MSC crime rate high among New Jersey colleges

By MaryEllen MacIsaac

For the past three years, MSC's crime rate has remained the second highest among the thirteen schools listed in the University and College Offense Data (UCOD). The college continues to head the list in car thefts as well.

In 1981, Rutgers Camden had the lowest total crime rate with an index of 77.3, while Rutgers New Brunswick had the second highest with a total crime index of 277 and 231 respectively. In 1983, Rutgers New Brunswick had the second highest crime rate in 1981 with a total of 290. However, in 1982 and '83 Trenton State was third highest with a total crime index of 277 and 231 respectively.

In 1982, Rutgers New Brunswick, Thomas Thompson, chief of campus police, said, "The force can carry a key factor in preventing auto thefts. However, students and faculty could help by simply having more resources into this effort and setting a record for a U.S. presidential victory.

Spokesperson from the New Jersey Division of State Police Uniform Crime Reporting Unit at the New Jersey Public Interest Research Group, said increased awareness of society. The results of the election, however, are a reflection of what's going on in the rest of society." In addition, Bingaman said the Republican Party spent considerable time and money campaigning on the college level. "The Democrats put very little resources into this effort and were out-organized by the Republican Party." See Students for Reagan, p. 7.

Professors describe life in war-torn Nicaragua

Nicaragua is not a Communist country, according to Drs. Joanne Engelbert, George Martin, and Richard Franke, all MSC professors who visited the Latin American nation during the past year. Speaking at a lecture in Rusa Hall last week, the three said some of what the American public believes about Nicaragua is false.

Expanding on these falsehoods, Dr. George Martin of the sociology department said, "Although the United States government and the media portray Nicaragua as a Marxist-Leninist subversive power, the truth is that Nicaragua is really an evolving democracy." Martin cited many examples to support this allegation.

"There is no doubt that the Sandinista government is striving for democracy," Martin said. "We visited with Sandinistans who believe that the Soviet Union refuses to sign a friendship treaty with the Sandinistas as the result of the Sandinistas permit the Left and Right to participate in the national elections. Specifically, the former dictator Anastasion Somoza was removed from power in 1979, and the current manager of the PAWS animal control officers is Alexander Somoza, the owner of the PAWS animal control officers.

Martin pointed out that the Sandinista regime is a popular government supported wholeheartedly by the common people. He said, "With three-quarters of the Nicaraguan population carrying automatic weapons around regularly, the public could force the Sandinistas out of power if they truly didn't like them.

According to Berreman, Abdich told the editor which appeared in The Star-Ledger that the U.S. government's campaign against Nicaragua is pointless.

"The only real danger is the possibility of dogs picking up communicable diseases from the strays. But, we're not worried about rabies," Berreman said. "There hasn't been an incidence of rabies reported in this area for forty years."

Dr. Joanne Engelbert, George Martin, and Richard Franke recount their visits to Nicaragua.

"Something should be done before they attack someone. If they get hungry enough, who knows what they'll do." Abdich said two deer were killed but is unsure if the dogs were involved in the killings.

On Oct. 25, The Montclarion Times printed a front-page article with the headline, "Wild Dogs Roam Area," and three days later The Star-Leder followed with a "Pack of Wild Dogs Stris Fear in Montclarion." Channel 7 News also became interested in the story, and aired an interview with two PAWS animal control officers on Oct. 30.

Prior to the printing of the two articles and the television broadcast, Berreman sent a letter to the Montclarion Chief of Police containing what he believes is an accurate account of the dog story. He also made a recommendation to the PAWS board of directors to inform The Montclarion Times that the deer story is false. The board did not get back to the newspaper until Nov. 5. The Berreman letter will appear in a letter to the editor in today's edition of that paper.

Last month's articles in The Montclarion Times and The Star-Leder further elaborated on allegations made by the Lloyd Road resident, who works part-time at the shelter, MaryAnn Milcetic, an MSC student who works part-time at the shelter, MaryAnn Milcetic, an MSC student.

Berreman said that the dogs were regularly pursued by the police, who dispatched a new emergency night call PAWS officer, Patrick Abdich.

According to Berreman, Abdich told the woman he had heard that a pack of wild dogs kill and drag two deer down from the reservation. When Berreman received this report from Montclair police, he dispatched a new emergency night call PAWS officer, Patrick Abdich.

"The best of my knowledge, there is no pack of wild dogs in the area." Berreman said that he had filed a report with the video surveillance system for the dogs saying the animals lunged at his van's windows when he went to investigate the cat killings in the reservation.

Students claim 'wild' dogs in area are harmless

By Michelle LaLumia

Stories about a pack of wild dogs threatening Montclair residents have been greatly exaggerated, according to a former employee of the Pound Animal Welfare Society (PAWS). Ron Berreman, who served as a PAWS animal control officer from February to October of this year, left the employment of that organization.

Ron Berreman, who served as a PAWS animal control officer from February to October of this year, left the employment of that organization.

"There is no doubt that the Sandinistan regime is a popular government supported wholeheartedly by the government and media that causes us to think that they are not anti-American. At all, they are a group that believes in the Sandinistas and that the U.S. government and media causes us to think that the citizens of Nicaragua are against us."

In closing, the professors emphasized that the U.S. government's campaign against Nicaragua is pointless.

"I followed them around for over half an hour and down Lloyd Road and tried to catch them with leashes, but they avoided me. They seem wary of people, but not vicious." Berreman also said that some had collars, indicating that pets may have joined the strays.

After the third week of September, the dogs apparently disappeared; however, a week later a group was reported seen in the Rosedale Cemetery. Berreman investigated and questioned the same dogs from the reservation which had travelled across town. "Some of the dogs also had collars and none acted violently when I approached them," he said.

Berreman trapped two of the dogs in the cemetary on Orange Road by the West Orange border, using human box traps with spring doors. This disturbed the group.

PAWS has also set two traps in the Eagle Rock Reservation, but, so far, only raccoons and squirrels have been caught.

Though it has been difficult to catch the dogs using leashes and traps, PAWS cannot do much else except make daily patrols and try to leash them. "PAWS can't use tranquillizer guns because, depending on the dog's size and metabolism, we could kill one of them. But we have to be careful," Berreman said.

According to Jean DeFalco, the current manager of the PAWS animal control board, all the recent calls have been regarding stray dogs, which were subsequently returned to their owners. Windolf is the only resident who has been making repeated phone calls and each time that PAWS responds, they find no wild dogs.

MaryAnn Milcetic, an MSC student who works part-time at the shelter, said, "The stories have been blown out of proportion."

The only possible danger is the possibility of dogs picking up communicable diseases from the strays. "But, we're not worried about rabies," Berreman said. "There hasn't been an incidence of rabies reported in this area for forty years."

If students or others living in the Montclarion area see any dangerous-looking stray dogs, call 746-5212, and PAWS will immediately respond.

According to Berreman, "Other than exercising ordinary caution around stray animals, we don't think there's any reason for people to panic."

Mischief Night vandals play "tricks" on campus

By Mary Ellen Maclsaac

Several incidents of vandalism took place on campus last week. On Wed., Oct. 30, vandals turned over benches outside College Hall, and decorated the trees around the mall with toilet paper. Garbage cans were thrown on top of the roof of Life Hall, and sheets of plastic were stretched between several trees.

Sometime between Tues., Oct. 30 and 1 1 a.m. and Wed., Oct 31 at 1 a.m., a '77 Datsun, worth $5,800, was stolen from Lot 13. On Thur., Nov. 1, the car was found without its four tires in Woodbridge.

In Lot 28, sometime between 10:30 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Nov. 2, someone entered a '77 Toyota and stole the speakers, tape player, and a wallet. The total value of the items is $460.

For the second time this semester, the equatorial sundial was wrenched from its base outside College Hall on Wed., Oct. 31. The sundial is worth $125 and there are no suspects in the theft.

On Fri., Nov. 2, $107 was taken from an office desk in Life Hall. The exact time of the incident is unknown.

On Sat., Nov. 3, vandals smashed the glass of one of the office doors in College Hall. The cost of the damage is unknown.

On Thur., Nov. 1 at 11:15 p.m., an angry male punched the glass of the door near the Pilgrim Bank in the Student Center. The male suffered a cut in his arm and was taken to the hospital for treatment.

Two bomb threats were made last week. On Wed., Oct 31 at 10:30 p.m., someone called campus police saying there was a bomb in the Cove Road apartments. On Sat., Nov. 3, at 5:15 p.m., a caller said a bomb was hidden somewhere in Freeman Hall. In both cases, the buildings were evacuated and no bombs were found.

Fireside Chats to serve as open forum

By Maureen Freeburg and Gloria Dec

Forty-five faculty members agreed to attend the Fireside chats designed to improve relations between students and teachers.

Academic Affairs Chairperson Nicole Bagen said, "This will provide a chance where they can exchange ideas and opinions." She encouraged students to take advantage of the informal meetings, the first of which is scheduled for Mon., Nov. 26 on the second floor of the Student Center. A list of dates and attending faculty members will be posted in the SGA office.

Bagen was also appointed SGA clerk and her new duties will include recording the minutes of each SGA meeting. In other news, Dr. Edward Martin, dean of students, praised John Connolly, The Montclarion sports editor, on his article about the tailgate parties in the parking lots near Sprague field. "The article really got the point across that alcohol is more dangerous than fun," Martin said.

A bill proposing a Class II charter of the Multinational Education Association created a 30-minute debate. It was sent back to committee by SGA Vice-President Dennis Quinn for further review.

SGA President Dave Handal made an announcement concerning the painting of rocks on campus. He says it has become a new trend for fraternities and sororities, adding that whatever rocks have already been marked will stay that way. In the future, however, the SGA may provide a system that will assign organizations with particular rocks to paint.

Handal also congratulated WMSC on its extensive coverage of the presidential election. Mary Miele, news director, and Mike Weinstein, assistant news director, aired returns from 7:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., with updates every 15 minutes after 9:00 p.m.

"I think the coverage of the election went really well due to the professionalism and efficiency of the news department and the radio station in general," Miele said.

Minority Career Conference scheduled for Nov. 14

By Janine S. Myatt

Minorities entering the working world are faced with the same difficulties as the majority population, plus more. Not only do minority candidates have to prove their competence and perform well above standards to be successful, but they also have to cultivate the correct contacts and be familiar with and adapt to corporate culture and politics.

To aid in this process, MSC's second annual "Pushing Ahead: A Minority Career Conference," will be held on Wed., Nov. 14, from 2 to 9 p.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms. The conference will consist of workshops led by minority professionals, and will address some of the special concerns and issues that may be faced by minority individuals as they enter the corporate world.

In addition, representatives from 25 major corporations in industries such as retailing, banking, insurance, and pharmaceuticals will be available to answer questions concerning career options and will accept resumes for potential job openings.

There will be two workshops presented. The first is "Selling Out... Buying In: The Price of Success," which will focus on whether or not aspects of your culture have to be sacrificed in order to be successful in the corporate world. The second will be "Employers Tell It Like It Is: The Do's and Don't's of the Interview Process," which will examine effects of the interview process that are often overlooked.

The conference is being coordinated by Career Services and sponsored by the Black Student Cooperative Union, Latin American Student Organization, and the Black and Hispanic Alumni Committees of MSC's Alumni Association.

Since employers will be accepting resumes, participants are expected to dress as they would for an interview. There is no fee for attending the conference; however, there is a $3 charge to students and a $10 charge to alumni, faculty and staff for dinner. Dinner seating is limited, so please register now. Contact Career Services, Room 104, Student Center Annex, for registration and information. Janine S. Myatt is a career counselor for Career Services.

Students for Reagan

On the same issue, Stewart said Reagan may have won because he "appeals to the people's sense of confidence not only in their own lives but in the country's state of affairs."

At MSC, a poll published in last week's edition of The Montclarion indicated that students supported Reagan over Mondale on the issues of the nation's economy, defense and the federal deficit.

Susan Ryall, an undeclared sophomore, said, "A lot of people voted for Ronald Reagan without knowing his background and what he has done in the past four years. I'm disappointed that Mondale did not win, and I'm surprised to find that so many people voted for Reagan."

omore, said one day after the election, "I voted for Reagan...I basically agree with what he believes a government should do."

On the other hand, Mark Hatfield, undeclared sophomore, said, "A lot of people voted for Ronald Reagan without knowing his background and what he has done in the past four years. I'm disappointed that Mondale did not win, and I'm surprised to find that so many people voted for Reagan."

As of the end of Oct. '84, MSC's total number of car thefts is 23, which is the lowest figure of the past three years. However, it still remains the highest among these schools listed in this offense data book.

Explaining this constant high rate, Jayne T. Rich, chief of the campus police, said, "This is an open campus, which means it's easily accessible to everyone. Due to the budget crunch, we have a low number of staff, and so we can't patrol everywhere on campus. We need people to be our eyes and ears by reporting everything suspicious. If people don't report the crimes, we can't help them."

In addition, Rich said, "More cars are parked in Lot 22, thus enabling thieves to hide in between the cars while they break into vehicles. It is best if students avoid this lot as much as possible."

Although car thefts remain high, there has been a decrease in the amount of personal property left in parked autos. Rich said, however, that "tape decks and CEs are still vulnerable to both the professional and amateur thief."

According to an article in a Dec. '79 issue of U.S. News and World Report, a convicted car thief said no American car is thief-proof and that he could steal most models in less than 90 seconds.

Although car thefts are a big problem on the MSC campus, larceny thefts are committed more often than any other crime on all the college campuses listed in the UCOD.

MSC had the third highest rate of larceny in '83 with 162 incidents, behind Rutgers New Brunswick with 597, and Trenton with 185. So far this year, larceny in '83 with 162 exceeds last year's figure of 162.

Larceny is defined as "the non-violent crime of stealing another's money or other personal property." Thus, it takes into account such crimes as pickpocketing and shoplifting, which are more likely to occur than burglary and auto theft. According to Rich, the primary reason for this high rate is that, "people don't take care of their property."

"Dorm residents believe that because a security officer is at the front desk, they can leave their rooms unlocked. Students are constantly leaving their books, clothing, purses, and other items unattended in classrooms. Then they are surprised when one of their belongings is missing," Rich said.

Agreeing with Rich's statement, Hotaling said, "People who are careless with their property more or less invite crime."

Statistics show the number of burglaries committed over the past three years is lower than larceny incidents, but the act of breaking and entering is still a problem. In '81, Glassboro had the highest rate of burglaries with a total of 56; Rutgers New Brunswick had the next highest with 53, and MSC had the third highest with a total of 50. MSC had the highest rate in '82 with a total of 93 and Rutgers New Brunswick second with 71. In 1983 Stockton had 79 burglaries, and MSC came in second with a total of 63. As of Oct. 1984 MSC has a total of 41 burglaries, which is 22 less than last year.

A spokesperson from the state police said that thefts can be prevented, "If residents securely bolt their windows and doors at night or when they leave their rooms or apartments, it would help to keep their property safe. Residents also shouldn't hand out duplicate keys to friends because this practice just increases the chance of the keys falling into unfriendly hands," he said.

According to these authorities, public awareness is a key to stopping crime. Due to a low number of campus police, Rich urges students to report crimes. "I would much rather have students call in a suspicious incident and be wrong nine times than miss one actual crime that should have been reported," she said.

To help people understand how to protect themselves against crime, Rich would like to hire a full-time crime prevention officer, but might not be able to due to a tight budget. "This officer would give self-defense lectures and tips on keeping property safe," she said.

The spokesperson from the state police said crime in New Jersey has declined over the past three years and part of it is due to public awareness programs. "These programs, such as Neighborhood Watch and Community Awareness, are the result of a greater willingness on the part of the public to reduce and report crime," he said. "Even the reporting of suspicious acts is paying off with arrests."

As there is a decrease in crime in New Jersey, there is also a decline in the total crime index for college campuses in the state. The overall total crime index of the six state colleges and the three Rutgers schools for 1981 was 2,596. This figure decreased slightly in '82 to 2,558 and dropped further to 2,168 in '83. According to Hotaling, MSC may see to have a higher crime rate than when he entered the force in 1972, but this may be due, in part, to more students.

Both Hotaling and Rich stress the importance of informing the campus police about criminal incidents saying this a victim's most logical course of action. The emergency number for the campus police is 893-4111.
A necessary decision

Last week, The Montclarion's sports editor, John Connolly, wrote a column entitled, "A game with no winners." Since then there has been much talk about the topic: tailgating at MSC home football games.

This situation has drawn the attention of students, the student government and the administration. Reactions are mixed. The administration is not happy with the problem, as shown by Dr. Edward Martin's letter in this week's Montclarion.

Things will be different this weekend at the game. The administration has said that they will be enforcing the college's alcohol policy. What they mean is campus police might be arresting people for drinking while tailgating. If you intend to drink this Saturday night, prepare to be held responsible for your actions.

Some students have complained that there is no social life here at MSC. They say the football games have been the best thing to happen to MSC's social life in a long time. Yes, the football games are fun, but people don't have to drink to enjoy them. Drinking and driving is too great a risk to take. Perhaps next season the Rat should remain open on Saturday nights when there is a home game; this would at least solve some of the litter problems. Part of the litter problem is also apparently due to a lack of garbage cans—a situation the administration can easily remedy.

And if the social life is so bad here at MSC, do something about it. Talk to the Class I Organizations, try to get programming on the weekends, and then attend these activities.

The Montclarion stands behind our sports editor and we are glad his column brought this situation to light for the Class I Organizations, tourism, and the administration. This may not be the administration's most popular decision in recent times, but it is necessary.

This is the age of the journalist, more than the age of the artist, the teacher, the pastor. It is the age of "non-fiction" because imagination cannot keep up with the fantastic daily realities. —Eric Severeld

Plight of the Ethiopian Jews

By Rhonda Kupfer, JSU president

The Falashas are an ancient Jewish community found in Ethiopia. For hundreds of years, they have suffered from persecution, anti-Semitic attacks and poverty. Recently, widespread famine throughout Ethiopia has called world attention to the plight of the people in this devastated country; the Falashas are threatened with extinction.

The name Falasha itself means "exiled one," "alien," or "one without rights," a derogatory Ethiopian name used for Jews. Falashas call themselves Beta Yisrael, the House of Israel. However, there has been much controversy as to the origin of these black Jews. Some feel they might be from the lost tribe of Dan, or an offshoot of the Jews of Arabia. The Falashas believe that they are descendants of the Jews who accompanied Menelik I, the son of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, when they came back to Ethiopia from Israel. This is only one of the many controversies surrounding Falashas.

The Falashas were isolated for many years from the mainstream of Judaism, through circumstance and geography, and their religious practices took on a unique flavor. They developed their own Torah-based traditions, and their religious practices were based solely on the religious laws and holidays found in the Torah.

Historically, the Falashas have been subject to the most severe persecution. In 1632, their independent kingdom was defeated after centuries of warfare. This defeat plunged them into years of oppression. They were denied the right to own land, were subject to slave raids, and suffered from pogroms (organized massacres). From 1974-1981, Ethiopian Jews suffered from attacks due to political upheaval in the country. A terrible drought followed, accompanied by famine and disease which cost over 5,000 Jewish lives.

Presently the Israeli government has been involved in the rescue of these persecuted people, but much more needs to be done. All channels must be pursued to insure that Ethiopian Jews do not wither in a land of oppression and famine. Many groups in the United States have continually pressed the issue of the plight of Ethiopian Jewry and this has led to rising public awareness which has been instrumental in bringing more Ethiopian Jews to Israel.

In 1981, the Falashas were subject to a vociferous campaign to give up their Judaism. In the summer of that year, all Jewish schools were closed, the teaching of Judaica forbidden and all Hebrew books were banned. Hebrew teachers were imprisoned and tortured. In 1982, Hebrew books were burned. Relatives of those who had been able to escape Ethiopia were arrested in 1983.

Thousands of Ethiopians have illegally fled across the border, but it is Jewish family members that are singled out for harrassment and arrest. Beginning in 1984, notice has been given to Falashas that a mandatory conscription will be in effect for all young men.

As part of a public awareness campaign, the Jewish Student Union (JSU) will sponsor a program on the Falashan issue on Thursday, Nov. 15, at 7:00 p.m. in Cafeteria B of the Student Center. It is hoped that this information will serve to raise consciousness concerning the Falashas and help in their cause.

Admission is free and the program is open to campus and community. For specific information about what one can do to help, the JSU office can provide the material necessary.

Enforcement of alcohol policies to become norm at campus events

To the editor:
Mr. John Connolly’s article in the Nov. 1, 1984, issue of The Montclarion illustrates a dilemma faced by all members of our college community. Clearly, we all wish our extra curricular events to be well attended and certainly there is no wish to impinge unreasonably on the freedoms of students, Alumni, or friends of the college.

Nonetheless, it must be understood that the college prohibits the possession and/or consumption of alcoholic beverages everywhere on campus except in Clove Hall. Apts., licensed Student Center areas, or at special events for which an Alcoholic Beverages Commission Special Permit has been obtained. Therefore, those who violate the policy must face the consequences.

Student leaders and campus police all agree that some consumption is taking place, as Connolly reports, but all concerned indicate that much smaller numbers participate than the possible 3,500 hinted at in Connolly’s Corner.

The numbers should not, however, blur the important aspects of the report. The consumption of alcoholic beverages cannot be overlooked; no one should drink and then drive, and we should not wait for a tragedy to strike before acting.

Let me, as Dean of Students, request that all members of the college community respect our alcohol policies, since they are intended to protect us all. Please be forewarned that enforcement of the college regulations about possession/consumption will be observed particularly at the Glassboro game this Saturday and at all future events, for the safety of all concerned.

Dr. Edward C. Martin

Connolly’s Corner is congratulated

To the editor:
Kudos to John Connolly for expressing his concern regarding tailgate drinking (The Montclarion, Nov. 1). I concur with his apprehension. Tailgate partying should not be eliminated, but the excessive drinking and littering are uncalled-for.

Sight pollution on MSC’s campus

To the editor:
This is in response to the letter in last week’s Montclarion, submitted by the members of TKE, MSC’s newest fraternity. Stating that their chartering was intentionally not mentioned in The Montclarion’s SGA news of Oct. 11, reeks of paranoia.

In their letter, TKE praises the merits of their fraternity and the benefits they bring to MSC. Granted some fraternities here at MSC are good and worthwhile organizations which are a credit to the SGA and MSC. APO is one such fraternity. They are a service-oriented fraternity that serves the campus well. If only more organizations would follow their lead.

The problem I see with other fraternities, including TKE, is after I read all about the good things they do for MSC, I am confronted by TKE graffiti painted on a rock between Math and Science and Finley Hall. When I see this, I have to stop and wonder. I’m not saying that this type of behavior is limited to the members of TKE; there are many other fraternity names that deface this campus, painted on rocks, sidewalks and even dorms. It is this type of action which discredits such organizations in my eyes.

If these fraternities wanted to show their genuine care for MSC they would initiate a campaign to clean up the graffiti and strike such future acts from their rushing and hazing activities.

The Thompson treasury: an artist comes full circle

By Mark Breitinger

Richard Thompson's new live acoustic release, Small Town Romance, marks a homecoming of sorts. Not only does it neatly pull together his recording career thus far (both solo and with ex-wife Linda), but it coincides with the re-release by Carthage Records of almost the entire Thompson catalogue. Both occasions are cause for celebration.

Since the release of I Want to See the Bright Lights Tonight more than a decade ago, the Thompsons have produced six superb LPs—a standard of excellence almost unheard of in the rock world. Their unique blend of traditional English folk, rock 'n' roll, and macabre lyrical wit makes them stand out as the best purveyors of British folk-rock since the demise of Fairport Convention, of which Richard Thompson was a founding member.

Richard and Linda's first three albums as a duo—Bright Lights, Hokey Pokey and Pour Down Like Silver—are all timeless classics. Highlighted by Richard's exceptional guitar work and vocals, songs like "Down Where the Drunkards Roll," "Night Comes In," and "The Sun Never Shines on the Poor" grab the listener's ear and won't let go. These records never grow old—there's always some nuance of harmony or instrumentation there to refresh and surprise.

Richard's songwriting, a marriage of beautiful melody and morbid obsession, has never been better. In the folk singalong "We Sing Hallelujah," his rough, resonant vocal delivers verses like "A man is like a rusty wheel on a rusty cart/He sings his song, as he rattles along, and then he falls apart." On "The Sun Never Shines on the Poor," one of the pair's best songs, churning acoustic guitars illuminate these lines: "Some of the people are poor in the purse, they don't have the cash at the ready/And some of the people are crippled and lame, they cannot stand up true and steady/And some of the people are poor in the head—that is the simplest fools that you see/But most of the people are poor in the heart—that's the worst kind of poor you can be."

The next Thompson effort, First Light, is extremely weak by comparison and contains very few real gems. But its followup, Sunnyvista is a great album for guitar players, highlighting Richard's swirling, eccentric Stratocaster leads on nearly every track.

When Shoot Out the Lights was released in 1982, it was met with overwhelming critical acclaim and finally paved the way for their commercial acceptance in the U.S. Unfortunately, it was made during the breakup of Richard and Linda's marriage—something which, in retrospect, the record makes apparent.

"Man in Need" rides a pounding rock beat while drawing a contrast between a man's need to provide and be provided for. The classic Thompson cut "Wall of Death" blends lyrics, music and performance into seamless perfection. The record's most beautiful moments are Linda's ballads. "Walking on the Wire," is a gorgeous chronicle of a troubled relationship, and "Just the Motion," is a song where life's difficulties are likened to a storm on the sea: "You're just feeling seasick/You're just feeling weak/You're confused and you can't seem to speak/It's just the motion."

Following the breakup of their marriage, Richard recorded Hand of Kindness, which explores the poignancy of regret while reveling in the cathartic possibilities of rock 'n roll. Full-tilt rockers like "Tear-Stained Letter" and "The Wrong Heartbeat" are cast next to the bitter sweet "How I Wanted To" and the title track. Hand of Kindness success in forensics competitions.*

Richard Thompson's music never seems to lose its purity. His sympathetic readings of "Never Again," "Down Where the Drunkards Roll," and "A Heart Needs a Home," are easily equal to the original versions (all sung by Linda), and the bare acoustic treatment they get here calls attention to the simple beauty of his songwriting.

Small Town Romance is probably the best acoustic folk music you'll hear on record this year, and is a must for Thompson fans.

Non-initiates, however, may find this record too unsophisticated to hold their attention. For them I recommend any of the Richard and Linda Thompson LPs; if they aren't available in local record stores, they can be obtained along with catalogue information from Carthage Records, 611 Broadway, Suite 415, New York, NY 10012. The price by mail is a bit steep, but they're all audiophile-quality pressings and worth every penny. It may be some of the finest music you'll ever hear.

MSC student triumphs in Forensics tournament

By S.C. Wood

Capturing four prizes at a national forensics tournament last week, junior English/Communications Theory major La Vaughn Slaven lauds public speaking as "the most difficult form of theater, but also the most rewarding."

Forensics, a committee of Players, was founded eleven years ago with such ideals of excellence and accomplishment in mind.

La Vaughn Slaven's performance at the Sidney Presser Tourny at NYU exemplifies the quality of MSC's speakers. Competing against teams from Columbia, Fordham, the University of Pennsylvania and many other colleges, MSC's team took 6th place in the competition.

Oral interpretation of literature was among the contests; Slaven won first prize in both the prose and poetry interpretations, in which she discussed the works of Booth Tarkington and Freya Manfred. She also took second place in the SID (Single Interpretation of Drama) competition and fifth place in the Impromptu event.

The values of winning such events are manifold. While forensics competitions polish up one's speaking skills, they also enhance a resume. Slaven cites a friend who was hired as a lawyer by a competitor firm: "despite the fact that she had had no computer experience. The importance of good communications skills cannot be overemphasized: effective speakers clarify their ideas and are persuasive because they impart confidence to others."

The satisfaction of one's accomplishments also increases one's poise and self-confidence. In honing one's communication skills, Slaven says, "You learn perfection." Her many trophies and recent awards attest to this gift in speaking. Slaven's coaches, former Forensics members Donna Colantuoni and Donna Recchione, have each won over a hundred prizes in forensics competitions. Hence members of MSC's Forensics can depend on coaching from the experts.

La Vaughn Slaven is proud to belong to Forensics, and speaks of it as an organization with "a rich history of producing first-rate music on his own."

This brings us, finally, to Small Town Romance, a set of fourteen songs recorded during solo performances at New York's Bottom Line and Folk City in 1982. Far from a "greatest hits" collection ("Here's a medley of our greatest hit!" Richard jokes before playing Bright Lights' title track), this LP allows the artist to step outside of the tight arrangements that characterized his work with Linda.

Richard and Linda's marriage—characterized his work with Linda. His sympathetic readings of "Never Again," "Down Where the Drunkards Roll," and "A Heart Needs a Home," are easily equal to the original versions (all sung by Linda), and the bare acoustic treatment they get here calls attention to the simple beauty of his songwriting.

By S.C. Wood

In the wake of Dustin Hoffman's visit to Montclair to promote the Whole Theatre Company, regional theater is receiving much merited attention. Outside of our metropolitan area, theaters across the country are presenting vibrant productions.

The Actors Theatre of Louisville is one of these fine playhouses. Celebrating its twenty-first season with a revival of The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial, the Actors Theatre's production offered a fine range of professional talents. William Verderber, starring as Lt. Barney Greenwald, has worked in New York Productions. He has had roles in The Exorcist and the delightful convent comedy, Nasty Habits, as well as in many of the major soaps.

This eclectic background has served Verderber well. The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial, a tight, tense courtroom drama, is performed often. Henry Fonda introduced the part of Greenwald on the stage in 1954. Verderber more than lived up to this competition in his role, imparting the nervous energy of the military defense lawyer effectively.

The part also encompasses a good deal of wry irony, hence the actor must walk a tightrope between pure bitterness and bitter comedy. Verderber met these demands, embellishing the role with his own gestures of angry and nervous impatience.

Christian Kauffman plays Lt. Stephen Maryk, the neurotic defendant who seized control of Capt. Queeg's ship during a severe storm. Maryk's self-conscious jitterness, his inappropriate use of humor, create the suspense of the play; was Maryk qualified as an officer? Was he justified in his takeover of a naval vessel in wartime?

Kauffman created an unsympathetic character, a fool who triumphed in his action, while Bob Burrus as the wronged Capt. Queeg framed his rebuftal with a gentle paternalism. Beginning his role weakly, Burrus turned out to be a more sympathetic Queeg than even Humphrey Bogart's, because of his very quiet unobtrusiveness. Could Burrus' kindly Queeg be the madman everyone in vainly accuses of abusing his crewmen through unreasonable tactics and regulations?

Hence Maryk's giddy blabbing is juxtaposed to Queeg's serene calm and Greenwald's itchy anger. In this way, suspense is created through sheer oppositions of character.

Whether one knows the ending of this famed play or not, the Actors Theatre has brought together a group of actors who can still make an audience shift in its seats, sending vibrations of laughter or shudders through the theater. One test of fine dramatic acting is the novelty it can bring to familiar productions, especially those like Caine Mutiny, which has already been filmed with major actors in the starring roles.

The theater space itself is a bit cramped, but all the seats are good ones, centered as they are around the stage, in three semicircles. The space of the action is limited on a small stage, but Jeff Hill's warm, comfortable lighting compensates for this defect.

Most of the production staff has served a long term of duty for the Actors Theatre, and their competence and experience glows in the fine production of Caine Mutiny. For both actors and staff, regional theater is sheer effort, in which the audience reaps the chief rewards.

The Concert is a Classic . . . but the Film Frankly Falters

By James Curran

After reading the advanced publicity claiming that the Talking Heads' new film Stop Making Sense was the best concert film ever made, I was disappointed with the film I saw. While its subject was probably the best concert ever filmed, the movie itself falls short of "Best Concert Film."

The shortcomings of the average concert film are probably best exemplified in Paul McCartney's tedious Rock Show. glancing back and forth between pictures of Paul and Linda McCartney while listening to "Wings Over America," is an equal sensory experience. Films of this genre are usually endless closeups of the band members with little concern with what is happening on the stage as a whole.

Finally, David Byrne conceived of a concert worthy of being made into a film: a show close to true art instead of just another gimmick designed to separate die-hard fans from their money. However, director Jonathan Demme doesn't understand his subject. He is determined to make a conventional concert film.

The concert opens with the stage completely open; harnesses and cats-walks, hidden by curtains and speakers in most concerts, are clearly visible in the back. Then David Byrne walks on stage alone and performs "Psycho Killer," accompanied only by a ghetto blaster and his (wireless electric) acoustical guitar. At the end of the song, bassist Tina Weymouth walks on, and the two perform the next song. The roadies wheel out a riser with a drum kit on it, Chris Frantz appears, and the trio continues.

With the forth song, guitarist Jerry Harrison joins in, and the Heads are complete, but expansion continues.

The next few songs introduce curtains and projection screens covering the unsightly backstage, more risers with keyboard players, another guitarist, and three backup singer (basically the remaining members of Weymouth and Frantz's other band, the Tom-Tom Club. They get to perform one of their own songs later as Byrne is changing into the incredibly oversized suit seen in the movie ads).

As the concert progresses, Byrne employs various props, steam machines, slides (projected in the back) and dramatic lighting to produce a show which is closer to performance flying drum sticks and the lead singer's face: fodder for concert films with nothing more interesting to show. At one point we are given an extended view of a rather tight close-up of David Byrne, disputethe fact that he is dancing so vigorously that the camera man cannot keep his face in frame. This leads to the other major flaw in the film's direction: the cuts between cameras are rather haphazard. The camera men are so unfamiliar with the action of the musicians that the players often flow in and out of focus.

On the whole, Stop Making Sense is a rather disappointing film of an incredible concert. However, enough of that concert is coherent through the haze that the movie is worth viewing by anyone even remotely interested in the Talking Heads and their music.

MSC's cheerleading squad faces a man shortage

By Anna Schiavo

MSC's cheerleading squad is a familiar sight for football and basketball fans. They are an integral part of these sporting events. However, their unique cheering style may be in jeopardy.

The squad is facing a serious dilemma. Before the basketball season starts, they will lose most of the male members of the squad to graduation and transfers. This will virtually eliminate some partner stunts.

"For the past ten years MSC has had a coed cheering squad and is one of the pioneers in the North East of the 'new' style of collegiate cheering. Our style of cheering demands more athletic ability than just your normal cheering squad," cheerleading coach Trude Wolfarth said.

Cheerleading is a varsity sport at MSC. There is a lot of athletic ability involved. Both men and women need a general gymnastics background. The women also need "a series of stunts that they have to do when they try out and a lot of dance ability and general knowledge of cheerleading, but one that can be changed because our style is very different from high school," captain Mike Stickle said.

Men need to be able to bench press a minimum of 120 pounds. The rest is taught because in general men have not been cheerleaders in high school," Stickle said.

As with any other sport, practice is essential to achieving the goal of becoming the best you can be. "We put just as much hard work into perfecting our routines as any varsity sport," said cheerleader Gwen Keaton. "Each person brings something to the squad. We have our gymnasts, dancers, cheerleaders, the strength of the men and people who excel in particular stunts. One person does not have to have all of these qualities, but you do need more than one of them," the coach said.

Each sport provides a unique cheering experience. "With basketball you are closer to the audience and you can get them going more, whereas in football you're behind the fence," said captain Ellen Mary Breen.

In both 1983 and 1984 at the National Cheerleader Association Collegiate Camp in Virginia, the squad was awarded four blue ribbons for excellence and they also received the spirit stick award. This is the highest award they give at the camp. The squad competed against schools such as Purdue, Indiana, Rutgers, Army, Navy and Villanova.

Some of the stunts the squad performs require a lot of skill and total concentration. "Because of the danger involved in the sophisticated pyramid building and particular stunts, teamwork is very crucial. As the coach, I find that each year the men and women on the squad become like family because your safety is in somebody else's hands. The members of the squad work very hard and take it very seriously," Wolfarth said.

"One pyramid that we do can be built in less than 15 seconds and for something to go up that fast it takes a lot of teamwork and athletic ability. You need body control and split second timing and strength on the guys part," Stickle said.

Stickle feels that it would be a shame to "have what we're doing stopped because of a lack of participation in the school."

"We appeal to any male MSC student who feels he may possess the qualities necessary to be a good cheerleader," said Wolfarth.

Interested men may contact the cheerleading coach at 893-5264.

The MSC cheerleaders may be without men this basketball season.

Senior Mark Manno (44), junior Keith Tierney (95) and freshman Rob Dente (26) had cause for celebration as MSC walked over Jersey City State 45-6 and moved one game closer to the conference title. The Indians will battle Glassboro State for the crown this Saturday at home.

Are you a health-conscious person who wants to stay active but don't have the time necessary to devote to a varsity program at MSC? Or maybe you're a closet "jock," always ready and willing to shoot some "hoops" but can never find a group to share your enthusiasm? If so, then the Student Intramural and Leisure Council (SILC) is the right SGA organization for you.

Begun in 1973, SILC gives students who enjoy athletics the chance to compete in a variety of sports with an emphasis on good times and good sportsmanship, rather than wins and losses.

"SILC is more than just another sports program at MSC," said Kathy Hunt, one of the program's organizers. "It gives students a chance to meet new people and is therefore more a social experience than an athletic one."

But don't be fooled. Those who participate in such SILC activities as softball, basketball, volleyball, and bowling are in it to win it. After all, there are trophies and awards up for grabs.

"Teams earn their trophies based on a point system," explains Hunt. "Besides giving points to the winning team, we also give points for such things as meeting attendance, good team conduct, and if the team has no forfeits counted against them."

Besides offering a variety of sports, SILC also has a variety of formats to take into consideration. There are men's, women's and co-rec divisions, as well as team, individual and tournament groups.

If all this seems a bit confusing, would-be participants are encouraged to contact the SILC office at either the Student Center, Room 418, 893-5245, or the field house, 893-7494. Once there, SILC personnel can advise students how they should go about organizing a team and what rules and regulations they must follow.

"We're always looking for more participants," says Hunt.

Those interested in submitting a team roster for any winter activity are asked to fill out and return the necessary forms by the beginning of December.

Presently, SILC activities include volleyball and floor hockey. Earlier in the semester, a men's fast-pitch softball tournament was held and plans are being made for a Turkey Trot and basketball competition.

But maybe your "thing" isn't played on a gym floor or a baseball diamond. Are you more at home with a pool table or video machine? Great! SILC has the answer.

Wednesday, Nov. 28 a game room triathlon will get underway. Activities listed are billiards, ping-pong and pole position—so even the most non-athletic athlete can find something at SILC.

"Just about everybody on campus enjoys some kind of sport activity," says Hunt. "It's just a matter of getting people conscious of our organization."

MSC continued its drive for the conference title by rolling over Jersey City State 45-6 last Saturday on Sprague Field.

The scoring opened up with a Joe Perri field goal. After an eight play 69-yard drive, Perri boomed his kick through from 29 yards.

Later in the first quarter, Dan Zakashefski recovered a costly Gothic fumble and three plays later Walter Briggs hooked up with Ed Chavis from 13 yards out. Following up on a Vance Dobry's eight play drive. With .06 left in the first the extra point attempt was no good and the Indians were on top 16-0.

Eight plays later Pat Luzzi ran in from the five for the score and Briggs' pass to Chavis was good for the two point conversion. Keying the drive was Chavis catching a 43-yard pass from Briggs. MSC led 24-0 at the half.

Leroy Horn ran in from the five yards out to key MSC's only score in the third quarter. Perri's kick was good and the Indians led 31-0. Horn totaled a 133 yards on 11 carries.

Entering the fourth quarter, Horn was given the call again. This time he ran 27 yards ending a three play 45-yard drive. Perri popped another pointetching a score of 38-0, but the Indians weren't through yet.

Curtis Gaines intercepted a Jersey City pass and sprinted his way up the sideline 80 yards into the Gothic end zone. It's this kind of play a cornerback dreams of doing.

With 1:53 left to play, and most of the Indians' defensive starters on the bench, Jersey City scored on Walter Smith's 23-yard pass to Vince Dortch.

It was the first time this season a conference opponent scored a touchdown. The Indians defense, coordinated by former New York Giant McKinley Boston, is presently ranked in the top 10 nationally of the NCAA Division III. The squad has given up an astonishing 12 points per game.

Junior Keith Tierney of Montclair, Pisacatawy's Ed Poveromo, Junior Ray Moore from Irvington, and sophomore Dan Zakashefski of Millwood combined for 33 tackles and six quarterback sacks.

The Jersey City State Goths (1-6 NJASC, 6-3 overall) are 9-12-1 on the season. Jersey City State's offense recovered four fumbles and intercepted three passes.

The coaching staff has given the team's offense and defense a lot of credit for the Indians' success.

In a dramatic rematch of last year's finale, MSC will attempt to regain the New Jersey State Athletic Conference crown when they battle Glassboro State this Saturday at 8 p.m. at Sprague Field.

The two schools finished in a triple tie for first place last season with Trenton State. Last year, Glassboro came from behind to edge the Indians 16-7 and create the deadlock.

MSC's offense was right on target for conference crown Saturday

Freshman fullback Pete Brown breaks to the outside for 10 yards against the Goths' defense. MSC gained 226 rushing yards on the night.

The Indians' defense, coordinated by former New York Giant McKinley Boston, is presently ranked in the top 10 nationally of the NCAA Division III. The squad has given up an astonishing 12 points per game.

Looking for interested students

Any women, with or without fencing experience, who are interested in joining the program should contact Donna Olson, the assistant athletic director, at 893-5251.

In addition to a lack of members, the team is also without a permanent coach. However, this may be a blessing in disguise. Six alumni of MSC's fencing team have come to the rescue.

Both players and coaches of MSC's yesteryear have come back to volunteer their time and talent to help the program. In doing so they have back both knowledge and enthusiasm. "The team has strong alumni support. They are trying to gather support for the program on campus. They have committed themselves to helping and providing lessons until a permanent coach is found," Desi said.

One of the six, Kathy Taylor, was a national champion for MSC as a student, on p. 26

Leads the league in scoring with 186 points and allowed the fewest points, 11. Fifth year coach Ted Kershner's Profs (4-1 NJASC, 4-4 overall) are second with 109 points scored and in points yielded, 65.

MSC has won the last four out of five matches and leads the series 13-8.

The fencing team has had a poor season and is without a permanent coach. In addition, the team is also without a permanent coach. However, this may be a blessing in disguise. Six alumni of MSC's fencing team have come to the rescue.

Fielding enough players to fill athletic teams is an all too common problem facing NCAA Division III schools like MSC. The women's fencing team currently confronts this dilemma.

The more popular sports of football and basketball don't have to deal with this situation; it's the lesser-known sports, such as fencing and women's cross country. Division III schools can't offer any form of scholarships to their athletes, so recruiting is all the more difficult.
