Armstrong to help women gain higher level jobs

By Michelle LaLumia

Women are now organizing to move into positions traditionally held by men, according to Dr. Jean Armstrong, vice president of student affairs at MSC. Armstrong was recently named statewide coordinator of the American Council on Education National Identification Program (ACE/NIP), an organization designed to identify those women who are capable of holding policy-making administrative positions in higher education.

This program was started in 1977 by the Office of Women in Higher Education, based in Washington, D.C., a branch of the American Council on Education. The New Jersey branch of ACE/NIP was housed at Princeton its first four years, then moved to Rutgers New Brunswick for two, and now with Armstrong's appointment is based at MSC.

Before the program's inception, there was no formal network for women. As a result, Armstrong said, "Women have been kept outside the inner circles of power and connections" and have not been considered for upper level positions. "They historically have not worked much more effectively formally and informally," she said.

"I know there is a dearth of women in higher education administrative positions statewide. I know women have been disappointed," she said.

For those wondering why Thomas Kean has not yet signed a bill to permanently close MSCs landfill, the governor will field questions on this and other issues at a Clifton city council meeting tonight.

Scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at the Woodrow Wilson junior high on Van Houten Avenue, the meeting will provide an opportunity for the college community and area residents to find out what action the governor intends to take regarding the bill. Kean was originally obliged to make a decision by Oct. 28-45 days after the bill's final passage in the state legislature—but will not have to act until the legislature resumes session on Nov. 19.

Lee Brooks, treasurer of the Great Notch Association, said her organization has been fighting to close down the dump since its announced opening 10 years ago. She added that the governor's delay in signing the bill may have "something to do with appropriations."

As it stands, the bill would require the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to buy out the landfill from the Carrino Company, the permit holders. Brooks said the governor might recommend to the legislature that the funds come from another state source. In this case, the bill will not have to be reintroduced but rather revised.

In the Sept. 27 issue of The Montclarion, DEP supervising planner Robert O'Malley said, "The department has consistently been opposed to the passing of the bill because the department is being involved in something it has nothing to do with, except issue a permit."

Brooks said the passage of the bill is probable, however, because her organization received a letter from the governor's office in October saying Kean was opposed to the landfill.

According to Brooks, those living in Little Falls object to the Carrino dump because they fear well water contamination in the area and are objecting to the company's violations of environmental safety measures. The landfill was closed last Nov. after the DEP uncovered these violations.

In addition Brooks said, "I personally feel it's in the wrong place. A landfill doesn't belong on the grounds of a learning institute. The bill prohibits this, especially of those schools funded by the state."

Annual health fair promotes physical well-being

By Ben Smith

To encourage "wellness in the 80's," the Health Professions Association sponsored its tenth annual health fair last week. Thirty-five organizations provided information on such topics as abortion, alcoholism, and stress management.

The National Council on Alcoholism (NCA) distributed fact sheets about problems stemming from excessive alcohol intake. While drinking may be a favorite pastime for many college students at weekend parties and football games, a representative from the NCA said, "there is nothing wrong with drinking socially, the problem starts when you feel like you have to drink."

MSC's Drop-In Center also demonstrated concern about the problem of alcoholism. According to Mia Gavallino, a representative from the center, "alcoholism is a campus this year" because a new college policy has banned alcohol from resident halls causing many students to go off campus to drink. Students then drive while intoxicated, she said. "The Drop-In Center is trying to make students aware of tests they can take to see if they are drunk. They can also use the buddy system whereas one student takes responsibility not to drink so he can drive others home safely."

Gavallino said that the Diet Center of Montclair provided information about nutrition and weight loss. Two counselors from the center, Gaye Meekins and Adrienne Alder, said that fiber and low fat diets can help a person effectively lose weight. Both counselors lost between 40 and 50 pounds through a weight loss program designed by the Diet Center. According to Meekins, college students should consider "high fiber and low fat in their diets, along with vitamin supplements."

The health fair also provided examples of different ways to relieve stress, such as transcendental meditation and Shiatsu massages. A representative from the Shiatsu Healing Center demonstrated the arts. "Shiatsu was extremely popular with students, perhaps simply because it is foreign to most people, since it is an eastern technique."

Mary Beth Harley, a graduate of MSc and presently a physical therapist, represented Mountainside Hospital at the fair, offering information pertaining to physical rehabilitation. She said, "The hospital provides a good door opener for students interested in health or holistic practices."

According to Kissler, "The fair provided students with an opportunity to become aware of traditional and non-traditional organizations. We were pleased with the turnout, between 750-900 students attended the fair throughout the day."

Nobel Laureate lecture series continues

Dr. Wassily Leontief, originator of the input-output method of economic analysis, is the third speaker to be featured in MSC's Nobel Laureate lecture series. His lecture, entitled "Industrial Applications of the Generalized Input-Output Analysis," will take place Nov. 16 at 10 a.m. in Room 117, Richardson Hall. Leontief, a Russian emigre, was awarded the first Nobel Prize for Economics in 1973. He has served on faculty at Harvard University and as an economic advisor to the Chinese government.

The lecture is co-sponsored by the department of mathematics and computer science and the MSC Alumni Association, and is open to the general public free of charge. For further information, contact Gideon Nettler at 893-4294.
FAMOUS LAST WORDS FROM FRIENDS TO FRIENDS. I'm perfectly fine. I can drive with my eyes closed. There's nothing wrong with me. Are you joking—I feel great. What am I—a wimp? I'm in great shape to drive. You're not serious are you? What's a couple of beers? Nobody drives my car but me. I've never felt better. I can drink with the best of them. But I only had a few. So I had a couple. I can drive rings around anybody. I can drive my own car, thank you. I'm not drunk. I drive better when I'm like this. Who says I can't drive? I can hold my booze. I know I'm doing. I always drive like this. Trust me. What's a few thing to me. I'm with my eyes with me.
Former "Moonie" advises against joining cults

By Tom Boud

Be wary of cults, Chris Carlson, former adherent of Reverend Sung Yung Moon's congregation, said in a lecture sponsored by CINA last week.

According to Carlson, "People do not realize what they're getting into when they join a cult. Most people think that cults are for the benefit of world peace and happiness when really they're only to serve a megalomaniacal leader."

Carlson also said that cults deal with deception and trickery. "Cults use friendliness and sincere love as a facade to lure unsuspecting people into their organization. From there, they gradually but subtly brainwash the new member into obeying the commands of its leader," he said.

Carlson further pointed out that all cults have an ulterior motive which is well-concealed from the public. "Cults will go as far as keeping the newly admitted parents, seeing me entrapped in this cult, obtained a court order in March 1978 for my release from Reverend Moon's cult. However, only later did I see the truth in its true colors," he said.

Carlson emphasized the deception of Reverend Moon's cult. He said he realized that Reverend Moon, who owns a munitions factory which manufactures M-16 rifles, the New York Tribune, and a portion of the Washington Post, was solely promoting his own self-interest.

"In fact, it is now known that Moon is directly aiding the U.S. backed contras in Nicaragua by providing guns and money and it's also known that he's even urging his followers to engage in terrorism against North Korea. All this goes to show how 'peaceful' Reverend Moon really is."

In closing Carlson urged everyone to use the utmost caution when thinking about joining a cult. "Make sure you have all information on an organization before you decide to join. After all, see what past horrors Charles Manson and Jim Jones have perpetrated."

SGA rejects state's course review proposal

By Maureen Freeburg and Gloria Dec

The SGA passed a resolution rejecting Education Commissioner Saul Cooperman's attempt to hinder the autonomy of the New Jersey State Colleges. The SGA said Cooperman had overstepped his authority when he condemned certain college courses through a superficial review of titles.

Dr. Raymond Paul, MSC English professor, said he was opposed to Cooperman's actions because he did not want "to live by the word according to Saul."

In other news, the Newman Community was granted a Class III Charter following a presentation by a group representative who described the organization offers. These include two masses on Sunday, dinner on Monday nights and encounter groups.

The Ski Club is sponsoring a trip to Vermont, Feb. 22-24. Partial funding for the bus was appropriated from the Montclair Transportation Authority (MTA) giving the club $800 of the $1200 needed. SGA Vice President Dennis Quinn, also chairman of MTA, explained the difficulties and problems associated with funding of trips of this type.

A bill creating guidelines for the Board of Transit Affairs Service Committee was passed. The purpose of this bill is to formalize the meeting procedures of the committee.

Psych students with highest GPA to receive awards

By Linda Longo

Two graduating psychology majors will each become $100 richer at the end of commencement exercises next May.

For the first time, MSC's psychology department is offering two monetary awards for academic achievement. Titled the Jerome M. Seidman Award for Excellence in Psychology, it will be distributed to the male and female psychology majors with the highest grade point average (GPA) of their graduating class.

Psychology department chairman Dr. Roland Sitter said that in the event of a tie, selection of recipients will be based on service to the school and community.

Seidman, a retired MSC psychology professor, said, "I have given the department a large sum of money, resulting in $200 a year to be used for the awards from now through the life of the award." The Jerome M. Seidman Award is unique because it is one of the few awards at MSC given solely on the basis of a student's GPA. Most awards offered by individual departments stress involvement in extracurricular activities over academic excellence.

The Seidman Award might serve as a role model for other departments because it eliminates any possibility of favoritism, Seidman said.

According to Seidman, many students are unaware that there is a list of scholarships and awards given out annually by various departments.

For example, the chemistry department offers a $10,000 award to the senior chemistry major showing the most potential for success in doctoral study and research in chemistry. Dr. John Isador, chemistry department chairman, said the criteria for this award is based upon "involvement in extracurricular and departmental activities, GPA, honors programs, and recommendations from the faculty." "Titled the Sokol Graduate Fellowship, it is usually awarded at the end of the fall semester and will be offered through 1992. Some scholarships and awards, such as the Essex County Home Economics Extension Council Scholarship, are given to residents of a specific area. To qualify, one must be a junior with high academic standing, professional potential, financial need, and residency in Essex or Hudson counties.

The Ethel Simpson Lenkowsky '37 Scholarship is not limited to a specific major. This $100 award is given to the sophomore woman with the highest scholarship record.

Not all of these awards are based on academic standing. Any student who demonstrates exceptional service along with qualities of leadership, understanding, and creativity may be eligible for an award.

It is important to note that these scholarships and awards are given only to the students who apply for them. A student must contact the chairman of the department offering the award and fill out an application. A complete listing of the awards available at MSC can be found in the most recent undergraduate catalog. Although the Jerome M. Seidman Award for Excellence in Psychology is not yet listed, interested students are urged to call the department chairman at 893-5201.

White House spokesman Larry Speaks said this week that it will take a lot of persuading to get President Reagan to raise taxes. Yet, more alarming than raising taxes is the administration's new "get tougher" policy with Nicaragua. It seems the Reagan administration is looking for an excuse to invade that country.

They question its military build-up, saying that it is beyond what is needed for Nicaragua to defend itself. According to the State Department, this means the Sandinistas are planning to invade one of their neighbors—either Honduras or El Salvador.

It seems the Reagan administration might like nothing better than to see Nicaragua invade a neighboring country. What an excuse for a U.S. invasion! The officials at the State Department might stop to think that Nicaragua could be arming itself against a stronger enemy, namely the U.S.

Reagan's record shows nothing but harassment toward the country of Nicaragua. Question: Why would Nicaragua want to invade another country when it is under attack by forces supported by the U.S.? The Nicaraguan foreign minister denies such allegations Tuesday night; they are lies, and in his words, "bullshit."

Today, Nicaragua stands ready in a state of war alert. They are convinced the U.S. will invade any day; surely this must be based on real concerns, not just paranoid hysteria.

Now that Reagan's new policy of deliberate intimidation and harassment of Nicaragua has been adopted, who knows what the next four years will hold? If changes such as this happen only one week after elections, we could be in trouble.

The eventual goal of all this bully talk and action is to put so much pressure on Nicaragua that sooner or later its government will crumble or change to suit the U.S. The scariest part is that administration officials have not ruled out military action in this situation. Hopefully this will not turn into a military conflict; for when the body bags start coming home, then the American people may begin to question their presidential choice.

Our job is to hold up the mirror—to tell and show the public what has happened, and then it is the job of the people to decide whether they have faith in their leaders or government. We are faithful to our profession in telling the truth. That's the only faith to which journalists need adhere.

—Walter Cronkite
By Ellen Goodman

BOSTON: Now that the election is over, I find myself thinking less about who won and more about how we have changed the concept of winners and losers.

In July, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo told the Democratic convention a tale of two cities, one rich and one poor. All fall, the Democrats talked about a nation increasingly divided into haves and have-nots. The brilliance of the Reagan campaign was in redefining the haves as the winners and the have-nots as the losers.

The resounding cheer of this election, "USA USA" was a track for grandiose patriotism. It was an Olympic call to middle-class Americans who for the strong, the wealthy, the healthy, the independent—to side with the winners.

Once, the people who lived in the Other America were called the needy and regarded as victims. But there is a line, a fault line, that separates the old "classical" victim from the new "loser." In our political dictionary, a victim is blameless while a loser can only blame himself. In our political landscape, we may ask the government to lend a hand to victims, but not to waste hand outs on losers. The "needy" may elicit our sympathy, but not our compassion.

My point is that, with a few exceptions, the Glassboro game was generally a successful evening.

To the editor:

On behalf of the SGA, I would like to comment on the tailgating "situation", as brought to light by The Montclarion. To the editor:

On behalf of the SGA, I feel compelled to comment on the tailgating "situation", as brought to light by The Montclarion. After reading John Connolly's column, Dr. Martin's article, and the editorial in the Nov. 8 issue, many students were naturally apprehensive about attending the Glassboro game. I felt there was no need for this apprehension.

I was present at the Glassboro game, as I was at every other home game, and I was happy at what I witnessed (although not at all surprised). There were close to six hundred people in the parking lot on Saturday night, along with barbecues, kegs of beer and loud music. With all of these potential trouble spots, there were no real problems.

Extra campus police were on duty, yet no one was arrested, nothing was confiscated and no police reports were filed. We have spoken to Dean H. Beneke, the police officers involved and many of the students present at the game and all are in agreement that it was generally a successful evening.

My point is that, with a few exceptions, the Glassboro game was no different from the other home games this season. The litter was a real problem at earlier games, but the SGA requested more trash cans in the lot and these were utilized by the students. Many of the students had to be prodded into the game, yet there were no objections and no confrontations with police.

On behalf of the SGA, I would like to make the following comments and suggestions:

To the Administration: Please take note of the positive aspects of Saturday night, when and if a "tailgate policy" is implemented for next year.

To The Montclarion: I reaffirm my respect for your paper, and the role you play on this campus. But in this particular instance, I feel you gave undue attention to a situation that did not warrant it.

To the Students: A word of thanks for the mature and responsible way in which most of you acted at the game, but perhaps next year you might want to go to the game without a reminder from Campus Police.

Dennis J. Quinn
SGA vice president

The inclusion of the cartoons and the crossword puzzles are in good contrast to the hard news stories and the in-depth album, movie, show and concert reviews. The "personal" section and the "classified" section show the concern of The Montclarion staff for the students' need for a public forum, of sorts.

I can only imagine the hard work which goes into the production of such a fine newspaper, week after week by a supposedly understaffed organization (I still see the pleas for more writers and photographers, week after week). I, for one, salute your fine efforts and the resulting quality product!

Draft Registration is the law...

Men, if you're within a month of your 18th birthday, it's time you registered with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office. It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.
...But you do have an alternative

LISTEN TO THIS:

There is an alternative to compulsory military service. If you have moral, ethical, or religious objections to participation in any war or military training, you can be a conscientious objector. One can be a CO regardless of one's religion: an agnostic or atheist can make a CO claim based on deeply held, personal beliefs. The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors is an organization engaged in a nation-wide effort to inform people about Conscientious objection and related peace issues.

We are also registering conscientious objectors with our CO card. This card simply states: “Because of my beliefs about war, I am opposed to participation in the military.” Should the draft be reinstated, and this is becoming increasingly likely, a CO card could provide important documentation of your status as an objector. In The Killing Fields, friendship alleviates the tragedies of war

By Elizabeth Millar

The scene is Cambodia after the Vietnam War, and the years depicted are 1973-1979. The bombings, ruins and human cries are a part of the sensationally accounted experience of Sydney Schanberg's work as a correspondent for the New York Times.

During this period, the Cambodians were trying to enter Thailand in order to escape the North Vietnamese invasion. Sam Waterston and Haing S. Ngor's portray of Schanberg and Dith Pran respectively. The movie focuses on two friends set up camp for the night. Pran and Schanberg become very close friends through the experiences they share. Whenever they are held captive, Pran takes control by talking to their captors. After negotiating with them, they are always released. In one scene they act on an assumption of no risk by visiting the local hospital with two other correspondents. Al and Jon. They find out too late that a risk is involved when their car is blown up and they are held captive. The scene which has the most emotional impact on the audience is when Pran is left alone in Cambodia. Al, Jon and the other members of the embassy are given permission to leave, and they make a passport for Pran. However, the rain washes away the temporary chemicals used to develop the picture.

The natural effect of fighting is what makes the audience sympathetic with the characters and their situation. It is beautifully shot, and music stiffens to an extreme height.

Pran is left behind to experience the indoctrination of Communist attitudes. He narrates the experience as if talking to Schanberg and he explains that the people are taught that the year is zero and nothing has past and the war never occurred.

Schanberg is back in New York and he receives the Journalist of the Year award. As he receives it, his thoughts are of Pran. Through Intelligence bureaus Schanberg tries to locate Pran, but his attempts seem fruitless. The viewer is left in suspense as to whether or not the long awaited reunion will occur. Pran assumes roles such as servant and "runaway, as he struggles to escape capture.

By Gary Ruff

In a dark, secluded clearing along the bank of the Salinas River, two friends set up camp for the night. They are migrant workers: tired, hungry, and desperate for a job. Among their kind, friendship is rare; but even the cruel Depression has not yet broken the bonds between these two. George and Lennie share a dream, a dream that keeps them going where others would have given up. That right, for perhaps the thousandth time, George tells a rapt Lennie "how it's gonna be."

Recently the Whole Theatre of Montclair opened its 12th season with John Steinbeck's dramatic adaptation of his classic novel Of Mice and Men. Few dramas more accurately capture the American soul. It was a warm humorous performance, yet moving enough to bring one to the verge of tears.

For migrant workers in the 1930's, survival depended on two basic rules—take what you can get, and work hard. Most managed to escape the dreariness of their lives on plantations, when they went to town to hit the taverns and cathouses. George (Joseph Ragno), however, can't do all that. He is burdened with Lennie (Andrew Clark), a huge, lovable bear of a man who has the wits of a five-year-old. George, on the other hand is wry, fierce and clever, but displays a paternal concern for his friend that is matched only by Lennie's unquestioning loyalty to him. Both live for their dream, that someday they'll have enough money saved to buy their own farm.

Lennie is sure that the dream will come true just because George keeps telling him so. But to George, it is always far beyond reach. Lennie's childlike curiosity keeps getting them in trouble; they lose job after job, never saving up enough of a "stake." At last, they befriend an old swamper (bunkhouse janitor) named Candy (David Clarke) who buys his way into the plan. With Candy's contribution, even George finally feels they have a chance.

Of Mice and Men is more than a story of human shortcomings. It is also about human strengths: the power of hope and the importance of friendship. Apollo Dukakis, director of the play, said, "It's a play about longing, about fulfillment and unfulfillment of dreams and the need to share these dreams with each other. It's an elegency and warm humor of the colorful and appealing characters revitalize and touch the longings and dreams that we all share."

Obviously, the play demands much of the actors. Ragno and Clark are perfectly cast as the two friends who are physical and mental opposites, but brothers in spirit. Ragno has a hard brow, chiseled features and sharp eyes that, like his character, are capable of both sympathy and grim tenacity. He is an experienced Broadway performer, one of those rare, special actors who invisibly transmits the inner, unspoken essence of his character.

With his appealing portrayal of Lennie, Andrew Clark almost steals the show. A huge, bailing man, Clark is like a clumsy, oversized boy, playful, innocent, and totally lovable. Twice, Lennie loses his temper and Clark is transformed into a horrifying, raging giant. He is a joy to watch, with his high expressive face and big hands, restless as an infant's.

Of Mice and Men is more an amusing brat than a bully. Finally, Virginia Meissner evokes the vital element of sympathy as Curley's flirtatious wife, who is a lonely aspiring actress.

Because the dialogue and staging are simple and starkly realistic, there is no constant dynamic tension to rivet the audience's attention. Nonetheless, the casual pacing gives certain climactic moments a special impact.

The talent and devotion of the Whole Theatre of Montclair has created a show that is faithful to the genius of John Steinbeck. Whether or not you've read Of Mice and Men this play is definitely worth catching.

By S.C. Wood

"So you're having Sibyl to tea at this moment, instead of me, and she won't sit on the floor or say my lovely Virginia, and you won't rumple her hair—and it won't be nearly so nice." Thus runs the poet's jealous complaint to her Muse, describing her romance with one of the century's great writers, Virginia Woolf.

The Letters of Vita Sackville-West to Virginia Woolf, beautifully and tactfully edited by Louise D'Alvay and Thomas A. Leaska, recreates this most famous and complex of literary flirtations. Leaska, a Woolf scholar and literary consultant for the Psychoanalytic Review, provides a rather lengthy introduction to the letters. He over-indulges his penchant for psychoanalysis, centering upon the writers' relationship.

His introduction could be expanded into a psychoanalytic monograph, but has little bearing on the atmosphere created by the letters themselves. One enters not family quarrels, but the chrysalis of friendship, with all its goofy nicknames, corny endearments and inside jokes. One finds oneself cooly first-naming these great authors as the letters enlarge on the homely minutiae of gardening, puppies and the image of the ailng Virginia enjoying cups of hot milk.

But one soon exchanges the homely for the exotic, as Vita's marriage to diplomat Harold Nicolson drops her around the world in a frenzy of diplomatic activities. Vita's lively eye takes nothing for granted, and she laces her letters to Virginia with very anthropological anecdotes. While in India, she saw religious Hindus throwing coconuts into the sea as a mark of respect toward a revered temple. Vita places this episode purely within its national context, pointing out that "You must imagine coming round the corner of the Coliseum, and seeing the Lady Colfax, throwing coconuts at St. Martin-in-the-Fields."

Her breathless descriptions attest to her fascination with even the most mundane details of her travels. "Went to a Persian tea-party. Ravishing women; almond eyes, red lips, babbling like little birds, pulling their veils about them whenever they heard a noise." Yet she remains earthy amid all the blossoms by slapping the next man who dares to kiss her hand. As a somewhat weary adventuress duelling with banditti in the desert, she writes to Virginia that "you make a wonderful cynical kindly smiling background to the turbulence of my brain yet this way, the two women erecct romanticized idols of each other: to Vita, Virginia was the aristocrat, elegant but exciting, a world traveller. To Vita, Virginia incarnated all she wished to cultivate in herself: genius, mystery and a calm and subtle sense of feminia dignity. Yet Virginia playfully nicknamed her sometimes clumse protege Donkey West, and Vita imagined the bedridden Virginia as a pampered little dog. Potto, Vita, as the younger and less talented of the two, often defies her lack of talent. With a sense of deference toward Virginia's genius, she complains of her own "dreadful brain stagnation," and calls herself "no writer at all.—no, nor even a journalist... And certainly not a poet."

Vita's breathless, fast-paced racing over Vita's letters, especially those of her halcyon days in the flurry of travelling, one finds a flair for detail which recreates sparkling pictorial images. In Russia in 1926, she admires a "green glaucous river immobilised into ice... perfectly beautiful, and endlessly melancholy. Fancy living in this country, feeling yourself to be only a little black dot in the middle of a flat whiteness stretching away to China." She also has the critic's genius of hitting on just the right imagery, to make a scathing attack with the greatest subtlety. Writing in 1927, of the decay of Desmond McCarthy's personality, she notes that he "faded away into a mere refinement of himself and became obliterated like a footprint after a fresh fall of snow." The witty Oscar Wilde could not have phrased it better. Despite all this display of wise and witty virtuosity, it is the warmth of friendship and romance that entwines the reader into the private world of the letters. The eternal cliches of love sneaks into the closings and postscripts of these generous, original letters. One can only sigh in sympathy with Vita's adolescent longing: "Oh my lovely Virginia, it is dreadful how much I miss you, and everything that everybody says seems so flat and stupid... Tell me if I write too often. I love you."

Nicolette Vagtay (Mollie Raiston) and Michelle Beley (Mrs. Boyle) rehearse a scene from Agatha Christie's tense melodrama, The Mousetrap. The Major Theatre Series of Montclair State College presents the longest-running theatrical production in the English-speaking theatre—The Mousetrap.

The Mousetrap is a melodramatic thriller that crosses across the footlights as an amusing and suspenseful "who'dunit." The action of the exciting mystery takes place in a manor house in rural England, which a young married couple, upon inheriting it, have decided to run as a guest house.

The story begins as the guests arrive, along with a snowstorm, that isolates the house from the rest of the world. The visitors, who turn out to have an unusual amount of secrets and strange manners, seem to have a possible connection with a gruesome London murder that took place earlier in the day. When a police sergeant arrives, it is soon apparent that one of the people in the snowbound house is the psychotic murderer, and another is marked as the next victim—but which ones?

The Mousetrap is directed by Suzanne Trauth. Set and lighting designs are by W. Scott MacConnell and costumes are by Annie Milton. The cast includes: Nicolette Vagtay (Mollie Raiston); Steven Friedman (Giles Raiston); Kevin Fabian (Christopher Wren); Michelle Beley (Mrs. Boyle); Alexander Swain (Major Metcalf); Diane M. Aslanis (Miss Casewell); Mark Kernan Bell is serving as Assistant Director and Frank J. Calafiore as Stage Manager.

The Mousetrap plays Wednesday through Saturday, Nov. 28 to Dec. 1 at 8 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium with a matinee Friday, Nov. 30 at 2:15 p.m. For more information call 893-4205 and after Nov. 19 call 746-9120.

Indians fall in NCAA regionals

By Tom Branna

The women's cross-country team ended their season on a sour note Saturday at the Mideast Regionals. The Indians finished a disappointing eleventh, thus failing to qualify for the national championships.

Dana Caruso once again paced the MSC squad, finishing the five kilometer course in 19:58, good enough for 23rd place in a field that included over one hundred runners. Nancy Wright was just behind Caruso in 27th place with a time of 20:02.

Behind the two All-NJAC runners were Liz Dilla, Laura Fritch and Gaudinette Pierre.

Because of scoring regulations, only the top five finishers on a team participate for the team scoring title.

"We just didn't run in a pack," explained coach Michelle Willis. "There were over four minutes between our first and fifth finishers."

Though the Indians may be disappointed with Saturday's results, the season has been successful when one considers all the adversity the team overcame just to reach the Mideast Regionals.

After a 0-6 start, Willis recruited enough track performers to field a full team—then the Indians got rolling. They proceeded to win six straight dual meets to reach the .500 mark at 6-6. Along the way, Caruso and Wright received all conference honors for their performances in the conference championships.

The only letdown occurred in the final weeks of the season when the Indians faced such Division I and IA powers as Temple, Lafayette and Lehigh. These teams proved to be too much for MSC as their record dropped to 6-10.

Wills, however, looks toward next season with confidence. "We'll have only three returning runners in '85, but we'll be getting some considerable high school talent that should help pick up the slack of graduation."

Lady hoopsters look for improvement with new coach

By Susie Resnick

The women's basketball team, who finished with a 5-21 record last season, is looking forward to a stronger and more successful season.

Head Coach Jill Jeffrey, who was a four year starter here at MSC from 1977-1980 and a member of one of the Indians' strongest and most successful teams in MSC history, has returned to put the team back into action.

Since this is Jeffrey's first year here, she is cautiously optimistic about the coming season. "We have a very young team. The core of the team will be juniors," she said.

Junior guard Debra Emery was one of last year's starters and the leading scorer with a 16 point average. She also shot 81.9% from the foul line.

Junior co-captain Judy De Francisci will be playing on the forward line. Jeffrey said, "She makes the best of her abilities and with her court smarts, is one of the finest defensive players on the team."

Returning from last year, sophomore Lorraine Bratton will be in the front court. Last year Bratton pulled down 112 rebounds in 25 games, fourth highest on the squad. Coach Jeffrey said that Bratton "is an exceptional player with tremendous athletic ability."

Also returning to the squad is co-captain Karen Hughes, a senior. According to Jeffery, "Hughes has speed and quickness which will help her develop into an outstanding player. Her leadership qualities will also be an asset to this young team."

The squad lost four starters to graduation, but that won't affect the team. The Indians have been training hard and preparing themselves for the season.

Dance for a good cause

MSC baseball players pitch in for muscular dystrophy

By JoAnn Niemack

Superdance, a 24-hour marathon to benefit muscular dystrophy, will have an added attraction—the MSC baseball team. Nearly the entire team, along with a few hundred others, will be dancing to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association from Friday, Nov. 30 until Saturday, Dec. 1 in the Blanton Hall Attic.

Money raised from this event will benefit both children and adults who suffer from muscular dystrophy and related neuromuscular diseases. Support of this program will help enable MDA to continue their programs of worldwide research into the causes of and cures for neuromuscular disease, and to provide vital medical services to those who need them.

The dance all began as an RA project for Lisa Venezia, a resident assistant in the Three D wing of Blanton Hall, and it has turned into a major MSC campus activity. Jody Walsh, an assistant manager at Blanton, has been helping Lisa out. Venezia sought groups to help support the Superdance and caught up with the baseball team at a meeting.

When Coach Cooney heard about it, he strongly endorsed it. Right now, the Indian team is in the process of raising money for their annual trip to Florida. “We’re always looking to raise money for the team and we know how hard it is. This is a good cause and we’re glad to help,” remarked the varsity catcher Chuck Thomas.

After that meeting 17 members signed up. Among them are: Tim Johnson, Dave Stanislawczyk, Shaun Garrity, Tom Carey, Mike Nicoia, Mike Litterio, Gary Grabbs, Bob Yeager, Jim Fasano, Tim Jones, John Cowan, Kevin Cavallo, Jim Bradley, John Sarreccchia, Chuck Thomas and Bob Stefanoff. As a reminder, muscular dystrophy is a chronic, noncontagious disease characterized by a progressive wasting of the muscles. “I’m fortunate to be healthy,” Tim Johnson said. “So I want to put out an effort for someone who is less fortunate than me.”

Upon hearing of the Superdance, other groups were contacted or went to Lisa wanting to help out. “The baseball team is really helping a lot,” Venezia said, “and a lot of people have been joining because the baseball players did.”

The event is receiving a lot of publicity on campus and many groups and organizations are getting involved such as: Delta Theta Psi, responsible for obtaining some refreshments; Alpha Delta Tau, who offered to help cook the food; The Montclarion, helping out with free publicity; SAGA, providing two free food breaks; the SGA, providing free fliers; and Federation and Alpha Iota Chi Sorority.

This Superdance is a good constructive activity for students. “I’ll get real satisfaction by helping out,” said Shaun Garrity, a varsity pitcher. “We’ll be dancing for people who can’t do it themselves.”

“It’s always good to put in time for charity,” Thomas added. “I’m glad to be able to give one 24-hour period out of my life to those who are less fortunate.”

Not only is it charitable, but it is a promising non-alcoholic activity which many students are participating in and this has a positive reflection on the school itself. “You don’t have to drink to have a good time. We’re going to have fun at the dance and help the MDA out too,” remarked John Cowan.

A detailed plan of action has been constructed for the Superdance. Special dance activities include: a New Year’s Countdown, a 50’s Era (“Around the Clock”), the “Hoey Pokey”, Calisthenics, “Aerobics in the Afternoon,” “Tis the Season to be Jolly,” “Swing your Partner,” and “Sports Time.”

“I’m really looking forward to it: it is something different. It’s for a good cause, and it will give kids something to do on a Friday night. It’s a good time for a good cause,” Tom Carey said.

Applications are still available at the Blanton Desk for anyone who would like to join the Indians in their dance against MD. “The baseball players have pride and we’re glad to participate in a worthy cause. We’ll dance all night—we’re not quitters,” Thomas explained. “We’ll last the whole time.”

“We’re fortunate to have the support of the baseball team for this dance. Because many children have this disease, they can’t play sports. It would be great if just one of those little boys with muscular dystrophy could grow up to be able to play baseball,” Venezia said. “And, with the Superdance, we hope to do our share.”
Wrestlers fill vacancies; talent at each weight

By Anna Schiavo

This wrestling season will find a very competitive MSC on the mat. The team has resolved the problem of not having all the weight classes filled. Top wrestler transfers now fill the vacancies that plagued last year’s squad.

“This year should be the best that I’ve ever had at MSC because every weight class has a successful wrestler in it.” Head Coach Steve Strellner said.

A leader of the team is co-captain Dan DaCunto who won the Delaware Invitational in his sophomore year and placed third in the East Stroudsburg Invitational in his junior year. The senior economics major finished off last season with an incredible 23-9 record.

DaCunto is very optimistic about the upcoming season. “This is the best team we’ve fielded since I’ve been at MSC. We have several new outstanding individuals who I feel will help lead the team toward the NCAA Division III title,” DaCunto said.

DaCunto, who wrestles in the 158 weight class, feels that there is much more enthusiasm on the team this season than in the past. “The guys this year have a greater desire to win than ever before. We are having all the weight classes filled. It makes us work harder and it is contagious. It also makes it more pleasant and rewarding to endure the frustrating dieting that is an essential part of the sport.”

Co-captain Nick Milonas won the Metropolitan Tournament in his freshman year and last year in the Eastern Nationals ranked third. Milonas’ varsity record is 25-3. He feels that the team is “eager to learn and seems to be the hardest working team I’ve been associated with at MSC. With the leadership of Danny and myself the team will improve in technique and conditioning.”

first hour of practice is defense, constant repetition. When the players are tired, then we think offense,” Gelston said.

MSC’s coach of 18 years feels this year’s team will “be one of the best transition teams that we have had in recent years. In the open court, they can be very creative. They are going to be a very enjoyable team to watch.”

The Indians should improve on last season’s 6-5 record, which included a second place finish in the state Invitational in his junior year.

In every match I wrestle in. I’d like to be one of the prominent wrestlers who made the NCAA Division III. “We have a very competitive MSCon the mat. The team with 19 goals, five assists, and 24 total points. The 19 goals accounted for more than half the entire team output of 37 goals. Ioannou is one of the leaders on the team that Santiago feels will help MSC to a very successful campaign next year. Santiago said of him, “He’s a real quality player. He’s only a freshman, yet he controlled the game, set the pace, and did just an outstanding job for the team.”

With those two players a year older, a year more experienced, some good breaks instead of bad, and a healthy squad, the MSC coach plans to have a winning record next fall. “We have a good nucleus, so it looks promising for the future. This year we just suffered from a lack of depth. We simply ran out of players.”

Santiago also noted “noble” play by Dan Simon and Jim Dean, who played virtually every position on the field.

With a solid squad returning healthy next September, Santiago said, “We’re definitely going to do well...there’s no reason why we can’t.”

Although the soccer team finished the year a mediocre 5-8-2, Head Coach Phil Santiago feels the record was not indicative of the quality of his team.

“We had a lot of bad breaks and injuries that we didn’t expect. Sometimes you get the breaks, sometimes you don’t. We didn’t, though we had some outstanding performances from some individuals,” he said.

The 1984 soccer season saw MSC field a starting lineup with no seniors. So Santiago feels he has excellent prospects for next year, and expects success for the 1985 team.

With returning starters like junior John Ioannou, it shouldn’t be impossible. Ioannou broke all the MSC scoring records as a sophomore, and spent this year just adding to them. He led the team with 19 goals, five assists, and 24 total points. The 19 goals accounted for more than half the entire team output of 37 goals.

Despite losing eight lettermen from last year, the MSC men’s swimming and diving team has its sights set on the NUSC championship.

“Sure, losing eight lettermen will hurt,” says Head Coach Greg Lockard, “but we’ve had great success picking up transfers and transfers.”

The Indians should improve on last year’s 6-5 record, which included a second place finish in the state championships, based on the abilities of several returning swimmers.

Mark Lewandowski will be a force in the shorter distances and Dave Crickenberger and Joe Janicelli are major talents in the intermediate and breast stroke events, respectively.

Among the new recruits he speaks so highly of is Rich Taylor, a transfer from West Point. Taylor is a former New Jersey high school state champion in the sprint events.

With such a strong nucleus of talent it would appear the Indians also have a shot at the Metro Championships, but Lockard only offers warnings: “I don’t like to make predictions like that concerning a Metro Championship,” he said. “You never know what might happen in those kind of meets.”

Good friends won’t leave you flat.

The moon was up, the stars were out and—pffft!—your rear tire was down. Good thing there was a phone nearby. And a few good friends who were willing to drive a dozen miles, on a Saturday night, to give you a lift. When you get back, you want to do more than just say “thanks.” So tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.

Löwenbräu. Here’s to good friends.

MSC captures state crown by beating Glassboro 34-7 before 5,500 Saturday

By "The Jet"
MSC is now solo holder of the New Jersey State Athletic Conference crown. After defeating Glassboro State by an undisputed score of 34-7 Saturday night, MSC avenged last year's loss to the Prov's which left the Noracs at the bottom of the conference.

It looked like it was going to be a long year for the Indians after a 7-5 record but then they ran it back 54 yards for their first of three touchdowns.

On the Profs' opening possession, Briggs moved the team 55 yards and scored on a 70-yard interception. Joe Perri kicked the extra point to tie the score at 7-7. In the second quarter, MSC scored on three of their four possessions. After a six-play, 40-yard drive, Archie Peterson, who keyed the drive with a 28-yard rushing sprint, scored from the 1 to put the Indians ahead 13-7. The PAT failed. After a PROF punt, MSC took over at the 28 and five plays later James Paulsen caught a 19-yard pass from Briggs for the next score. The conversion attempt failed but with 9:57 to play in the half, MSC bounced to a 19-7 lead and the rout was on.

After a valiant goal line stand by Glassboro at their own one-yard line, MSC was turned away with no points but came back on their next drive and scored in eight plays.

Briggs, who was sacked once in the drive, kept his composure and hooked up with Paulsen for completions of 19 and 11 yards to put the Indians at the Prov six. A Briggs touchdown pass to Ed Chavis from the six and the PAT ran the score to 27-7 with 47 seconds left in the half. Although there was no scoring in the third quarter, it was far from boring, especially for Ed Poveromo. Poveromo had two sacks and a fumble recovery. Overall he had five solo sacks, two assisted sacks and the fumble recovery.

On MSC's longest drive of the game Briggs moved the team 75 yards and capped the six play drive with a six-yard toss to a wide open Paulsen. Paulsen accumulated 65 yards on the night.

With good coverage and blocking, Tony Sweet booted eight punts for 293 yards. His longest was a 47-yard blast that put the Profs deep in their own territory. Without the key punts the Profs would have had good field position and the outcome of the game could have been different.

Without seniors Ed Kostecik, Mark Manno, Mark Ortmann, Bob Daly, and Robert Thomas this ballclub could have folded in the early part of the season. Credit must also go to the coaching staff for the great job they've done.

Head Coach Rick GiAncola said it best, "This team showed real character right from the start. They showed the character that is typical of champions, and they are champions, NSAC champions."

Lady swimmers strive for perfection

By Tom Branna
"What can we do for an encore?"
That's the question Head Coach Greg Lockard must be asking himself as the women's swimming and diving team's season gets underway.

It would appear Lockard will be hard pressed to top the accomplishments of a year ago: being crowned champions in the Metropolitan Conference, the New Jersey State Athletic Conference, as well as a second straight title at the New Jersey Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women meet.

With such a list of achievements, the only thing the Indians can do is strive for perfection—and they have the talent to do it.

A year ago, the MSC squad finished the regular season at 9-2. The 1984-85 edition hopes to make it through the season unmarked. Based on the abilities of the returning performers and the promise of 17 new recruits, a 13-0 season is not out of the question.

Leading the Indians' quest is five-time All-American Janet Taylor, whose specialty is the individual medley, and who according to Bragg, "may be the best passing guard in the league." And senior co-captain Bryan Gabriell, whose 57 assists were second best on the team last season.

At power forward will be 6'5" senior co-captain Robert Schramm, who shot 61 percent from the floor last year. Junior Tom Jaspan, who also had a 61 percent field goal average, will be tallest on the team at 6'7". He will be the center. However, on offense, especially against man to man defense, Gelston is going to play 6'2". Junior Marcus Williams in the post position, usually where the center sets up.

"Now, he needs playing time and confidence. Marcus is hardworking and there is no reason why he will not be successful. Height doesn't necessarily mean a good center," Gelston said.

How well Williams adjusts to his new position will be a key to just how successful the Indians will be, but Gelston believes there are other variables. A major problem for MSC could be injuries to the starting five, especially if the younger players haven't come along yet.

Some of the younger team members will who see action are guards Steve Swinton, Willie Burns and John Vogel, and forwards Tom Schulte and Alex Dunn. One player who could become an asset to the Indians next semester, if he is eligible, is sophomore transfer from Purdue, Ulyssees Del Rio.

One aspect of basketball that Gelston always emphasizes with his players, rookies or veterans, is defense, and it shows. His teams are traditionally very strong defensively.

Time is key for young basketball squad

By John Connolly
Time will be a key factor this season for the men's basketball team. In particular, how long will it take for a relatively young squad to develop into a contender in the New Jersey State Athletic Conference?

The Indian team that battled William Paterson for the NSAC crown, and later finished in the final eight of the NCAA Division III with a 22-6 record, is gone. Head Coach Ollie Gelston, who is the winningest coach in New Jersey collegiate history, lost his starting team of a year ago and seven of his first nine players.

The five remaining players from last year have filled this year's starting roles. In the backcourt are junior Ed Peterson, who Gelston feels "may be the best passing guard in the league," and senior co-captain Bryan Gabriell, whose 57 assists were second best on the team last season.

At power forward will be 6'5" senior co-captain Robert Schramm, who shot 61 percent from the floor last year.
