Company president reveals asbestos cover-up

By Tom Boud

The U.S. government has been covering up the asbestos problem for more than 40 years, according to William Rossnagel, company president of one of the nation's largest asbestos testing firms, Rossnagel and Associates.

Speaking about the asbestos problem at MSC last week Rossnagel said that the government had hidden many lives if it would have alerted the public to the asbestos threat. He said, "The government knew since 1937 that asbestos is deadly. They knew then that asbestos had effects which lead to asbestosis or mesothelioma two decades after contact but they didn't care at all to make warnings about its dangerous properties widely known."

Rossnagel said the U.S. government kept quiet on the asbestos matter because the nation's industries relied heavily on asbestos for their products. "With asbestos being used for over 3,500 household and industrial products, there was no way the government was going to resist industrial lobbyists and regulate its use," he said.

Elaborating further on asbestos, Rossnagel said that asbestos becomes hazardous when it is airborne. "This happens very easily because asbestos is oftentimes loose and unseured." Other causes of airborne asbestos include shoddy construction work, sloppy maintenance, roof and pipe leaks, building vibration, and even vandalism. However, Rossnagel assured the audience that the three buildings he tested at MSC during the last two summers, Botwin Hall, Webster Hall, and the McEachern Music Building are completely safe having satisfactory levels of asbestos in the air.

Referring to outdoor airborne asbestos, Rossnagel said that most airborne asbestos comes from the brake linings of cars. He said, "So much asbestos comes from automobile brake linings that as a car comes down the road, you can actually see flakes of asbestos falling off the linings. This accounts for ninety percent of all outdoor airborne asbestos."

Alluding to the present, Rossnagel said, "Now the government and the EPA are trying to crackdown on the asbestos problem with stricter building codes but they're still botching it up."

He said that the EPA deceived the public by making them think that the asbestos level in the air is next to zero. Rossnagel said, "My tests have conclusively shown that the average human being breathes between 8,700 and 25,800 asbestos fibers per day. Although this doesn't mean the entire population of America will die from asbestosis, it nonetheless shows how the government is unreliable in attending with this problem."

Concluding, Rossnagel urged everyone to exercise extreme caution when near asbestos products or in an asbestos contaminated environment. "You can never be too safe," he said.

Watergate felon claims spying is routine procedure

By Dianne Traflet

Making no apologies for his involvement in the Watergate scandal, G. Gordon Liddy said at MSC this week that he would still condone spying to further the cause of a candidate he supported.

Liddy was convicted in 1973 for his participation in the wire-tapping and burglary of the Democratic national committee headquarters, located in the Watergate Hotel in Washington, D.C.

During the lecture, sponsored by the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA), Liddy addressed the topic of "Public Perception Versus Reality." Throughout his speech, Liddy drew much laughter and applause from the audience of more than 400 people.

In his opening statement, Liddy said that he was grateful for CINA's introduction because he recalls times when he was only acknowledged by the words, "Will the defendant please rise?"

Liddy, who is the author of the best-selling "Will, explained how people are leading a life of illusion today. One example is the practice of using uncommon titles for places and occupations.

He said he spent time in nine prisons, all of which were inaccurately termed penitentiaries. "No one was penitent, certainly not I... Prisoners were referred to as inmates, as if this were some kind of fat farm."

"This type of misrepresentation takes on many forms," Liddy said, explaining that Americans frequently call the Soviets adversaries, rather than enemies.

On the other hand, the Soviets teach students "hatred for the enemy not to be used as a weapon again the Liddy. "If that term is good enough for them, it should be for us."

Regarding military might, Liddy claimed that the Soviet Union "leads us in everything except aircraft carriers." and cited specific figures to support his references.

Liddy devoted much of his lecture to explaining espionage and spying. "A nation's spies are essential; without them, you are blind and deaf," he said.

The former Watergate conspirator explained his role as an FBI spy under J. Edgar Hoover. He said that the FBI would penetrate safes of embassies, photograph secret materials, and return them precisely as found.

Liddy spoke of the clandestine operations in which he participated, including his futile attempts to recover certain highly classified documents, later known as the Pentagon Papers.

Liddy differentiated between that incident which was a classic national security operation, and the Watergate break-ins which were for political intelligence purposes.

According to Liddy, the latter type of operation is one which he would perform to help a candidate with whose cause he agrees. While Liddy was working for Nixon's campaign, he was responsible for two break-ins of the Watergate complex, the purpose of which was to gain secret information from the Democrats. By recording phone conversations and interpreting conversations in rooms, Liddy said he hoped to discover what tactics the Democrats might use against the Republicans.

Liddy said it was his fault that the operation failed because he had neglected to take into account the building's main vulnerability—a lone clean-up man. "This person, who happened to be working late that night, discovered the presence of Liddy and his accomplices and called the police."

In the subsequent Watergate trial, Liddy was sentenced to 20 years in prison. However, President Jimmy Carter commuted his sentence, and Liddy served two and a half years.

Liddy said political intelligence activities, such as those in which he participated, are still going on today.

Senate wants plan changed!

By Linda Longo

The faculty senate outlined its objections to the state college fiscal autonomy proposal at last week's meeting.

In a letter to T. Edward Hollander, chancellor of the department of higher education (DHE), the senate said there should not be a centralization of admissions policy nor should there be central control over academic program planning.

In addition the senate was opposed to the membership of the chancellor on the state college boards of trustees and to the lack of faculty input. The senate said the proposal's suggested contracts between the state and the colleges are unclear and don't convey specific information about autonomy implementation.

Since the letter was issued on Oct. 19, Dr. Wayne Bond, faculty senate president, and the chancellor have modified his proposal. One of the changes includes the replacement of the suggested contracts with legislation to "accomplish the proper transfer of autonomy."

Dr. Jean Armstrong, vice president of student affairs present at last week's meeting and said, "I fully support whatever degree of autonomy the state college can achieve. It can serve our college and students very well."

The chancellor will present his most recent proposal to the board of higher education tomorrow and a final decision may then be made regarding implementation. Hollander said the plan would create a central board of governor who would centralize operational responsibility to each state college so that each would have more fiscal flexibility.

Another issue discussed at the faculty senate meeting concerned the suggestion of Saul Cooperman, education commissioner, to inspect the quality of the liberal arts programs in New Jersey state schools.

The faculty agreed that an immediate investigation into other methods of improvement may then be made regarding implementation. Hollander will review and approve the censure of Saul Cooperman, education commissioner, to reinspect the quality of the liberal arts programs in New Jersey state schools. Dr. Kathleen Wilkins, faculty representative to the chancellor, commissioner and the DHE.

The SGA passed a resolution rejecting the state assembly's bill which would create a University of New Jersey. Submitted by SGA president Donna Noone, the resolution said the proposal would serve no purpose. Even though some support Reagan and think the debate put the incumbent on the defensive, I can't really say who won this time."

MSC grad becomes partner in famous accounting firm

By Terry Keller

Being named a partner in one of the Big Eight accounting firms not only marks a first for an MSC female graduate, but also signifies the growing number of women moving up the corporate ladder.

After graduating in 1973 with a BA degree in mathematics, Mary Paetzold became one of the few women hired by Peat Marwick, the second largest international accounting firm in the U.S. Paetzold has been with the firm 11 years now, which is the average length of time required to become a partner.

Peat Marwick has a total of 1,380 partners, of which only 24 are women. Paetzold says things are changing, however, as 40 to 45 percent of the firm’s newly hired employees are women. Paetzold believes this trend reflects the increasing number of women entering the accounting field. She also said that women graduating from MSC are well prepared for a career in public accounting.

Paetzold’s motivation to obtain her current position came from a managing partner, Ed Mahoney, who has a positive and supportive attitude towards women in accounting. Paetzold advises individuals entering this field “to be flexible. It’s a demanding profession and it requires a personal commitment.”

Paetzold is familiar with demanding schedules. As a student, she worked 40 hours per week each semester in the accounting department of Shop Rite. Even then she was preparing for her professional career. Although MSC did not offer an internship program at the time she was attending, she considers the solid educational background she received at the college a valuable tool in her current position.

Dr. Irene Douma of the accounting law and taxation department said, “Paetzold’s accomplishments reflect on the high quality of our accounting program and indicate that MSC is able to compete effectively with some of the major colleges and universities in the metropolitan area.”

Vandalism and thefts are chronic problems on campus

By MaryEllen Maclisaac

For the seventh straight week, thefts and vandalism continue to dominate the campus police report.

On Thurs., Oct. 18 between 7:40 p.m. and 11:15 p.m., vandals broke the side window of an MG and took a radar detector worth $250.

Late night Fri., Oct. 19, in Lot 23, vandals broke the vent window of a 74 Datsun. Although they failed in an attempt to take an am/fm cassette stereo, they succeeded in stealing a plastic cassette case containing 21 tapes.

Sometime between the evening of Sun., Oct 14 and the morning of Mon., Oct. 15, a wallet was stolen from the main lounge of Stone Hall. The wallet contained $160.

On Thur., Oct. 18, sometime during the evening, a cassette recorder was taken from a resident’s second floor room in Blanton Hall. The estimated value of the item is unknown, campus police said.

At 4:00 p.m., Fri., Oct. 19 in Panzer gymnasium, an Adidas bag was stolen. A female student left the bag unattended which contained $5 in cash, some clothing and books.
FAMOUS LAST WORDS FROM FRIENDS TO FRIENDS. I’m perfectly fine. I can drive with my eyes closed. There’s nothing wrong with me. Are you joking—I feel great. What am I—a wimp? I’m in great shape to drive. You’re not serious are you? What’s a couple of beers? Nobody drives my car but me. I’ve never felt better. I can drink with the best of them. But I only had a few. So I had a couple. I can drive rings around anybody. I can drive my own car, thank you. I’m not drunk. I drive better when I’m like this. Who says I can’t drink drive? I can hold my booze. I know I’m doing. I always drive like this. Trust me. What’s a few to me. What’s a few with my eyes with me. DRINKING AND DRIVING CAN KILL A FRIENDSHIP.
Co-op Day is a success

By Janet Hart

What does the phrase "that competitive edge" mean to you? Students attending Co-op Awareness Day last week heard 15 employers, five faculty, and six co-op students speak, adding up to a total of 26 different and highly individualized views of "that competitive edge." Yet despite the diversity of definitions, a surprisingly similar impression emerged of what a Co-op experience really provides.

Co-op experiences give the competitive edge because they provide access to information and technology not available in classrooms along with early and realistic academic and career planning.

For instance, Dr. Mark Koppel of the psychology department described how he had always planned on working in a mental hospital. "It wasn't until my third year of graduate school, however, that I actually worked in a hospital. I wanted a Co-op experience so that I would have been able to make realistic plans.

According to Rick Sonshine, a Co-op Supervisor at American Cyanamid, students who take advantage of Co-op will have a better understanding of advanced technology. Wold Communications spokesperson Diane Luciani also described how interns are privy to the technical responsibilities of satellite communications.

Concerning the competitive edge Co-op students have in the job market upon graduation, Bill Bullock of IBM summarized, "We look for a Co-op experience on resumes and transcripts. It's what can set you apart from all other applicants." MSC graduate, Anna Huom bachana agreed, "I began my career with IRS as a Co-op, so I know first-hand what it can do for you."

Clearly, the competitive edge means different things to different people: the theme that emerged is that Co-op is that competitive edge or as one speaker put it, "Special jobs for special people."

Seminars to improve teacher performance

To help professors improve instruction techniques, Dr. Tom Veene dall, chairman of the faculty committee on teaching, said three seminars on teacher effectiveness will be held on campus this semester.

The first is entitled "Improbable but True Stories about Teaching" to be conducted by Dr. Rita Jacobs of the English department. This seminar will take place today from noon to 2 p.m. in Room 402 of the Student Center. The following seminars will take place on Nov. 14 and Dec. 3 respectively. For more information contact Veenedall at 893-4109.

Committee to develop international studies at MSC

The Committee on International Studies and Programs will conduct a review and make recommendations for improving the international studies programs at MSC. The committee is asking for input regarding this matter and will hold an open forum for this purpose on Wed., Oct. 31 from 1 p.m. in Student Center ballroom C. For more information contact Dr. Harriet Klein of the anthropology department at 893-7556 or 893-7225.

Heretics group welcomes all viewpoints

For MSC students who would like to explore their particular religious affiliations, there are several groups on campus in which they can participate—such as the Newman Community, Chi Alpha Christian Fellowship, and the Jewish Student Union. But there is an alternative organization for less traditional students, known as Heretics Anonymous.

This group has been meeting every semester since 1978, and "is designed for students who are disillusioned with other religious organizations," according to Dr. Robert Price, editor of Dayspring, the group's literary pamphlet.

The main goal of the group is to create a new kind of Christianity and church, "a new life," Price said. Topics discussed at their meetings include Catholicism, tradition, and the Holy Spirit. According to Price, "theology catches the voices of the people," so group discussions focus on theology, faith, practice and experience.

As part of Heretics Anonymous, a Bible study group also meets to interpret the ways in which Bible passages relate to contemporary life. Some of the issues addressed are homosexuality and the role of women in society.

According to Price, "people come to study the text in an atmosphere of free inquiry."

On occasion, the Bible study group sponsors guest speakers, and is now planning a presentation on "Radical Christianity" scheduled for Nov. 9 at 7 p.m. The program will feature two half-hour films: "Seeds of Hope," about the Church in El Salvador, and "The Ultimate Trip," about the Children of God/Family of Love cult.

Students are welcome to attend any of the Heretics Anonymous meetings to express personal views. This semester, the group will meet Mondays at 7 p.m. and Tuesdays at noon in the Campus Ministry office in the Student Center.

According to Price's statements in the latest issue of Dayspring, Heretics Anonymous wants to share "stimulating thoughts and feelings on religious faith and on other things in the light of faith. And once again, we want to avoid doing it from any one doctrinaire viewpoint; there are too many interesting perspectives and opinions."

The press or the gov't: who's deceiving who?

The Westmoreland vs. CBS libel case raises crucial questions. Questions not only of the accountability of the press, but of the trust in government to tell its people the truth.

Throughout the past fifty years, the U.S. government has bent the truth to fit its purposes, especially in war time and particularly during the Vietnam War. The very action which escalated that war may have been staged or could possibly never have happened at all—the Gulf of Tonkin incident.

The press has long been considered the fourth arm of the government, serving as its watch dog. This is how our founding fathers thought it should be, and they were right.

Today, more people get their news from television than from print, and they tend to trust the television medium more than newspapers. It is easier to put your faith in a person you see every night, in your living room on the TV screen, than to trust the unseen writer behind the by line. This makes the television medium a very powerful one.

Though the power of television is apparent, its content is not. An average 15 minute newscast is equal to two-thirds of the front pages of the New York Times. A startling statistic.

The power of the television news organization was evident in CBS' 1982 documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception."

The power of the editing machine and the power of stating the unseen writer behind the by line. This makes the television medium a very powerful one.

The press or the government, in this case, is guilty, but that is minimal when compared to the dishonesty of the American government. This is especially true now, when we have a president who has been kept so far away from the press, and has been so controlled when dealing with the media.

Self-help groups: untapped resources

By Jim Morrison

What do Alcoholics Anonymous, Parents Without Partners, and Overeaters Anonymous have in common?

They are just three of the more than 500,000 self-help groups in existence today. The idea of bringing people with similar life-experiences together has steadily grown in both number and diversity.

Uniting people with common interests to discuss their problems, explore alternatives, and adapt solutions is not only indigenous to self-help groups. Many corporations bring their employees together to discuss untenable policies before problem-solving and decision-making takes place.

Since a period of isolation or alienation often follows a crisis or other difficult life experiences, the self-help group provides an environment conducive to ventilation of thoughts and feelings that may be difficult to express elsewhere. Much as the business person who discusses a unique problem with others outside of his/her industry finds difficulty communicating the experience, many people suffer from the same sense of frustration when they seek understanding from others who are unexperienced with their situation.

This often creates a feeling of separation from the other important persons to the individual. Self-help groups bridge this gap by providing a place where experiences are shared with others who have gone through similar circumstances.

By expressing pent-up emotions, individuals quickly learn to deal with their situations. They grow by listening to others. As members share coping strategies and explore alternatives, problem solving skills are implemented. Individually decide for themselves which course to pursue. Isolation is dissipated in an environment bolstered by understanding and caring. Individuals feel support from others who have carried the same weight, and acceptance is replaced with renewed motivation.

Many groups serve as an extended family by providing a caring community atmosphere. Yet the groups also emphasize self-reliance. Each member assumes responsibility for helping himself while helping others. There is little or no fee. The profit is in the enrichment that comes from growth experienced by people helping people.

In a society as diversified in experience as ours, self-help groups will continue to grow. They supplement professional organizations by providing practical information, relief, and support to a large segment of the community.

Individuals are learning more and more that people with a common cause who bond together constitute a rich and as yet untapped resource. Each one of us has a potential to really aid another human being and benefit personally as well.

The Drop-In Center, in addition to providing information about self-help groups already in existence, also assists in organizing new groups. If you are interested in joining a group, or starting one on campus in such areas as test anxiety, single parenthood, aerobic fitness, etc., the Drop-In Center has forms that students can fill out showing their areas of interest. Based on your responses, the Drop-In Center will then be able to organize the groups of your particular interests. For further information, call the Drop-In Center at 893-5272 or just drop in.
To the editor:

As election-time nears, and the Republican machine rumbles confidently towards the finish line with its sights set on the future, perhaps it would be well to glance back at the past for a moment. For those persons who do not plan to exercise their franchise, it may be unfair to say that some of the people who sleep over warm-air vents in New York City do so "by choice.

Recently, in an effort to cover up his record of Social Darwinism, he has claimed credit for certain social expenditures which only occurred because Congress refused to implement all of his cuts.

Efforts at arms control have completely ceased during Reagan's administration; the Soviet walkout was simply the dying gasp of an arms control process that was systematically starved and dismembered by Reagan ever since the 1980 election. He has found it more politically profitable to verbally revile and abuse the Soviets than to deal with them in a balanced, realistic way.

Actually, it may be unfair to say that Reagan's Soviet policy is "unrealistic." In the cinematic version of reality which his mind inhabits, the only "realistic" way to deal with the "bad guys" is to shoot it out.

On Reagan's economic record and the deficit, I will say this: our economy is "healthy" in the same way that a thief having a spree with a stolen credit card is "rich." Reagan calls Mondale's deficit-reduction plan a "fairy tale," but nothing could seem more magical to me than Reagan's stated belief that the deficit will just eventually disappear if we do nothing about it—when some 30 percent of every tax dollar now goes toward paying interest on the national debt.

And, though unemployment is down, most new jobs are in the low-paying, unskilled category. So much for the "America of opportunity" that Reagan is creating.

But Ronald Reagan has a secret weapon: his famous Teflon coating. A grin, a wave, a single election-season meeting with a Soviet official, and four years of counterproductive rhetoric and torpedoes arms control talks are forgiven and forgotten by a loving public.

And, finally, the invasion of Grenada just isn't mentioned anymore; why? I can't imagine, since many people were very entertained by it at the time. But nothing sticks to Teflon.

On camera, during one of his rare press conferences, after the ministrations of makeup experts, with a reassuring grin pasted on his face, Ronald Reagan may look pretty good to some people. But on all the issues—on arms control, the deficit, religious neutrality, and social compassion, to name a few—Walter Mondale looks much, much better to me.

Student suggests alternatives to SGA's six percent budget cuts

To the editor:

At the last legislative meeting of the SGA, a bill was passed which cut the budget of Class I organizations by six percent. Hopefully, this will not continue in future years.

In my opinion, this cut will adversely affect the SGA's image. Class I programming and the well-being of students' attitudes. Class I organizations are an intrinsic part of student life. They bring students together in educational and entertaining ways. They are definitely a needed service in a college community.

This six percent cut will affect the college life in many negative ways. One way, is that there will not be as many activities offered to the student body.

The money will be put into the account entitled, "unappropriated surplus." This money is used for Class M's and special events. The SGA will be in great financial trouble in the future years.

I feel very strongly about the need for student activities. What it comes down to is— if students want the quality of services they have become accustomed to they are going to have to pay for them.

Democrats will be a long time waiting for any apologies

By Colman McCarthy

Bush, in his debate with Geraldine Ferraro, charged that "my opponents" suggest that the American soldiers killed in Beirut "died in shame." The Reagan-Bush handlers have come up with no verification of that charge, but that hasn't kept Bush from refusing to apologize.

While he was piling up stones in that wall, the vice president said of his debate with Ferraro that he tried "to kick a little ass." That drew another demand for an apology, this time from Ferraro's campaign manager. No again. Nor will any regret be expressed by a Bush aide for his assessment of Ferraro as "bitchy." Haven't the Democrats figured it out yet? They are dealing with an administration that has consistently and unapologetically traded in insults, trashings and character assassinations. Bush's slurs were no momentary lapses, nor was the "bitchy" jibe an off-color slip of the Republican tongue. This is their one-dimensional attitude, an inability to understand or forgive. Reagan-Bush handlers have come up with no verification of that charge, but that hasn't kept Bush from refusing to apologize.

Mondale and Ferraro should take comfort. They have a forum. At least one that tells as much about the administration that has consistently and unapologetically traded in insults, trashings and character assassinations as "a left-wing cult which seeks to bring down the type of government I believe in." T.K. Jones, a deputy under-secretary of defense, said that "everybody's going to make it (through nuclear war) if there are enough shovels to go around. Dig a hole, cover it with a couple doors and then throw three feet of dirt on top. It's the dirt that does it."

The standard defense for all this witlessness is that this or that comment was yanked out of context by the press. But this is a context of four years of relentless assault, a context from which the statements cannot be yanked because they are as imbedded as habits of the mind.

For the Reagan administration to apologize for one insult to Walter Mondale would mean an apology for all of them to everyone. Such an order is too big. As Reagan, Bush and the others have been saying for four years, we think small.

Soldier's Story probes beyond interracial animosity

By Gary Ruff

A Soldier's Story accomplishes that most elusive goal of the serious film: to make a statement without becoming preachy and losing its vital human qualities. At first this film may seem to be little more than a murder mystery concerning the difficulties of black soldiers stationed in Louisiana in 1944. But the film probes beyond interracial animosities, exploring the universal problem of values within the black community. At the same time, the gravity of the theme is perfectly balanced by brilliant portrayals of characters that are so real, so human, that they are often as funny as they are touching.

The story concerns the investigation by a young black captain named Davenport (Howard Rollins, Jr.) of the murder of a fiery black Sgt. Waters (Adolph Caesar). His investigations uncover not only the hatreds and suspicions of the Southern white officers, but also the conflicts between the sergeant and the black troops in his charge.

This volatile relationship is revealed through flashbacks during the testimony of the victim's wife. Under the inferior role they are forced to play in a white man's army, the black recruits are reluctant to sacrifice their racial pride for their duty as soldiers. As the one who must enforce the orders of the white officers, Waters is regarded as a betrayer of black interests. Still, he tries ruthlessly to force them to respect the uniform, regardless of color. He sees his men as young fools whose stubbornness only perpetuates the stereotypes that limit them.

Being both a black and an officer, Davenport plays a pivotal role in the midst of all this conflict. Because justice is his only goal, he must remain objective; this becomes more difficult because of his hero status among the black enlisted. At the same time, he faces the nearly impossible task of gaining the cooperation of the white officers. His desire to be regarded as neither a hero nor a menace represents his personal struggle to be judged not by his color, but by his abilities. As a result, he becomes as humorless and duty-bound—striding about like a black MacArthur, oblivious to the stables and the stifling travail of the enlisted—alienated by both his fellow blacks and his fellow officers.

Davenport's precarious position symbolizes the paradox of the black American. For many like Sgt. Waters, success in a white-dominated society means that they must give up their identity as blacks. Because society labels people, individuals must decide which label they prefer. Obviously, Davenport considers himself an officer first and a black man second. This sense of priorities is what leads to his discovery of the facts and ultimately brings him to justice. Hence, the film is saying that one can resist the limitations of labels.

The actors are well-cast, performing with strength and realism. Howard Rollins, Jr. has a compelling voice and a commanding presence that make him believable as the strong-willed captain. Despite his small size, Adolph Caesar is a fearsome sergeant. The young actors who play the enlisted men all create characters that are memorable individuals rather than bland supporting parts. The superb acting is the film's main strength, for its message relies on the vivid presentation of characters with opposing values.

If a thrill a minute is what you're after, go see a Charles Bronson flick. While A Soldier's Story contains a couple of good fight scenes and a suspenseful escape/train chase, director Norman Jewison de-emphasized high-paced action to create an eerie kind of suspense. The psychological effects were enhanced by using close-ups and shooting many of the scenes in darkness. Jewison also includes visual clues that hint at the meaning of particular scenes. Authentic costumes, scenes and some fine blues music round out the atmosphere.

A tight, well-crafted drama, A Soldier's Story is also a socially conscious film that should not be missed. It asks its viewers to simply open their minds for a couple of hours. That's the sort of therapy we all could use.

By Harold Lowry

Yoko Ono wants artistic recognition—it has eluded her. Meanwhile, she continues to pander John in "new" videos, singles and an album, Milk and Honey. The sad part is that she is talented, but her latest album, Every Man Has a Woman, is a bore. Rosanne Cash (Johnny Cash's country-singer daughter) and German minimalist pop band Trio. It is such a chaotic potpourri of comedy and theatrics, including a slide show and an industrial show parody. Compared to Steve Martin, the world-famous Rose mixes dance with irreverent songwriting and the playful style of ...

Monday night saw a lot of empty seats at the Flock of Seagulls concert in Memorial Auditorium. "Everyone's had a hard time selling tickets," the group's drummer, Ali Score, confessed. Six weeks into the current tour, the band has been playing smaller venues with smaller stages than originally planned, which has meant cutting the size of the act. The performance at MSC was in fact only the fourth time that the elaborate set with the large projection screens was able to be used. For A Flock of Seagulls this is either indicative of a vast decline in popularity, or a temporary setback to be suffered only until their current album finds its way up the charts.

For Class I Concerts, who, along with the other Class I Organizations, suffered a six percent cut in SGA-allocated funds last week, the financial loss may have repercussions that will be felt later in the season. But for the people who did attend, it was clearly a night to be enjoyed.

A Flock of Seagulls first came to the American eye with their single, "I Ran." The band had been formed some years earlier when Mike Score and his brother Ali joined their synthesizer and drums with the lead guitar and bass of Paul Reynolds and Frank Maudsley. After hacking around somewhat, they began to play the Liverpool clubs and eventually landed a recording contract with Jive Records which produced first a five song EP and then their debut album.

The emphasis in the latest album, The Story of a Young Heart, is relationships. Although this theme has been present in their earlier works, with titles such as "Telecommunication" and "Space Age Love Song" as well as the highly technical setting for the video for "Wishing," the group might as well be writing tunes for an AT&T commercial. And the music apparently has less of an emphasis on synthesizer since Mike Score takes up the guitar on several songs. It's not that they're giving up on their electronic sound as much as they're trying to expand the borders of what classifies a Flock song.

At Monday night's show this sense of redirection was apparent. The vocals took precedence as did the guitars over the former microchip sound. And while they didn't ignore their past hits, the concert's obvious emphasis was on the newer material, and this worked to their advantage. A song like "Telecommunication" is made for a disco where the somewhat ponderous beat fits. But for "The More You Live, the More You Love" or "The Story of a Young Heart," a softer setting with at least some kind of claim to good acoustics is better suited.

Again, the lack of a sell-out audience could mean that the popularity of A Flock of Seagulls is on a decline. But as Ali Score insisted, the new album may just need some time.

Ice Hockey Club gets O.K.; looks to raise funds

By JoAnn Niematz

It is now official—MSC has its own ice hockey club! On Wednesday, Oct. 3, the SGA issued a charter recognizing the club as a Class II organization. The team is now in the process of formulating a playing schedule.

This organizational process was started by a handful of interested students last spring. "I was surprised to find out that MSC didn't have an ice hockey team," remarked the club president, Rob Garr, a transfer from Bergen Community College. "I thought it couldn't hurt to try to put a team together so I put up some signs."

Garr, along with Vice President Karl Reidel and founding teammate Harry Ellis, was responsible for the team's coordination. A meeting was held, a constitution was drawn up and submitted to the SGA office, and other officers were elected. Steve Houde was elected treasurer by his clubmates and Bill Kramer was elected secretary.

The club has big plans. They plan to start their season after Christmas and are arranging for ice time and practices to be given at school and this plan will come up at the next meeting on Thursday. Major issues under consideration are arranging for ice time and practices and organizing scrimmages with other schools. In this case, scrimmages with other college clubs and varsity teams could prove to be an asset in boosting team productivity in the eyes of the athletic department. In the future, the team plans to approach the sports department in the hopes of creating a school varsity team here at MSC.

Another important matter is that of making arrangements for physicals to be given at school and this plan will come up at the next meeting on Thursday. Major issues under consideration are arranging for ice time and practices and organizing scrimmages with other schools. In this case, scrimmages with other college clubs and varsity teams could prove to be an asset in boosting team productivity in the eyes of the athletic department. In the future, the team plans to approach the sports department in the hopes of creating a school varsity team here at MSC.

Another important matter is that of team uniforms. The club is seeking backing, these costs are steep.

Club membership is open to any MSC student—male or female, campus resident or commuter—will remain open until the first game. The only requirement for membership are: each individual must supply his own hockey equipment, have his own health insurance plan (in case of injury as MSC is not responsible), and must pass a physical examination. The team is looking for people who want to play hockey and are willing to sacrifice their time. Since the team is still in the organizing process, they are looking for input from people interested. Garr is confident that more team participation will spark in the weeks to come when fundraisers and practices start.

"I think the team is pretty good," Garr commented, "there is a lot of talent and spirit and things look good."

As of now, 23 men are enrolled in the club and membership is still open. Anyone interested in joining should contact Rob Garr, Karl Reidel, or Harry Ellis or should look for posters and advertisements regarding meeting times or stop by Panzer Gym on Tuesday nights at 9 p.m. during the team practice.

was 2-0 and had some impressive outings. "Danny Olson, the ace of our pitching staff, was 5-1. His only loss was at the hands of Seton Hall and that was more a case of bad hop basehits and errors on our part," said the MSC Coach.

John Cowan, a senior right fielder, continued his excellent playing this fall. Cowan batted .383 and led the team in RBIs with 22 and tied with Stanislasczyn for the lead in home runs.

Senior third baseman Bob Yeager batted .320 and had the team in doubles. His only loss was at the hands of Seton Hall and that was more a case of bad hop basehits and errors on our part," said the MSC Coach.

The Indians chalked up the most wins ever at MSC for a fall season. These included wins over NCAA Division I schools.
Insider's look at Special Olympics

By Cosmo Lorusso

It was a normal Wednesday on my job at the publications office. Things went along just like yesterday until I received a phone call. It seemed the photographer had not yet shown up at the MSC Special Olympics Soccer Clinic and they wanted someone to take pictures. No one was around so I volunteered my services with their acknowledgement of my limited background with both photography and special children.

I forgot exactly what pictures I took. Yet if none came out, it wouldn't have mattered because I'll always be able to picture in my mind the events of that day.

There were hundreds of special children on the football field. They were in organized groups doing various activities. They were led by volunteers from the college and Montclair High School. And that's where the story starts.

These leaders, while attempting to teach these children soccer skills, opened up their hearts to these kids. The children were from all around the North Jersey area and received innumerable amounts of hand slaps, high fives and smiles, just for making an effort to do something.

While the leaders initiated the excitement, it was the smiles on the special children that made the day a success.

The younger kids engaged in games of ring around the rosy, while the older children took part in soccer activities which included kicking the ball into goal and to each other.

It was their jumping up and down and their longing to be hugged that added to it.

There were no winners or losers on that day as far as score goes. Everybody won.

The leaders were always encouraging, and even the heat of the sun, as the noon hour came to end the games, could not break down the enthusiasm of both the leaders and participants. They just kept right on dancing to the music that kept up the beat of the day.

I overheard a statement from one of the leaders that really showed their desire to help children with special needs. She said, "It seems like there were more last year. I like a lot of kids. The more the better."

I journeyed through the games snapping pictures and making new friends. I found both the leaders and the children never to be camera shy. I am a shy person but I felt myself able to open up to these kids. It was this feeling that compelled me to write this so that others may have a chance to find the joy of making a special child happy just by kicking a ball to them, shaking their hands, or most important, giving them a smile.

Now, as you can see, some of my pictures came out. This will give these kids a chance to see the happiness they showed that day. These photos will also help the leaders remember that day. But like me, I doubt if they will need photographs to do so.

Division II football edges Indians again

By "The Jet"

After two defeats to tough NCAA Division II schools, another one claimed victory over the MSC Indians (4-3) on Saturday. This time Central Connecticut (4-2) edged MSC 13-7 in Connecticut. Earlier this season the Indians fell to East Stroudsburg by a late quarter score, and to American International by a score of 16-0.

In the first quarter, after a 50-yard kickoff return by CCS, things looked grim. But the hearty MSC defense came on and forced them to punt. On MSC's third possession, they drove to the Connecticut 18 but the offense stalled and a 35-yard field goal by Joe Perri was no good.

In the second quarter, the Devils chipped a 24-yard field goal putting the Indians behind 3-0 and the score remained that way until the 7:52 mark of the third quarter. At that time Perri attempted a 44-yard field goal which was no good. MSC's third possession, they drove to CCS territory and forced them to punt. On the kickoff, Tom Powers, was tackled by MSC's Leander Knight deep in Indian territory at the 25. CCS was held to a field goal from 39 yards out, giving Ed Chavis 108 of them. The MSC drive in Connecticut territory ended in a fumble when Keith Tierney came up with the ball at the two.

Another CCS fumble occurred and this time Keith Tierney came up with the ball within the 30 of the Devils. After eight plays moving the ball inside the 10, Walter Briggs could not get the ball to his receivers after attempting two passes. Briggs totaled 289 yards passing, giving Ed Chavis his 12th win of the season. The MSC drive in Connecticut territory ended in a fumble when going for a first down at the Devils 11. The last three games of the season will be played at MSC and are all conference matchups.

In soccer action:Comeback heroics pace MSC

By Susan Resnick

The men's soccer team made a great comeback to beat Ramapo College 4-2 Friday night on Sprague Field. Ramapo's Peter Atkins opened up the scoring 10:22 into the first half to make the score 1-0. The second and final goal for Ramapo was scored minutes later to put Ramapo ahead 2-0.

Towards the end of the first half George Kyriacou and John Ioannou with a penalty kick. This was Ioannou's 15th goal of the season. The Indians came on strong in the second half when Allen Garth, assisted by Ioannou, scored the tying goal of the game.

MSC still is in a conference tie with CCS at 3-0. The second game of the season will be against Glassboro State Thursday night on Sprague Field.

Baseball has a great Fall

By Anna Schiavo

The baseball team's spring record was a hard act to follow but the Indians came back with a spectacular fall sequel. Fans who came out to the home games at Pittsfield were treated to college baseball at its best. Key plays, powerful hits and fine pitching added up to sunny afternoons filled with memorable baseball. The Tribe finished up the fall season with a 20-4 record and great expectations for the spring season.

"It was a productive season for us and it gave me the chance to see a lot of our young players under varsity conditions. For example, shortstop Jimmy Fasano, centerfielder Tim Johnson and first baseman Dave Stanislavsky won themselves starting positions," said Head Coach Kevin Cooney.

Sophomore Danny Simons puts the Indians ahead when he scored the team's third goal at 29:18 in the second half with an assist by Ray Marco. This was Simon's third goal of the season.

Special children from around the North Jersey area gathered at Sprague Field last Wednesday to take part in MSC's Special Olympics Soccer Clinic. See story p. 23.

Note:

Perri's extra points the score was 13-7 and was anybody's ballgame with 13:25 left to play.

This was Simon's third goal of the season.

The referee wasn't finished flashing yellow cards. Towards the end of the second half, Ramapo's Chris Vallejo was red carded and thrown out of the game. This gave the Indians an advantage.

At 41:03 forward for George Kyriacou scored the final goal of the game to put the Indians up 4-2.

The Indians' record is now 4-5-2. The final home game of the season will be this Saturday against Glassboro State College at 2:00 p.m.
