Armstrong to help women gain higher level jobs

By Michelle LaLumia

Women are now organizing to move into positions traditionally held by men, according to Dr. Jean Armstrong, vice president of student affairs at MSC. Armstrong was recently named statewide coordinator of the American Council on Education National Identification Program (ACE/NIP), an organization designed to identify those women who are capable of holding policy-making administrative positions in higher education. This program was started in 1977 by the Office of Women in Higher Education, based in Washington, D.C., a branch of the American Council on Education. The New Jersey branch of ACE/NIP was housed at Princeton its first four years, then moved to Rutgers New Brunswick for two, and now with Armstrong’s appointment is based at MSC.

Before the program’s inception, there was no formal network for women. As a result, Armstrong said, “Women have been kept outside the inner circles of power and connections” and have not been considered for upper level positions. Women have historically served in lower-echelon, lower-level positions, she added, but “even in the last year or so, there has been a little movement, but I don’t think we’re really making a lot of progress.”

A comprehensive survey of full-time employees by job classification, conducted, revealed that although total employment of employees by job classification, sex and ethnicity compiled last December revealed that although total employment male and female employees is almost equivalent (516 females, or 52 percent vs. 558 males, or 48 percent), the distribution between high and low level positions is unequal. Women fill 210 (96 percent) of all office/clerical/secretarial positions, while men fill 11 (5 percent) of these jobs. At the administrative level, 17 (31 percent) females hold positions compared with 38 (69 percent) males.

The five academic dean positions are all held by men. Anita Walters, director of the EO/AAO, said in the current position, there have been no regular appointments of women to academic dean, although two women have served in an interim acting capacity. “There has not been much progress in terms of women reaching senior level administrative roles,” she said.

There are currently twelve women elected as department chairpersons out of approximately 34 positions. “This is one of the first steps for women,” Walters said. “To get administrative positions in higher education, women must go through the same promotions as men: from faculty to department chairperson to dean to vice president to president. Women are just beginning to enter higher level positions now.”

Women fill 73 (61 percent) of medium-level “professional” positions, compared with 46 (39 percent) men. In this capacity, Walters said, they are getting the experience they have been lacking to move into senior level positions.

“It’s the age-old problem brand new college graduates face,” Armstrong said. “When going for administrative positions they are asked what experience they’ve had, but they can’t get any until they are hired. Women have historically been up against this Catch-22.”

Last summer the administration, working with the board of trustees, Faculty Center, Faculty Union and EO/AAO, developed the Affirmative Action/Executive Leadership Program, designed to provide executive leadership opportunities in higher education administration for both women and minorities.

This fall the program placed women in six of seven year-long learning positions as assistants to MSC vice presidents. “This is a real effort this institution is making to garner the administrative experience women need in order to advance,” Walters said. The program is not connected with ACE/NIP.

Armstrong explained there has been a brief hiatus for ACE/NIP in the moving process to MSC. State institution representatives have met once already, and have scheduled a second Planning Committee meeting Nov. 30 at Kean College.

Kean to hear dump protests in Clifton

By Eileen Oleksiak

For those wondering why Thomas Kean has not yet signed a bill to permanently close MSc’s landfill, the governor will field questions on this and other issues at a Clifton city council meeting tonight.

Scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. at the Woodrow Wilson junior high on Van Houten Avenue, the meeting will provide an opportunity for the college community and area residents to find out what action the governor intends to take regarding the bill. Kean was originally obliged to make a decision by Oct. 28-45 days after the bill’s final passage in the state legislature—but will not have to act until the legislature resumes session on Nov. 19.

Lee Brooks, treasurer of the Great Notch Association, said her organization has been fighting to close down the dump since its announced opening 10 years ago. She added that the governor’s delay in signing the bill may have “something to do with appropriations.”

As it stands, the bill would require the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to buy out the landfill from the Carrino Company, the permit holder. Brooks said the governor might recommend to the legislature that the funds come from another source. In this case, the bill will not have to be reintroduced but rather revised.

In the Sept. 27 issue of The Montclarion, DEP supervising planner Robert O’Malley said, “The department has consistently been opposed to the passing of the bill because the department is being involved in something it has nothing to do with, except issue a permit.”

Brooks said the passage of the bill is probable, however, because her organization received a letter from the governor’s office in October saying Kean was opposed to the landfill.

According to Brooks, those living in Little Falls object to the Carrino dump because they fear well water contamination in the area and are objecting to the company’s violations of environmental safety measures. The landfill was closed last Nov. after the DEP uncovered these violations. In addition Brooks said, “I personally feel it’s in the wrong place. A landfill doesn’t belong on the grounds of a learning institute. The bill prohibits this, especially of those schools funded by the state.”

Annual health fair promotes physical well-being

By Ben Smith
To encourage “wellness in the 80’s,” the Health Professions Association sponsored its tenth annual health fair last week. Thirty-five organizations provided information on such topics as abortion, alcoholism, and stress management.

The National Council on Alcoholism (NCA) distributed fact sheets about problems stemming from excessive alcohol intake. While drinking may be a favorite pastime for many college students at weekend parties and football games, a representative from the National Council on Alcoholism said, “There is nothing wrong with drinking socially, the problem starts when you feel like you have to drink.”

MSC’s Drop-In Center also demonstrated concern about the problem of alcoholism. According to Mia Gavalino, a representative from the center, “Alcoholism is a concern on campus this year” because a new college policy has banned alcohol from resident halls causing many students to go off campus to drink. Students then drive while intoxicated, she said.

“The Drop-In Center is trying to make students aware of tests they can take to see if they are drunk. They can also use the buddy system where one student takes responsibility not to drink so he can drive others home safely,” Gavalino said.

The Health Professions Association sponsored its tenth annual health fair last Thursday in Kops Lounge. According to Dr. Allen Macias, a representative from the Association, the fair’s goal was to “educate Center, CUNY. It will take place Nov. 19 at 8 p.m. in Kops Lounge, Russ Hall.”

DRINKING AND DRIVING CAN KILL A FRIENDSHIP

FAMOUS LAST WORDS FROM FRIENDS TO FRIENDS. I'm perfectly fine. I can drive with my eyes closed. There's nothing wrong with me. Are you joking—I feel great. What am I—a wimp? I'm in great shape to drive. You're not serious are you? What's a couple of beers? Nobody drives my car but me. I've never felt better. I can drink with the best of them. But I only had a few. So I had a couple. I can drive rings around anybody. I can drive my own car, thank you. I'm not drunk. I drive better when I'm like this. Who says I can't drink drive? I can hold my booze. I know I'm doing. I always drive like this...

DRINKING AND DRIVING CAN KILL A FRIENDSHIP.

A public service message from The Montclarion.
By Tom Boud

Be wary of cults, Chris Carlson, former adherent of Reverend Sung Yung Moon’s congregation, said in a lecture sponsored by CINA last week.

According to Carlson, “People do not realize what they’re getting into when they join a cult. Most people think that cults are for the benefit of world peace and happiness when really they’re only to serve a megalomaniacal leader.”

Carlson also said that cults deal with deception and trickery. “Cults use friendliness and sincere love as a facade to lure unsuspecting people into their organization. From there, they gradually but subtly brainwash the new member into obeying the commands of its leader,” he said.

Carlson further pointed out that all cults have an ulterior motive which is well-concealed from the public. “Cults will go as far as keeping the newly initiated parents, seeing me entrapped in this cult, obtained a court order in March 1978 for my release from Reverend Moon’s cult. However, only later did I see the truth in its true colors,” he said.

Carlson emphasized the deception of Reverend Moon’s cult. He said he realized that Reverend Moon, who owns a munitions factory which manufactures M-16 rifles, the New York Tribune, and a portion of the Washington Post, was solely promoting his own self-interest.

“In fact, it is now known that Moon is directly aiding the U.S. backed contras in Nicaragua by providing guns and money and it’s also known that he’s even urging his followers to engage in terrorism against North Korea. All this goes to show how ‘peaceful’ Reverend Moon really is.”

In closing Carlson urged everyone to use the utmost caution when thinking about joining a cult. “Make sure you have all information on an organization before you decide to join. After all, see what past horrors Charles Manson and Jim Jones have perpetrated.”

SGA rejects state’s course review proposal

By Maureen Freeburg and Gloria Dec

The SGA passed a resolution rejecting Education Commissioner Saul Cooperman’s attempt to hinder the autonomy of the New Jersey State Colleges.

SGA NEWS

The SGA said Cooperman had overstepped his authority when he condemned certain college courses through a superficial review of titles.

Dr. Raymond Paul, MSC English professor, said he was opposed to Cooperman’s actions because he did not want “to live by the word according to Saul.”

In other news, the Newman Community was granted a Class III Charter following a presentation by a group representative who described the services the organization offers. These include two masses on Sunday, dinner on Monday nights and encounter groups.

The Ski Club is sponsoring a trip to Vermont, Feb. 22-24. Partial funding for the bus was appropriated from the Montclair Transportation Authority (MTA) giving the club $800 of the $1200 needed. SGA Vice President Dennis Quinn, also chairman of MTA, explained the difficulties and problems associated with funding of trips of this type.

A bill creating guidelines for the Board of Transit Affairs Service Committee was passed. The purpose of this bill is to formalize the meeting procedures of the committee.

Psych students with highest GPA to receive awards

By Linda Longo
Two graduating psychology majors will each become $100 richer at the end of commencement exercises next May.

For the first time, MSC's psychology department is offering two monetary awards for academic achievement. Titled the Jerome M. Seidman Award for Excellence in Psychology, it will be distributed to the male and female psychology majors with the highest grade point average (GPA) of their graduating class.

Psychology department chairman Dr. Roland Sitter said that in the event of a tie, selection of recipients will be based on service to the school and community.

Seidman, a retired MSC psychology professor, said, "I have given the department a large sum of money, resulting in $200 a year to be used for the awards from now through the life of the endowment." The Jerome M. Seidman Award is unique because it is one of the few awards at MSC given solely on the basis of a student's GPA. Most awards offered by individual departments stress involvement in extracurricular activities over academic excellence. The Seidman Award might serve as a role model for other departments because it eliminates any possibility of favoritism, Seidman said.

According to Seidman, many students are unaware that there is a list of scholarships and awards given out annually by various departments.

For example, the chemistry department offers a $10,000 award to the senior chemistry major showing the most potential for success in doctoral study and research in chemistry. Dr. John Isador, chemistry department chairman, said the criteria for this award is based upon "involvement in extracurricular and departmental activities, GPA; honors programs, and recommendations from the faculty." Titled the Sokol Graduate Fellowship, it usually awarded at the end of the fall semester and will be offered through 1992.

Some scholarships and awards, such as the Essex County Home Economics Extension Council Scholarship, are given to residents of a specific area. To qualify, one must be a junior with high academic standing, professional potential, financial need, and residency in Essex or Hudson counties.

The Ethel Simpson Lenkowsky '37 Scholarship is not limited to a specific major. This $100 award is given to the sophomore woman with the highest scholarship record.

Not all of these awards are based on academic standing. Any student who demonstrates exceptional service along with qualities of leadership, understanding, and creativity may be eligible for an award.

It is important to note that these scholarships and awards are given only to the students who apply for them. A student must contact the chairman of the department offering the award and fill out an application.

A complete listing of the awards available at MSC can be found in the most recent undergraduate catalog. Although the Jerome M. Seidman Award for Excellence in Psychology is not yet listed, interested students are urged to contact the chairman of the Seidman Award at 893-5201.

White House spokesman Larry Speaks said this week that it will take a lot of persuading to get President Reagan to raise taxes. Yet, more alarming than raising taxes is the administration's new "get tougher" policy with Nicaragua. It seems the Reagan administration is looking for an excuse to invade that country.

They question its military buildup, saying that it is beyond what is needed for Nicaragua to defend itself. According to the State Department, this means the Sandinistas are planning to invade one of their neighbors—either Honduras or El Salvador.

It seems the Reagan administration might like nothing better than to see Nicaragua invade a neighboring country. What an excuse for a U.S. invasion! The officials at the State Department might stop to think that Nicaragua could be arming itself against a stronger enemy, namely the U.S. But Reagan rhetoric shows nothing but harassment toward the country of Nicaragua. Question: Why would Nicaragua want to invade another country when it is under attack by forces supported by the U.S.? The Nicaraguan foreign minister answered such allegations Tuesday night; they are lies, and in his words, "bullshit."

Today, Nicaragua stands ready in a state of war alert. They are convinced the U.S. will invade any day; surely this must be based on real concerns, not just paranoid hysteria.

Now that Reagan's new policy of deliberate intimidation and harassment of Nicaragua has been adopted, who knows what the next four years will hold? If changes such as this happen only one week after elections, we could be in trouble.

The eventual goal of all this bully talk and action is to put so much pressure on Nicaragua that sooner or later its government will crumble or change to suit the U.S. The scariest part is that administration officials have not ruled out military action in this situation. Hopefully this will not turn into a military conflict; for when the body bags start coming home, then the American people may begin to question their presidential choice.

Our job is to hold up the mirror—to tell and show the public what has happened, and then it is the job of the people to decide whether they have faith in their leaders or government. We are faithful to our profession in telling the truth. That's the only faith to which journalists need adhere.

—Walter Cronkite

Regression in the classroom

Let's see: absence, anxious, course, knowledge, schedule... This is a spelling list. Actually, it's a "Basic Spelling List," or at least that's what it's called by the professor who just handed it to me. It even comes with instructions: "PLEASE BE ABSOLUTELY SURE THAT YOU SPELL THESE WORDS RIGHT."

The instructions are important. Without them, this list would be irrelevant—or even incomprehensible.

Once the list is distributed, the professor begins to pace the front of the room, walking back and forth, eyes ready for a nodding head or errant grin. The students are extremely uncomfortable, packed into the first four rows of a normally spacious room.

The professor stops; stares fixedly at some point above our heads; his lips begin to twitch. "Now I'd like you to take some notes. You should take notes, of course you should take notes, this is a lecture, isn't it?"

I hope that's a rhetorical question; I don't think this professor would like the answers that are arising in my mind. In fact, I doubt he would like any of my thoughts, not that he cares anyway. Opinion and discussion in this class are most points—quite unfortunate for us, considering his requirement for "class participation"—and we've already been told that his seniority qualifies him to shape our malleable juvenile minds into whatever grotesque form he finds appropriate.

This form is, quite simply, developed from basic Freudian psychology. What should be an art history course has become a morass of psychoanalytic interpretation and if the connection isn't clear to you, it only shows up your repressed sexuality, kids.

The professor has made a slight error in his "Spelling List," that is, the exclusion of truly significant words like "phallic," "Oedipal," and "fixation." The error is forgivable in light of his lecture material, however: enlightening gems of information like "Every little boy wants to kill his father and sleep with his mother" and "Writing is a phallic activity because you use a pen."

And for all the girls in the class, there's the "penis envy" theory of human reproduction—well, never mind.

I've got all my notes, a topic for my final paper, and volumes of Freudian theory to read. I'm fully prepared to bounce all this nonsense back in well-written essays, even though I find my own thoughts more original and educational. But some things still bother me.

The first is that such an obsessed man could become so firmly established at an institution of higher learning if he isn't truthfully, somebody must be destroying his students' Teacher Evaluation Sheets. Second, that any professor could focus his curriculum exclusively on the widely questioned theories of Freud, this is tunnel-vision of the highest order, and would probably alarm the psychology department. But finally—and most importantly—is the fact that some of the students in this class may be naive enough to believe all of it.

I have some very serious questions for this professor, but they don't belong in the classroom any more than his subject matter does. I hope that there is a lesson to be learned from this course; I'd hate to think that all my anger, frustration, and embarrassment were for naught. Perhaps it has taught me, after five years of college, that selectivity is the key to receiving a good education. One thing's for sure—I'm missing a crucial element that would allow me to swallow the "knowledge" offered in this course. Freud would call it an oral fixation... and it would have to be a pretty severe one.

By Ellen Goodman
BOSTON: Now that the election is over, I find myself thinking less about who won and who lost but how we have changed the concept of winners and losers.

In July, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo told the Democratic convention a tale of two cities, one rich and one poor. All fall, the Democrats talked about a nation increasingly divided into have and have-nots. The brilliance of the Reagan campaign was in redefining the haves as the winners and the have-nots as the losers.

The resounding cheer of this election, "USA USA" was just a track for grandstand patriotism. It was an Olympic call to middle-class Americans. To the strong, the wealthy, the healthy, the independent—to side with the winners.

Once, the people who lived in the Other America were called the needy and regarded as victims. But there is a line, a fault line, that separates the old "victim" from the new "loser." In our political dictionary, a victim is blameless while a loser can only blame himself. In our political landscape, we may ask the government to lend a hand to victims, but not to waste hand outs on losers. The "needy" may elicit our sympathy, but not to waste hand to victims, but not to waste hand to them.

The success of the Reagan campaign is that he legitimized this tightening and salved our collective conscience at the same time. If we are going to limit opportunities for those stuck in the Other America, it is much easier to think of them as failures. If we are going to chip away at social programs for the have-nots, it is easier to name them selfish.

We used to call this blaming the victim. Now we call it winning.

Satisfaction in the voting booth

I stood there feeling empty and alone, closed the curtain, and began to bow my head, as if to appeal to a higher authority for some form of vindication. My face came to rest against the lever of this cold and impersonal voting contraption. Here I found my satisfaction! For as I blew the venerable mucous membranes of my sinususes, the tolerant officials of the opposition party, I was in the knowledge that should a conservative arrive at the same box, he would undoubtedly "feel" less satisfaction in his selection than I did in mine.

Student enjoys The Montclarion

The inclusion of the cartoons and the crossword puzzle is in good contrast to the hard news stories and the in-depth album, movie, show and concert reviews. The "personal" section and the added ad section show the concern of The Montclarion staff for the students' need for a public forum, of sorts.

I can only imagine the hard work which goes into the production of such fine newspapers, week after week by a supposedly understaffed organization (I still see the pleas for more student photographers, week after week). I, for one, salute your fine efforts and the resulting quality product!

No tailgating problems at game

To the editor:

On behalf of the SGA, I feel compelled to comment on the tailgating "situation", as brought to light by The Montclarion. After reading John Connolly's column, Dr. Martin Luther King's call to middle-class America was to be utilized by the students. Many of the students had to be prodded into the game, yet there were no objections and no confrontations with police. On behalf of the SGA, I would like to make the following comments and suggestions:

- To the Administration: Please take note of the positive aspects of Saturday night, when and if a "tailgate policy" is implemented for next year.
- To The Montclarion: I reaffirm my respect for your paper, and the role you play on this campus. But in this particular instance, I feel you gave undue attention to a situation that did not warrant it.
- To the students: A word of thanks for the mature and responsible way in which most of you acted at the game, but perhaps next year you might want to go to the game without a reminder from Campus Police.

Student enjoys The Montclarion

To the editor:

Since becoming a student here at M.I.C., I have become a faithful reader of The Montclarion. I have always felt that I was reading a quality newspaper, but the newspapers which have been put out this semester seem to be the ones I have read in the past couple of years.

The paper, on the whole, seems more organized as of late. There are also a few more sections, or rather, regular columns which give the newspaper an organized appearance. I find that the "hard news" stories are always written from a purely objective standpoint, as they should be.

They are also fair in presenting the facts on both sides of an issue. The sports section is also much better than it has been in the past and the addition of Connolly's Corner to this section was a wise move.

The inclusion of the cartoons and the crossword puzzle is in good contrast to the hard news stories and the in-depth album, movie, show and concert reviews. The "personal" section and the added ad section show the concern of The Montclarion staff for the students' need for a public forum, of sorts.

I can only imagine the hard work which goes into the production of such fine newspapers, week after week by a supposedly understaffed organization (I still see the pleas for more student photographers, week after week). I, for one, salute your fine efforts and the resulting quality product!

Draft Registration is the law...

Men, if You’re within a Month of Your 18th Birthday, It’s Time You Registered with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office. It’s Quick. It’s Easy. And it’s the Law.
...But you do have an alternative

LISTEN TO THIS:

There is an alternative to compulsory military service. If you have moral, ethical, or religious objections to participation in any war or military training, you can be a conscientious objector. One can be a CO regardless of one's religion: an agnostic or atheist can make a CO claim based on deeply held, personal beliefs. The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors is an organization engaged in a nation-wide effort to inform people about Conscientious objection and related peace issues.

We are also registering conscientious objectors with our CO card. This card simply states: "Because of my beliefs about war, I am opposed to participation in the military." Should the draft be reinstated, and this is becoming increasingly likely, a CO card could provide important documentation of your status as an objector. For more information, write to:

Of Mice and Men depicts the American Dream deferred.

By Gary Ruff

In a dark, secluded clearing along the bank of the Salinas River, two friends set up camp for the night. They are migrant workers: tired, hungry, and desperate for a job. Among their kind, friendship is rare; but even in the cruel Depression has not yet broken the bonds between these two. George and Lennie share a dream, a dream that keeps them going where others would have given up. That light, for perhaps the thousandth time, George tells a rapt Lennie "how it’s gonna be.”

Recently the Whole Theatre of Montclair opened its 12th season with John Steinbeck’s classic novel, Of Mice and Men. Few dramas more accurately capture the American soul. It was a warm, humorous performance, yet moving enough to bring one to the verge of tears.

For migrant workers in the 1930’s, survival depended on two basic rules. Take what you can get, and work hard. Most managed to escape the dreariness of their lives on paydays, when they went to town to hit the taverns and cathouses. George (Joseph Ragno), however, can’t do all that. He is burdened with Lennie (Andrew Clark), a huge, lovable bear of a man who has the wits of a five-year-old. George, on the other hand is wiry, fierce and clever, but displays a paternal concern for his friend that is matched only by Lennie’s unquestioning loyalty to him. Both live for their dream, that someday they’ll have enough money saved to buy their own farm.

Like curiosity keeps getting them in trouble, they lose job after job, never saving up enough of a “stake.” At last, they befriend an old swapper (bunkhouse janitor) named Candy (David Clarke) who buys his way into the plan. With Candy’s contribution, even George finally feels they have a chance of saving up enough of a “stake.”

As they go about human shortcomings, the power of hope and the importance of friendship, Apollo Dukakis, director of the play, said, “It’s a play about longing, about fulfillment and unfulfillment of dreams and the need to share these dreams with each other. The eagerness and warmth of the colorful and appealing characters revitalize and touch the longings and dreams that we all share.”

Obviously, the play demands much of the actors. Ragno and Clark are perfectly cast as the two friends who are physical and mental opposites, but brothers in spirit. Ragno has a strong, chiseled features and sharp eyes that like his character, are capable of both sympathy and grim tenacity. He is an experienced Broadway performer, one of those rare, special actors who invisibly transmits the inner, unspoken essence of his character. With his appealing portrayal of Lennie, Andrew Clark almost steals the show.

A huge, balding man, Clark is like a clumsy, oversized boy, playful, innocent, and totally lovable. Twice, Lennie loses his temper and Clark is transformed into a horrifying, raging giant. He is a joy to watch, with his highly expressive face and big hands, restless as an infant’s.

The contrast between George and Lennie is balanced by their friendship and framed by a fine supporting cast. W. T. Martin, as the cool, friendly Slim, has an authentic Texan drawl and a powerful voice that distinguishes him as a highly respected man among the migrant workers. David Clarke, a veteran of the stage with over 50 years of experience, is both likeable and pitiable as poor old Candy. Thomas Martell Brimm gave Crooks the strong definition that this surprisingly complex and important character deserves. Less well defined, however, was Steve Horvahd’s Curley, who seemed at times more an amusing brat than a bully. Finally, Virginia Meissner evokes the vital element of sympathy as Curley’s flirtatious wife, who is a lonely aspiring actress.

Because the dialogue and staging are simple and starkly realistic, there is no constant dynamic tension to rivet the audience’s attention. Nonetheless, the casual pacing gives certain climactic moments a special impact.

The talent and devotion of the Whole Theatre have created a show that is faithful to the genius of John Steinbeck. Whether or not you’ve read Of Mice and Men this play is definitely worth catching.

The Whole Theatre is located at 544 Bloomfield Ave., Montclair. For more information, call the Whole Theatre at 744-2989.
Vita Sackville-West's letters blend adventure with sentiment

By S.C. Wood

"So you're having Sibyl to tea at this moment, instead of me, and she won't sit on the floor or say my lovely Virginia, and you won't rumple her hair — and it won't be nearly so nice." Thus runs the poet's jealous complaint to his Muse, describing her romance with one of the century's great writers, Virginia Woolf.

The Letters of Vita Sackville-West to Virginia Woolf, beautifully and tactfully edited by Louise D'Salvado and Thomas A. Leaska, recreates this most famous and complex of literary flirtations. Leaska, a Woolf scholar and literary consultant for the Psychoanalytic Review, provides a rather lengthy introduction to the letters. He over-indulges his penchant for psychoanalysis, centering upon the writers' relationships.

His introduction could be expanded into a psychoanalytic monograph, but has little bearing on the atmosphere created by the letters themselves. One enters not family quarrels, but the chrysalis of friendship, with all its goofy nicknames, corny endearments and inside jokes. One finds oneself cooly first-naming these great authors as the letters enlarge on the homely minutiae of gardening, puppies and the image of the alluring Virginia enjoying cups of hot milk.

But one soon exchanges the homely for the exotic, as Vita's marriage to diplomat Harold Nicolson draws her around the world in a frenzy of diplomatic activities. Vita's lively eye takes nothing for granted, and she laces her letters to Virginia with wry anthropological anecdote. While in India, she saw religious Hindu throwing coconuts into the sea as a mark of respect toward a revered temple. Vita places this episode purely within its national context, pointing out that "You cannot imagine coming round the corner form the Coliseum, and seeing Lady Colfax throwing coconuts at St. Martin-in-the-Fields."

Her breathless descriptions attest to her fascination with even the most mundane details of her travels. "Went to a Persian tea-party. Ravishing women; almond eyes, red lips, babbling like little birds, pulling their veils about them whenever they heard a noise." Yet she remains earthy amid all the socializing of diplomatic life: she comments slyly on the Persian court, and wagers that the Shah will show up for his coronation in diamonds and tennis shoes. She loves every moment of the excitement, even though she threatens to slap the next man who dares to kiss her hand. As a somewhat wearied adventuress duelling with banditti in the desert, she writes to Virginia that "you make a wonderful cynical kindly similing background to the turbulence of my brain."

In this way, the two women erected romanticized idols of each other: to Vita, Virginia was the aristocrat, elegant but exciting, a world traveller. To Vita, Virginia incarnated all she wished to cultivate in herself: genius, mystery and a calm and subtle sense of feminina dignity. Yet Virginia playfully nicknamed her sometimes clumsy protege Donkey West, and Vita imagined the bedridden Virginia as a pampered little dog, Potto.

Vita, as the younger and less talented of the two, oftendefies her lack of talent. With a sense of deference toward Virginia's genius, she complains of her own "dreadful brain stagnation," and calls herself "no writer at all, — no, nor even a journalist...And certainly not a poet."

The letters following over Vita's letters, especially those of her halcyon days in the flurry of travelling, one finds a whole new flow of details which recreate sparkling pictorial images. In Russia in 1926, she admires a "green glaucous river immobilized into ice," the mountain "every beautiful, and endlessly melancholy. Fancy living in this country, feeling yourself to be only a little black dot in the middle of a flat whiteness stretching away to China." She also has the critic's genius of hitting on just the right imagery, to make a scathing attack with the greatest subtlety. Writing in 1927, of the decay of Desmond McCarthy's personality, she notes that he "faded away into a mere refinement of himself and became obliterated like a footprint after a fresh fall of snow." The witty Oscar Wilde could not have phrased it better.

Despite all this display of wise and witty virtuosity, it is the warmth of friendship and romance that entwines the reader into the private world of the letters. The eternal cliches of love sneak into the closings and postscripts of these ingeniously original letters. One can only sigh in sympathy with Vita's adolescent longing: "Oh my lovely Virginia, it is dreadful how much I miss you, and everything that everybody says seems so flat and stupid...Tell me if I write too often. I love you."

The Psychedelic Furs will unleash their new wave rock and roll sounds in a one night concert debut at Radio City Music Hall on Monday, Nov. 19. at 8 p.m. The performance marks the release of their latest album for Columbia records, Mirror Moves, which has already topped the charts with the hit single "The Ghost In You." Their Music Hall debut closely follows a smash North American tour as well as the band's first official European excursion. The Furs special guests will be The Bangles, who starred in the recently released video "Goin' Down to Liverpool" which also featured a cameo appearance by Leonard Nimoy.

The Fur's finest performing line-up to date features vocalist Richard Butler and brother Tim Butler on bass; guitarist John Ashton; Ed Bulbar on keyboards; Mike Moonen on sax and native New Yorkers Mars Williams (sax) and drummer Paul Garisto. The group is expected to re-establish their status as the definitive exponents of new wave rock. The British band, in their own words, determined to "out whereabouts the weirdos" re-captured the spirit of psychedelia with their first hit single "We Love You," which received widespread acclaim after its release in the late 70's.

In 1982, the Furs most radical and successful project. Forever Now, proved the group's refusal to be dictated to by popular trends and won them a dedicated following in England and the U.S. The album's single, "Love My Way," a perverse cabaret ballad, become the group's trademark and biggest international hit.

CBS record artists, The Bangles, recently took the American music scene by storm with the release of their first video Goin' Down to Liverpool, a certified hit single off the group's debut album All over the place. Headed by lead guitarist Vicki Peterson, with Debbie Peterson on drums, guitarist Susan Hoffs and bassist Michael Steele, the LP's title is an apt description of the quartet's hectic touring schedule for the upcoming year. For more information please call (212) 757-3100.

The Psychedelic Furs will be promoting their latest LP, Mirror Moves at Radio City on Nov. 19.

Indians fall in NCAA regionals

By Tom Branna

The women's cross-country team ended their season on a sour note Saturday at the Mideast Regionals. The Indians finished a disappointing 11th, thus failing to qualify for the national championships.

Dana Caruso once again paced the MSC squad, finishing the five-kilometer course in 19:58, good enough for 23rd place in a field that included over one hundred runners. Nancy Wright was just behind Caruso in 27th place with a time of 20:02.

Behind the two All-NJAC runners were Liz Dilla, Laura Fritch and Claudine Pierre.

Because of scoring regulations, only the top five finishers on a team participate for the team scoring title.

"We just didn't run in a pack," explained coach Michelle Willis. "There were over four minutes between our first and fifth finishers."

Though the Indians may be disappointed with Saturday's results, the season has been successful when one considers all the adversity the team overcame just to reach the Mideast Regionals.

After a 0-6 start, Willis recruited enough track performers to field a full team—then the Indians got rolling. They proceeded to win six straight dual meets to reach the 350 mark at 6-6. Along the way, Caruso and Wright received all conference honors for their performances in the conference championships.

The only letdown occurred in the final weeks of the season when the Indians faced such Division I and IA powers as Temple, Lafayette and Lehigh. These teams proved to be too much for MSC as their record dropped to 6-10.

Wills, however, looks toward next season with confidence. "We'll have only three returning runners in '85, but we'll be getting some considerable high school talent that should help pick up the slack of graduation."

Lady hoopsters look for improvement with new coach

By Susie Resnick

The women's basketball team, who finished with a 6-10 record last season, is looking forward to a stronger and more successful season.

Head Coach Jill Jeffrey, who was a four year starter here at MSC from 1977-1980 and a member of one of the Indians' strongest and most successful teams in MSC history, has returned to put the team back into action.

Since this is Jeffrey's first year here, she is cautiously optimistic about the coming season. "We have a very young team. The core of the team will be juniors," she said.

Junior guard Debra Emery was one of last year's starters and the leading scorer with a 16 point average. She also shot 81.9% from the foul line.

Junior co-captain Judy De Francisci will be playing on the forward line. Jeffrey said, "She makes the best of her abilities and with her court smarts, is one of the finest defensive players on the team."

Returning from last year, sophomore Lorraine Bratton will be in the front court. Last year Bratton pulled down 112 rebounds in 25 games, fourth highest on the squad. Coach Jeffrey said that Bratton "is an exceptional player with tremendous athletic ability."

Also returning to the squad is co-captain Karen Hughes, a senior. According to Jeffrey, "Hughes has speed and quickness which will help her develop into an outstanding player. Her leadership qualities will also be an asset to this young team."

The squad lost four starters to graduation, but that won't affect the team. The Indians have been training hard and preparing themselves for the season.

Dance for a good cause

MSC baseball players pitch in for muscular dystrophy

By JoAnn Nemes

Superdance, a 24-hour marathon to benefit muscular dystrophy, will have an added attraction—the MSC baseball team. Nearly the entire team, along with a few hundred others, will be dancing through Thursday night to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association from Friday, Nov. 30 until Saturday, Dec. 1 in the Blanton Hall Atrium.

Monies raised from this event will benefit both children and adults who suffer from muscular dystrophy and related neuromuscular diseases. Support of this program will help enable MDA to continue their programs of worldwide research into the causes of and cures for neuromuscular disease, and to provide vital medical services to those who need them.

The dance all began as an RA project for Lisa Venezia, a resident assistant in the Three D wing of Blanton Hall, and it has turned into a major MSC campus activity. Jody Walsh, an assistant manager at Blanton, has been helping Lisa out. Venezia sought groups to help support the Superdance and caught up with the baseball team at a meeting.

When Coach Cooney heard about it, he strongly endorsed it. Right now, the Indian team is in the process of raising money for their annual trip to Florida. "We're always looking to raise money for the team and we know how hard it is. This is a good cause and we're glad to help," remarked the varsity catcher Chuck Thomas.

As a reminder, muscular dystrophy is a chronic, noncontagious disease characterized by a progressive wasting of the muscles. "I'm fortunate to be healthy," Tim Johnson said. "So I want to put out an effort for someone who is less fortunate than me."

Upon hearing of the Superdance, other groups were contacted or went to Lisa wanting to help out. "The baseball team is really helping a lot," Venezia said, and "a lot of people have been joining because the baseball players did."

The event is receiving a lot of publicity on campus and many groups and organizations are getting involved such as: Delta Theta Psi, responsible for obtaining some refreshments; Alpha Delta Tau, who offered to help cook the food; The Montclarion, helping out with free publicity; SAGA, providing two free food breaks; the SGA, providing free fliers; and Federation and Alpha Iota Chi Sorority.

The MDA is offering students prize incentives to participate. The grand prize goes to the student who raises the most money (a minimum of $400). It is a four-day, three night, all expenses paid trip for two to Walt Disney World. A special bonus prize is also being offered: for every $50 a dancer raises, he will be entered in a special drawing for a brand new home computer.

The Superdance started with 100 applicants and students were so interested in the program that, as of now, approximately 200 applications have been distributed. In order for students to participate, a $55 deposit is due by the end of next week to reserve a space on the dance floor. A table will be set up in the Student Center on Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and deposits can be dropped off there. Each dancer must have a minimum of $30 collected in donations before the event in order to participate. However, each dancer is urged to collect at least $50 so he is eligible for the special bonus grand prize drawing.

This Superdance is a good constructive activity for students. "I'll get real satisfaction by helping out," said Shaun Garrity, a varsity pitcher. "We'll be dancing for people who can't do it themselves."

"It's always good to put in time for charity," Thomas added. "I'm glad to be able to give one 24-hour period out of my life to those who are less fortunate."

Not only is it charitable, but it is a promising non-alcoholic activity which many students are participating in and this has a positive reflection on the school itself. "You don't have to drink to have a good time. We're going to have fun at the dance and help the MDA out too," remarked John Cowan.

"God created me to dance," laughed Tim Jones, "and it's for charity."

A detailed plan of action has been constructed for the Superdance. Special dance activities include: a New Year's Countdown, a 50's Era ("Around the Clock"), the "Hokey Pokey," Calisthenics, "Aerobics in the Afternoon," "Tis the Season to be Jolly," "Swing your Partner," and "Sports Time."

"I'm really looking forward to it; it's something different, it's for a good cause, and it will give kids something to do on a Friday night. It's a good time for a good cause," Tom Carey said.

Applications are still available at the Blanton Desk for anyone who would like to join the Indians in their dance against MD. "The baseball players have pride and we're glad to participate in a worthy cause. We'll dance all night—we're not quitters," Thomas explained. "We'll last the whole time."

"We're fortunate to have the support of the baseball team for this dance. Because many children have this disease, they can't play sports. It would be great if just one of those little boys with muscular dystrophy could grow up to be able to play baseball," Venezia said. "And, with the Superdance, we hope to do our share."
Soccer team suffers bad breaks; much better than 5-8-2 record

By Jim Nicosa

Although the soccer team finished the year a mediocre 5-8-2, Head Coach Phil Santiago feels the record was not indicative of the quality of his team. "We had a lot of bad breaks and injuries that we didn't expect. Sometimes you get the breaks, sometimes you don't. We didn't, though, we had some outstanding performances from some individuals," he said.

The 1984 soccer season saw MSC field a starting lineup with no seniors. So Santiago feels he has excellent prospects for next year, and expects success for the 1985 team.

With returning starters like junior John Ioannou, it shouldn't be impossible. Ioannou broke all the MSC scoring records as a sophomore, and spent this year just adding to them. He led the team with 19 goals, five assists, and 24 total points. The 19 goals accounted for more than half the entire team output of 37 goals.

Ioannou is one of the leaders on the team that Santiago feels will help MSC to a very successful campaign next year. Santiago said of him, "He's a bonafide pro—he'll definitely be in the pros. Everyone we played against was afraid of him. He's been double, even triple teamed, but they still can't stop him."

Midfielder Alex Pszczek (four goals, four assists, eight points) is another player Santiago singled out. "He's a real quality player. He's only a freshman, yet he controlled the game, set the pace, and did just an outstanding job for the team."

With those two players a year older, a year more experienced, some good breaks instead of bad, and a healthy squad, the MSC coach plans to have a winning record next fall. "We have a good nucleus, so it looks promising for the future. This year we just suffered from a lack of depth. We simply ran out of players," Santiago also noted "noble" play by Dan Simon and Jim Dean, who played virtually every position on the field.

With a solid squad returning healthy next September, Santiago said, "We're definitely going to do well...there's no reason why we can't."

Men swimmers look to title despite losing eight lettermen

By Tom Branna

Despite losing eight lettermen from last year, the MSC men's swimming and diving team has its sights set on the NJSAC championship. "Sure, losing eight lettermen will hurt," says Head Coach Greg Lockard, "but we've had great success picking up young talent and transfers."

The Indians should improve on last year's 6-5 record, which included a second place finish in the state championships, based on the abilities of several returning swimmers.

Mark Lewandowski will be a force in the shorter distances and Dave Crickenberger and Joe Jancielli are major talents in the intermediate and breast stroke events, respectively. Among the new recruits he speaks so highly of is Rich Taylor, a transfer from West Point. Taylor is a former New Jersey high school state champion in the sprint events.

Rounding out the Indians' top performers are co-captains Mark Griffin and Paul Galenkamp. With such a strong nucleus of talent it would appear the Indians also have a shot at the Metro Championships, but Lockard only offers warnings: "I don't like to make predictions like that (Concerning a Metro Championship)," he said. "You never know what might happen in those kind of meets."

Wrestlers fill vacancies; talent at each weight

By Anna Schiavo

This wrestling season will find a very competitive MSC on the mat. The team has resolved the problem of not having all the weight classes filled. Top wrestlers transfer now fill the vacancies that plagued last year's squad.

"This year should be the best that I've ever had at MSC because every weight class has a successful wrestler in it," Head Coach Steve Strellner said.

A leader of the team is co-captain Dan DaCunto, who won the Delaware Invitational in his sophomore year and placed third in the East Stroudsburg Invitational in his junior year. The senior economics major finished off last season with an incredible 23-9 record.

DaCunto is very optimistic about the upcoming season. "This is the best team we've fielded since I've been at MSC. We have several new outstanding individuals who I feel will help lead the team toward the NCAA Division III title," DaCunto said.

DaCunto, who wrestles in the 158 weight class, feels that the team has the potential to finish in the top three of the NCAA Division III. "We have a well balanced team. We should be able to compete with all the teams on our schedule which includes a lot of Division I schools. Nobody should blow us off the map," said the Coach.

"I feel that the dual meet season is just for prepping the individual wrestlers. What I try to do is get the players to improve themselves by learning from their mistakes so that when we get to the championships, they won't make those mistakes," he said.

Other team members include two transfers from Middlesex County College, Jim Petty and Bob Keenan. Petty was a junior college All-American last year and Keenan was also a national qualifier.

"At heavyweight, we have Steve Belof and Joe Galot. At 167, we have John Monaco who is a transfer from Syracuse University. He was a two time New Jersey State Champion in high school and should be a contender for the 167 pound NCAA Division III National Championships," said Strellner.

"I feel that with the strength we have throughout we'll be able to open a lot of eyes and give Coach Strellner the type of winning season he deserves," DaCunto said.

first hour of practice is defense, constant repetition. When the players are tired, then we think offense," Gelston said.

MSC's coach of 18 years feels this year's team will "be one of the best transition teams that we have had in recent years. In the open court, they can be very creative. They are going to be a very enjoyable team to watch." The Indians open their season Sat., Nov. 24 in upstate New York against Hartwick College. The first home game will be Wed., Nov. 28, against NJSAC rival Jersey City State at 6 p.m. in Panzer Gym.

The men's basketball team practices for their season opener against Hartwick College in upstate New York next Wednesday night.
The moon was up, the stars were out and—pfft!—your rear tire was down. Good thing there was a phone nearby. And a few good friends who were willing to drive a dozen miles, on a Saturday night, to give you a lift. When you get back, you want to do more than just say “thanks.” So tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.

Löwenbräu. Here’s to good friends.
We are the NJSAC champions!

MSC is now solo holder of the New Jersey State Athletic Conference crown. After defeating Glassboro State by an undisputed score of 34-7 Saturday night, MSC avenged last year's loss to the Profs which left the NJSAC title shared between MSC and the team. He's a great leaper with natural instincts to be a center. He will be a force in the distance events.
