Wanted for robbery

If you've seen this man, call campus police

A female Clove Road resident, walking through lot 28 to her apartment at 5:30 a.m. on Sun., Sept. 29, was the victim of a robbery.

According to campus police, a black male approached the woman from the side. He then stepped in front of her and placed his hands on her shoulders. She screamed and pulled away from him, when he grabbed her purse. The woman then ran to her apartment as he followed. When she was within 100 ft. of her apartment, he stopped and threatened her if she reported the incident. He then fled the area.

The campus police are asking for your help in this matter. The suspect is of a light complexion, in his early 20's, medium build and height. His dark hair is cut short. He has no facial hair or glasses. He was last seen wearing a dark zipper-front jacket, blue jeans and light color sneakers.

If you have any information on the whereabouts of this man, please contact Debra Newcombe of the campus police at 893-5222 or 893-4325.

Symposium will focus on pursuit of excellence in higher education

A day-long examination of "The Pursuit of Excellence" will be conducted at MSC on Thurs., Oct. 24 in the President's Second Annual Fall Symposium.

Donald N. Levine, dean of the College, University of Chicago, will present the keynote address at 10 a.m. in Memorial Auditorium. The symposium will be followed by a discussion of six separate questions by special groups convening for that purpose and a campus-wide dialogue on their conclusions.

Based on the success of last year's Inaugural Colloquium at MSC conducted in conjunction with the Inauguration of President Donald E. Walters, the program will provide an opportunity for faculty members, students and others to participate in interdisciplin ary discussion groups on topics of particular importance to higher education.

In announcing the second symposium, Walters expressed the hope it "will provide an interdisciplinary forum in which the campus community can collectively address critical issues facing MSC and institutions like ours across the country...."

Work group topics have been selected, not only because of their importance to the MSC community, but also because these same questions have been discussed extensively in two recent national reports: the National Institute of Education's report on "Involvement in Learning: Realizing the Potential of American Higher Education" and "Integrity in the College Curriculum: A Report to the Academic Community" by the Association of American Colleges.

Brown emphasizes need for worldwide concern

By Tom Boud and Ade Idera

Dr. Noel J. Brown, director of the United Nations Environment Program, stressed the importance of worldwide concern for nuclear issues, the South African situation, and the threat of nuclear war in a lecture October 9.

According to Brown, the U.N., as a worldwide organization, attempts to deal with major global issues. A major challenge to the U.N. is the question of nuclear war. Brown stated that the TV movie, The Day After, is misrepresented in that it depicts the after-effects of nuclear war when the focus should be on prevention. It is not the day after, but the day before that counts, he said.

On the environment, Brown stated that the world is losing about 25 billion tons of topsoil a year due to erosion and land development. "If this continues," he said, "By 1995, there will be seven percent less soil than there is today.

Brown said this can lead to severe global food security problems in the 21st century if precautions aren't taken. He noted that 35 percent of the land is currently under threat because of this problem.

According to Brown, forests all over the world, especially tropical forests, are disappearing at a rate of 50 hectares a minute (one hectare is equal to 2.47 acres). This deforestation is largely due to acid rain, which strips the trees of their defense against diseases.

Brown said this poses severe danger to the essential ecological function of forests all over the world. In Europe alone, acid rain has been affecting 10 percent of the forests in Italy, 39 percent in Germany, and 42 percent in Czechoslovakia.

Brown said that everyone should be educated on the dangers of toxic wastes. He said that 10 percent of the U.S. population lives within 50 miles of Indian Point Nuclear Facility. "If hazardous wastes were to escape," Brown said, "Some 20 million people would be in danger."

Brown emphasized the need for an effective emergency plan to deal with such a danger. "The world in the past didn't realize the implications of misused technology, such as chemical waste, forestal deterioration, air pollution, the nuclear arms race. But now that environmental problems are threatening the future of our planet, caution must be exercised in man concerning the applications of technology so that its misuse can be prevented."

The lecture was sponsored by the Conservation Club, Black Student Cooperative Union, and the Council on International and National Affairs in celebration of the Homecoming festivities.

On the unrest in South Africa, Brown discussed the growing political awareness among the black majority. "The people of South Africa are now being mobilized," Brown said. "They aren't waiting to share power. A new force is coming into play and this has been reinforced by the U.N."

However he said that until the people are ready to take their rightful position in society, a gift from outside cannot have the right impact.

In response to the lecture, Dr. John Kirk of the New Jersey School of Conservation in Branchville, N.J., said, "The world in the past didn't realize the implications of misused technology, such as chemical waste, forestal deterioration, air pollution, the nuclear arms race. But now that environmental problems are threatening the future of our planet, caution must be exercised in man concerning the applications of technology so that its misuse can be prevented."

Dr. Noel J. Brown points out the need for worldwide concern during last Wednesday's Homecoming lecture.
Second Annual Presidential Fall Symposium

THE PURSUIT OF EXCELLENCE
MONTCLAIR STATE COLLEGE

October 24, 1985

WORK GROUP 1 Student Center Room 411
"How should the college foster inquiry, logical thinking and critical analysis?"

FOCUS
A discussion of the various ways in which the College might aid its students in developing the skills necessary for success in research, practical decision making and intelligent participation in social affairs.

WORK GROUP 2 Student Center Room 419
"What should be the role of the teaching of ethics and values in the curriculum of a public institution of higher education?"

FOCUS
The exploration of the important difference between indoctrination and the cultivation of a moral sensitivity. As Dr. May noted in the Fall 1984 symposium mismatched expectations of the faculty and the students contribute to the inability of the faculty to teach values.

WORK GROUP 3 Student Center Room 413
"Can the curriculum be developed so as to achieve academic excellence without sacrificing the marketability of graduates?"

FOCUS
A discussion of how the college should deal with the pressure both from above in the form of "productivity" measures and from below in the form of student demand for more career oriented courses.

WORK GROUP 4 Student Center Room 417
"What forms of accountability reflect the shared responsibility of the faculty, administration, and students?"

FOCUS
Exploration of what are appropriate forms of measuring performance and a discussion of what colleges are truly accountable for. The various current measures of teaching effectiveness and the use of "productivity" will be subjected to close scrutiny.

WORK GROUP 5 Student Center Ballroom C
"What are constructive strategies for addressing faculty 'burnout' and student 'blues'?"

FOCUS
An exploration of the morale problem both from the student and the faculty perspective. Interdisciplinary team teaching and the imaginative use of faculty retraining may offer rays of hope. Ways of getting students better counseling will also be investigated.

WORK GROUP 6 Student Center Room 402
"What innovative strategies are there for achieving greater faculty cooperation, cohesion, and communication?"

FOCUS
An examination of proposed new ways of encouraging interdisciplinary cooperation and contact. The experience, both positive and negative, of persons who have engaged in team teaching will be shared. New high technology devices such as teleconferencing and electronic mail will also be discussed. "Old" methods such as a faculty club and faculty retreats will also be investigated.

In an effort to increase speech and theatrical productions, the Department of Speech and Theatre will expand its schedule of the campus productions next year to twelve, according to Dr. Gerald Ratliff, chairman of the department.

This year the department is sponsoring eight student productions: four in Memorial Auditorium and four in the Studio Theatre. In previous years, there have been two full-length productions sponsored by the department, all of them under the auspices of the Associated Student Government (ASG).

Ratliff pointed that although some restrictions may have to be placed upon the productions sponsored by the department, in order to accommodate the expanding program, none have as yet been put into writing.

"The department has no written policy at this point," Ratliff said. "However, we have discussed possible restrictive policies that may have to be put into effect as a result of the department's expanding program."

Ratliff cited the main reason for the possible restrictions as the lack of faculty supervision when students use dangerous machinery to construct sets or props.

"We're talking about students using $15,000 worth of machinery with faculty never being present, as well as students working three or four in the morning in a building that's supposed to close at 11:30," Ratliff said.

Ratliff suggested that one possible way to avoid this problem is to use portable sets, which can be built elsewhere. These sets can be moved into and out of the two theaters in order to increase flexibility in the use of rehearsal space. Ratliff indicated that any possible restrictions on rehearsal space will concern the Studio Theatre. Once it is used as a classroom, and not Memorial Auditorium.

Nonetheless, even with restrictions, Ratliff confirmed that Players will still be allowed to use the Studio Theatre. "All they have to do is schedule around us," said Ratliff.

In regard to Memorial Auditorium's construction equipment, Ratliff said, "No one is trying to shut them out of Memorial Auditorium. It's just dangerous letting them work when there's no faculty present. I doubt if any other Class One organization has a history of unsupervised activity. No one is telling them to curtail their schedule."

Ratliff reminded that the department was prompted to expand its program out of a desire to give students more opportunities to have experience. "We must provide and guarantee opportunities for students to act, design, and direct," he said. "The only way to do that with quality is to have faculty supervision."

Ratliff emphasized that the department would not be pushed aside. "The program was not intended to push aside Players but only to provide more opportunities for theatre majors. I do understand that there may be some closing doors, but what we're really doing is opening them." He said, "You have to let students have the freedom to do what they want, but you also have to have the faculty there to tighten it up."

Political science courses reduced because of budget cuts

By Mark Sturchio
Recent budget and staff cuts have forced the political science department to reduce the number of courses it will offer in the spring semester, according to Dr. William Batkay, chairman of the department.

At least seven sections of the courses currently listed in the Spring 1986 Schedule of Courses booklet may have to be cancelled. Included are two daytime sections and one evening section of The American Political Process, two daytime sections of Institutions of American Government, the evening sections of International Relations and Criminal Law, and the daytime section of Introduction to Politics.

According to Batkay, a decline in the number of full-time faculty members from nine to six is partly to blame for these cancellations. The department lost one full-time staff position when the college administration decided against hiring a replacement for Dr. Gilbert Hourtould, who retired last year.

Dr. Lucinda Long is currently on an unpaid leave of absence to gain practical experience in a local law firm. The date of her return is uncertain. Dr. George Menake recently received a fellowship from the American Political Science Association to pursue his study of John Locke at Oxford University. Menake will leave at the end of this semester and won’t return until next fall.

Translated into course offerings, these vacancies reduce the scope of the political science department curriculum by 12 full courses next semester.

In addition to these faculty losses, the administration has allocated the department only slightly more than half of the funds it requested for the year’s adjunct faculty overload course budget. The department’s original budget request for these areas this year was $14,905. Yet, the administration has allocated only $8,000 to the department for this period.

Batkay said, however, that the average difference between department requests and administration allocations in the area of history and social sciences this year was in the order of 20 percent. He also said that a clerical error of $2,000, which made the difference for the political science department higher than for the other departments, may soon be corrected, avoiding some but not all of the proposed cancellations.

The shortfall means the department will be unable to pay adjuncts to teach courses in place of absent full-time faculty members. Independent and directed study courses (for which faculty members normally receive additional or “overload” pay) will also have to be cancelled.

Batkay said these cancellations may affect 25 students per academic year.

According to Batkay, the consequences of all these cancellations reach farther than the 400 students majoring in political science. These courses also fulfill requirements for political science minors and provide other students with fulfillment of General Education Requirements. Batkay said, “The cuts will also be especially problematic for evening and weekend students where the course offerings are never exactly strong in the first place.”

Although the budget and one of the staff cuts are immediately attributable to the local administration, Batkay said that the administration was compelled by state government allowances to tighten its belt.

“The local administration really did it all could do based upon the budgetary decision made by the state,” he said. “Until the state, and by that I mean all of us taxpayers included, begin to place higher emphasis on the quality of our public higher education system, the situation will continue to get worse.”

International students exchange some thoughts about MSC

By Maureen Freeburg

Over 150 students from 51 different countries are currently attending MSC through the International Students Program according to James Harris, assistant dean of students and coordinator of the program.

"MSC has one of the largest programs in the state," Harris said. According to Harris, all of the students must meet MSC's general requirements for acceptance to the college. In addition they must pass the "Test of English for Speakers of Foreign Languages," better known as TOEFL.

"Basically most students pay their own way through college while others are sponsored by their own countries' government," Harris said.

"Generally students discover the program from other students who have attended schools in other countries or by their countries' embassy and other organizations," Harris said. "When the students are interested in attending a school overseas, they can also find the information at the library."

"Most of the students will finish up the program until they receive a degree. They are allowed to remain here as long as they are attending school," he said.

This program has been an active part of MSC since 1956 when it first received authorization to accept international students.

The following interviews are of three international students currently studying at MSC.

Masami Iida, Japan

Masami Iida is from Tokoyo, Japan. This is his first year at MSC. He previously attended a college in Iowa for two years. Masami is a senior majoring in linguistics.

"I think Japanese universities are very hard to get in, but easy to graduate from," Masami said. "This is not so here. They make it easy to get in, but so hard to get out."

"There's a big difference between American girls and Japanese girls," he said. "The girls in America are very noisy. They like to talk a lot. The girls in Japan are very quiet and do not talk much."

As far as plans for the future, Masami isn't quite sure what he wants to do. But he said he still has nine months until graduation to decide.

"On the whole I am happy here. But I can't say completely happy because there are things here that just aren't the same as Japan."

Lloyd Moorhouse, Australia

"It's twice the challenge when you come overseas to study," said Lloyd Moorhouse, a second semester student and president of the International Students Organization.

Lloyd is from Australia. He is a junior majoring in marketing management. "I absolutely love it here," he said. "The people are so friendly. I say it's all a myth what people say about the East Coast being full of snobby people."

Lloyd has been in the U.S. for nine months. This past summer he toured the West Coast. He then went to Washington and Canada. "I still love the East Coast best, but I found San Diego to be the most beautiful," said Lloyd.

"American girls spend a lot more time in keeping up their appearances than Australian girls. It's quite a difference. We have a saying in Australia, 'She'll be right mate.' This means come as you are, don't worry," said Lloyd.

"We'd love Americans to join our organization. It's not restricted to foreign students only. This would give Americans a great opportunity to learn more about different countries and the people from them."

Wendy Thompson, Bahamas

Wendy Thompson lives 15 miles outside of Nassau at Yamacraw Beach, Bahamas. This is Wendy's second year at MSC. She has a major in broadcasting and a minor in journalism.

"A big difference here in the U.S. for me is the language," Wendy said. "We speak English in the Bahamas, but we use a sort of slang or Bahamian dialect. I'm more aware of it now when I use it."

"I think the people here are a lot more open than Bahamians," she said. "People of the same sex are more friendly toward each other than Bahamians. It's good because people who are open inspire me to be more open."

"I think American kids are very restricted here. I feel that parents and teachers should be more trustworthy with their kids."

SA President Dave Handal warns all those who attend tailgate parties before the home football games that the set guidelines must be obeyed. “Students have got to get into their heads that they must adhere to the policies or there will be no more tailgating,” said Handal, who met Monday with members of the athletic department, Edward Martin (Dean of Students), Jerome Quinn (director of institutional planning) and Jayne Rich (Campus Police chief) to discuss the tailgate situation.

Handal noted that the administration has considered shutting down the tailgate situation.

The present guidelines are:

— Tailgating in lots 7 & 9 only between 6 and 7:30 p.m.
— All those who attend tailgate parties must. The administration wants to help the students who come to tailgate parties to have a fun and enjoyable day. To do this they have to ensure that the parking lots 7 & 9 to enable them to have more space to park their cars.

The present guidelines are:

— No drinking in the stands.
— No kegs or bottles.
— No drinking in the stands.

Bottles of any beverage or kegs of beer at the parties will be confiscated.

The administration has considered shutting down the tailgate situation.

Also, Handal said that food is a serious issue. Students have to follow the rules and regulations of the administration. If they don’t follow the rules, they will be asked to leave the tailgate parties.

MSC's spirit soars

The MSC spirit was evident throughout many of last week's Homecoming events: the pep rally and bonfire, the parade and the football game. We congratulate the SGA for bringing this tradition back, and in the process creating a strong union between all MSC students.

A special thanks is also in order for the Conservation Club, the Black Student Cooperative Union, and the Council on International and National Affairs for sponsoring a lecture featuring Dr. Noel J. Brown, the director of the United Nations Environment Program.

Before a crowd of 150 people, Brown stressed the importance of student awareness concerning such environmental issues as toxic wastes, deforestation and the disintegration of the world's topsoil. While many Homecoming events focused on school spirit and fun, this lecture brought a serious, global note to the festivities.

For whatever reasons, whether it be extended schedules or apathy, many students are more concerned with their individual futures. As Brown pointed out, these environmental problems are threatening the future of the world—our individual plans will mean little if these problems are not dealt with.

For example, Brown stated that the misuse of current technology is responsible for the loss of 25 billion tons of topsoil a year. This could lead to severe global food security problems by the next century (not nearly as far away as it sounds) if something isn't done to prevent it now.

Looking back, MSC's Homecoming can be viewed as a major success in that it not only provided the MSC community with great moments of fun, but also a necessary, though brief education about issues affecting our future.

In the same light, students will get a chance to affect MSC's educational future at the President's Second Annual Fall Symposium, on Thurs., Oct. 24.

Dealing with the "pursuit of excellence" this all day symposium will provide the campus with the opportunity to discuss critical issues concerning higher education. Administration, faculty, and students will be able to share their views on such topics as the role of the teaching of ethics and values in educational institutions, and the realities of and remedies for faculty "burnout.

Here again is the chance for the entire campus community to come together to learn, as well as celebrate MSC's tradition of spirit and excellence.
No winners in nuclear war

The word of the day is propaganda. You've heard it, but do you understand it? Webster defines propaganda as: "The art of teaching undesirables the art of furthering a cause." Nowhere does it mention truth.

A major propaganda war is being waged between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. It has been heating up for a long time and the stakes are high. The propaganda machines are working overtime for the current arms talks and in preparation for the November summit between Reagan and Gorbachev. Both sides want to win the war of words before the summit.

However, Secretary of State George Schultz says, "Their propaganda about America is blatantly one-sided and is not to be taken seriously." But, if information comes from the U.S. it is "opinion molding efforts." Combined, both countries spend about six to eight billion dollars a year on propaganda, the U.S. used to be the experts, but recent Soviet public relations strategies have the White House worried about being bested.

The great communicator Ronald Reagan may have met his match. Yet, he takes the same old, hard-line approach. "We're being strident and belligerent and tough at a time when we should be reasonable and forward thinking," says Senator Patrick Leahy, vice-chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee. "As a result, we're losing the propaganda war."

No one is sure whether Gorbachev's offer should at least be seen as a starting point for the arms talks. There will be no safe haven. There will be no winners. Both sides want to win the war of words in this case regards the rights of an individual. People in this country have been brought up to believe in freedom. When this freedom is restricted people react. Alcohol and its abuse is an issue of restriction. In this case, it is unfortunate that the actions of a few can sometimes dictate policy for all.

It is also unfortunate that there is very little that we can do to change these bad habits. However, recent Soviet public relations strategies have the White House worried about being bested.

The story continues: "The recently announced policy change goes far beyond efforts made to date to improve the readiness of the medical system for war...services at military facilities will shift, garage surgery and other skills relevant to combat.

What does it all mean? Are we headed toward war? Let's hope not.

The latest research on the global consequences of a nuclear war is devastating. In the October Bulletin of Atomic Scientists, research and conclusions by Soviet, American, German, Swedish and Australian scientists have been similar, too similar.

These are scientists from different nations with different political ideologies. They used different premises, models, methods and research, yet they reached the same conclusions. There will be no safe haven. If only one-third of the arsenals are used, a nuclear winter is virtually guaranteed. No one can predict if the human race will survive. This is the basis of an article written by a Soviet scientist— an article I wish President Reagan could read. There are no winners, both sides know that.

It is time to sit down at the table to talk and negotiate. Enough rhetoric. Enough propaganda. Our global village is too small to survive such madness.

It's Saturday night at 10:00. You want to take the girl down to the hall. Problem #1: you're both under age; you can't get into the Rat. Problem #2: you don't have enough money for a movie. What will you do?

You're looking for "something different." Well, look no more. It's nearby, it's inexpensive and it's unique. It's Something Different, 100 Church Street in Montclair. It's a luncheonette 7 days a week, but it turns into a comedy showcase every Saturday night.

Something Different has gone through many changes over the years. It began as a comedy club, then switched to jazz and is now back to comedy. It is still going through transformations, such as renovations and new partnerships. The menu is modest, but it is also undergoing changes. The menu now offers the usual choice of sandwiches, hamburgers, side orders and desserts.

You say you and your gal are of age and you do want to drink. Well, there's still no problem. Pack your cooler with Heinies and bring it with you. On Saturday nights, those who are of age are allowed to bring their own liquor, for a minimal charge per table.

You may ask what makes the comedy club different this time? It's all about the连夜, Mickey Loesch. Mickey who? MickeyLoesch of Normal, Illinois is a disc jockey and radio personality who has just completed two years of performances at the Rascals Comedy Club. He is an experienced writer, producer and announcer for video tapes which are used for various purposes. He has also done comedy writing as well as stand-up comedy, and has broadcasted on several radio stations out west as well as in the area.

Mickey has now brought his unique style of comedy to Something Different, making a new outlet of fun available to MSC students. He not only performs, but coordinates the entire show, taking auditions and scouting out comedians.

Your say you're the life of the party and love to make people laugh? Well, come on down! Just call Mickey at Something Different and audition. According to Mickey, Something Different is a great place for young comedians to "air out their act." He said, "It doesn't try to compete with established comedy clubs. It's unique in that it's a comedy cabaret, featuring a variety of young local comedians. There's no dress code or drink minimum, so its casual yet intimate approach makes you feel like you're being entertained in your living room."

Remember the magic tricks you performed at variety shows in high school? Well, you can have an encore performance at Something Different. That's right, Something Different is not just a comedy show, but a variety show. If you think you can play the guitar as well as Bob Dylan, or even if you can't, try it out for 5 or 10 minutes on Something Different's stage.

You will be in great company since many of the performers are local comedians who have played at Rascals. Some of these performers are: Peter Jung, who allows the audience to join in his "Freudian Sing-along" and Chris Haugen, who entertains the audience with Russian classics such as "Should I Stay or Should I Defect?"

This Saturday's act will feature Peter Jung and MSC's own Mike Dean. The show starts around 10 p.m. and admission is $3.50 per person. MSC students with valid I.D., a Something Different ad, or this article, will get $1 off the cover charge.

So bring the girl down the hall, or batter yet, bring everyone on your floor. If you're not a finger-tapper, this is the club for you. No matter if you're a total yukster, you'll have fun at Something Different.

When Australia's Midnight Oil hit the Ritz stage two weeks ago on October 3, it was immediately clear that they had something to say. Hitting into a rousing 90-minute set with "Read About It," from their 1984 American debut, "Get Outta My World," the Oils are taking one more step toward acceptance in the U.S. — and you do want to drink. Well, there's still no problem. Pack your cooler with Heinies and bring it with you. On Saturday nights, those who are of age are allowed to bring their own liquor, for a minimal charge per table.

Midnight Oil is not a typical band by any means. First of all, Frankston, Australia's Midnight Oil hit the Ritz stage two weeks ago on October 3, which, according to the record unchanged.

Socially-conscious singer loses election, but wins in the music world

Midnight Oil aims to "conquer" American audiences

By Jennifer Reardon

Midnight Oil is a social commentary band with a message, and they're not afraid to share it. Their latest album Red Sails, released in 1985, features politically charged songs that comment on the state of the world and their intentions for change.

"Muralmog," a powerful song on the album, serves as the conducing tone of Men at Work's "Down Under." Their strong national pride colors their music, and this is evident in their choice of lyrical themes. Yet, they are not afraid to adapt to new influences, as seen in their cover of "Sleep" from Red Sails, which they release of Red Sails, which, according to their record company, did not contain marketable songs for the U.S. The band remained adamant in leaving the record unchanged.

Midnight Oil's lead singer Peter Garrett of Midnight Oil aims to "conquer" American audiences. He wants to "batter yet, bring everyone on your floor. If you're not a finger-tapper, this is the club for you. No matter if you're a total yukster, you'll have fun at Something Different."

MTS presents good-natured production of The Boy Friend

By Warren Thomas

The Major Theatre Series production of "The Boy Friend," opens tonight at Memorial Auditorium. This 1964 English musical comedy with book, music and lyrics by Sandy Wilson is a good natured spoof of all the harmless idiocies and extravagances of the 1920's: the garish wardrobes, the fluttery affections, the high-kicking and, of course, all the corny boy-meets-girl plots of the colorful era known as the Jazz Age.

But somehow "The Boy Friend" never merely pokes fun at the era; it looks at it with a large measure of open admiration and unconcealed affection, while never failing to capture an audience. This talented troupe's irreverent spoof of all the harmless idiocies and extravagances of the 1920's: the garish wardrobes, the fluttery affections, the high-kicking and, of course, all the corny boy-meets-girl plots of the colorful era known as the Jazz Age.

The story itself is a tale of romance set in an era when the good life was found in a French Riviera. It goes something like this: rich girl loves poor boy; combining stouthearted devotion with boy, Herman succeeds brilliantly in a millionaire's- son-turned-messenger who is busy kicking up their heels. Dialogue overheard at the October 12 Dire Straits concert at Madison Square Garden:

"They didn't do 'Skateaway.'"

"Yeah, and what about 'Twistin' by the Pool'?"

"Well, they did 'Money for Nothing'—let's go!"

"We really like people like Dire Straits? They've got everything that makes pop music what it is today. Catchy riffs, simple lyrics—nothing wrong with that problem? The Straits don't play, as Mark Knopfler calls it, 'jackboot rock.' True, they're not like Van Halen, Judas Priest, but when they want to, they can rock.

Before the concert began, I noticed that the most prevalent type were 15-year-old preppies, commonly referred to as MTV children. This didn't surprise me at all, since "Money for Nothing" is still in heavy rotation on MTV. Throughout the concert, the band played as well. The new line-up of the ensemble, rhythm guitarist Jack Sonni, appeared confident and was supported by strong, constant drumming and a gargantuan presence on stage while dressed in an Adrian Belew-style suit.

So, what's the problem? Well, I can really pinpoint it—maybe the 5-minute version of "Money for Nothing" wasn't long enough. Maybe the Straits were too mellow for some children; maybe they should make more videos. In any case, I only hope that Dire Straits won't "sell out," will perform just as well on their next tour, and won't become a bunch of video-oriented, Duran Duran imitators.

Last spring when CINA ran its spring trip through Ireland, I took a lot of time and effort to see the acts, most of which I can easily work against the group as much as it serves them in trying to identify all the types of music that the audience does. When two teams up early in the first act they transform a Charleston song and dance routine into a genuine showstopper.

The finale is a high-spirited reprise by the whole company of a song with almost unbelievable triple lyrics: "I could be happy with you if you could be happy with me."

Other musical numbers are "Never Too Late to Have A Fling" with Daniel Kahn and Emi-Rae Hartmann, as well as the English Connection's "Well, they did 'Money for Nothing'" which garnished the band with a 2-minute standing ovation) and "Tunnel of Love," but the omission of "Skateaway" and "Twistin' by the Pool" made the MTV crowd very angry: complaints were very clearly voiced at the end of the show. The Straits also performed "Private Investigations," "Why Worry Now" and "Walk of Life," the latter getting most of the crowd up and dancing in a sort of Springsteen-esque back-and-forth move.

Before the encore, at least one-fourth of the audience left, as if to say, "Great riff, but they can't make some more videos, OK?" The three encore cuts were the hauntingly beautiful "Brothers in Arms," Knopfler's anthenm "Solid Rock," and the show closed with "Going Home." Knopfler's song from the score for the film Local Hero. When the lights finally came on, at least half the seats were empty.

So, what's the problem? Well, I can really pinpoint it—maybe the 5-minute version of "Money for Nothing" wasn't long enough. Maybe the Straits were too mellow for some children; maybe they should make more videos. In any case, I only hope that Dire Straits won't "sell out," will perform just as well on their next tour, and won't become a bunch of video-oriented, Duran Duran imitators.

by Chris Pagano. Once again, the Indians had a rally killed. Meanwhile, in the seventh, Rutgers added three runs with the aid of three walks and a single to finally put the Indians away.

In total, the Indian left ten runners on base through eight innings, though they outhit the Scarlet Knights, 7-3.
Foti allowed eight walks to aid the Rutgers offense.

"They threw one of their best pitchers at us (Bauer) and we did hit him," MSC coach Kevin Cooney said.
"They only got three hits, so our pitching was good enough to beat them. We just walked too many batters and don't get any breaks."

MSC 7—Kean 3

"I liked the way (Jeff) Vanderoef pitched." Those words from Kevin Cooney summed up the Indians' 7-3 victory over Kean on Friday at Pittser Field.

Vanderoef pitched eight innings, walked two, struck out three, and forced in Zichella for a 7-1 advantage.

Johnson's sacrifice fly to right scored the eighth. Ray Castellano pitched a scoreless inning of relief to close out the win. Vanderoef looked strong the rest of the game, getting out of his only jam in the eighth. Ray Castellano pitched a the win.

The way we've been pitching lately," said Cooney, "We're going to be all right. And Vanderoef is going to help us in that respect."

Johnson for the Indians' first run. It seemed like a repeat of Thursday's game, however, when Fasano's fly ball to center was caught to end the inning, stranding runners on second

Kean tied the game in the second with the help of two MSC errors, but the Indians went back on top when Johnson's sacrifice fly to right scored second baseman Steve Dorey from third. The Indians added a run in the fifth for a 3-1 lead, then opened the game up in the sixth with three more runs.

"Weiter and Fasano led off the

Baseball's rent-a-star

The baseball team has a star in its midst. That's right, a real, bona fide, television star...

A local television commercial director needed someone to fill the role of a baseball player in an Avis (the rent-a-car company) commercial. So he called up MSC Coach Kevin Cooney for some help.

"Baffled? That's OK, so was Cooney, because he had neither hand nor foot in the show biz door at the time. Nonetheless, he sent a few prospects, and before long, Indian leftfielder Andy Weiter had himself an acting job.

"A guy from the Ted Bates (Casting/Acting) Agency in New York called day out of the blue and wanted the ugliest baseball player I ever saw," Cooney joked in Weiter's presence. "Actually, he was looking for a few people who might fit the role of say, (Robert Redford's) The Natural. So, I sent them a few people and they liked Andy."

Weiter fits The Natural type, all right. The tall, blond senior from Allendale, N.J., is described by Cooney only half-jokingly as a "good looking country boy." At 6-3, 195 pounds, his size isn't too hard to fit into a home-run-hitting image. In fact, Cooney has been known many times to say of the real-life Weiter, "He hits the prettiest home runs you'll ever see."

The Inside View

Anyway back to the commercial...

A scout is sent out to find somebody great—a real "franchise" player. He is out on the road, scouting players who always wind up striking out—naturally, until he finds Walter, who promptly smashes a home run in dramatic fashion.
The next thing you know, the scout has his arm around Welter and they're off to the big leagues with two plane tickets in their hands. Oh, yeah, and how does Avis fit into all this? Well, apparently, the scout drove around in an Avis car.

The thirty second spot is being shown in New York, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Washington, Detroit and Chicago, so you may have already seen the MSC star in action without even knowing it. According to Welter, there is a possibility of the commercial being picked up nationwide by the networks.
In any event, he had to turn down the money in order to retain his NCAA eligibility for this year.

Cooney also worked on a commercial, but there's no word yet on whether or not it will be aired. A jealous Cooney argued kiddingly, "It's all aimed at the yuppies anyway."

On Saturday at Washington Crossing State Park in Trenton, the Women's Cross-Country team competed in a race that if nothing else, kept the scorekeeper busy.

In what amounted to three meets in one, the Indians defeated Glassboro State College in a dual meet scoring 23-34 and placed second in both the NJAIAW Championships, and the Jersey Athletic Conference Championships.

The only team to get in the way of the MSC harriers was Trenton State, which defeated MSC last week in a double dual meet. The Indians were out run by the central New Jersey team, 36-46 in the NJAIAW Championships, and 30-39 in the JAC contest scoring.

Nancy Wright's 20:06 time was enough to win against Glassboro, but took third in the JAC meet. Elizabeth Gonzales' 20:53 was rewarded for their efforts on Saturday. By placing in the top seven of the conference meet, they earned All-JAC honors. In finishing in the top ten of the NJAIAW meet, the three became All NJAIAW members.

"We got very strong performances from Liz Gonzales, Liz Dilla, and Wilma Martin (13th place in the NJAIAW meet, 11th in the JAC scoring, 6th against Glassboro)," said Willis.

"We once again fell short of beating Trenton," she added. "I will not settle for second behind Trenton until we lose to them with everyone running up to their potential. We haven't had that yet."

Willis also noted that, by placing three runners on each of the two championship teams, the Indians received more honors than all the other teams, including Trenton.

In the NJAIAW meet, Glassboro placed third with 8 points, Georgian Court fourth with 101, Seton Hall fifth with 119, and St. Peter's a distant sixth with 177. Glassboro also finished third in the JAC meet.

The Indians' dual meet record stands 2-3-4 and placed second in both the NJAIAW Championships, and the Jersey Athletic Conference Championships.

Tough luck keeps Indians on short end vs. Rutgers

By Jim Nicols

Rutgers — MSC 2

Sometimes luck is more important in winning a baseball game than hitting the ball hard.

The MSC Indians found out that at Pitter Field last Thursday against Division I powerhouse Rutgers, falling 7-2. In fact, the Indians should have won it. They allowed only one walk and a pair of hits against 10 talks while the Indians had three hits, two walks, no runs, and five runners left on base.

The Indians started a rally in their half of the inning. Spadaro lined a single to right to put Indians on first and second, but first baseman John Deutsch grounded out to second to end the threat.

With Rutgers retired easily in the second, the Indians started a two-out rally in their half of the inning. Spadaro singled to center, catcher Billy Coyle lined a single to right, and centerfielder Lyle Johnson tracked the ball down. On a weak fly ball that just dropped in front of rightfielder Tim Jones for a basehit, following by a ground ball that took a wild hop over second baseman Ron Spadaro's head for a single, scoring the first Rutgers run.

Spadaro then booted a ground ball for an error, and MSC starting pitcher Anthony Foti walked shortstop Scott Truchin to load the bases without registering a single out. The Indians, and Foti, finally got an out, as Steve Resetar grounded around to a double-play. Rutgers took a 2-0 lead on the play though. Foti retired designated hitter Joe Lynch on a comebacker to the mound to end the inning trailing, but remained there until until designated hitter Mike Litterio came up to the plate with two outs. Litterio singled to left to move Ashton to second, then third baseman Kevin Cavallo delivered a double to center to knock in both Indians. Spadaro walked to put runners on first and second, but Coyle was retired on a groundout to second, leaving the score at 3-2 Rutgers' favor.

After Rutgers scored a run on four walks and an error in the fifth, the Indians started a rally in their half of the inning. With two on and one out, Cavallo lined a pitch right into the hands of second baseman Neil Kurtz. Kurtz nabed Steve Dorey at first for a double play and the Indians came up empty.

MSC dumps Post, 35-16 behind Fleming and Gaines

By Perry Schwartz

Tony Fleming rushed for 110 yards and two touchdowns and Curtis Gaines intercepted two passes, returning one 98 yards for a touchdown Saturday night as MSC rolled to a 35-16 victory over C.W. Post.

"Our defensive front is playing great," Gaines said. "The line has the agility, strength, and quickness to stop any team's running game." Post's only points came on a 13-yard field goal. By the time they took on conference rival C.W. Post, the Indians had given up 21 points to the Pioneers, featuring a 13-7 score.

MSC's Tony Fleming looks for a hole in the C.W. Post defense.

"Kupec was very readable, he kept throwing to the first receiver he spotted. I got good position on the receiver, received a key block and that was it," Gaines explained.

Once Colasurdo hit the extra point, the Indians left the third quarter with a lead of 29-7. MSC's scoring ended on another running play. Leroy Horn found his way into the endzone from 15 yards out. Colasurdo added the next point with 5:27 left in the game.

Post managed to come up with one more touchdown near the end of the game. With 24 seconds, Kupec, who completed 28 passes for 341 yards, completed a three yard pass to Mike McDermitt. Post's two point conversion finalized the score, 36-15.

"This was a real test," Gaines said. "We were confident with our game plan, so most of the players had fun." MSC will look to have more "fun" when they take on conference rival William Paterson Friday evening at 8 p.m. The Indians will travel to WPC for the game.

Terry Porter, the secondary coach, said the MSC defensive back gave up the short pass, but not the big play as evident by the score. "When you throw the ball 62 times you're bound to come up with some yardage," he said.

The Indians tied the score in the first with a successful running attack. Fleming got into the endzone from 16 yards out. Colasurdo's extra point attempt went wide. The Indians inched ahead by a 13-7 score.

With 1:20 remaining in the half, Fleming ran one yard up the middle to score. Joe Kupec's extra point was good. Overall, the drive covered 81 yards in 10 plays.

After the MSC defense forced the Pioneers to punt, the offense went back to work. Walter Briggs locked up with Ed Chavis from 36 yards away. Colasurdo's extra point attempt went wide. The Indians inched ahead by a 13-7 score.

The Indians came away with two scores in the third. The first was a 19 yard Colasurdo field goal. The second score in the quarter came on Gaines' touchdown interception. "Kupec was very readable, he kept throwing to the first receiver he spotted. I got good position on the receiver, received a key block and that was it," Gaines explained.
