very intelligent answers. They really have a knowledge of what is happening." During the news cast she said, "A very unscientific, random survey showed overall this audience was more favorably impressed with Mondale than Reagan."

"I would have been surprised if I had heard the opposite," Colletti said after the interviews.

In an overview of the debate Colletti said, "Both men got off some good lines, though I think Reagan did better in this debate than in the last. But I think that the nature of this debate can hold the incumbent on the defensive. I can't really say who won this time."

The second presidential debate seemed to have little effect on the students who were at Freeman Hall Sunday night. Those who had favored President Reagan still did, and the same held true for Mondale supporters. Even the number of undecided voters remained unchanged. Before the debate, a Star-Ledger/Eagleton poll showed Reagan ahead of Mondale by 23 percent in New Jersey. As of yesterday, no significant change in these figures was reported.

Before her CBS interview, Donna Querques said, "Previous CBS interviews showed only Mondale supporters, and it turned out to be one-sided. I support Reagan and think the debate served no purpose. Even though some of the things he's done over the last four years haven't been right, he's at least tried to do things to improve on what Carter did. At least he didn't sit back and do nothing."

Tracey Murray, a senior music education major, said, "CBS made a small error—they didn't interview me. I'm for Mondale because he's for education. If the youth of this country were educated right now, they would be able to deal with all the problems we face—foreign policy, the economy, the deficit."

Vandalism and thefts are chronic problems on campus

By MaryEllen Maclsaac

For the seventh straight week, thefts and vandalism continue to dominate the campus police report.

On Thurs., Oct. 18 at 2 a.m., two males were caught breaking and entering Richardson Hall and stealing a typewriter from one of the offices. The suspects were arrested by campus police for burglary and theft. If found guilty, they could face a jail sentence and/or fine.

Sometime between 2 p.m., Oct. 17 and 8 a.m., Oct. 18, a power cleaner was stolen from the Student Center roof. The item, worth $1,500, is among other tools used for construction work of the roof.

At noon on Wed., Oct. 17, 200 pounds of meat, valued at $380, was taken from the Blanton Hall cafeteria. It was later found hidden in a nearby car outside the building. The theft is still under investigation, campus police said.

In Lot 13 on Sun., Oct. 21, sometime between 7:40 p.m. and 11:15 p.m., vandals broke the side window of an MG and took a radar detector worth $250.

Late night Fri., Oct. 19, in Lot 23, vandals broke the vent window of a '74 Datsun. Although they failed in an attempt to take an am/fm cassette stereo, they succeeded in stealing a plastic cassette case containing 21 tapes.

Sometime between the evening of Sun., Oct 14 and the morning of Mon., Oct. 15, a wallet was stolen from the main lounge of Stone Hall. The wallet contained $160.

On Thur., Oct. 18, sometime during the evening, a cassette recorder was stolen from a resident's second floor room in Blanton Hall. The estimated value of the item is unknown, campus police said.

At 4:00 p.m., Fri., Oct. 19 in Panzer gymnasium, an Adidas bag was stolen. A female student left the bag unattended which contained $5 in cash, some clothing and books.

MSC grad becomes partner in famous accounting firm

By Terry Keller

Being named a partner in one of the Big Eight accounting firms not only marks a first for an MSC female graduate, but also signifies the growing number of women moving up the corporate ladder.

After graduating in 1973 with a BA degree in mathematics, Mary Paetzold became one of the few women hired by Peat Marwick, the second largest international accounting firm in the U.S. Paetzold has been with the firm 11 years now, which is the average length of time required to become a partner.

Peat Marwick has a total of 1,380 partners, of which only 24 are women. Paetzold says things are changing, however, as 40 to 45 percent of the firm's newly hired employees are women. Paetzold believes this trend reflects the increasing number of women entering the accounting field. She also said that women graduating from MSC are well prepared for a career in public accounting.

Paetzold's motivation to obtain her current position came from a managing partner, Ed Mahoney, who has a positive and supportive attitude towards women in accounting. Paetzold advises individuals entering this field "to be flexible. It's a demanding profession and it requires a personal commitment."

Paetzold is familiar with demanding schedules. As a student, she worked 40 hours per week each semester in the accounting department of Shop Rite. Even then she was preparing for her professional career. Although MSC did not offer an internship program at the time she was attending, she considered the solid educational background she received at the college a valuable tool in her current position.

Dr. Irene Douma of the accounting law and taxation department said, "Paetzold's accomplishments reflect on the high quality of our accounting program and indicate that MSC is able to compete effectively with some of the major colleges and universities in the metropolitan area."

FAMOUS LAST WORDS FROM FRIENDS TO FRIENDS. I'm perfectly fine. I can drive with my eyes closed. There's nothing wrong with me. Are you joking—I feel great. What am I—a wimp? I'm in great shape to drive. You're not serious are you? What's a couple of beers? Nobody drives my car but me. I've never felt better. I can drink with the best of them. But I only had a few. So I had a couple. I can drive rings around anybody. I can drive my own car, thank you. I'm not drunk. I drive better when I'm like this. Who says I can't drive? I can hold my booze. I know I'm doing. I always drive like this. Trust me. What's a few to me. I'm with my eyes with me. I drink.
Co-op Day is a success

By Janet Hart

What does the phrase "that competitive edge" mean to you? Students attending Co-op Awareness Day last week heard 15 employers, five faculty, and six co-op students speak, adding up to a total of 26 different and highly individualized views of "that competitive edge." Yet despite the diversity of definitions, a surprisingly similar impression emerged from the diversity of definitions, a surprising similarity among the themes which were echoed on Wednesday, Aug. 22, in the Student Center Rotunda.

"Clearly, the competitive edge means different things to different people," one speaker put it. "Special jobs for special people."

For Co-op experiences give the competitive edge because they provide access to information and technology not available in classrooms along with early and realistic academic and career planning. For instance, Dr. Mark Koppel of the psychology department described how he had always planned on working in a mental hospital. "It wasn't until my third year of graduate school, however, that I actually worked in a hospital. I realized that it just wasn't for me," Koppel said he wished he had a Co-op option much sooner in his college experience so that he would have been able to make realistic plans.

According to Mrs. Koppel, a Co-op Supervisor at American Cyanamid, students who take advantage of Co-op programs are privy to the technical responsibilities of satellite communications.

For MSC students who would like to explore their particular religious affiliations, there are several groups on campus in which they can participate such as the Newman Community, Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship, and the Jewish Student Union. But there is an alternative organization for less traditional students, known as Heretics Anonymous.

This group has been meeting every semester since 1978, and "is designed for students who are disillusioned with other religious organizations," according to Mrs. Price. "People come to study the text in an atmosphere of free inquiry."

For further information contact Dr. Robert Price, editor of Dayspring, the group’s literary pamphlet.

Concerning the competitive edge Co-op students have in the job market upon graduation, Bill Bullock of IBM summarized, "We look for a Co-op experience on resumes and transcripts. It's what can set you apart from all other applicants." MSC graduate, Anna Huombachana agreed, "I began my career with IRS as a Co-op, so I know first-hand what it can do for you."

"That competitive edge means different things to different people," one speaker put it. "Special jobs for special people.*

The Westmoreland vs. CBS libel case raises crucial questions. Questions not only of the accountability of the press, but of the trust in government to tell the people the truth.

Throughout the past fifty years, the U.S. government has bent the truth to fit its purposes, especially in war time and particularly during the Vietnam War. The very action which escalated that war may have been staged or could possible never have happened at all—the Gulf of Tonkin incident.

The press has long been considered the fourth arm of the government, serving as its watch dog. This is how our founding fathers thought it should be, and they were right.

Today, more people get their news from television than from print, and they tend to trust the television medium more than newspapers. It is easier to put your faith in a person you see every night, in you living room on the TV screen, than to trust the unseen writer behind the by line. This makes the television medium a very powerful one.

 Though the power of television is apparent, its content is not. An average 15 minute newscast is equal to two-thirds of the front pages of the New York Times. A startling statistic.

The power of the television news organization was evident in CBS’ 1982 documentary, “The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception.”

The power of the editing machine and the power of stating one’s case without fear of rebuttal through the same venue were loudly seen in the documentary.

Ethics also come into play in this discussion. Was it ethical for CBS to distort their findings the way they did? No, it was not, but it was of the utmost importance to unveil the deceptions that have surrounded the Vietnam War. These deceptions have long been included in history books, clouding the truth of the war. Though CBS fit some of their findings to suit their means, there was enough evidence that can still stand the test of close examination, which may very well reveal just how much the American people have been deceived.

One accusation brought in the documentary was that Westmoreland had withheld certain facts about enemy strength from President Lyndon Johnson. He may, he may not have. If he didn’t, it still means that the president of the United States had withheld the truth from his people. This has been demonstrated again and again, with Nixon, Ford, Carter, and Reagan. Watergate, The Mau-Mau, Iran, El Salvador and Nicaragua.

CBS, to an extent, is guilty, but that is minimal when compared to ensuring the honesty of the American government. This is especially true today, when we have a president who has been kept so far away from the press, and has been so controlled when dealing with the media.
The Republican record in review

To the editor:

As election-time nears, and the Republican machine rumbles confidently towards the finish line with its sights set on the future, perhaps it would be well to glance back at the past for a moment. For those persons who do not plan to exercise their franchise, it is especially important to understand the urgency of voting this year.

There is no better way to communicate that urgency than to re-examine the last 4 years of Ronald Reagan's record.

First of all, Ronald Reagan has repeatedly demonstrated that he is insensitive to and ignorant about the state of poverty in this country. He has referred to America's poor as a "faceless, mass, waiting for handouts." He has also suggested that some of the people who sleep over warm-air vents in New York City do so "by choice.

Recently, in an effort to cover up his record of Social Darwinism, he has claimed credit for certain social expenditures which only occurred because Congress refused to implement all of his cuts.

Efforts at arms control have completely ceased during Reagan's administration; the Soviet walkout was simply the dying gasp of an arms control process that was systematically starved and dismembered by Reagan ever since the 1980 election. He has found it more politically profitable to verbally revile and abuse the Soviets than to deal with them in a balanced, realistic way.

Actually, it may be unfair to say that Reagan's Soviet policy is "unrealistic." In the cinematic version of reality which his mind inhabits, the only "realistic" way to deal with the "bad guys" is to shoot it out.

On Reagan's economic record and the deficit, I will say this: our economy is "healthy" in the same way that a thief having a spree with a stolen credit card is "rich." Reagan calls Mondale's deficit-reduction plan a "fairy tale," but nothing could seem more magical to me than Reagan's stated belief that the deficit will just eventually disappear if we do nothing about it — when some 30% of every tax dollar now goes toward paying interest on the national debt.

And, though unemployment is down, most new jobs are in the low-paying, unskilled category. So much for the "America of opportunity" that Reagan is creating.

But Ronald Reagan has a secret weapon: his famous Teflon coating. A grin, a wave, a single election-season meeting with a Soviet official, and four years of counterproductive rhetoric and torched arms control talks are forgiven and forgotten by a loving public.

And, finally, the invasion of Grenada just isn't mentioned anymore; why, I can't imagine, since many people were very entertained by it at the time. But nothing sticks to Teflon.

On camera, during one of his rare press conferences, after the miniaturization of makeup experts, with a reassuring grin pasted on his face, Ronald Reagan may look pretty good to some people. But on all the issues — on arms control, the deficit, religious neutrality, and social compassion, to name a few — Walter Mondale looks much, much better to me.

Student suggests alternatives to SGA's six percent budget cuts

To the editor:

At the last legislative meeting of the SGA, a bill was passed which cut the budget of Class I organizations by six percent. Hopefully, this will not continue in future years.

In my opinion, this cut will adversely affect the SGA's image, Class I programming and the well-being of students'. attitudes. Class I organizations are an intrinsic part of student life. They bring students together in educational and entertaining ways. They are definitely a needed service in a college community.

This six percent cut will affect the college life in many negative ways. One way, is that there will not be as many activities offered to the student body.

The money will be put into the account entitled, "unappropriated surplus." This money is used for Class II's special appropriations. In other words — a select few, where as, the Class I's service the campus community as a whole.

Granted, the SGA needs money I can't emphasize that enough. But, cutting the Class I budgets is creating a disservice to the students. However, financial ignorance in prior years created a monetary crisis. Therefore a budget cut was inevitable.

The SGA fee has been $2 per credit with a cap of $24 since 1977. Due to inflation, increased programming, an increased number of Class I organizations, a decrease in enrollment and prior financial mismanagement, the SGA will be in great financial trouble this year and future years.

There must be some alternative; some way of cutting back without infringing on students extra-curricular activities.

The immediate solutions I see are to raise SGA fees and/or allow the Class I's to have fund raisers and increase admission prices.

I feel very strongly about the need for student activities. What it comes down to is — if students want the quality of services they have become accustomed to they are going to have to pay for them.

Democrats will be a long time waiting for any apologies

By Colman McCarthy
WASHINGTON: "Apologize," demands Walter Mondale of George Bush and Ronald Reagan. Some chance. Bush, in his debate with Geraldine Ferraro, charged that "my opponents" suggest that the American soldiers killed in Beirut "died in shame." The Reagan-Bush handlers have come up with no verification of that charge, but that hasn't kept Bush from refusing to apologize.

While he was piling up stones in that wall, the vice president said of his debate with Ferraro that he tried "to kick a little ass." That drew another demand for an apology, this time from Ferraro's campaign manager. No again. Nor will any regret be expressed by a Bush aide for his assessment of Ferraro as "bitchy."

Haven't the Democrats figured it out yet? They are dealing with an administration that has consistently and unapologetically traded in insults, trashings and character assassinations. Bush's slurs were no momentary lapse, nor was the "bitchy" jibe an off-color slip of the Republican tongue. This is their one-dimensional attitude, their one-dimensionality.

Reagan, the leader of the free world, has assumed leadership in the free-wheeling slur. He put down an entire nation, the Soviet Union, by calling it "the focus of evil in the nuclear world." Nearly 500,000 refugees have fled the violence of Central America. Reagan called them "feet people." His taste for snideness came out in his appraisal of the right-wing's conjectures that Martin Luther King Jr., was a communist: "We'll know in about 35 years, won't we?"

Reagan's talent for the insult persists even when he drifts into a state of mental goofiness. When in Brazil, the largest nation in South America, he called for a toast to "the people of Bolivia." When he met his secretary for housing and urban development at a conference of mayors, Reagan asked, "How are you, Mr. Mayor? How are things in your city?"

The president has still a third style of offending people with words: the indirect belittlement. He told some junior-high school students in a poor section of Washington not to be overly concerned about such handicaps as having no school library. "I attended six elementary schools myself," said Reagan, "and in none of them was there a library." Reagan belittled the international community when saying why he didn't sign the Law of the Sea treaty: "I kind of thought when you go out on the high seas you can do what you want."

Who can examine this record of insults and say that here is a man of class? Reagan's reputation for distorting or botching the facts has dominated public awareness, but his recklessness with people's feelings has sent a message to his underlings: Do the same.

Good soldier Alexander Haig surmised that the four churchwomen slain in El Salvador were running a roadblock. James Watt depicted environmentalists as "a left-wing cult which seeks to bring down the type of government I believe in." T.K. Jones, a deputy under-secretary of defense, said that "everybody's going to make it (through nuclear war) if there are enough shovels to go around. Dig a hole, cover it with a couple doors and then throw three feet of dirt on top. It's the dirt that does it."

The standard defense for all this witlessness is that this or that comment was yanked out of context by the press. But this is a context of four years of relentless assault, a context from which the statements cannot be yanked because they are as imbedded as habits of the mind.

For the Reagan administration to apologize for one insult to Walter Mondale would mean an apology for all of them to everyone. Such an order is too big. As Reagan, Bush and the others have been saying for four years, we think small.

Soldier's Story probes beyond interracial animosity

By Gary Ruff

A Soldier's Story accomplishes that most elusive goal of the serious film: to make a statement without becoming preachy and losing its vital human qualities. At first this film may seem to be little more than an obvious attempt to make a statement concerning the difficulties of black soldiers stationed in Louisiana in 1944. But the film probes beyond interracial animosities, exploring the universal problem of values within the black community. At the same time, the gravity of the theme is perfectly balanced by brilliant portrayals of characters that are so real, so human, that they are often as funny as they are touching.

The story concerns the investigation by a young black captain named Davenport (Howard Rollins, Jr.) of the murder of a fiery black Sgt. Waters (Adolph Caesar). His investigations uncover not only the usual classic black/white race conflict of the Southern white officers, but also the conflicts between the sergeant and the black troops in his charge. This volatile relationship is revealed through flashbacks during the testimony of the enlisted men. Because of whatever reason they are forced to play in a white man's army, the black recruits are reluctant to sacrifice their racial pride for their duty as soldiers. As the one who must enforce the orders of the white officers, Waters is regarded as a betrayer of black interests. Still, he tries ruthlessly to force them to respect the uniform, regardless of color. He sees his men as young fools whose stubbornness only perpetuates the stereotypes that limit them.

Being both a black and an officer, Davenport plays a pivotal role in the midst of all this conflict. Because justice is his only goal, he must remain objective; this becomes more difficult because of his hero status among the black enlisted. At the same time, he faces the nearly impossible task of gaining the cooperation of the white officers. His desire to be regarded as neither a hero nor a menace represents his personal struggle to be judged not by his color, but by his abilities. As a result, he becomes as humorless and duty-bound—striding about like a black MacArthur, oblivious to the stresses and emotions that are alienated by both his fellow blacks and his fellow officers.

Davenport's precarious position symbolizes the paradox of the black American. For many like Sgt. Waters, success in a white-dominated society means that they must give up their identity as blacks. Because society labels people, individuals must decide which label they prefer. Obviously, Davenport considers himself an officer first and a black man second. This sense of priorities is what leads to his discovery of the facts and ultimately leads to justice. Hence, the film is saying that one can resist the limitations of labels.

The actors are well-cast, performing with strength and realism. Howard Rollins, Jr. has a compelling voice and a commanding presence that make him believable as the strong-willed captain. Despite his small size, Adolph Caesar is a fearsome sergeant. The young actors who play the enlisted men all create characters that are memorable individuals rather than bland supporting parts. The superb acting is the film's main strength, for its message relies on the vivid presentation of characters with opposing values.

If a thrill a minute is what you're after, go see a Charles Bronson flick. While A Soldier's Story contains a couple of good fight scenes and a suspenseful escape/track chase, director Norman Jewison de-emphasized high-paced action in favor of creating a kind of suspense. The psychological effects were enhanced by using close-ups and shooting many of the scenes in darkness. Jewison also includes visual clues that hint at the meaning of particular scenes. Authentic costumes, settings and some fine blues music round out the atmosphere.

A tight, well-crafted drama, A Soldier's Story is also a socially conscious film that should not be missed. It asks its viewers to simply open their minds for a couple of hours. That's the sort of therapy we all could use.

Yoko Ono's tribute album: swell songs, limp layout

By Harold Lowry

Yoko Ono wants artistic recognition—it has eluded her. Meanwhile, she continues to pander John in "new" videos, singles and an album, Milk and Honey. The sad part is that she is talented, but her latest album, Every Man Has a Woman, fails to demonstrate her ability. The album is a collection of her songs recorded by artists as diverse as Rosanne Cash (Johnny Cash's country-singer daughter) and German minimalist pop band Trio. It is such a chaotic potpourri of mediocrity that it might well be called Trio (who?) give a clanking disco cut, "Dogtown." At first more wearing than daring, this song has that addictive repetitiveness that makes groups like the one that recorded it, whoever they are, famous. Another song, "Now Nobody Sees Me Like You Do," is a cheap shot—little kids sentimental wagon. Sean Ono Lennon (the one that recorded it, whoever they are, famous. Another song, "Now Nobody Sees Me Like You Do," is a cheap shot—little kids sentimental wagon. Sean Ono Lennon

Yoko Ono's Every Man Has a Woman.

Art Evans, Larry Riley and Adolph Caesar in a tense scene from A Soldier's Story.

Yoko Ono's Every Man Has a Woman.

Yoko Ono and son Sean share a gentle moment or Never, is a cheap shot—little kids singing against killing.

The plot of this film is simple: a group of soldiers is tied up, tortured and murder. What is surprising is how much of the film is devoted to the second half of the word—murder. The film even goes so far as to end with a murder scene, which is remarkable considering that the film is not a thriller. The film is more of a psychological study of the effects of torture and murder on the victims. The film is also a commentary on the nature of violence and the human capacity for harm.

The film is a story of one man's struggle to be understood by those around him. It is a story of a man who is forced to confront his own demons and to face the consequences of his actions. The film is a powerful and moving story that is well worth seeing.

Monday night saw a lot of empty seats at the Flock of Seagulls concert in Memorial Auditorium. "Everyone's had a hard time selling tickets," the group's drummer, Ali Score, confessed. Six weeks into the current tour, the band has been playing smaller venues with smaller stages than originally planned, which has meant cutting the size of the act.

The performance at MSC was in fact only the fourth time that the elaborate set with the large projection screens was able to be used. For A Flock of Seagulls this is either indicative of a vast decline in popularity, or a temporary setback to be suffered only until their current album finds its way up the charts.

Lead guitarist Paul Reynolds.

For Class I Concerts, who, along with the other Class I Organizations, suffered a six percent cut in SGA-allocated funds last week, the financial loss may have repercussions that will be felt later in the season. But for the people who did attend, it was clearly a night to be enjoyed.

A Flock of Seagulls first came to the American eye with their single, "I Ran." The band had been formed some years earlier when Mike Score and his brother Ali joined their synthesizer and drums with the lead guitar and bass of Paul Reynolds and Frank Maudsley. After hacking around somewhat, they began to play the Liverpool clubs and eventually landed a recording contract with Jive Records which produced first a five song EP and then their debut album. The emphasis in the latest album, The Story of a Young Heart, is relationships. Although this theme has been present in their earlier works, with titles such as "Telecommunication" and "Space Age Love Song" as well as the highly technical setting for the video for "Wishing," the group might as well be writing tunes for an AT&T commercial. And the music apparently has less of an emphasis on synthesizer since Mike Score takes up the guitar on several songs. It's not that they're giving up on their electronic sound as much as they're trying to expand the borders of what classifies a Flock song.

At Monday night's show this sense of redirection was apparent. The vocals took precedence as did the guitars over the former microchip sound. And while they didn't ignore their past hits, the concert's obvious emphasis was on the newer material, and this worked to their advantage. A song like "Telecommunication" is made for a disco where the somewhat ponderous beat fits. But for "The More You Live, the More You Love" or "The Story of a Young Heart," a softer setting with at least some kind of claim to good acoustics is better suited.

Again, the lack of a sell-out audience could mean that the popularity of A Flock of Seagulls is on a decline. But as Ali Score insisted, the new album may just need some time.

Ice Hockey Club gets O.K.; looks to raise funds

By JoAnn Niemasz

It is now official—MSC has its own ice hockey club! On Wednesday, Oct. 3, the SGA issued a charter recognizing the club as a Class II organization. The team is now in the process of formulating a playing schedule.

This organizational process was started by a handful of interested students last spring. "I was surprised to find out that MSC didn't have an ice hockey team," remarked the club president, Rob Garr, a transfer from Bergen Community College. "I thought it couldn't hurt to try to put a team together so I put up some signs."

Garr, along with Vice President Kari Reidel and founding teammate Harry Ellis, was responsible for the team's coordination. A meeting was held, a constitution was drawn up and submitted to the SGA office, and other officers were elected. Steve Houde was elected treasurer by his clubmates and Bill Kramer was elected secretary.

The club has big plans. They plan to start their season after Christmas and join a men's league at Ice World in Totowa. There they hope to play other college clubs and varsity teams as well as other organized men's clubs. The team hasn't held any practices on the ice, but practices are held once a week in the gym floor. "We haven't seen everyone play together on the ice yet, but from what we've seen we should have a better than average team," Garr marveled. The team is now in the process of making arrangements for physicals to be given at school and this plan will come up at the next meeting on Thursday.

Major issues under consideration include a 50/50 raffle, which will be held some time in November, and bus trips to the Meadowlands to see the Devils play. "The SGA has been very helpful and cooperative," Ellis said, "and especially McKinley Boston, the Director of Student Activities. He's been very helpful by offering advice and guidelines with our fundraisers."

Activities such as these, however, are still under consideration and no definite dates have been set yet. "It's a lot of work now," Garr remarked. The team is in the process of organizing scrambles with other college clubs and varsity teams could prove to be an asset in boosting team productivity in the eyes of the athletic department. In the future, the team plans to approach the sports department in the hopes of creating a school varsity team here at MSC.

Another important matter is that of coordination. A meeting was held, a constitution was drawn up and submitted to the SGA office, and other officers were elected. Steve Houde was elected treasurer by his clubmates and Bill Kramer was elected secretary.

Insider's look at Special Olympics

These kids are special in more ways than one

By Cosmo Lorusso

It was a normal Wednesday on my job at the publications office. Things went along just like yesterday until I received a phone call. It seemed the photographer had not yet shown up at the MSC Special Olympics Soccer Clinic and they wanted someone to take pictures. No one was around so I volunteered my services with their acknowledgement of my limited background with both photography and special children.

I forget exactly what pictures I took. Yet if none came out, it wouldn't have mattered because I'll always be able to picture in my mind the events of that day.

There were hundreds of special children on the football field. They were in organized groups doing various activities. They were led by volunteers from the college and Montclair High School. And that's where the story starts.

These leaders, while attempting to teach these children soccer skills, opened up their hearts to these kids. The children were from all around the North Jersey area and received innumerable amounts of hand slaps, high fives and smiles, just for making an effort to do something.

While the leaders initiated the excitement, it was the smiles on the special children that made the day a success.

The younger kids engaged in games of ring around the rosy, while the older children took part in soccer activities which included kicking the ball into goal and to each other.

It was their jumping up and down and their longing to be hugged that added to it.

There were no winners or losers on that day as far as score goes. Everybody won.

The leaders were always encouraging, and even the heat of the sun, as the noon hour came to end the games, could not break down the enthusiasm of both the leaders and participants. They just kept right on dancing to the music that kept up the beat of the day.

I overheard a statement from one of the leaders that really showed their desire to help children with special needs. She said, "It seems like there were more last year. I like a lot of kids. The more the better."

I journeyed through the games snapping pictures and making new friends. I found both the leaders and the children never to be camera shy. I am a shy person but I felt myself able to open up to these kids. It was this feeling that compelled me to write this so that others may have a chance to find the joy of making a special child happy just by kicking a ball to them, shaking their hands, or most important, giving them a smile.

Now, as you can see, some of my pictures came out. This will give these kids a chance to see the happiness they showed that day. These photos will also help the leaders remember that day. But like me, I doubt if they will need photographs to do so.

Cosmo Lorusso is a junior English major working as assistant director of publications in MSC's publication office.

At such an early stage, your chances of living a long, healthy life are excellent. But we need your help. The only proven way to detect a cancer this small is with a mammogram. A mammogram is a low-radiation x-ray of the breast capable of detecting a cancer long before a lump can be felt. If you're over 50, a mammogram is recommended every year. If you're between 40 and 50, or have a family history of breast cancer, consult your doctor. In addition, of course, continue your regular self-examinations.

Division II football
edges Indians again

By “The Jet”

After two defeats to tough NCAA Division II schools, another one claimed victory over the MSC Indians (4-3) on Saturday. This time Central Connecticut (4-2) edged MSC 13-7 in Connecticut. Earlier this season the Indians fell to East Stroudsburg by a late quarter score, and to American International by a score of 16-6.

In the first quarter, after a 50-yard kickoff return by CCS, things looked grim. But the hearty MSC defense came on and forced them to punt. On MSC’s third possession, they drove to the Connecticut 18 but the offense stalled and a 35-yard field goal by Joe Perri was no good.

In the second quarter, the Devils chipped a 24-yard field goal putting the first points on the board with 9:59 left. Perri attempted a 44-yard field goal which was no good on the Indians third possession before the half. With 2:21 left, CCS came up with another score.

The final drive for MSC was the longest 35 seconds for the Indians this season. The game ended with Briggs scrambling and putting up a Hail Mary pass which was intercepted.

MSC still is in a conference tie with Glassboro at 3-0. The Indians will face Trenton State this Saturday at Sprague Field. The Indians defeated Trenton 35-34 last year and will look forward to doing the same this year. The last three games of the season will be played at MSC and all conference matchups.

By Susan Resnick

The men’s soccer team made a great comeback to beat Ramapo College 4-2. Friday night on Sprague field, Ramapo’s Peter Atkins opened up the scoring 10:22 into the first half to make the score 1-0.

The second and final goal for Ramapo was scored minutes later to put Ramapo ahead 2-0.

Towards the end of the first half George Kyriacou and John Ioannou, along with Ramapo’s Dennis Foerter were yellow carded for handling the ball.

John Ioannou put the Indians in the game by scoring their first goal for MSC with a penalty kick. This was Ioannou’s 15th goal of the season.

The Indians came on strong in the second half when Allen Garth, assisted by Ioannou, scored the tying goal of the game.

Sophomore Danny Simons put the Indians ahead when he scored the team’s third goal at 29:18 in the second half with an assist by Ray Marco. This was Simon’s third goal of the season.

After three warnings, MSC Head Coach Philo Santiago was also given a yellow card for being on the field while the game was in motion.

The referee wasn’t finished flashing cards. Towards the end of the second half, Ramapo’s Chris Vallejo was red carded and thrown out of the game. This gave the Indians an advantage.

At 41:03 senior forward George Kyriacou scored the final goal of the game to put the Indians up 4-2.

The Indians’ record is now 4-5-2. The final home game of the season will be this Saturday against Glassboro State College at 1:30 p.m.

Baseball has a great Fall

By Anna Schiavo

The baseball team’s spring record was a hard act to follow but the Indian squad came back with a spectacular fall sequel. Fans who came out to the home games at Pittser field were treated to college baseball at its best.

Key plays, powerful hits and fine pitching added up to sunny afternoons of memorable baseball. The Tribe finished up the fall season with a 20-4 record and great expectations for the spring season.

"It was a productive season for us and we got the chance to see a lot of our young players under varsity conditions. For example, shortstop Jimmy Fasano, centerfielder Tim Johnson and first baseman Dave Stanislawczyk won themselves starting positions," Head Coach Kevin Cooney said.

Sophomore Fasano batted .417 and committed only one error at the shortstop position. Johnson, a senior, established himself as a fixture in the centerfield. He batted .413 and led the team in six offensive categories. Senior Stanislawczyk batted .397, tied for most homeruns and was second in RBIs with 20.

One of last spring’s top three pitchers, Lorenzo Gentile, pulled a shoulder muscle early in the season. "Every year it seems that someone gets hurt and doesn’t pitch in the fall. This year was no exception. Last year two pitchers were injured and as a result Lorenzo got more work than he normally would have and I think that helped his development. This year other players benefitted from his misfortune," Cooney said.

Junior Shaun Garrity was 6-0 and probably would not have started in as many games as he did had Gentile been healthy. Sophomore Gary Garbar cont. on p. 21.
