Vernon Walters, U.N. Ambassador, addressed a group of 33 MSC students and faculty members during an excursion to the United Nations complex in New York City.

This trip, which took place on Tuesday, December 2, was sponsored by the Political Science Club and Dr. Edward Johnson of the political science department. The students and faculty literally "left the country" when they crossed the international border to enter the United Nations. The U.N. is situated on land donated by the U.S. and is designated an international territory.

The trip’s highlight was a presentation by Vernon Walters, the American Ambassador to the U.N., to the MSC students and faculty in attendance.

After briefing the students about the functions of the U.N., Walters moved into the many economic and political problems the U.N. is facing. In America’s eyes, some of the U.N.’s problems are the third-world block, which tends to be anti-American, the bloated bureaucracy, and the out of proportion control over U.N. monies by poorer countries, whose contributions total less than 3% of the U.N.’s budget. The problems are many and the answers won’t be easy. As Walters stated, “We need the courage to swim upstream.”

And Walters admitted that “the language spoken at the United Nations is not the language of democracy” this because “only 45 of the 159 member countries are democracies.” Despite these faults, however, he feels it is important for the United Nations to remain in the U.S. and for America to remain active in the organization.

Walters, who is also this month’s president of the Security Council (the body of 15 nations who maintain world peace) stressed that the U.N. is a forum for the greater part of mankind. “Countries who won’t listen to the United States might listen to the United Nations” he said.

The conference, which consisted of two workshops and an employer information session, was well attended and attended by black, Hispanic and Asian MSC students and Alumni. The first workshop focused on the “Game Plan For Success: Making Your Minority Status Work For You” and the second workshop dealt with “Special Issues For Minorities In The Workplace.”

The evening culminated with a dinner for employers, students, alumni, MSC staff and faculty. After dinner, Marien Shepherd, Director of Administration Personnel at AT&T Bell Laboratories spoke about “What Corporations Seek When They Recruit At Colleges.”

The Minority Career Conference was organized, conducted and sponsored by the Black Alumni and Hispanic Alumni Committees of the MSC Alumni Association, MSC’s Career Services, the Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and the Black Students Cooperative Union (BSCU).

Among the speakers at the workshops were Dr. Sandra, of the Psychology Department, Dr. Anita Usha, of the Curriculum and Teaching Department and Jose Magdalena, career counselor at MSC.

The conference has also highlighted the role of Career Services at MSC and the various opportunities it offers for career enhancement. The two workshops presented a variety of speakers representing various organizations like MSC, Prudential Insurance, WNET/Channel 13 and Merrill Lynch.

Dr. Walters, president of MSC, is shown with other officials on hand for this year’s successful Fourth Annual Law School Admission Day. This year’s program featured pointers on the law profession from members of the New Jersey State Bar Association’s Young Lawyers Division.

New computer equipment approved for Montclarion

By Mike Heelan
Staff writer

At the SGA meeting convened last night, the legislature approved the funds needed by the Montclarion to purchase new typesetting equipment.

SGA NEWS

According to Oyde Blackmon, senior sales representative of Varityper, the new typesetter will replace the "obsolete" machinery in use. The present machinery is "insufficient," and therefore repairs are not cost effective.

Jim Nicosia, Editor in Chief of the Montclarion, said, "This new equipment is going to be a real benefit to us, and the college as a whole. I would especially like to thank Mark Skrabonja and Oren Zeve for all the hours of research they put into this project. Nothing could have been possible without their help; especially Mark who made a $67,000 purchase a very simple one financially." The SGA approved the bill unanimously.

In other news, Mike Rodak, student representative to the Board of Trustees, gave a statistical report concerning faculty employment status. As of Fall 1985, the faculty at MSC consisted of 455 full-time members and 309 adjuncts and visiting specialists, and 83 graduate assistants. However, these figures are misleading to students because not all the full time teachers teach a full course load.

Some of the full time teachers perform administrative duties and other various activities. In their absence, adjuncts are forced to fill in the gap.

In addition, Mike Rodak discussed the signing of a $50 million dollar water bill by President Ronald Reagan. The purpose of this bill is to buy out homes built on a flood plain, hence lessening the probability of a flood tunnel being built directly under MSC.

According to Mark Brennato, SGA president, the Who's Who applications are due in the SGA office by Dec. 19. Also, a reminder was given in regard to the free phone call service made available by the SGA.

Free phone calls can be made to the 609, 212, 718, 215, 914, 703, 301, and 202 area codes. The phones are located in the multipurpose room, lower level of the Student Center. Each call is limited to ten minutes per person.

The SGA approved $2,500 for the Ski Team Club. All money will be put toward practice, races and other activities. This appropriation makes up 12.5 percent of the club's total expenses.

Finally, a Class II Charter was granted to the Marketing Club for the academic years 1986-88.

Co-op aids students in future career planning

By Joanne O'Connor

Correspondent

For the past six months, I've been working in the Personnel Department of Automatic Data Processing in Clifton, and learning a lot about what I really want and don't want to do with my future. Although the picture is becoming more focused for me now, things weren't always so clear.

My first interest was in the field of counseling, with my original focus being in one-on-one counseling, and later shifting to group therapy. I took several courses in which I actively counseled individuals and facilitated groups, while at the same time learning the course material.

Although I thoroughly enjoyed the courses and the personal contact, I found myself becoming too emotionally involved, and consequently bring others problems home with me. It was then that I decided that this wasn't right for me.

Cooperative Education is a program that enables students to earn credits and money while gaining experience in their chosen field. With their help, I was better able to determine that I might want to work in the corporate setting, specifically in the Personnel Department.

After several interviews, I finally obtained a Co-op in the Personnel Department of Automatic Data Processing. As with all of my other career choices, I entered this position extremely excited, enthusiastic, and loaded with a lot of preconceived ideas of what it was going to be like. After three months, I became discouraged, as I was pushing more paper than dealing with people, statistical reports, Affirmative Action Plan, Turnover Analysis, and other small projects. Needless to say, my eyes were opened to the real work involved in a Personnel Department.

Near the end of my stay there, I was changed to the Training Department, which is a division of Personnel. There I observed and became involved in the conducting of training courses offered to the employees. I am happy to say that it was when doing this job that I finally felt happy and content, and realized that here I could not only use my skills but also teach them to others.

For any of you who may be experiencing many of the same feelings of ambivalence that I did, I urge you to utilize the benefits of the Cooperative Education program. It was a tremendous help to me in determining what I really wanted to do when I graduated college.

Trials, tribulations, and the semester’s end blues

It's the end of another semester and anyone who has been in college knows what that means. It means having two days left to read that 800-page novel for English class, having a dozen computer programs to run and all the terminals are taken. It means your car breaks down and you miss the exam date and the 20-page term paper you never started is due tomorrow. It means your roommate feeling guilty and enjoying all those Christmas or Chanukah gifts. Most of all, we can take some time off and relax. But while we are, we should also take some time and reflect on the past semester. We should look at what we have done and accomplished, how we've treated our roommates, professors, friends, and family.

We should look ahead to the spring and try to avoid our past mistakes. We at The Montclarion will do the same and once again try to be the best we can be next semester. We hope we've served the college community well this semester and we will strive to do so in the future. Have a happy and safe holiday! See you in January!

... oooooh! And what good little boys & girls is all this typesetting equipment for? Ho-ho-ho!

Writers on the World

Using the 'C' word on T.V.

The other night, Mary Beth Lacey, cop and co-star, talked to her 16-year-old son about birth control. "If you care enough about a girl to make love with her," she said, "you care enough to keep it safe."

There was nothing extraordinary about her sentiment. Except that it appeared on network television.

Lacey did something else in that hour show. She used the forbidden C-word: contraception. She actually said "contraception" in prime-time programming. The earth did not open, satellite dishes across America did not crack, assorted FCC licenses did not disintegrate into confetti.

I offer you this news from the media front, as someone who routinely rants about the C-less sex that dominates the screen. I feel compelled to offer a cheer for every change in the script.

Mind you, the Lacey boy was 16 before his folks decided they'd better have a "little talk." They had to get pushed into it by discovering Harvey Jr. and his gal Tiffany on the sofa. But progress is progress.

This event came just a few weeks after Allie (as in "Kate and Allie") chatted with her teenage daughter about birth control. It came just days after Planned Parenthood launched a campaign aimed at television networks with full-page ads headlined: "They did it. 9,000 times on television last year. How come nobody got pregnant?"

The ad was admittedly a bit hyperbolic. 9,000 times? Who's counting? Nobody pregnant? Surely an actress or two. But the point was sharp. The tube is steaming with sexuality and birth control. "If you care enough about a girl to make love with her," she said, "you care enough to keep it safe.""Tell it to the sensitivity of their viewers because birth control is controversial." Rape, murder, mayhem and menace are just too insensitive. But even though 90 percent of all Americans use contraceptives, they are labeled "controversial." Indeed the networks seem to be far behind their own affiliates in this peculiar vision. Stations in Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Houston, Indianapolis, Sacramento, Seattle and Minneapolis are all running ads for condoms or sponges, as are independent or cable stations.

The reality is that even if the networks collectively eliminated every sexual encounter, either "C" word consequences or contraceptives amounts to a prime time length commercial for "doing it." Even if every show put on one requisite contraceptive segment in the next year, the score would still hover around this: Sex: 9,000. Birth Control: 2.

"We're saying, let's have some balance," insists Planned Parenthood president Faye Wattleton. "Balance doesn't equal a sequence of 'Cagney and Lacey' and then another on 'Kate and Allie.'" Real balance means lowering the random sexual content of programs while raising the times people act and talk responsibly.

Hollywood's best and worst for 1986

By Bob Carmody
Staff Writer

Once again, Hollywood has had a less than productive year, and it's the critic's job to comment on their bad fortune. This year, in fact, was worse than most. I couldn't even think of ten films that I would recommend, so I settled on five.

1. Hannah and Her Sisters: Woody Allen's masterpiece, Which Was Written, Directed and Starred by Woody Allen, is a film about performing and surviving in a world that is completely inappropriate for his character. He scored higher than the eleven people who managed to make the cut for his film, and even the ones who were being tormented by the Soviet authorities? Classic line: "You can't do this to me!"

2. The Color of Money: Newman is back. His best role ever, and Martin Scorsese directed the whole thing. A non-sequel sequel, Money is a vibrant, moving character study. Winning the regional finals, he continued on to the national level at the national level. Matthew Broderick was New York's best actor, but he was the underdog and everyone's out to get him, including all those corporate badges. But, of course, he wins in the end and everyone lives happily ever after. Another bunch of mindless teen "actors" infest this film, with the expected result.

3. Down and Out in Beverly Hills: Paul Mazursky's perfect Americanization of Renee's "Boulevard Saved From Drowning" hits right on target. Noite, Dreyfuss and Midler are almost too perfect. 5. Jo Jo Dancer Your Life: Richard Pryor's directing debut is also his dynamic self-portrait. Jo Jo is a brilliant character. We can always count on Pryor will direct himself in his future films.

Now it's time for the junk. There was so much. I had to narrow this list down to only ten.

1. Children of a Lesser God: William Hurt stumbles through this film looking like he was forced to do it at gunpoint. Though the film has a classy title, it's just a hopelessly mushy love story.

2. Space Camp: Essentially a kiddie film, this mess has the mentality of a dead squirrel on Route 46. Awful acting, pitiful dialogue, and a completely unbelievable storyline make this one a flop of epic proportions.

3. Ren: Rocky on a bicycle. He's the underdog and everyone's out to get him, including all those corporate badges. But, of course, he wins in the end and everyone lives happily ever after. Another bunch of mindless teen "actors" infest this film, with the expected result.

4. Born American: Chuck Norris' son does not have a good film model. The story: three wacky teens go to Finland for a vacation, cross the Soviet border, and wonder why they are being tortured by the Soviet authorities? Classic line: "You can't do this to me!"

5. Under the Cherry Moon: Prince's directing debut is about as affecting as being hit with a paper towel soaked in Wesson. Great music, but then again, why not just record to the record instead of suffering through this pretentious, self-adorning piece of celluloid?

6. Cobra: Stallone's return to the screen was a huge disappointment. He was supposed to be the new Lyricist, but he's just a hopelessly mushy love story, dripping with Rocky-esque sentiment. He's the underdog and everyone's out to get him, including all those corporate badges. But, of course, he wins in the end and everyone lives happily ever after. Another bunch of mindless teen "actors" infest this film, with the expected result.

7. American Anthem: Who ever said that Olympic athletes with great bodies can act? This is another underdog story, dripping with Rocky-esque sentiment, horrendous acting, and such music that it's difficult to hear the dialogue.

8. Shanghai Surprise: Enough said.

9. Howard the Duck: How can a George Lucas-produced film fail? Well, within 5 minutes of meeting the famed duck from outer space, Lea Thompson says to Howard, "What am I gonna do with you?" Ducky? The real question is how this stupid film could ever have been made. But don't worry; George will just write this one off on his taxes.

10. Revolution: The posters read, "The war that won a nation its freedom, a father his son's respect, etc." It also earned director Hugh Hudson his ticket out of Hollywood. This big-budget farce has a rock-star singing "Hopelessly Mushy Love Story," and Schwarzenegger's fake Scarface accent. "Dis ain't my war!" An unequalled mistake.

That's all I have to say. Have a great new year, and I hope Hollywood does, too.

MSC alumnus choreographs new Studio Theatre musical

This week's Studio Theatre Series production of "The Me Nobody Knows" is a musical produced by New York theatre director, Gerry McIntyre. Having graduated from the department of speech and theatre in 1984, McIntyre has portrayed his Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in acting/directing into a successful acting career. A regional award winner, McIntyre has returned to the college this semester to choreograph the Studio Theatre musical, which opens Thursday, Dec. 11 at 8 p.m.

McIntyre currently resides in New York City, commuting to the MSC campus for rehearsals. He balances his professional career with his work as a dance teacher in the educational theatre. Working in an educational setting allows him to share with students some of the experiences he has learned about performing and surviving in a professional setting. "I wanted to help people here," McIntyre states. "I learned a lot here, but I missed a lot not performing that often when I was here.

Prior to his 1984 graduation, Gerry was nominated to compete for an Irene Ryan Award, sponsored by the American Federation of Theatre. This nomination came for his performance as the Leading Player in the musical "Pippin" produced by Players. Winning the regional finals, he competed on the national level at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. He scored higher than the eleven other finalists to win the Ryan Award, performing a monologue from "Pippin" and a monologue from the play "Of Mice And Men." He soon was awarded a summer fellowship at the Interlochen School for the Arts in Michigan. He received his Equity card - membership in the professional actors' union - by working with The Actors Workshop USA, a company which creates and performs theatre for young audiences. His first Off-Broadway production was a short-lived musical called "Joan of Arc at the Stake," which starred Glenn Close and William Hurt.

In 1985 McIntyre was cast by Maurice Hines in the Broadway revue "UpTown," and he was working with Hines when "The Me Nobody Knows" has helped me tremendously," says McIntyre. "Hines gives 99 to 100 percent at every rehearsal, and demanded the same from everybody. As a student, I thought it was okay to give 70 percent in rehearsal and 99 percent when performances came." McIntyre sees similar traits in today's students, and admits that the cast of "The Me Nobody Knows" must feel a little like he was working with Hines. "At rehearsals I was just jumping up and down and being crazy...and they were a little wary. I was giving 100 percent and they were giving 99 percent. But they understood and grew, and that has been exciting. The me most recent professional engagement was at the New York City Opera House in Connecticut, as a cast member in the new musical "Jokers." Devised by Martin Charnin, lyricist/director of the Broadway hit "Annie," "Jokers" is a musical version of "The Game," a play about two senior citizens in a rest home playing cards. Originally, the ensemble was part of the Me Nobody Knows' minds, and I was confused by the card players. I played the "Ace!" McIntyre laughs. "But Charnin is always coming up with new ideas. Many times we would go onstage with new lyrics or new music. His creativity is amazing, each new idea more exciting than the last."

"Jokers" closed in Connecticut in mid-November. Rehearsals will begin again in New York in February, preparing for a March opening on Broadway.

In the interim, McIntyre is pleased to be working on "The Me Nobody Knows," at "This is a good musical for me to choreograph. It's very contemporary, and requires a style of movement that I'm very comfortable with. Someday I'd like to choreograph more traditional pieces, but I need to grow more. At this time, I have a lot to contribute to the "Me Nobody Knows.""

WHEN IS THE RIGHT TIME TO CALL YOUR BOYFRIEND?

a) When the president of Phi Gamma Delta asks you to Saturday night's Fiji Formal.

b) After racquetball class, to tell him that the instructor with the Australian accent and those blue eyes did wonders for your serve.

c) When you just feel like telling him you miss him after all.

Maybe you shouldn't tell him everything that's going on. But if you still care about him, why not call and whisper some sweet things he'll never forget?

Like why you call using AT&T Long Distance Service, and why you trust AT&T's high quality service and exceptional value.

When you tell him that AT&T gives you immediate credit if you dial a wrong number, he won't be able to get you out of his mind.

And telling him you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections will drive him crazy.

All of which will probably inspire him to drive out for the weekend, giving you an excuse to blow off that silly frat party after all.

Indian basketball team gets first wins of season

By Dennis Campbell
Staff Writer

Give the MSC basketball team credit. They certainly know how to play with the emotions of a crazed crowd. With the cheers, the Indian basketball team got an all-time high at Panzer Gym last night. MSC came away with a hard-fought 71-69 victory against the heavily-favored Buffalo State team.

Mark Scott, who paced the Indians with 14 points, said that the team was starting to put its act together. “We do whatever it takes to win,” he said. His swolen eye attested to that fact.

The Indian guards opened the game with a furious offensive charge. Swinton and Johnson came off the bench to give MSC a 24-23 lead. Scott’s offensive rebound gave the Indians the lead at 26-23.

The second half could be called the Mark Scott show. With Jersey City’s full-court pressure, MSC guards proved unable to turn over the Iona offense. Scott came through with clutch baskets down the stretch.

With three minutes remaining in the game, MSC led 64-57, but the Indians were having trouble getting the ball in play. The Indians applied pressure. Jersey City cut the lead to two with 30 remaining, but Karl Wright free throws put the game out of reach, giving MSC a three-point lead.

Scott paced the Indians with 14 rebounds to go with his 14 points. Johnson and Swinton chipped in with nine and eight points, respectively.

MSC 60 - Ramapo 53

Last Saturday night saw the Indians capture their first win of the season by defeating Ramapo College, 60-53 at Ramapo. It took a big MSC rally in the second half to pull out the win, but when it was all over, the Indians had claimed their first New Jersey Athletic Conference win against 4 losses.

The Indians started off slow, hitting only 33 percent of their shots from the floor in the first half. Meanwhile, Ramapo’s 11 of 22 shot attempts were turned into a 28-20 lead.

In the second half, Ramapo’s defense started turning things around. The Indians shot a 10 of 17 from the free throw line to storm past the Roadrunners.

Mark Scott was the scoring star for MSC. He hit 17 points on 7 of 18 shooting from the floor.

MSC 67 - Buffalo State 53

What speed and quickness did for MSC in the opening game of the tournament, shooting and inside strength did in the final. Phillips and Ehrmann combined for 40 of the Indians’ points in Panzer Gym yesterday over a scrappy Buffalo State team.

“I think Buffalo State matched up very well with us speed-wise and they had a balanced game going for them, too,” said Jeffrey. “That’s the beauty of our team. You can shut down the ball a little more of our offense but we still have the ability to score.”

The one player was senior co-captain Lorraine Bratton who got in early foul trouble and saw less than 20 minutes of playing time. The one part of the offense that was shut down was the MSC transition game.

In fact, it was the transition that almost hurt the Indians’ title bid. Buffalo forced 19 turnovers with its swarming full-court and half-court pressure. The MSC offense was forced to alter its attack.

After opening up a 30-19 lead with 2:40 to go in the first half, MSC found itself with the problem of trying to push the ball upcourt against a Buffalo State defense that was fully in gear. In the next two minutes, the Indians were outscored 1-0 and found themselves in a whole new tempo. Their press took us out of our game. At halftime we made some adjustments, some mental and some strategic. Then we came out in the second half and took control.”

MSC 67 - Jersey City 52

The women’s basketball game inside Panzer Gym Tuesday night was as sloppy as the weather outside. For all intents and purposes, the ice on the streets might just as well have been on the court. It would have made little difference.

Fortunately for MSC, the team’s talent was enough to overcome what was mostly a sub-par performance by the Jersey City team. After an opening game, 45-36, MSC fell victim to the press again and saw its lead dwindle to one, 47-46, during the second half. Ehrmann forced a turnover and scored a three-point margin. Kaigler then made a pretty drive to the basket for two, and Ehrmann finished off a three-point play to give MSC a cushion again.

It wasn’t until Phillips followed one of her own shots then connected on a pair of free throws with 3:43 remaining to give MSC a ten-point lead that the Buffalo stampede was subdued.

“MSC is the kind of game you have to be played with a lot of heart and won with a lot of pride,” said Jeffrey. “In the second half, we started winning.”

Jeffrey had final words of praise for her MVP. “This tournament is just around the bend and we’ve been able to play with great mental ability,” she said. “It’s been a lot of fun.”

The Indians staked themselves to a 26-20 lead with 1:15 remaining in the first half, but never got untracked. Only after outscoring the Goths 11-4 going into the half did the Indians begin to take control. Still, the 37-24 halftime score was not impressive for the heavily-favored MSC squad.

“It took us awhile to get started,” said Jeffrey, realizing her understatement. “Almost the entire first half.”

MSC transition game.

Tonight wasn’t one of our best efforts. Tonight we were just sluggish and sloppy.”

The Indians staked themselves to a 26-20 lead with 1:15 remaining in the first half, but never got untracked. Only after outscoring the Goths 11-4 going into the half did the Indians begin to take control. Still, the 37-24 halftime score was not impressive for the heavily-favored MSC squad.

“We came out of halftime with full-court pressure and got some easy baskets,” said Jeffrey. “That turned things around for us. But then we slipped back into our regular defense and they really took advantage of it. Tonight wasn’t one of our best efforts. We had too many breakdowns on offense and defense. The Indians got a balanced scoring effort from three, and defensively, Phillips and Kaigler led the way with a dozen points each. Ehrmann and Bratton followed with 10 points apiece. Becker and Kathy Drummond, who had a hand in the win off the bench, each came up with eight-point efforts.

Though the Indians now sport a 7-1 record, the toughest part of their schedule awaits them. They will play their next eight games on the road and won’t return to the friendly confines of Panzer Gym until January 24. Their first trip is to the Western Connecticut tournament this weekend where they will meet Salem (Va.) in the first round.

“Salem is a very, very tough team,” warned Jeffrey. “They have great athletes. They match up well with us inside and have great speed, too. We’ll have to play transition offense and keep them off the boards.”

“If we play well this weekend,” said Jeffrey, “it will give us an indication of the strength of other Division III schools around the country. It will be good to get this added exposure in different states. It should also test our strength and help us see where we stand.”

And the key to the Indians’ success this far in the season? “I don’t know if it’s because we’re really this good or if it’s just a fear of losing that’s kept us winning,” says Jeffrey. “We didn’t play well at all tonight. I’d say tonight’s win was just a fear of losing.”

Lady Indians capture second straight Dial title

By Jim Nicosia
Editor-in-Chief

Chalk up another Dial Classic Championship for the MSC women's basketball team.

With wins over Lebanon Valley (65-44) and Buffalo State (65-53) this weekend at Panzer Gym, the Indians notched their second straight Dial title and fifth in the eight-year history of the tournament. The terms Dial champs and MSC are fast becoming synonymous.

It was a weekend that saw the 6-1 Indians come up with a pair of impressive all-around efforts. In both wins, the defense shut out its opponent to the final, scoring 22 points and gathering all-tournament team. Junior center as three Indians were named to the final. From there, the inside game took over.

Accolades didn’t escape MSC either, as three Indians were named to the well-deserved MVP award. Ehrmann led the way by taking 13 rebounds. Freshman guard pumped them into the tournament run-and-gun offense, meanwhile, while the defense shut out its opponent to the final, scoring 22 points and gathering all-tournament team. Junior center as three Indians were named to the final. From there, the inside game took over.

MSC head coach Jill Jeffrey reminded everyone, "Our defense led to a lot of our points in the first half and half of them came as a result of our defense. Cynthia Kaigler put good pressure on the ball game at the 6:33 mark into a 26-10 run."

That pressure helped the Indians run off a 16-2 streak in the first half. The outburst turned what was a 10-8 ballgame at the 6:33 mark into a 26-10 runaway with 7:00 remaining. "I think we're beginning to see the difference the quickness we now have on this year's team makes," said Jeffrey. "We have been getting out to quicker starts and keeping our intensity for 40 minutes. That's really a lot to say for such a new team."
