Spring Weekend '85 plans to make campus a carnival

By Mary Ellen Macisaac

Now that spring break is over, MSC students are back to the grind of writing term papers and taking exams. Are you already tired of all the school work? Do you wish you were back in the sun? Do you need a little lift, but you just can't take a break?

Then come to the first annual "Party Under the Sun." Spring Weekend '85! This SGA sponsored event is scheduled to take place in the campus mall from Wed., April 24 to Sun., April 28.

These five days will be filled with attractions hosted by the different organizations of the SGA, including CLUB, Class One Concerts and the different SGA class organizations of the SGA. in-attractions hosted by the different organizations of the SGA, including CLUB, Class One Concerts and the different SGA class organizations of the SGA.

This SGA sponsored event is scheduled to take place in the campus mall from Wed., April 24 to Sun., April 28.

These five days will be filled with attractions hosted by the different organizations of the SGA, including CLUB, Class One Concerts and the different SGA class organizations of the SGA.

On Thursday, CLUB will sponsor a game of Simon Says and Players will provide clowns and mimes.

According to Hoffman, a carnival is set for Sunday. Various wheel booths offering small prizes will be set up throughout the mall along with food stands. Although most other events will be free, there will be on a charge basis.

According to Hoffman, all class organizations other than Class One's will be responsible for these booths because only they are permitted to raise money. Any funds received from these booths will be used to further improve these organizations' programming.

Funday is set for Saturday from noon to six. Students will be asked to pre-register into teams of ten and pay a small fee to participate. Six events are scheduled, including a 2.8 mile fun run, a kickball game and several pool races.

"We are still working to complete plans on some of the day's programs," Hoffman said. "In addition to the students, we've invited the administration, because it is a campus wide event."

"In order to boost the low student morale on campus, we decided to organize this event," Dave Handal, SGA president said. "Six years ago, the MSC weekend carnival was an annual event. We wanted to bring back this tradition."

The chief coordinator of the weekend, Judy Sussner, heads a group of ten people, including vice-president Dennis Quinn, who is overseeing the whole committee. Mark Ranano, assistant to the student affairs, and Frank Petrak of SILC have assisted in the organization of this weekend.

"Spring Weekend '85 will not only provide the campus with a little fun, but it has enabled all the SGA class organizations to work together toward a single goal," Hoffman said.

This year's SGA executive board elections will be held on April 13-17 in the second floor lobby of the Student Center. Voting booths will be open on Saturday, April 13 from 2.4 PM; Sunday, April 14 from 9 AM to 3 PM; Monday April 15 and Tuesday, April 16 from 10 AM to 4 PM and 6-10 PM; and Wednesday, April 17 from 10 AM to 3 PM.

This years voting will include one referendum concerning the Rathskeller. It will determine if the Rat should remain as a social center under its current operation, including alcohol, as opposed to using an outside company and/or separating alcohol to another part of the campus.

All voters must be undergraduate students and present a valid MSC ID or some other type of identification before voting. For candidate information, students can check the information bulletin board outside the voting machines. For in-depth profiles of the candidates for the executive board, see pages 5-7 of this issue.

MSC Faculty Committee on Teaching sponsors teachers conference

All MSC students are invited to attend the second annual Conference on Teaching scheduled for Wed. April 17. The conference is sponsored by the Faculty Committee on Teaching, and will feature three faculty members from nearby universities who have won awards for their excellence as teachers.

Each will teach a regular MSC class at 1 p.m. that day, Howard A. Baker, Jr. of the English department of the University of Pennsylvania has chosen the title "The Absence of Innocence: Blues Life in America" for his class in Mallory Hall, Room 161. Also in Mallory, Room 151, James P. Shenton of the history department of Columbia University will lead a class on "The Irish Potato Famine and Irish Immigration to the U.S.," Helen R. Strausser of Rutgers University will teach "Diabetes and Auto Immunity" in Finley Hall, Room 204.

Discussions about the classes will follow at 2 p.m., the latter two without changing rooms. Dr. Baker's discussion will be in Partridge Hall, Room 206. For more information, contact Dr. Pat Kenschaft, of the math department at 893-7246.

Vandals cause extensive damage to Freeman Hall

By Wendy Deja

On Thurs., March 28, between midnight and 7 a.m. Several people maliciously vandalized Freeman Hall. The culprits rampaged the building causing extensive damage to the dormitory. According to campus police, damage included a sink which was pulled from the lavatory on the 4th floor, causing extensive water damage on the lower floors and ceiling. A fire hose was also stuck in the elevator door, causing the elevator and fire hose to break. Furniture was taken from lounge areas and the storage room and piled up, while other pieces of furniture were thrown out of windows.

Human feces was found smeared on windows and vomit was evident in the area, leading campus police to believe that the suspects were intoxicated. Two fire hoses were also destroyed and a speaker was ripped from the wall.

Campus police are currently formulating an estimate of the damage and are questioning suspects.

On March 25, a student returned to his auto in lot 21 to find his car windshield smashed. No suspect has been apprehended. In a similar incident, a student returned to his vehicle in lot 21 on March 28 to find the wheels stolen from his car. The stolen property has not been recovered.

Four student autos were also found vandalized on Friday March 29 in lots 20, 23, and 25.

On Thursday March 28, someone entered an auto in lot 30 and stole a calculator from the vehicle. In a similar incident, an auto was entered and cassettes stolen on March 30 in lot 24.

On March 28, a student's auto was stolen from lot 30 and has not been recovered.

A theft was reported on Friday April 5 in lot 14 when a student returned to his auto and found that someone had stolen an Easter basket from his car.

APO appropriates thousands to CINA and the Karate Club

By Susan Ryall

The SGA appropriated $16,775 for the Council on International Affairs (CINA) operations budget at last night's meeting.

The name of CINA's movie line was changed to the multimedia line to include media forms other than movies. The appropriated money will be used for CINA's lectures, trip planning, seminars, and professional services as well as office needs.

The SGA also appropriated $3,523 to the Koei Kan Karate Club for it's trip planning, seminars, and professional services as well as office needs.

The SGA rechartered the Latin American Student Organization (LASO) as a Class One organization. LASO is dedicated to helping students become more closely associated with the Spanish culture. One of the major events which LASO sponsors is Latin week, which will take place from Sun., April 14, to Sat., April 20.

In other news, Zeta Phi Beta's class four charter was vetoed by SGA president Dave Handal. Handal explained that the organization did not have the fifteen members required to be an SGA chartered organization.

A new organization called the Young Entrepreneurs Society (YES) was granted a class two charter.

Two other organizations were rechartered at last night's meeting. Phi Beta Lambda was rechartered as a class four. It is a business organization, which aids students in leadership skills. Le Cercle Francais, whose goal is to expose French culture to students, was rechartered as a class two organization.

Handal seeks second term

By Maureen Freeburg

"As president you gain a very valuable experience and when you make mistakes you learn from them," said SGA president Dave Handal, who plans to use this knowledge if re-elected.

The office of the president is definitely an education process," said Handal. "The first year is basically spent learning about the job and if I were a second year it would be more filled with more production because I already have the knowledge I need."

Handal is a junior, majoring in business administration with a concentration in marketing. He has been involved with the legislature for three years.

Normyle is prez opposition?

By Maureen Freeburg

"I don’t think I should be elected," said Bill Normyle, an SGA presidential candidate. "Then again, I don’t think any presidential candidate should run unopposed."

Normyle is a junior majoring in broadcasting. In addition to this, he has been involved with the SGA for three years. Normyle is also the general manager at WMSC-FM radio, a member of the National Academy of the Television Arts and Sciences (NATAS), and the International Radio and Television Society (IRTS).

"One of the main reasons I’m running is because of the $25 credit in office supplies you receive from the SGA, just for running. We could sure use some supplies at the radio station," Normyle said.

Normyle promises several things. "I hope to offer the same empty promises everyone else makes, make more people aware of the SGA, and have more of the same services we had last year," he said. Normyle also wishes to enlarge the SGA office.

Normyle doesn’t agree with people who say MSC students are ignorant of the services of the SGA. "The SGA services have become like an old socket wrench that you leave in the basement. When you need it you go down to the basement and get it, if not it stays there."

Roachford says knowledge is his key asset

By Mary Ellen Maclsaac

"An effective vice-president should not only be able to chair the SGA meetings, but have his own ideas and the ability to present them to the entire legislature," said Keith Roachford, an SGA vice-presidential candidate.

This sophomore political science major said his involvement with the SGA has given him an inside view of the organization’s operations, thus enabling him to be an effective vice-president. In addition, he has seen how two past vice-presidents worked, take from this experience, and improve on it.

"With my knowledge, I can interpret bills to the legislators so they can vote on them effectively," he said.

Roachford is serving his second year as a legislator, and is a member of such committees as the appropriations, the constitutional review, and the welfare and internal affairs. He was chairman of the government administration committee, but had resigned when he declared his candidacy.

If elected, Roachford intends to develop ideas he has on improving the SGA. "Instead of just one, I want to set up more workshops that teach the legislators the responsibilities and duties of their position," he said.

He plans to improve communication between the Class One organizations and the executive board by setting up more meetings with the two. "I will encourage all the organizations to work together because they are vital to campus life."

Brancato’s main concern is communication

By Maureen Freeburg

"Being able to communicate well is very important as vice-president. I feel that I have this ability," said Mark Brancato, an SGA vice-presidential candidate.

This is Brancato’s first year on the SGA legislature. He feels he has gained quite a lot of experience during this time. Brancato has served as chairman of the appropriations committee as well as the government and administration committee. In addition, he has served on the constitutional review committee.

When asked why he chose to run for SGA vice-president Brancato said, "I’d like to be able to give back a little of what I’ve been taking in during my past three years at MSC."

"I’m a student and I know I’ll be able to relate to the students successfully."

Brancato is a junior majoring in business administration, with a minor in political science.

Brancato feels the SGA has come a long way since he first came to MSC. "We’re not a group of stuffy people like some people believe, we really are a hard-working group," he said.

If elected vice-president Brancato intends to run SGA meetings efficiently and create an atmosphere where all legislators will have a chance to speak without feeling inhibited.

"I'd like to break the stereotypical view of a secretary and make this job a more responsible position by lessening the burden of the other executives," said Pam Gorski, an SGA secretarial candidate.

"Being able to work well with the executive board is very important. I know I am capable of doing this job," she said.

Gorski is a junior majoring in industrial studies. She is confident the knowledge she has gained as a student and legislator will work together to enable her to do a good job as secretary.

Pam Gorski

By Maureen Freeburg

"I feel that I am a qualified candidate for the position of secretary," said Wendy P. Shultz, a junior majoring in industrial studies.

Shultz is currently SGA President Pro-Tem. Prior to this position, Shultz served as an SGA legislator for two years. In addition to this, she is currently one of the coordinators of the SGA Spring Weekend '85 coming in the end of April.

Shultz's past credentials involve a wide variety of positions. As coordinator of the new student orientation program, Shultz was able to work with the college administration and staff to develop and run a two day program for freshman and transfer student.

As an SGA legislator, Shultz was a member of the public relations committee, welfare and internal affairs committee and also a member of the government and administration committee. Shultz served as secretary of the United Student Government Association (USGA).

"There's always room for improvement in any position. If elected secretary, I feel its important I express my views to the cabinet members as well as to the legislature," Gorski said. "I plan to take on the job and follow it through until it's finished."

CLASS I ORGANIZATION OF THE SGA
As we see it

To vote or not to vote. It is an age old question. Whether it is nobler in the mind to sit back and let things happen, or to take arms against M.S.C.'s sea of apathy and, by voting, bring it to an end.

As SGA fees paying students, you have the right and obligation to yourself to have your voice heard and vote in this week's elections.

We can give a million reasons why you should vote, but you probably wouldn't listen. What it comes down to is wanting to vote, having an interest in who spends your money and cares about your school. You don't owe it to your fellow students, you owe it to yourself.

To help you make your decision when you go to the polls, The Montclarion editors have looked over the candidates and come up with the following selections:

For the office of president, it is figuratively and literally, no contest. Dave Handal has proven he can be an effective leader during his first term and we feel he will do an even better job when re-elected.

Even though there isn't a presidential race, there is a close contest for the second spot. Both the candidates for vice-president have experience, but we feel Keith Roachford is the right man for the job. His ideas on holding more workshops for the legislators and expanding programming for weekend students are encouraging.

For the office of secretary, our decision was a little tougher. After debate, we did not feel strong enough toward either candidate to give one our endorsement.

However, Dennis Mudrick is our choice to serve as the student liaison to the Board of Trustees. He has the desire and attributes to change what has been a "courtesy" position to an effective one. We feel he has the qualifications and temperament to best represent the students.

Even though Frank Little is the only choice for treasurer, his effectiveness during his first term, and his continued enthusiasm, proves he is the clear choice.

In the end though, the important thing is not who you vote for, but that you vote. Exercise your right.

DO IT — please

Upcoming Israeli celebrations

By Rhonda Erlich

One of the most exciting times of my life was when I went abroad to Tel Aviv University this past spring semester. I lived among Israelis, spoke their language, hiked their land and made close intimate friendships.

In Israel for seven months, I was able to celebrate many of the holidays that are so important to this Jewish state. Two of the most significant celebrations are Yom Day of Remembrance, and Yom Ha'atzmaut, or Independence Day.

Yom Hazikaron is a day which honors the remembrance of all those who suffered military deaths in Israel. It's held on April 24th, the day before Israel's Independence Day. Atleast every Israeli knows one family member or friend who has died in battle defending his or her country.

The night before and the morning of Yom Hazikaron, a siren sounds all over the state for two minutes. With the siren sound, all movement stops. Cars and buses stop traveling on streets and highways. People stand on buses and get out of their cars in silence. People stop dead in their paths, kids stop playing, phones stop ringing and conversations come to a halt. The feeling during these two minutes is overwhelming. All that can be heard is the sound of sirens ringing; one cannot help but think about their lost loved ones.

During the day families visit cemeteries and grave sites and memorial services and special military services are broadcast on television. All places of entertainment are closed by law. By sundown, this sad day is followed by pre-celebrations of Israel's Independence Day. Israel became the first Jewish state on May 14, 1948. This year will celebrate Israel's 37th birthday on April 25th. The celebration consists of bands on the streets, parades, concerts, dancing, and partying. All over Israel there is festive celebrating and the streets are packed with people.

During the day, families get together and have barbecues, picnics, go hiking, visit nature reserves and spend thier time with families. There are television specials, concerts, old movies and guest singers.

The celebrating continues into the night, and the feeling of happiness is overwhelming. The sadness of Yom Hazikaron changes into celebration on Yom Ha'atzmaut.

I felt honored to be able to share in a celebration that is so meaningful to the state of Israel. Although I am not Israeli, sharing seven months of my life in this wonderful country helped me to feel as if I were.

This experience will never be forgotten.

America, on the other hand also takes part in celebrating Israel's birthday. This month the Jewish Student Union (JSU) will be hosting a week of festivities.

On Sunday, April 21, New York City will be holding a "Salute to Israel Parade" along Central Park. All Jewish college students from the northern New Jersey area will be marching together in the parade. If any students are interested in marching, please contact the Jewish Student Services at Rutgers Newark at 642-1922.

On Tuesday, April 23, everyone is invited to see the movie "Cast a Giant Shadow". It is the story of the birth of the state of Israel, and stars Kirk Douglas, Angie Dickinson, Yul Brynner and John Wayne. This renowned movie will be shown at 7:00 PM in the Student Center Room 411-412. Admission is $1.00.

Wednesday, April 24 the JSU will feature Mr. Dov Tavori, Mayor of Petah-Tikva, Israel, who will speak about life in Israel at 6:00 PM in room 419, Student Center. He will be visiting various campuses in the area during this week as a guest scholar-in-residence.

The week's festivities will culminate with a taste of native Israeli food when all are invited to join in for a bite to eat at the "Pelefeli Sale" in the Student Center Mall from 11:00-2:00 PM on Thursday, April 25th.

Come celebrate Israel's 37th birthday in America with these exciting events, and maybe you will choose to be a part of Israel's 38th birthday next year in Israel.

Tampering with history to avoid offending anyone

BOSTON: There are times when history makes such an awkward guest. It hovers around some current event like a garrulous elder, interrupting the people who are trying to maintain decorum. It tugs on the sleeves of the guests, ruffles the diplomatic calm, whispers gossip from the old days. See those two friends? asks history. Once they were mortal enemies. See those enemies? Once they were allies. See that righteous country in the corner? I knew it when.

History simply refuses to obey the rules of international etiquette. If it has one great social flaw, one unforgivably rude habit it’s this: History remembers.

This is a perfect spring for history to make its mischief. We are about to celebrate the 40th anniversary of V-E Day, the victory over Nazi Germany. But we are trying to do it without offending any Germans.

Today, our country is on the best of terms with its old foe. It’s the Soviet empire. The question for the diplomatic world is how to commemorate a big win without insulting the losers.

The U.S. government has come up with a politcally polite solution to this social dilemma that would satisfy Emily Post. The President will make a pilgrimage to West Germany in May, but he has decided to skip the guilt-trip in the concentration camps.

Reagan explained his motives this way: “Instead of reawakening the memories... may be we should observe this day as the day when 40 years ago peace began and friendship...”

Well, Reagan’s math is off, but not far enough. The German people have very few alive that remember even the war and certainly none of them who were adults and participating in any way. They have a feeling and a guilt feeling that’s been imposed upon them.” He wants to keep history under control—to give it limited access to the party.

Today, the young Germans who whose feelings were none of them who were adults and participating in any way. They have a feeling and a guilt feeling that’s been imposed upon them.” He wants to keep history under control—to give it limited access to the party.

Well, Reagan’s math is off, but not as far as his moral compass. There are a lot of German veterans, like American veterans; who are alive, well and indeed younger than the president. The current Chancellor, Helmut Kohl, was as, he reminds people regularly, only 15 at the end of World War II. But Holocaust writer Elie Wiesel was 16 when he was death camp was liberated.

There is a statute of limitations on national guilt. Young Germans have no more responsibility for Nazism than post-Civil War Americans had for slavery. But they do have the responsibility to remember. And so does the world.

What radically separated World War II from the other wars, what make the Allies liberators rather than mere victors, what formed American belief in this “good war” was the Nazi technology of evil. The camps. If a presidential visit to these murderous shrines would embarrass the ally, ignoring them shames our own sense of values. Even the memory of these victims is sacrificial to politics.

The Germans themselves have wrestled with the difficult task: How do you tell a postwar generation about the millions of people murdered by their elders? It wasn’t until 1962 that German schools began to teach the Holocaust. Not many parents and grandparents tell their grandchildren stories about what they did in the war. There is a strong motivation to forget. Even this spring, it is said that the West German media concentrate more on the bombing of German cities, and the advance of Soviet troops from the Eastern Front than on the Nazi regime.

But if our friendship with West Germany requires that we tiptoe around the past, then we have given up too much. If allegiance requires that we deliberately avoid mentioning the deepest shame of humanity, it’s a sham.

History is a troublesome guest because it reeks of truth. Let the Germans join this celebration, especially the young Germans whose feelings our government is worrying about. They were also liberated from the evils of Nazism on V-E Day. But we can’t let history be barred from its place by etiquette’s pretty amoralit.

Malady plaques MSC

By Shark Tayles
MSC-FM radio station played somber music early today and lights were seen burning before dawn at College Hall as speculation spread that MSC President Konstantin Falters had died.

Similar activities in the past preceded an official announcement of a death among the MSC leadership.

Rumors about the MSC President Falters began after the last MSC Board of Trustees meeting. According to observers, the President looked ill all through the meeting. After being carried to his chair, witnesses say he didn't move throughout the meeting and failed to answer questions. Photos of the Board meeting show the President in a coma-like state. After slipping lower in his chair, the President was propped up by fellow Board members.

Dull Abnormyle, a junior humor major, said, "I asked President Falters a question and not only didn't he answer it, but he slumped down in his chair."

"That's nothing," said Crabby Wartz, a senior leisure suit major, "The President failed to open his eyes throughout the meeting. He is not ill, he is not tired—he is now our ex-president."

According to an official MSC spokesman, "There's nothing wrong with President Falters. He merely has the flu. That is why no one has seen him since the meeting, we are not sure if he will be well by commencement."

Then what was the secret conclave at College Hall before dawn? Experts in the Political Science Department believe the Board of Trustees were making arrangements for the official announcement and the Funeral Parade. It has been suggested that the Board is already busy electing a successor.

President Falters (left) seems to be very relaxed. But how "relaxed" is he?

Crazed SAG worker commits mass murder

By Gory Rec
A crazed CWS office worker for the Students Against Government went berserk after last night's SAG meeting and committed a mass murder of the SAG executive board and entire legislative body.

Witnesses claim that the unidentified CWS worker appeared nervous after consuming a quart of coffee and reportedly made numerous trips to the bathroom.

An eye-witness claims that the CWS worker became agitated from the phones in the office which rang simultaneously, the copier which broke down after working for one hour, and a ditto machine which squirted out black ink in the eye of the alleged murderer.

Apparently, the CWS worker asked several legislators, who are commonly mistaken for pieces of furniture in the SAG office, to leave. They refused claiming that they "have no home but the SAG."

The accused murderer proceeded to open fire, killing 62 people. Police arrived on the scene within minutes and handcuffed the CWS worker who was reported to have been repeating: "Hello, Students Against Government. May I Help You?"
The Montquirer's "other" weekend

PARTY

By Flamed Currant

Welcome to the first annual Montquirer commune. In our second year of publication, our recently arrested Managing Editor came up with the idea to organize an educational/recreational/ordiastic weekend.

Friday night the Montquirer convoy disseminated from the Student Center Annex with backpacks, suitcases and liquor cabinets stuffed with all sorts of foul weather gear and fair weather friends. Off to the camp ground—someplace west of here—with trees.

As it turned out, we were granted one of the mildest February weekends in history; however, even a mild February weekend is pretty cold for August, when the weekend was held. But if experience has taught us anything, it's that details aren't important: people will believe anything they read in this paper.

So, on to the purpose of this expedition, which we are sure was really noble and exciting and wonderful. But none of us can really remember such a blessed thing clearly.

Of what little is filtering through the fog, some of us do remember that a lot of other people were there whom none of us had ever seen before. Rumor has it that they were past editors of the paper (collectively known as the Ghosts of the Montquer's past) who talked to us about their new careers, as editors, novelists, taxi drivers, alcoholics and drug abusers, and how their heroic experiences at the Montquirer have helped them in their heroic endeavors. We believe we were all listening attentively. Some may have even taken notes.

Immediately thereafter, we began the main thrust of our commune—Serious Party Time. The actual details of what transpired next cannot be recounted here because they are too vile, too disgusting and otherwise too nasty. But some of us do remember something about a burial at sea.

We had originally planned to make the weekend a yearly tradition, but considering the great success (we think) it was, we are going to make it a weekly routine. (Oh, by the way, the Montquirer's new members meetings will be held Saturdays at midnight in the Rathskellar.)

The enthusiastic reaction to the weekend was underwhelming.
Vice pres bodily removes
Handles from SAG meeting

By Gory Rec

SAG vice-president Denny Squid did not offend anyone at last night's meeting, setting a new precedent for the semester. When questioned about the sudden change in his demeanor, Squid just spat out an obscenity and growled.

Nikki Bigel, SAG clerk, was expelled from the legislature following an investigation which revealed that she was selling the SAG tapes to a third-party. They only used them for entertainment purposes." Bagel said in her defense.

In other news, the SAG appropriated $37,000 to the College Life Unsatisfactory Board (CLUB). In addition to the appropriation, CLUB decided to change the names of two of their budget lines. The comedy line became "SAG BLUES," and the party line became the fish line.

Gary (Jim I) Tactless, SAG legislator and member of CLUB, was applauded for asking a relevant question during the budget debates.

Warren Zevon, attorney general, lasted an entire meeting without interrupting a point of order or a point of information. "I don't really know what they mean anyway," said the confused Zevon.

Shortly after the meeting, vice-president Squid became increasingly offensive to the executive board and legislative body. Squid then picked up SAG president, "save Handles and threw him out of the room. Luckily, Handles was able to put on a protective helmet before being tossed out of by Squid.

When asked why he did this, Squid simply growled, and walked into the Rat.

Goetz reveals survival tips to MSC community

By Spare Changer

The so-called "subway vigilante" Bernhard Goetz lectured last Thursday in the Student Center Ballroom. Mr. Goetz is the first speaker in the Public Safety Awareness series sponsored by MSC.

Goetz, sporting his familiar fur-collared leather jacket and his bespeckled blank stare, thrilled the audience with his tales of the NYC subway.

"After I tell you my basic survival tips," blared Goetz, "you'll never feel like a trapped rat again." Although Goetz promised an in-depth lecture, his 60-minute speech consisted mainly of only one idea. "You have to carry a gun, it's the best way to get people to leave you alone," said Goetz. "Let's face it folks, would this face scare you?"

Goetz is able to overcome much of his aloofness in public by injecting humor into the otherwise serious speech. Typical is a line he used as he took the podium. "I hope you people got in here for free," joked Goetz, "I heard the college was thinking of charging $5."

Five unattended autos lifted outside bookstore

By Windy Deja Vu

Sgt. Im Nottelling of the campus cops reported his patrol car stolen on Thurs., March 31 at 11:15 p.m. According to a report filed by Nottelling, he was on patrol in the Quarry lots when he noticed the only car parked in the lot was not in between the designated lines. Nottelling parked his vehicle to write a parking ticket. As he was writing out the summons, a young male, said to be age 14, approached the vehicle to inform Nottelling that his cop's car had a flat tire. Nottelling got out of his car to investigate. The youth then jumped into the cop's car and drove away leaving Nottelling stranded.

The car has not been recovered, although it is said that Nottelling did get the license plate number. Nottelling has not been available for comment, but an insider has said that the sergeant is upset that he must now make his patrol on foot. According to the campus cops chief Jean Wich, Nottelling may be placed on coffee patrol for the rest of the semester.

Five unattended autos were stolen while left unattended outside the bookstore on March 28. Each owner had left his vehicle for 10 minutes, only to return to find them missing. One victim said, "I was told by employees to leave my car and belongings outside the store. Now look what's happened!" None of the vehicles have been recovered, and campus cops haven't begun a full investigation into the thefts.

On April 1, a group calling themselves Liberator for Over-Priced Books (LOPS) took over the bookstore and held all employees captive for six hours. The leader of LOPS, identified by the campus cops as April Fools, also took responsibility for the five cars stolen outside the bookstore.

After negotiations between Lt.土豆托科伊, the campus cops and April Fools failed, a special task force was called. The Special Bookstore Assault Team (SBAT) entered the bookstore with BB guns and overthrew Fools and her LOPS. No injuries were reported, but several hundred books were marked down to three cents a piece.
Although Allison Scent has not yet been afflicted with the physical manifestations of MPS, she is seen here being supported by her friend, S. Nusitis, as they enter The Rat. Other friends report that Ms. Scent has suddenly begun telling elephant in pajama jokes to everyone she meets.

By Gilligan's Island

Perhaps you've seen them lately. But, it's more likely that you haven't. Most sufferers of the Mysterious Proboscis Syndrome (MPS), now sweeping the MSC campus, are keeping low profiles.

MPS is a highly contagious physically and psychologically debilitating disease which appears to have originated on the MSC campus within the last two weeks. Attacking at the incredible rate of one in every four persons per minute, MPS has already afflicted several hundred students and faculty.

Physical symptoms of this strange disorder include excessive growth of black facial hair above the eyes and under the nose, nasal swelling, in which the victim's nose grows two to three times its normal size and develops a prominent hook; and weakening vision which can only be corrected by black plastic hornrimmed glasses.

In addition, some disturbing psychological symptoms appear a few days before the onset of the physical symptoms. These include an excessive fondness for Havana cigars and an extreme loudness of voice which vents itself in a constant obsession for telling "elephant in pajama" jokes, and shouting "horsefeathers" whenever possible.

After the onset of the physical symptoms, victims are prone to withdraw, preferring to sit in dark closets, rather than classrooms. Those who do appear on campus can be seen wrapped in scarves, overcoats, and donning wide-brimmed hats even in mild weather.

At 9:41 a.m. Tuesday morning, Dean Martian, Dean of Students, became panicked by the epidemic and placed an emergency call to the Hoboken Center for Proboscis Control (CPC). The CPC immediately sent its crack scientist on proboscis disorders, Dr. Nasal Interstices, N.O.S.E., who set up a research facility in the student Health Center.

Early this morning, Dr. Interstices called a press conference in the Student Center to announce the results of his investigation. When asked what the origin of the malady might be, the doctor replied, "I don't know." When asked if he could venture a guess, Interstices replied, "I haven't the slightest idea." Interstices then abruptly called off the press conference stating that he suddenly had "an overwhelming desire for a Havana cigar."

Dr. Jean Strongarm, Vice president of Student Affairs, became visibly upset by Interstices' lack of results, and chased him across the Student Center mall shouting, "Horsefeathers!" Jean Wich, chief of campus cops, later escorted the furious Strongarm back to her office where an overnight deliveryman was waiting with a box of Havana cigars.

According to Dean Martian, Dr. Interstices was in Cuba. Interstices had been persuaded by a professor to take a vacation, and had boarded a plane for the coast to stay at the famous Havana Yacht Club. At the airport, Interstices had been approached by a gang of Cuban gangsters, who had sold Interstices a box of Havana cigars and had added a note to the student: "If you ever want to beat proboscis disorder, you're going to have to know how to do it."

Classroom attendance is dropping at an alarming rate of time before those still attending succumb. Snot Nose, Gory Rec and John Cannoli, who are in the advanced stages of Mysterious Proboscis Syndrome, have traded in all their textbooks for Havana cigars and new elephant in pajama joke books.

Zoom Sniffles, above, and Pigpen Congealed, right, are in the advanced stages of Mysterious Proboscis Syndrome. Their shelves are empty because they traded in all their textbooks for Havana cigars and new elephant in pajama joke books.

periences was last seen boarding a jet for Cuba. "The CPC regrets the actions of interstices, and is sending a westcoast specialist, Dr. Schnoz O'Facory, to continue the research within he week," Martian said.

This afternoon, several incensed pro-essors appeared at the college presdent's office demanding that something be done. Dr. Nostrils Flaring, lead of the biochemical department, ated that he believed MPS was causd by a Russian nasal warfare agent and was part of a Marxist plot to conquer American college campuses.

"Doesn't Fal ters know a Marxist lot when he sees one?" Flaring said, adding, "Equality through uniform robes!" This was taken up as a hant by the other professors who would not leave until Fal ters' secetary informed them that the presdent was not in, had not been in for quite some time, and no one knew where he was. (See story of Fal ters'

Although most MPS sufferers have been keeping low profiles, Dull Ab-normyle, Junior humor major, has created quite a stir on campus by remaining highly visible. Today, hundreds of students signed a petition to bar the MPS sufferer from the Rat, claiming that he is an enormous nuisance and may pose a health threat to unafflicted students.

"He comes in there puffing on that huge black cigar, tells elephant in pajamas jokes, yells 'horsefeathers' at the bartenders and molest all the women," one male petitioner said. The petitioner stated that he, like most of the other petitioners, are worried about the molesting more than anything, since it is rumored that MPS might be transmitted sexually.

"Horsefeathers!" Abnormyle said when asked about the charges. "Whoever heard of nasal sex? The guys who want me out are all just jealous of my prominent proboscis." He added, "The women just love it... they do... seriously..."

"Dull Abnormyle should be a shining example for all MPS sufferers," said a Drop-Out-Center peer counselor. "He has learned how to deal with his illness, and besides, I love elephant-in-pajama jokes."

According to the peer counselor,
The Drop-Out Center, that little house located between the Student Center and Richardson Hall, is currently holding workshops on learning to live with MPS. The next workshop, "1001 elephant-in-pajama jokes" will be held tomorrow at noon in the Drop-Out-Center hallroom closet.

"The workshops are free and entirely secret, covert, and clandestine," said the peer counselor while pulling a Havana cigar from his shirt pocket.
"Got a light?"
The best... no, worst man for the job.

The emergence of Spring brings along with the robins, the budding trees and baseball, an age-old tradition here at MSC. Yes, it's time again for The Montquirer to endorse a presidential candidate for SAG.

As tradition goes, only a handful of students are silly enough to waste their time working with these campaigns in the hopes of procuring a SAG presidential cabinet position. So, as in the past, at The Montquirer must tell the reader exactly how to vote. We feel we know the candidates and the trumped-up issues and feel responsible to inform the knuckleheads of the campus community who we think is the worst, that is, best, person for the job.

We still feel Howard Lion is the best man for the job, but this year we're endorsing "Mr. Excitement" himself, Dull Abnormile. Dull is unequivocally the worst man for the job, but we like him anyway. After all, the man admits he has no qualifications for the job. We feel it's about time that an SAG cabinet assistant that they aren't qualified for their position, even if it is the missionary.

We like a man with the style and low class of Abnormile. Come election time, we hope Dull deserves to be elected! Finally, a candidate who is honest—his honesty is pretty honest—about why he seeks the office of president. "I want a bigger office and a brand new car, also class rings are nice and trips aren't bad." It's refreshing to hear the real reasons why a person runs for office; all this altruistic stuff is bosh. Dull is doing this not to add to his resume. He's running because "of the $25 credit in office supplies."

We feel that Dull Abnormile will be an innovative and resourceful kind of guy, besides being arrogant. At Christmas he can even play the lead in the SAG Christmas pageant, what better belly to play Old Nick?

Dull has a broad background and big foreground that he'll need to sit on and loaf around as SAG president. His campaign promises are pretty cool too, "I hope to offer the same empty promises everyone else makes and have more of the same services we had last year."

Thoughts of the unconscious

By Grim Tension

By now, you've heard of the infamous "Montquirer Weekend" held last month. One story yet to be told is about the group of Boy Scouts who shared a camp with us one afternoon, a couple of scouts came into the lodge we were in and started playing ping pong. They didn't fool me. They weren't playing ping pong, they were spying on us, little punks.

Personally, I find the rise of the Boy Scouts in this country scary. Nothing but a bunch of little Brown Shirts in disguise. I mean, come on, look at their uniforms. A place for every patch and a patch for every place. A Boy Scout in full regalia has more medals and badges on him than Herman Goering ever did.

They have medals and pins for everything: how many years in the "service," perfect attendance, hikes, awards. Patches that identify rank, positions in the troop, even separate patches to identify where they are from. There are also "slogan" patches, which receive unit citations and have their own special insignia on their neckerchiefs.

Boy Scout troops are broken down into tightly regimented para-military patrols. Each man knows his job and knows it well. And what about summer camps? Summer camps and overnight camps are cleverly disguised training camps for vigilante armies, ready to survive and sustain life. When the ordeal is over, each scout is given a secret name that he shall be known by for the rest of his life. The ordeal is comprised of the barest minimum needed to make it through the entire weekend and are subjected to a diet that will keep them alive. The diet is comprised of the barest minimum needed to sustain life. When the ordeal is over, each scout is given a secret name that he shall be known by for the rest of his life. (Of course, each lodge has its own unique patch.)

One more example of what is going on in the world. The fascist Boy Scout scheme is waiting for the right moment to strike. We are the last bastion of freedom, liberty and the democratic American way. Are we going to let a bunch of punks ruin this? Stamp out the Boy Scouts, before it's too late!

By the way, the wheels are in motion, the plans have been laid, next time a Boy Scout offers to help you across the street, think twice. He may be trying to march you off to a concentration camp for re-programming. Grim Tension is the associate editor of The Montquirer and a former Eagle Scout. Excerpts from his latest book, "Democracy Threatened: The Untold Story of the Boy Scouts," will appear in next week's Montquirer.

I was recently assigned to review Cher's recent attempt at acting: Mask. An unfortunate mishap prevented me from actually attending the movie. However, I have heard that it is a very good show.

It is about a young man whose face is grossly deformed. Take my word for it, he is really ugly. His picture was recently the cover of a magazine, if you care to see for yourself.

That's right, this is another true story. Since I was not able to see the movie, I would have to guesstimate it is probably like The Elephant Man. Unfortunately, I didn't see The Elephant Man either, this kid is so ugly, people think he is wearing a mask; hence, the title Mask. Thank God he doesn't go around, like the elephant man, wearing a burlap bag on his head, because Burlap Bag would make a stupid title for a movie.

Cher makes her debut as big-time leading lady in this film. Reports say that she gives a tremendous performance. But, I just can't take her too seriously as an actress. I still picture Cher and her goofy husband Sonny on their television show making stupid jokes. Remember how crooked her teeth were every time she laughed at her own jokes? Well, she has obviously changed, especially after dumping that space-shooter, Gregg Allman. If her performances are anything like her recent fitness commercials, then she should be dynamite. But don't take my word for it. How many movie reviews have you read that mean anything, anyway? If you want to see the movie, then go out and see it. Reviewers don't knock your tastes in entertainment so why should you believe their opinion of your own? Go out and see this movie for yourself, if you want to know what it is about. By the way, when you get home, call me and tell me how it was. I might want to see it too.
Helium scandal rocks Men’s basketball team

By Tama branna

An unidentified source has linked the MSC Athletic Department with the recent scandals which have rocked collegiate basketball over the last several weeks. Unlike the Tulane investigation however, the MSC scandal revolves around helium.

In an attempt to open up the outside game, it appears MSC Head Coach Jolly Gallstone instructed his equipment managers to fill the basketball with helium.

"The Indians knew how to handle the "air" ball, while their opponents just couldn't figure out why they were tossing up bricks," said the unidentified source. "It just goes to show you what lengths the Indians will go to in order to win a few games."

While Gallstone would appear to be the biggest name involved in the helium scandal, the informant also dropped several other names who in the MSC Athletic Department.

"Don't think Jell DiRightguard" (MSC Athletic Director) didn't know what was going on," said the source. "The way I heard it, he got the helium for the team in the first place."

Though the source has yet to name any players, he has inferred that several of the MSC starting five knew what was going on.

"You can't tell me none of the players knew about the air ball," said the source. "I mean come on, some of the Indian players were taking turnaround jumpers from half court."

All attempts to reach Gallstone and DiRightguard to learn of their involvement in the scandal were fruitless.

"One individual who has been involved with the basketball program throughout the 1984-85 season is Sports Information Director Grits Goldfinger. And Goldfinger is ready to talk."

"I know absolutely nothing about it," said Goldfinger. "And I don't want to say a word to your rag of a newspaper until I talk to my lawyer."

Wedding bell will toll for Canada and Branna

By Robin Heach

The nation's top sports editor Tama Branna and sports reporter Anna Roseanna Branna, a glamorous, red-headed Brenda Starr type, announced their engagement at a press conference yesterday. Miss Canada would not reveal the date she is to become Anna Roseanna Branna.

"You can't tell me none of the players knew about the air ball," said the source. "I mean come on, some of the Indian players were taking turnaround jumpers from half court."

All attempts to reach Gallstone and DiRightguard to learn of their involvement in the scandal were fruitless.

"One individual who has been involved with the basketball program throughout the 1984-85 season is Sports Information Director Grits Goldfinger. And Goldfinger is ready to talk."

"I know absolutely nothing about it," said Goldfinger. "And I don't want to say a word to your rag of a newspaper until I talk to my lawyer."

Miss Canada, in addition to being a sports reporter, has gained international acclaim as a motion picture-television actress. She is scheduled to start her next multi-million dollar musical extravaganza "Gentlemen Prefer Redheads" next month. Miss Canada, who has dated such notables as Football player Vince Ferragamo, David Lee Roth and Prince Albert of Monaco, feels that Mr. Branna has everything she could want in a future husband. "Tama has impeccable manners and is always a perfect gentleman. We have so much in common. We both love classical music, our favorites are Bach and Beethoven. We also love ballroom dancing especially waltzes," said Miss Canada.

Mr. Branna, who is a sports editor as a hobby, put out a cool 10.5 million dollars for the diamond engagement ring he presented to the future Anna Roseanna Branna.

Mr. Branna also gave the soon to be Mrs. Branna a pair of 24 carat gold heart shaped earrings both of which are engraved with the touchingly sporty phrase, "Anna and Branna: What a team!!"

Wienie-less sports events leave athletic supporters cold

Despite MSC's winning record in bocce, not to mention an admirable showing in the cup-and-cover competition, it appears all is not well in the MSC Athletic World. I'm writing of course, about the recent hotdog vendors strike which has plagued the Indians' sports program.

Some might say, "What's the big deal? Who needs wienies at their ball game anyway?"

To these "sports fans" I ask, "What's a screwdriver without the vodka? A doughnut without the hole? Abbott without Costello?"

Not only does the absence of hotdogs degrade the sporting events themselves, it also could have serious economic repercussions. Consider this: first the hotdog empire tumbles, followed closely by the bun industry, ketchup and mustard manufacturers, and finally, the sauerkraut conglomerates.

I tell you this cannot be allowed to happen!

Write your SGA Legislative, your president, why if necessary Oscar Meyer himself!

Remember only action, not apathy, can bring this hotdog strike to a happy ending.

Henry Lewis performs at Newark Symphony Hall

Famed conductor stars in lively return engagement

By Lisa C. Martucci

Henry Lewis made a triumphant return to New Jersey last month, closing his New Jersey Symphony Orchestra engagement with two performances at Newark Symphony Hall.

Under his eight-year tenure as Music Director (1968-1975), the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra profited immeasurably from maestro Lewis’ perspicacity and giftedness. Mr. Lewis has also been engaged by virtually every major American orchestra and most of the major European orchestras. Equally adept at operatic conducting, Henry Lewis made his Metropolitan Opera debut in 1972 with La Bohème.

The concert program (featuring two Romantic masterpieces) combined with Lewis’ charm and vitality to provide a fitting tribute to spring. Robert Schumann’s Symphony No. 1 in B-flat major, Op. 38 (the “Spring”), opened the concert.

Inspired by a poem by Alfred Böttger, Schumann’s majestic fanfare cries out, “O turn, O turn aside thy course... For the valley blooms with spring!” The newly-married composer noted that the work was conceived “in the flush of spring which carries a man away... and surprises him again each year.”

To no-one’s surprise, the audience was carried away as the symphony exploded throughout the colorful first movement and burst into the exultant coda. The sprightly conductor danced and swayed gleefully while he guided the orchestra through the long, emphatically punctuated composition. Even the Larghetto, a simple A-B-A song, moved briskly, and did not linger unnecessarily.

Following the intermission, the concert recommenced with three works by Richard Wagner, beginning with Siegfried’s Rhine Journey from Gotterdammerung. Though the majority of Wagner’s non-vocal music was written for musical dramas, he is extremely popular in the concert hall. His compositions are so evocative of the stories accompanying them that no stage, scenery or costumes are needed to appreciate his music.

This orchestral interlude prepares the audience for the tragic events that lurk in Siegfried’s future. The bold musical journey embodies Wagner’s utilization of the leitmotiv technique and “Rhine Journey” contains some of his most familiar themes or motifs for the Ring epic. Maestro Lewis sailed breezily through the different themes, steering the symphonic tapestry gracefully through its course.

The Good Friday Music” from Parsifal, Wagner’s last musical drama, followed. More pensive than any other inclusion in the program, this composition rejoices in the birth of wisdom through compassion as Parsifal views the miracle of spring. The composer hoped to capture the “frail but quiet of Good Friday” within this lyric spell. Under Henry Lewis’ direction, Wagner’s wistful introspection never waxed funereal. Instead, the prologue held the audience in its moving portrait of healing and consecration.

The overture to Rienzi brought the concert to a stunning finish. It is not difficult to understand why this opera brought instant fame to Wagner. In 1838, the young composer longed to write something on a grand and inspiring scale. “From the misery of modern life...I was borne away by the picture of a great historico-political event.”

A one-note trumpet call begins the piece and signals Rienzi to lead the Roman people in a revolt against the patricians. This precedes a stately prayer leading into the unfolding drama whose culmination in a fast, marchlike melody sweeps the overture into its grand, poetic climax. Again, Maestro Lewis and the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra executed the selection with intelligence, skill and depth.

In a public ceremony commemorating Henry Lewis’ return to New Jersey for the March concerts, Mayor Kenneth Gibson presented the Maestro with a key to the city of Newark.

Henry Lewis also possesses the key to the hearts of his New Jersey audience. We eagerly look forward to another return engagement of this talented and congenial New Jersey favorite.

John Cage intergrates many witty innovations into his modern music

By Stacey Dunlevy

John Cage is a modern composer to which people express outrage, adoration, or a reply of "Who's he?" If you are among those who "Who's he?" you are about to find out.

John Cage is a modern composer who looks to the outer reaches of music. He is a pioneer in the field of writing for "prepared piano," in which a piano's strings are kept from vibrating by inserting different items between them. He also rejects the traditional musical notions of melody and harmony, focusing on noise and randomness.

The first piece to be performed was First Construction in Metal. The composer played conventional instruments such as drums, cymbals, xylophone and a piano (prepared, of course), but Cage added his own "prepared" instruments: a section of sheets of metal, copper bowls, lengths of piping and a gong submerged in water. The sound created was not just the music, but Cage himself. The composer, who is over 70, spoke about his life, his techniques and, most importantly, his music.

The piece was made up of two sections, each with its own distinct personalities and different instrumentation. The second incorporated the use of sheet metal, copper bowls, and lengths of piping, as well as a fuller sound with the addition of the xylophone. This piece was far ahead of its time.

The second piece performed was 4'33", a completely silent piece. One of the "innovations" of the piece is that there is always music around, not just made by musical instruments, but by everyday sounds.

The music made in this performance was created by a chuckling audience. The pianist used a stopwatch to measure the sections of the piece. In between sections, he would stop the stopwatch, take out a handkerchief and wipe off imaginary perspiration, while an assistant would turn a blank sheet of music. Cage related that at the premiere of the piece, the first sounds were of silence, then grumbling, then finally screams of disgust. He was glad that this performance had a different reception.

The third piece was She Is Asleep, which was two pieces in one. The first part was a quartet for prepared piano, mezzo-soprano. The soprano only sang vowels in long durations, while the prepared piano was the main instrument. It sounded like they were being played on a xylophone.

Cage's prepared piano music brings up the question of noise in music. Throughout the concert, which the performers used only their fingers to strike the drums. The second piece, in which the composer uses prepared piano, was far ahead of its time.

The fourth piece was a brief but enjoyable encounter.

In their first NJSCA contest, the Indians swept out 11, 7-3, 10, 7-1, 9, 6-1, 5, 4-2. If allowing 25 runs on 26 hits in seven innings of pitching, allowing four runs in the fourth.

In gam two, the Indians collected four runs in the bottom of the first to look to help propel MSA to its third NJSCA conference victory. Noto's four-hit game saw him strike out three and walk five.

In game two, the Indians collected four runs in the bottom of the first to grab the early lead, but MSA starter Jackie Vitiello, the winning pitcher, gave up six hits and four runs.

The senior right hander gave up four runs in the top half of the fifth inning to tie the score. The Indians scored in every inning of the game except the first, hit seven doubles—one each by Tim Jones, John Cowan, Bob Yeager, and two by Ron Spadaro. MSC 11-3 -2. If allowing 25 runs on 26 hits in seven innings of pitching, allowing four runs in the fourth.

By Tom Stewart and Stu Gohd
Practice makes perfect. Practice costs money. These two simple facts had an over-riding effect on the outcome on this years team. The seasoned veterans, typified by Sue Greco and Stu Gohd, along with regular cast looked forward to this season with an unparalleled ambition.

Rookie sensations such as Dave Gerth, would provide the energy and consistent skiing to keep in the top ten and allow enough confidence to step into the starting gate one more time. The first time the team entered the starting gate was back in January at the Middlesex Invitational, where Frank Saya and Tom Stewart both placed in the top ten. Although the team placed poorly, this looked phenomenal thanks to Saya's gutsy skiing.

In our second place we went to Hidden Valley with the hope we could better last year's finish, but wound up in the 12th place. Our next league race found us in 6th place. The following two races the team placed 12th and 8th. Overall, placing in the N.J.S.C.A. was a disheartening 11th. The final finishers for the MSC skiers was Frank Saya in first and representing MSA in second was Dave Gerth followed by Stu Gohd whom we must mention is graduating. Each week he met the challenge of yet another slalom course. Back in '84, Stu donned his corduroy jacket to assist myself and Mark Colino in getting recognition by the school. Now Stu must sport his jacket and meet the challenge of the real world.

Bon Voyage Stuart.

In fourth place for the team was myself, Tom Stewart, having a year worse than Stackmark's followed by the team coming Jeff Bunce, Regina Garfella, Mark Colino, Sue Greco, Sue Stewart, Patty Scannell, Julie Claus, and Eric Beanecker.

That about did it for the season that never was. Call it another growth year that almost was. I'm most noted for his stalwart defense, hit for the cycle, collection his first triple and home run of the year at a very opportune time.

MSC 10, Trenton St. 1
MSC 7, Trenton St. 4

Gabe Noto picked up his first win of the season in the first game, going the distance for MSC (12-3-2). Tim Johnson and Mike Ashton belted two home runs each in the massacre at Trenton State, and John Cowan hit a solo shot to help propel MSC to its third NJSCA conference victory. Noto's four-hit pitching saw him strike out three and walk five.

In game two, the Indians collected four runs in the bottom of the first to grab the early lead, but MSA starter Jackie Vitiello, the winning pitcher, gave up six hits and four runs. Seventh ranked Squaws roll past their opponents

By Anna Schlavo

MSC rolled over William Paterson College (WPC) by a score of 9-2 in the first game of Tuesday’s double header. The winning pitcher was freshman Dina DeAquino who is now 4-1.

In the first inning Andrea Craparotta got on base after she was hit by a pitch. She was later singled in by Debbie Emery for the innings only run.

Both teams went scoreless in the second inning. The third inning found the Tribe stepping up their scoring momentum to a pace that left WPC far behind. Catcher Marge Theobald doubled in and gave up only two hits and one run.

MSC’s Jackie Vitiello pitched a no-hitter to improve her record to 3-2. The sophomore gave up just two walks and gave up only two hits and three runs. Debbie Emery came on in the seventh, and the team picked up a win.

MSC 4, Plymouth State 3

Lisa Megaro pitched 2 1/3 innings in which she gave up two hits and three runs. Debbie Emery shut out Plymouth the rest of the way to pick up the win.

MSC 16, Quenns 1

Lisa Megaro pitched the entire game and gave up only two hits and one run.

MSC 4, Plymouth State 3
