Toxic “surplus material” in the process of being disposed

By Beth Lesaugh

Toxic “surplus material,” currently being stored in room 155-B of Mallory Hall, is in the process of being disposed of by MSC’s Biology and Chemistry Departments. The process actually began two years ago when Prof. Roland Flynn of the Chemistry Dept. along with several graduate students made an inventory of the surplus material which consisted of both organic and inorganic materials. Flynn suggested to Dr. Michael McCormick, chairperson of the Biology Dept., to make a similar inventory of that department’s surplus materials, which included formaldehyde liquids from pigs and other dissections.

The material is an accumulation of at least thirty years of chemicals which could not be easily disposed of. They could not be just thrown away or washed down the sink.

In July, the School of Mathematics and Natural Sciences decided to dispose of its surplus materials. “The disposal came to a dead end in the fiscal year 1985. This is due to a lack of money from the fiscal year. The money is now being supplied in the fiscal year 1986.”

“If the school had the option to fund it directly through autonomy the job could have been done the year before,” said Michael Rodak, SGA board of trustees representative.

Dissatisfied with contract, state faculty may strike

The council of N.J. State College Locals, who represent approximately 2,900 state faculty members, are meeting tomorrow and may call for a state-wide strike. This strike would affect teachers, librarians and non-teachers.

More than 1,600 faculty members voted last week in favor of strike authorization by a nine to one margin. According to Dr. Catherine Becker, MSC’s faculty union president, the union is opposed to the state’s proposed contract because of economic and non-economic reasons.

“When we came into this field, we weren’t planning on becoming millionaires but, we must be able to live on a middle class level,” she said. “This proposed contract does not do this.”

Becker said they disapprove of only a one and a half percent salary increase. “The state’s current contract expires June 30,” she said. “As of now, the waste presents no threat to students,” McCormick said.

As of now, Treasury of the Bidding Office, is taking bids from disposal companies. Bidding officers Steve Corwin and David Lapidus have come up with an approximation of $25,000 for the disposal.

Corwin and Lapidus are combining MSC’s disposal with eleven other sites, these include state-run institutions as part of a package for bidding.

The disposal will be done through incineration or landfills. The contained chemicals will be placed in large industrial drums filled with vermiculite, an insulate and an absorbent. The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) will supervise the disposal.

“As of now the waste presents no threat to students.” This is according to Dr. McCormick, who went on to say that “State Fire Marshalls just want to make sure the waste is not easily accessible to students, which in this case, room 155-B is not accessible.”

“The deadline for bids for disposal is May 12, and continued that “The disposal will most likely take place in June when the fewest number of students will be on campus.”

State workers picketed in protest of budget plan

State workers at MSC picketed in front of College Hall last Thurs. in protest of a proposed budget plan for New Jersey state employees.

According to an April report in The Lamp of Higher Education, an educational bulletin, the budget plan, submitted on April 3, called for reduced medical coverage and a six month wage freeze. Wages would then increase by seven and a half percent over the next three years.

This contract was formed by the state to replace the present one, which expires June 30.

The Communications Workers of America (CWA), the union that sponsored the picket, bargained for a two year contract with a 12 percent wage increase the following year. A minimum salary of $12,500 was also requested.

The CWA is against the state’s proposed medical plan, which would require employees to pay one third the cost of dependent medical insurance. Neither the state nor the CWA are talking...

Seminar on harassment conducted

By Tom Boud

Sexual harassment should not be tolerated, according to a panel of MSC administrators and professors who discussed the issue at yesterday's Women Center sponsored Sexual Harassment Seminar.

The seminar, conducted by the Vice President for Student Affairs Jean Armstrong, included Assistant Dean of Student Affairs James Harris, Director of Equal Opportunity/Equal Rights Action (EOAA) Anita Walters, Assistant Resident Director of Housing Ruth Cebo Bohn, and Assistant Director of Housing Ruth Lugo-Alvarez, Dr. Amy Sreibnick of the department of history and Dr. Edward Boyno of the department of mathematics and computer science.

“We have very few reported cases. However, since sexual harassment takes place in isolation, the student often doubts that anyone would give credibility to his accusation,” said Harris.

Harris said that the increased emphasis on sexual harassment is changing this misconception. “A student actually came forward after attending last year’s sexual harassment seminar. The whole thing is contingent on the student’s willingness to report acts of sexual harassment,” he said.

Referring to the method of reporting such acts, Walters said that documented evidence is important. “Be sure to have written evidence including the exact time, location, and nature of harassment for many sexual harassment cases,” she said.

The topic of self-defense, Lugo-Alvarez said that those being subjected to sexual harassment should make their disapproval known. “You should tell the person bothering you outright that you don’t condone sexual harassment. You should also be aware of the antiharassment policy of your college or company,” Lugo-Alvarez said.

Sreibnick said that the problem goes beyond the male professor/female student scenario. “It can be a woman teacher against a male student or it can even be of a homosexual nature.” She demonstrated that sexual harassment is complex. “Sexual harassment is difficult to define; it’s loaded with many shades of meaning but it’s definitely manipulative and exploitative,” she said.

In reference to a solution, Boyno said that a firm antiharassment policy is needed. “We need a policy which would specify the grievance methods in addition to sanctions that will be imposed for offenders,” Boyno said.

Boyno said that the victim must be handled carefully. “Confidentiality must be maintained and his/her rights must be protected.”

MSC has adopted guidelines promoting the fair treatment of students, faculty, and employees at present, new disciplinary code concerning sexual harassment exists. The seminar also presented a film which said that 90 percent of all women regard sexual harassment as a problem. There was also a discussion session where students talked about their feelings and concerns about sexual harassment.

Anyone wishing to report an instance of sexual harassment is urged to contact either Dean Edward Martin or Dean James Harris at the office of the Vice President for Student Affairs in room 217 of College Hall. Their number is 893-4118

Bomb threat at Partridge

By Tom Boud

A bomb threat was reported yesterday at Partridge Hall at 2:45 p.m. The building was evacuated and a fifteen minute long search was conducted.

No explosive device was found.

A similar incident occurred on May 6 at 6:30 p.m. in Richmondson Hall and on May 3 at 3:52 a.m. at the Cove Rd. Apartments.

Campus police escorted a male student from Bohn Hall on May 2 at 2:35 p.m. after he was accidentally hit in the eye by a female student.

At 11:09 a.m. on May 1, a female student was accompanied by police to the campus infirmary after a severe stomachache.

At 4:30 p.m. the same day, another female student was transported to the infirmary after complaining of being ill.

BSCU retains class I status

By Kathy McDonough

The Black Student Cooperative Union (BSCU) retains their Class I status amidst speculation that it would be changed to a Class II organization.

According to Colleen Ramsey, BSCU's representative, the reasoning behind the SGA dropping their class I charter was to encourage more minority participation in other class I organizations. Ramsey said that this action is not justified because the organization could better serve the students as a class I. BSCU's charter then went to a vote, and was approved.

In his welfare and internal affairs report, Gary Takvorian brought the legislature up to date on the problem with the campus shuttle buses. Currently there are two buses running, and plans are now being made to add one or two more buses to the service for next year. The administration is now in the process of conducting interviews to hire a new bus driver.

Takvorian stated that according to the administration, the problem with the unsatisfactory bus service should be cleared up over the summer. "The Quarterly, MSC's oldest student publication, will be undergoing some changes next year. According to LaVaugna Slaven, Editor-In-Chief, the magazine will now be known as "The Four Walls" and subtitled, "A clean well lighted literature magazine."

Their new name reflects a change in format for next year. The magazine will be published bi-annually, providing for a larger, more comprehensive issue. The magazine, created in 1928, provides students with a means of creative expression in the fields of literature and the arts.

In other news, class I charters were granted to the Latin American Student Organization (LASO), The Quarterly, and Class I Concerts. A legislature called for more minority involvement in Concerts, in order to bring a wider variety of entertainment to MSC.

The last of the charters to be given out was a class II granted to the Geoscience Club. This organization, currently under revitalization, provides tutoring services as well as sponsoring field trips and other events to foster a better understanding of conservation and other topics relating to Geoscience.

The ritual continues

The story goes something like this:
In a land far, far away, the "working people" and the people for whom they work, the "higher ups", hold a very special ritual every three years.

These "higher ups" give the "working people" a piece of paper with a contract that tells them they will be paid for their duties and other such rules and stuff.

The "working people" always disapprove of this "contract" and tell the "higher ups" they will not work anymore if changes aren't made to satisfy the workers.

This action of not working is called a "strike", a very powerful and scary word in this land.

The "higher ups" and the "working people" always argue back and forth. Only when the "strike" is actually close to taking place, do the two sides of people come to some kind of "agreement". This word is not really easy to define in this land.

Now you may be asking yourselves, "What a strange ritual; where is this land that people behave so strangely?"

Well folks, it's right here in the good old state of New Jersey. This year, the faculty of the state colleges have given authorization to their union to call a strike by a margin of nine to one. This year, the union is opposed to the state's proposed contract because of "economic and non-economic reasons."

They aren't in favor of a one and a half percent salary increase because, according to Dr. Catherine Becker, MSC's faculty union president, "It is in fact a decrease, not an increase." Another opposition is the fact that librarians will lose their academic freedom rights under this proposed contract.

In past years, the issues have not been so far different from this year's grips- money, faculty rights, etc. etc. etc. And what has been even more consistent is the fact that the union always threatens to strike because they don't appreciate the state's contract.

Yet, they only actually went on strike once; for one day in 1979. All other times they followed the ritual; making an agreement just in the nick of time.

The union has a right to its disapprovals, especially since it seems the state provides the opportunity for this constant opposition.

But the question is: will this story ever come to an end? Probably not. During the 1983 strike threat, T. Edward Hollander, chancellor of N.J. Higher Education, said, "This whole thing is a ritual, and it always comes down to the last minute. It's a dance around the issues, which is never concluded until the last week and in the end, we always come together."

Prof. explains her position on Nicaragua

To the editor:
Your front page article in the April 24 issue of The Montclarion reporting on the LASH-sponsored panel discussion on the Nicaraguan situation seriously misrepresented my statements, my position on the issue and my use of words, not to mention the fact that it also misspelled my name.

Was your reporter, Ms. Farina, actually present at the meeting? Or was she, or somebody else at The Montclarion purposely trying to misrepresent fact and paint a false picture of total agreement by the entire panel with one political position on the Nicaraguan debate?

I did say that the documentary "Faces of War" was a heartrending depiction of crying mothers, injured children, etc. But I most certainly also said that this was a biased, slick, conscious attempt at manipulating the emotions of American viewers in favor of the Sandinista government. This documentary, equally heartrending could be made illustrating the excesses of the Sandinista side and manipulating the emotions of the viewers in favor of the Contras.

I did say on a couple of points with the Sandinista mayor of Pearl Lagoon, Nicaragua, who was a fellow panelist:
However, anybody present at the meeting could have heard that although agreeing with his words, I disagreed totally with the meaning behind the words, "Where there's no justice, there's no peace," I said, not the other way around.

In contemporary Nicaragua, there is no justice, since under the Sandinista government there is no freedom of speech, no freedom of the press, no freedom of expression and no right to vote. In contemporary Nicaragua there is no justice because under the Sandinista government thousands of Miskito Indians have been removed out of their ancestral lands in an attempt to "starve" the Contras out of their sympathizers.

In contemporary Nicaragua there is no justice because 50,000 Nicaraguans (mostly peasant, mostly barely literate) have crossed the border and are living as refugees in Costa Rica aided by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Costa Rican government and some private voluntary agencies. As long as these injustices continue, there can be no peace in Nicaragua.

I rest my position be misunderstood, let me repeat it loud and clear.

How did the situation in Nicaragua go to the way it is today? I was asked. My answer: After 46 years of the Somoza dictatorship, a popular revolutionary government took power.

This government was supported by its Latin American neighbors and most certainly was supported by the United States. In fact, we poured in over one hundred million dollars in aid during the first year of the Sandinista government.

Then, the Ortega group in the new revolutionary government began to apply the dictates of Lenin for the dictatorship of the proletariat, and began to trample upon human rights, to arm itself to astronomical proportions and to wreck the economy. Censorship, the native Indian population was displaced, the counter-revolutionary movement was born and gained force.

What goes on in Nicaragua today? I was also asked. My answer: No freedom of speech, no freedom of assembly, no freedom of religion, no due process, no independence of judiciary, lots of refugees fleeing, universal military conscription for an army larger than all the other Central American countries combined and Marxist rhetoric and fear.

However, what never ceases to amazed me is what does not go on in Nicaragua today, or in Cuba, or in Poland, or in the Soviet Union. It's the beautifully orchestrated and manipulative propaganda campaigns in support of the dictators of the left that go on in US college campuses, aided and abetted by many college professors who, for all their claims to outrage when injustice occurs, show no outrage whatever when injustices are committed by the Sandinistas, the Castros and their likes.

What's your problem needs publicity

To the editor:
I am writing this letter in regard to an article published in the May 1 issue of The Montclarion entitled "Residence Life asks, 'What's your problem.' I felt the idea of Residence Life sponsoring different lectures to inform students about various campus organizations is a good one. I didn't like the way the organization went about publicizing it, however.

The students were not informed about the place or purpose of the events. No campus resources, such as The Montclarion or fliers were used.

The article states that the meeting place was in the back room of Blanton Hall cafeteria. There is no possible way an effective turnout is possible in a location such as the cafe, and to my understanding, the event about Residence Life was during lunch.

Publicity is the biggest key to any event and it wasn't used. For what reason? I don't know. A relevant example was Bob Baylor's discussion on financial aid. Six people attended the event. To me, six people in attendance does not show a successful program, when one thinks about the number of students that receive financial aid.

Perhaps the Residence Life forum was given during lunch. Believe it or not, people do use the cafeteria to eat. A forum as important as this should be put in the open and visible to the students.

Another point is that no advance notice was given in The Montclarion. I scrutinized the April 24 issue and no announcement or newsnote about the forum was in it. The turnout would have been better if advance publicity had been given. Students' schedules are hectic and they need substantial time to put such events in their schedule.

A lecture about terrorism was held out in front of the Student Center and the turnout was good.

Residence Life should take out their explanations and policies to the students in key places. Whether it is the front of the Student Center or the atrium of Blanton, students need an open forum. The back of the cafeteria isn't the place.

R.A. responds to Resident's letter concerning room selection process

To the editor:
As a Resident Assistant and Director of Residence Life Affairs for the SGA, I would like to answer Craig Rogers' letter of May 1st.

Mr. Rogers expressed his concern for the students taking part in the annual room selection process. First of all, the room selection process is "contemplated" very thoroughly by both students and administration. This process is entirely fair in that it gives priority to those students with seniority and who already live in Residence Life dorms. Therefore, no existing dorm student or freshman will be left home-less! None of these students were "wait-listed" as Mr. Rogers says.

Mr. Rogers makes the assertion that Blanton Hall is the dorm in highest demand, and that we need to build a new dorm as a "solution" to our problems. There are always going to be people who will be unhappy with what they get in the room selection pro-

Student praises professor's column about the American attack on Libya

To the editor:
A time when it has become increasingly unpopular to criticize US foreign policy, there arises a need to present a more realistic assessment of our political and military involvement in the affairs of sovereign countries. Professor Furr has offered such an assessment in his article, "Putting Libya into Focus."

A government that sanctions the provision of financial aid to regimes types of aid earmarked for the overthrow of noncompliant governments, resorts to military coercion involving patent acts of aggression, and frequently engages in an expedient complicity with corrupt and corruptible leaders to further economic and defense interests certainly undermines its position as a force for peace in the world community. These forms of manipulation can in no way promote stable, long term international relations.

In serving our own national interests, we have shown in many cases a total disregard for the rights and privileges we value so highly for ourselves. I would like to thank Professor Furr for a thought provoking and timely contribution.

women's rights, yet think nothing of trampling on the rights of another group of females: the unborn females. The born female demands rights, while negating the rights of the unborn female. The hypocrisy is glaring! (Pro-choice is an interesting term, considering the vast majority of those in its group are strong adherents of abortion. For the unborn human there is no choice). The Pro-choice women demand a right, yet refuse to accept the responsibility that goes with "rights." Granted, men share responsibility for sexual activity and resulting pregnancy. But men don't get pregnant, women do. A biological fact of life. Knowing this, it is the ultimate responsibility of women to minimize the risk and accept the fact they may still get pregnant. Where is their concern for control of their bodies at this time?

Now we introduce morality. If Pro-choice women do not accept an unborn child as a human being, then all the above is meaningless. A fetus can then be equated with a wart. You get a wart, you get it removed. Get another wart and this wart is removed. That's the way it is with warts. If, however, Pro-choice women concede for example, that an eight and a half ounce fetus is a human being, they are obviously caught in a moral dilemma.

They would now be obliged to acknowledge that an unborn child is a human being. That determined, it's just a matter of deciding how far back toward conception to draw a line between wart and a human being.

Since there is no empirical resolution to this as yet, notwithstanding the debate about sentience, I submit that the Pro-choice women draw that line whenever expediency outweighs conscience and responsibility. Survival of the strongest, if you will. (Many Pro-choice women abhor capital punishment, yet think nothing of executing a wart. Save the baby seals, but bludgeon the warts).

Alas, some Pro-choice justifications for abortion: overpopulation, unloved and abused children, poor and hungry children, all of which are brought into the world. All are specious reasoning (perhaps to allay guilt). Who are they to decide who shall exist or not, using their subjective notion of overpopulation? Suffering children? The hands of countless childless couples and singles are just waiting to snatch up and love the unwanted child-wart.

Nine months of pregnancy, with all its admittedly uncomfortable effects, is only a short moment in life, for one to fulfill the obligations and responsibility that comes with pregnancy. If it's argued that a woman could thus spend years in unwanted pregnancy, then the fault lies not in the womb, but in the woman.

A child is indeed a wonder to behold-and all. If a woman can't accept the biological results of a sexual encounter, perhaps she should abstain from such activity. At least then life would not be created, only to be destroyed in a few months of existence, no matter how painless that destruction may be, as is espoused by Pro-choice women.

Moliere comedy limps through lame MTS production

By Gary Ruff

In an attempt to update Moliere's 17th century classic, "The Imaginary Invalid," director Ramon Delgado has transformed the brilliant satiric thrust of this French comedy into a blunt stroke which misses its mark. Despite a number of wonderful individual performances, this Major Theatre Series production is very inconsistent and uneven.

"The Imaginary Invalid," in its original form, satirizes those who rely upon the weakness of others. The main character, Monsieur Argan (Kevin Fabian), is a hypochondriac whose faith in his dishonest and incompetent physician is both amusing and somewhat disturbing. The supposed intent of Delgado's interpretation was to lambaste the addictions of 20th-century society. However, this is accomplished only superficially; with the notable exception of the cocaine-sniffing lawyer Bonnefoy (Keith George), the portrayal of drug use is incidental and uncomical. Also, the opening drug deal on the street seems to be out of place in a drawing room comedy. At the end, when the transformed Argan writes prescriptions for everything from marijuana to Coca-Cola, it comes across as a last-minute effort to resurrect an underdeveloped theme.

The adaptation is marred by other inconsistencies. The production found- ers between period manners and values, and devices designed to "modernize" its flavor. Angelica (Nicolete Vajtay), Argan's daughter, is portrayed as a leather-jacketed, spike-heeled groupie, and her lover, Cleante-Cleante (Richard Elgan) is a swaggering rock musician. Their duet number, where the lovers express their feelings to Argan, is so poorly performed that Argan's deadpan reaction ("Unbelievable") is funny only because it is so accurate.

The modern dress of the other characters does succeed in setting off Argan as an old-fashioned fool. His archaic values are made more ridiculous by the absurd pomposity of his friend, Dr. Diaforos (Jillian Armanente), and his idiot son Thomas (George Abboud). However, Vajtay's extremely flat performance, and the rather one-dimensional realizations of the more "modern" characters, minimize the dramatic contrast. The exception is Michele Tauber's humorous and versatile portrayal of the maid Toinette, whose reactions to Argan's repression of his daughter are far more convincing than Vajtay's childish pouting and stamping. Only Toinette is truly down-to-earth, more than a mere caricature. Even Argan's sister Beralde (Marisa Altamura), the character who finally liberates Argan from his own naivete, is too superficial and self-righteous to be admired. Basically, the opposition of outdated values with progressive ideas is halfhearted and lost in the inconsistencies of the adaptation.

Another problem is the blatant incongruity of the French setting with the Americanized characterizations. Only Argan is at all French in manner; this only serves to make him seem more out of place. Cleante's Brooklynese is the most obvious insult to the "Frenchness" of the dialogue; the mispronunciation of "moneur" and "votre sante" also make one feel that this production should have been set in the States. This feeling that the adaptation was not completely thought out pervades the show.

Yet credit must be given to a cast which had to work with a play caught in a time warp. Keven Fabian is excellent as Argan, offsetting the character's childishness with both humorous innocence and sarcastic wit. Argan's paranoia is so transparent that his stubborn belief in his illnesses is hilarious.

Other good performances include Jillian Armanente as Dr. Diaforus and George Abboud as Thomas. The scene where Thomas, proffering for his mother, courts Angelica is very funny, even if it refers to a custom which seems obsolete in a modernized production.

The exaggerated movements and expressions of Keith George as Bonnefoy provide further humor, as does Michele Tauber in the scene where Cleante (Rich Eigan) and Angelica (Nicolete Vajtay) are amused by the awkward courtship of Thomas (George Abboud) whose mother (Jillian Armanente) coaches his efforts.

The set, designed by Jim Noone, is beautiful, detailed and authentically French. The lighting and smoke effects in the finale are effective, although the sound engineering caused problems which needs no alteration. Moliere's satire is so broad and inclusive, it is timeless. The playwright's original intents would be clearer if the script were either preserved as original or reinterpreted with consistency. Instead, the MTS production tries to update the issues while preserving the character of Argan, without fully relating the two situations. The results, on the whole, are disappointing.

Big news this week is that Mr. Reclusive, Michael Jackson, came out of hiding long enough to sign a three-year, 15 million dollar deal with Pepsi. What irks me besides the fact that he has finally appeared is that he won't even drink Pepsi. Oh no, it's fruit juices for Mr. Squeaky Clean...Bob Geldof to release an album along with His Bio... Rumors abound that Power Station's drummer Tony Thompson is to join with surviving members of Led zap for an album later this year...On April 4, 1964, the Beatles held the top five spots on the singles chart. DEC displays fashions

By Susan Baldasarre

Delta Epsilon Dhi (DEC) presented “Dress You Up,” its 23rd Annual Spring Fashion Show Tuesday night, May 6 in the Student Center Ballrooms. The exciting show featured the latest fashions in casual wear, swimwear, sportswear, businesswear and eveningwear. Local retailers provided the outfits.

Coordinators for this year’s show were Cathy Damato, Dinata DiPace and Susan Baldasarre. The commentators were Susan Baldasarre and Tom Landres.

DEC is a retailing club under the BEOSA department in the School of Business Administration. This annual year-end fundraiser gives DEC members the chance to exercise their leadership skills, planning abilities and creative expression. With the latest fashions, DEC gave the audience a chance to sit back, enjoy themselves and be “dressed up.”

MSC grad Mills will be ready when USFL fall season arrives

By Perry Schwarz

For the last three years, spring was the time the United States Football League presented its brand of football to the sports world. However, after last season, the league decided to give up spring football and won’t be playing again until this fall.

For the players it’s been a long layoff, and it could affect their performance. In the off-season, athletes are expected to maintain their physical condition. Sam Mills, MSC graduate and three-time All-USFL linebacker, did just that. He is ready to put the pads back on and get back to the game. The last time Mills had his equipment on was for the Baltimore Stars in the USFL championship game in July, 1984.

“The players I spoke with are ready for the upcoming season and ready to defend our title,” said Mills. “I had a lot of time with my family and friends to relax, but now I’m anxious to get back to playing.”

Although Mills made personal appearances and “relaxed” during the long off-season, he hasn’t exactly been idle. The players were allowed to have mini-camps to maintain timing, footwork, and performance levels, but without a coach to tune them and work on strategy, the players’ work is insufficient to ensure success.

“We accepted coach Mora’s decision (to leave) and the guys are happy for him,” Mills said. “We now have to accept a new coach and work towards another championship. I want to get back to the game.”

Mills, a 1981 MSC graduate and one of a few original USFL players to join in 1983, said he will have to get used to the pads again, but once the helmets are buckled and shoulderpads strapped, he will be ready for action.

“I have kept in contact with the players and they all want to get rolling with the season and just get back to the game that they love—football.”

Leonard should keep his gloves on the shelf

On December 11, 1983, Sugar Ray Leonard announced his retirement from boxing at a press conference. He returned to the ring a year later. He fought Kevin Howard and was knocked down in the fourth round. Leonard retaliated and registered a TKO in the ninth.

After that fight, Leonard again called it “quits.” The possibility of going blind due to his detached retina was too much of a risk. Now he is back and declared he wants to fight WBA Middleweight Champion Marvin Hagler. That’s right, Leonard is back out of retirement for a second time.

The match that Leonard said wouldn’t take place is now going to become a reality. He said at his first retirement party in Baltimore, “The two of us (Leonard and Hagler) in the ring would be a helluva fight! And we would make a lot more money than any other fighters. But, I’m sorry Marvin, that will never happen.”

Apparently, Leonard changed his mind. He now wants to fight the middleweight.

The temptation to fight Hagler four years ago was 20 million dollars. Imagine what the price is now. Leonard said to Howard Cosell four years ago the amount was tempting. Could the price have increased that much for Leonard to come out of retirement and risk injuring his eyes again?

Why is Leonard going to box Hagler? Leonard said he returned back to the ring the first time to test the condition of his eye. He also said he wanted to see if he still had the talent to be a top-rank boxer. But why come back again?

The man is wealthy. He is working for HBO as a color commentator, and has made money from commercials also. Leonard left the ring as a champion and that’s the way people will remember him—a champion. If he remains in retirement, only time will tell what will come of the Leonard-Hagler dream match. Howard Cosell said that the Leonard of two years ago could beat Hagler, but what about now? And will Leonard’s decision to return to the ring turn out to be at the cost of his sight? Only time will tell.

Important Announcement

For Students

The Financial Aid Office would like to inform all students of new federal Verification regulations for 1986-87. These regulations concern students applying for any type of financial aid, and College Work Study.

To comply with Verification, all applicants must:
2. Complete the 1986-87 Federal Verification Form

The Verification Form is available in the Financial Aid Office. You will be required to submit copies of your own and your family’s federal tax returns for 1983. If you don’t have copies, you should request them from the IRS immediately.

Failure to comply with Verification requirements will result in the loss of financial aid for 1986-87. Early submittal of all the above forms will avoid delay in the processing of your financial aid for next year.
Men's tennis third in NJAC

By Patty Jones

The men's varsity tennis team recently completed their season and finished third in the New Jersey Athletic Conference league behind Rutgers-Newark and Ramapo. During the second half of the season, the Indians experienced some ups and downs which affected the performances and overall record of the team.

'The Indians suffered a loss of a key player, Jim Russell, due to inability. Russell was the first singles player and undefeated third doubles partner. The team was forced to advance the line-up and because of this, players had to adjust to playing at a higher position than they did previously in the season.

The change in line-up and the inclement weather served as obstacles for the Indians. Matches against division III schools Monmouth and Upsala were cancelled and were never rescheduled. This robbed the team of the chances for two more possible wins.

The Indians were able to get over the obstacles and finish with a respectable 8-4 record.

In Newark on April 9th, the Indians defeated NJIT, 6-2. John Trinity played at the sixth singles position and he attributed the success to his past experience.

Talent and power were exhibited by Joe Staunton at showing on April 12th and defeated his opponent, 6-0, 6-0. Against Trenton State on April 25th, the new line-up worked quite effectively, as the Indians took a 7-2 victory. Trinity advanced from second to first singles and played with confidence, defeating his opponent 6-2, 6-4. The change in line-up didn't seem to affect the team's performance.

Staunton and Russell kept up their impressive undefeated record in the 1st singles position and defeated Njit, 6-2. John Trinity played in the 1st singles position and dominated his opponent 6-3, 6-3. J.J. Martinez and Jim Caci defeated their opponents in the 2nd and 3rd singles positions, respectively.

The Indians made an impressive showing on April 12th and defeated Glassboro State (7-2). Fine performances were exhibited by Joe Staunton at fifth singles. Staunton made a big comeback in his match, winning 7-6, 6-1. Chip Sgro defeated his competitor at the sixth singles position, 7-5, 6-4. All three doubles teams played outstandingly well against GSC. In pro sets, Trinity and Jim Caci won 8-7, J.J. Martinez and Chip Sgro won, 8-3, and Staunton and Russell kept up their impressive undefeated record by winning, 8-2.

On April 14th, the Indians devastated Jersey City State with a 9-0 knock-out victory. Talent and power were exhibited by all team members. Chip Sgro played exceptionally well in the sixth singles position, defeating his opponent 6-0, 6-0.

Against Trenton State on April 25th, the new line-up worked quite effectively, as the Indians took a 7-2 victory. Trinity advanced from second to first singles and played with confidence, defeating his opponent 6-2, 6-4. The change in line-up didn't seem to affect any of the strength among the singles players. Trinity, a transfer student from Trenton State played well in the first singles position and he attributed the success to his past experience.

"I played 1st singles for the past two years at Trenton State," said Trinity. "So now I'm facing the same competition that I've faced before." Trinity's personal record stands at an impressive 9-3.

Against Trenton, MSC swept the singles competition. J.J. Martinez won, 6-0, 6-4; Caci won 7-5, 6-0; Staunton won, 6-2, 6-4; Sgro won, 7-6, 6-7, 6-2; and Schambrom defeated his opponent, 6-4, 8-2.

Trivia Time-Out

OK, sports fans, back by popular demand, here is your chance to see just how much you know about sports. Each week, The Montclarion will publish a list of sports questions and answers to test your knowledge of sports trivia.

In addition, there will be a sports stumper that will be answered in the following issue.

If you think you have the correct answer to the stumper, drop it off at The Montclarion, Room 113 in the Student Center Annex. The names of those who submit the correct answer will be published in the next week's issue. Deadline for submissions is Monday at 3 p.m.

1. Who was the first man to throw the shotput over 60 feet?
2. How many times did Denny McLain win the Cy Young award?
3. Who was the first player in the National Basketball Association to score over 20,000 career points?
4. Before joining the Philadelphia Warriors in 1960, Wilt Chamberlain played for what team?
5. What two players hold the major league home run record for brothers?

Answer to last week's stumper:
Who pitched 58 consecutive scoreless innings of baseball in 1968?

Don Drysdale.

Answering the correct answer was:
Kathy McDonough, Tom Branna.

This week's stumper:
What is the MSC basketball team's all-time record against St. John's?

Baseball team makes run at Division III title

By Jim Nicosia

The road begins here for the MSC baseball team.

To be exact, it begins at Pittser Field Friday at 4 p.m. when the 29-7-1 Indians take on Glassboro State College in the first round of the New Jersey Athletic Conference playoffs. The double-elimination tournament then switches to Trenton State College for the remainder of the games Saturday and then Thursday.

"The way they've got the playoffs running now (extended over the period of a week), that helps the teams with the weaker pitching," said MSC Head Coach Kevin Cooney. "Now each team can use their ace twice. We have better depth with our pitching staff, and, although I think we have the best pitcher in the league (Anthony Foti), I think the other teams will benefit more from the arrangement."

MSC, Glassboro, Trenton, and William Paterson are all vying for the conference crown and an automatic bid into the Mid-Atlantic Region of the NCAA Tournament. The winner of those playoffs will then earn a spot in the Division III World Series in Marietta, Ohio, on May 29-June 1.

Cooney believes pitching will tell the tale as to which team advances to the regionals. He also believes the Indians should have just as much depth as NJAC Champions with continued quality performances from his primarily young pitching staff. In a move that Cooney says might surprise some people, he plans on going with three freshmen as starters for the conference tournament.

Foti, a transfer from St. Leo's College (Florida), was the ace of the staff all season and has deserved the right to start Friday. After Foti, Cooney plans on throwing Dave Kern in the second game of the playoffs. Kern, a reliever for the most part, had one start against Upsala last Wednesday and performed more than adequately according to Cooney.

"He's a freshman, but I don't think the pressure will get to him at all," said Cooney. "He had no problem with Upsala."

When the need arises for a third starter, the ball will go to another freshman, lanky right-hander Jeff Vanderderwerf. The 6-3, 3-0 record as a starter and finished the year particularly strong, shutting down Rutgers University late in the season as one of his major accomplishments.

Last week, the Indians secured a tie for first place in the NJAC by beating Rutgers-Newark, 16-3 and splitting a doubleheader with Glassboro, winning 7-5 and losing game two, 9-7. In the loss, the first defeat after 12 straight MSC wins, the Indians hit what Cooney called, "five fly balls that could have gone out, but the wind was so strong blowing in that they were just easy outs. We felt cheated.

Cooney and the rest of the Indians are now looking forward to the chance to show the Profs some of their power on their home field Friday. MSC boasted a 7-1 conference record in the friendly confines of Pittser Field.

The Indians are also counting on a big number of the "MSC faithful" to flock to Pittser Field Friday to help the team in its first test on the road to the World Series. "Our kids really respond to a crowd," he said. "We love having a big vocal crowd down the right field line to cheer us on. It really helps the team a lot, and they have a ball out there, too."

Men's track team impresses; O'Connor stars for women

By Jim Nicosia

MSC men's track and field coach Vic Mizzone had reason to be excited after his Indians placed seventh at the Collegiate Track Conference championships in Trenton Saturday.

"This is the best any MSC team has done in the CTC's in years," said Mizzone. "I'm very pleased with the team and with the individual performances."

Heading the list of impressive showings for MSC were Amed Abolf and Rick Baron. Abolf broke the MSC record for the triple jump with a 44' 10 1/2" jump, earning him fourth place. Baron defended his CTC title in the high jump, winning with a 6' 6" leap.

The MSC X 100 relay team of Field, Godfrey Brown, Ed Chavis, and Mike Hawkins placed an impressive fifth in the nation for the NCAA national tournament.

Field and Chavis each placed in a second event. Chavis took fourth place in the 100 meters with a time of 10.7. Field was second in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, finishing in 53.8 seconds.

Other quality performances were turned in by Manny Mendez, Ron Kulik, and Joe Obiso. Mendez placed fifth in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 10:09. In the 10,000-meter run, Obiso placed second and Kulik fourth. "Joe Obiso ran a tremendous race," said Mizzone. "He's come along all season and this week he's got a chance to qualify for the nationals."

Mizzone saw the CTC as a good tune-up for this Saturday's State Conference championships. "Glassboro has dominated the conference for the past ten years," Mizzone said. "Saturday we want to try to get as close to them as possible. I've been here two years and we've been gaining on them. The guys have worked very hard all year, so I think we'll do well."

O'Connor captured the CTC championship title in the triple jump by leaping 11.31 meters (371 feet). That jump was good enough to make O'Connor the new MSC record-holder in the triple jump. By making the 371 foot jump, O'Connor also moved into the number three spot in the country in the Division III rankings.

The Indians, who finished 14th in the tournament, also earned points in the high jump and long jump. Silvia Battista jumped 1.47 meters to take sixth in the high jump, and she also placed sixth in the long jump by leaping 4.83 meters in the long jump.

The greeting of a player at home plate after a home run—a scene the Indians hope is a familiar one on their quest for the NCAA Division III championship.

Lady Indians earn bid into NCAA tournament

By Jim Nicosia

Despite losing its last three games of the regular season, the MSC softball team earned a bid into the NCAA Division III tournament last week.

MSC (28-11), Keen (34-7), and Ithaca (17-11) will play in what is officially termed a "Floating Region" with Keen serving as the host school. The Indians and Ithaca will compete in the first game at noon on Friday.

The loser will then take on Keen at 2 p.m. and the winner will play Keen at 4 p.m. in the double elimination tournament.

The championship game will be held on 2 p.m. with another game being played at 4 p.m. if necessary.

E. Connecticut 1 - MSC 0

Sophomore Dina DeAguino pitched a no-hitter for the Indians on Saturday against Plymouth State, but wound up on the losing end of a 2-0 score as the Indians failed to provide her with any support.

The MSC defense committed three errors in the fifth to open the door for Plymouth's two-run inning. Cindy Ingersoll and Cath O'Connor reached on errors and scored when Kim Bean's grounder to third was overthrown.

"DeAguino (17-8) struck out five batters and allowed three hits but the Indians' offense was held in check by Plymouth starter Bean. She limited MSC to a pair of singles by Ann Deutsch in the second inning, the other by Andrea Peters in the sixth."

The Indians couldn't put any runs on the board for starter Debbie Emery in the second game of the doubleheader, either, as they fell to last year's Division III champion Eastern Connecticut State, 1-0.

Down 1-0 in the sixth inning, MSC made its only threat when centerfielder Donna Marcon and first baseman Julie Bacher both singled with one out. Emery, who gave up five hits in absorbing the loss on the mound, reached on an error to load the bases. Eastern Connecticut pitcher Julie Bacher was up to the task, though, and she set the next two Indians down on a pop-up and a strike-out to put down the MSC rally.
