Vernon Walters, U.N. Ambassador, addressed a group of 33 MSC students and faculty members during an excursion to the United Nations complex in New York City. This trip, which took place on Tuesday, December 2, was sponsored by the Political Science Club and Dr. Edward Johnson of the political science department. The students and faculty literally “left the country” when they crossed the international border to enter the United Nations. The U.N. is sizably situated in land donated by the U.S. and is designated an international territory.

The trip’s highlight was a presentation by Vernon Walters, the American Ambassador to the U.N., to the MSC students and faculty in attendance. After briefing the students about the functions of the U.N., Walters moved into the many economic and political problems the U.N. is facing.

There are advantages and disadvantages in being a minority in the workplace; learn how to exploit the advantages and adjust to the disadvantages. This was the underlying theme for the Minority Career Conference that was held in the Student Center ballrooms on Dec. 3.

The conference, which consisted of two workshops and an employer information session, was well attended by black, Hispanic and Asian MSC students and Alumni. The first workshop focused on the “Game Plan For Success: Making Your Minority Status Work For You” and the second workshop dealt with “Special Issues For Minorities In The Workplace.”

The evening culminated with a dinner for employers, students, alumni, MSC staff and faculty. After dinner, Marion Shepherd, Director of Personnel at AT&T Bell Laboratories spoke about “What Corporations Seek When They Recruit At Colleges.”

The Minority Career Conference was organized, conducted and supported by the Black Alumni and Hispanic Alumni Committees of the MSC Alumni Association, MSC’s Career Services, the Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and the Black Students Cooperative Union (BSCU).

The conference has also highlighted the role of Career Services at MSC and the various opportunities it offers for career enhancement.

The two workshops presented a variety of speakers representing various organizations like MSC, Prudential Insurance, WNET/Channel 13, and Merrill Lynch. The workshops were interesting, informative and informal.

The speakers spoke mainly from personal experience, describing the conditions in the workplace when they started out and also giving a personal view on work conditions for minorities today.

The most important event of the conference was the “Employer Information Exchange” where the students and alumni participating in the conference could talk informally to the employer representatives and submit their resumes. Among the long list of employers attending the conference were AT&T, JC Penney, Xerox, Lockheed Datacom, NCR Corporation and Prudential. While some of the organizations looked for specific majors, many employers were willing to look at all majors. Part-time summer jobs, full time jobs, advanced jobs and internships were offered for those candidates who were successful.

New computer equipment approved for Montclair

By Mike Heelan
Staff writer

At the SGA meeting convened last night, the legislature approved the funds needed by the Montclarion to purchase new typesetting equipment.

According to Oyde Blackmon, senior sales representative of Varityper, the new typesetter will replace the "obsolete" machinery in use. The present machinery is "insufficient," and therefore repairs are not cost effective.

Jim Nicotra, Editor in Chief of the Montclarion said, "This new equipment is going to be a real benefit to us, and the college as a whole. I would especially like to thank Mark Skrabonja and Oran Zewe for all the hours of research they put into this project. Nothing could have been possible without their help, especially Mark who made a $67,000 purchase a very simple one financially." The SGA approved the bill unanimously.

In other news, Mike Rodak, student representative to the Board of Trustees, gave a statistical report concerning faculty employment status. As of Fall 1985, the faculty at MSC consisted of 455 full-time members, 309 adjuncts ate assistants. However, these figures are misleading to students because not all the full time teachers teach a full course load.

Some of the full time teachers perform administrative duties and other various activities. In their absence, adjuncts are forced to fill in the gap.

In addition, Mike Rodak discussed the signing of a 50 million dollar water bill by President Ronald Reagan. The purpose of this bill is to buy out homes located on the 1st floor between the Candy Store & Pilgrim State Bank

Co-op aids students
in future career planning

By Joanne O'Connor
Correspondent

For the past six months, I've been working in the Personnel Department of Automatic Data Processing in Clifton, and learning a lot about what I really want and don't want to do with my future. Although the picture is becoming more focused for me now, things weren't always so clear.

My first interest was in the field of counseling, with my original focus being in one-on-one counseling, and later shifting to group therapy. I took several courses in which I actively counseled individuals and facilitated groups, while at the same time learning the course material.

Although I thoroughly enjoyed the courses and the personal contact, I found myself becoming too emotionally involved, and consequently bring others problems home with me. It was then that I decided that this wasn't right for me.

Cooperative Education is a program that enables students to earn credits and money while gaining experience in their chosen field. With their help, I was better able to determine that I might want to work in the corporate setting, specifically in the Personnel Department.

After several interviews, I finally obtained a Co-op in the Personnel Department of Automatic Data Processing. As with all of my other career choices, I entered this position extremely excited, enthusiastic, and loaded with a lot of preconceived ideas of what it was going to be like. After three months, I became discouraged, as I was pushing more paper than dealing with people, statistical reports, Affirmative Action Plan, Turnover Analysis, and other small projects. Needless to say, my eyes were opened to the real work involved in a Personnel Department.

Near the end of my stay there, I was changed to the Training Department, which is a division of Personnel. There I observed and became involved in the conducting of training courses offered to the employees. I am happy to say that it was when doing this job that I finally felt happy and content, and realized that here I could not only use my skills but also teach them to others.

For any of you who may be experiencing many of the same feelings of ambivalence that I did, I urge you to utilize the benefits of the Cooperative Education program. It was a tremendous help to me in determining what I really wanted to do when I graduated college.

Trials, tribulations, and the semester's end blues

It's the end of another semester and anyone who has been in college knows what that means. It means having two days left to read that 800-page novel for English class, having a dozen computer programs to run and all the terminals are taken. It means your car breaks down and you miss the class you just have to attend because the professor will review for the final exam and you haven't had time to show up for class lately. It means selling your books back early because the only money you have to study.

The end of the semester is often equally troublesome for professors. They must read all those horrendous term papers which usually consist of a five-page introduction, five-page conclusion, and a bunch of mixed modifiers and dangling participles in between. They must also decide whether or not to pass the student who only showed up for class five times during the semester.

In a week and a half, however, it will all be over and many of us will be in the company of our friends and family. We can attend all those parties without feeling guilty and enjoy all those Christmas or Chanukah gifts. Most of all, we can take some time off and relax. But while we are, we should also take some time and reflect on the past semester. We should look at what we have done and accomplished, how we've treated our roommates, professors, friends, and family.

We should look ahead to the spring and try to avoid our past mistakes. We at The Montclarion will do the same and once again try to be the best we can be next semester. We hope we've served the college community well this semester and we will strive to do so in the future. Have a happy and safe holiday! See you in January!

MSC alumni choreographs new Studio Theatre musical

This week’s Studio Theatre Series production of “The Me Nobody Knows” is a homecoming for MSC alumnus Gerry McIntyre. Having graduated from the department of speech and theatre in 1984, McIntyre has parlayed his Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in acting/directing into a successful acting career as a regional and New York theatre. He has returned to the college this semester to choreograph the Studio Theatre musical, which opens Thursday, Dec. 11 at 8 p.m.

McIntyre currently resides in New York City, commuting to the MSC campus for rehearsals. He balances his professional career with his work as a dance choreographer in the educational theatre. Working in an educational setting allows him to share with students some of the lessons he has learned about performing and surviving in a professional setting. “I wanted to help people here,” McIntyre states. “I learned a lot here, but I missed a lot not performing that often when I was here.”

Prior to his 1984 graduation, Gerry was nominated to compete for an Irene Ryan Award, sponsored by the American Federation of Theatre and Radio Artists. This nomination came for his performance as the Leading Player in the musical “Pippin,” produced by Players. Winning the regional finals, he competed on the national level at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. He scored higher than the eleven other finalists to win the Ryan Award, performing a song from “Pippin” and a monologue from the play “Of Mice And Men.” He was soon awarded a summer fellowship at the American Repertory Theatre in Virginia. He received his Equity card - membership in the professional actors’ union - by working with The Actors Studio USA, a company which creates and performs theatre for young audiences. His first Off-Broadway production was a short-lived musical called “Joan of Arc at the Stake,” which starred Glenn Close and William Hurt.

In 1985 McIntyre was cast by Marsha Hines in the Broadway revue “UpTown.” It’s a thriller, working with Hines has helped me tremendously,” says McIntyre. “Hines gives 99 to 100 percent at every rehearsal, and demanded the same from everybody. As a student, I thought it was okay to give 70 percent in rehearsal and 99 percent when performances came. McIntyre sees similar traits in today’s students, and admits that the cast of “The Me Nobody Knows” must feel just like he felt working with Hines. “At rehearsals I was just up down and being crazy … and they were just a little wary. I was giving 100 percent, but they were only giving 99 percent. But they understood and grew, and that has been exciting.” McIntyre’s most recent professional engagement was at the Opera House in Connecticut, as a cast member of the new musical “Jokers.”

Devised by Martin Charnin, lyricist and director of the Broadway hit “Annie,” “Jokers” is a musical version of “The Ga In Game,” a play about two senior citizens in a rest home playing cards. “Originally, the ensemble was part of the director’s minds, an odd emblem of the cards. I played the Ace!” McIntyre laughs. “But Charnin is always coming up with new ideas. Many times we would go onstage with new lyrics or new music. His creativity is amazing, each new idea more exciting than the last.”

“Jokers” closed in Connecticut in mid-November. McIntyre’s next engagement is a role in “Orange is the New Green,” a musical version of “The Me Nobody Knows” at MSC. This is a good musical for me to choreograph. It’s very contemporary, and requires a style of movement that I’m very comfortable with. Someday I’d like to choreograph more traditional pieces, but I need to grow more. At this time, I have a lot to contribute to “The Me Nobody Knows.”

1. Hanan and Her Sisters: Woody Allen’s masterful “Manhattan” is a study of interiors. His 1978 drama, Allen realized that he could do a drama, but he just had to throw in a few jokes. A timeless work.

2. The Color of Money: Newman is back. Crui is in his best role ever, and Martin Scorsese directed the whole thing. A non-sequitur sequel, Money is a vibrant, moving character study.

3. Hall Mary: Jean-Luc Godard’s finest to date. The film was banned by the Catholic church, but the actors pay them no never actually saw the movie.

4. Down And Out in Beverly Hills: Paul Mazursky’s perfect Americanization of Renier’s “Boulu Saved From Drowning” hits right on target. Noite, Dreyfuss and Miiller are almost too perfect.

5. Jo Jo Dancer Your Life Is Calling: Richard Pryor’s directing debut is also his dynamic self-portrait. Jo Jo is a brilliant character. We can only hope Pryor will direct himself in his future films.

Now it’s time for the junk. There was so much. I had to narrow this list down to only ten.

1. Children of a Lesser God: William Hurt stumbles through this film looking like he was forced to do it at gunpoint. Though the film has a classy title, it’s just a hopelessly mushy love story.

2. Space Camp: Essentially a kiddie film, this mess has the mentality of a dead squirrel on Route 46. Awful acting, pitiful dialogue, and a completely unbelievable storyline make this one a flop of epic proportions.

3. Red: Rocky on a bicycle. He’s the underdog and everyone’s out to get him, including all those corporate badasses. But, of course, he wins in the end and everyone lives happily ever after. Another bunch of mindless teen “actors” inest this film, with the expected result.

4. Born American: Chuck Norris’ son does not in a good film mc over the story of three wacky teens go to Finland for a vacation, across the Soviet border, and then wonder why they’re being tortured by the Soviet authorities? Classic line: “You can’t do that to me.”

5. Under the Cherry Moon: Prince’s directing debut is about as affecting as being hit with a paper towel soaked in Wesson. Great music, but then again, why not just listen to the record instead of suffering through this pretentious, self-adorning piece of celluloid?

6. Coba: Stallone’s return to the screen of the “success” (inՌա “The Me Nobody Knows” is amazing, each new idea more exciting than the last."

7. American Anthem: Who ever said that Olympic athletes with great bodies can act? This is another underdog story, dripping with Rocky-esque sentiment, horrendous acting, and some music that it’s difficult to hear the dialogue.

8. Shanghai Surprise: Enough said. 9. Howard the Duck: How can a George Lucas-produced film fail? Well, within 5 minutes of meeting the famed duck from outer space, Lee Thompson says to Howard, “What am I gonna do with you, Ducky?” The real question is how this stupid film could ever have been made. But don’t worry; George will just spend a few bucks on his taxes.

10. Revolution: The posters read, “The war that won a nation its freedom, a father his son’s respect, etc.” It also earned director Hugo Hudson his ticket out of Hollywood. This big-budget farce has a plot resembling the Revolutionary War sets saying, with his Scarface-like accent, “Dis ain’t my war!” An unequalled mistake.

That’s all I have to say. Have a great new year, and I hope Hollywood does, too.

when is the right time to call your boyfriend?

a) When the president of phi gamma delta asks you to saturday night's fiji formal.

b) After racquetball class, to tell him that the instructor with the australian accent and those blue eyes did wonders for your serve.

c) When you just feel like telling him you miss him after all.

Maybe you shouldn't tell him everything that's going on. But if you still care about him, why not call and whisper some sweet things he'll never forget?

Like why you call using at&t long distance service, and why you trust at&t's high quality service and exceptional value.

When you tell him that at&t gives you immediate credit if you dial a wrong number, he won't be able to get you out of his mind.

And telling him you can count on at&t for clear long distance connections will drive him crazy.

All of which will probably inspire him to drive out for the weekend, giving you an excuse to blow off that silly frat party after all.

-AT&T The right choice.

MSC 65 - Buffalo State 53

What speed and quickness did for MSC in the opening game of the tournament, shooting and inside strength did in the final. Phillips and Ehrmann combined for 40 of the Indians' points in Monday's 57-31 victory over a scrappy Buffalo State team.

"I think Buffalo State matched up very well with us speed-wise and they had a good-sized inside game going for them, too," said Jeffrey. "That's the beauty of our team. You can shut down the post, but you can't shut down our offense but we still have the ability to score."

The one player was senior co-captain Lorraine Bratton who got in early foul trouble and saw less than 20 minutes of playing time. The one part of the offense that was shut down was the MSC transition game.

In fact, it was the transition game that almost hurt the Indians' title bid. Buffalo forced 19 turnovers with its swarming full-court and half-court pressure. The MSC Offense was forced to alter its attack.

After opening up a 30-19 lead with 2:45 left in the first half, MSC found itself with the problem of trying to push the ball upcourt against a swarming full-court pressure. In the next two minutes, the Indians were outscored 11-0 and found themselves in a new ball game. At the 0:50 mark, Sue Becker and a free throw by Tomasa Powell kept them on top at the half, 33-31. MSC was able to regroup.

"In the first half we played right into their hands," said Jeffrey. "We let them get their shots off and decide the tempo. Their press took us out of our game. At halftime we made some adjustments, some mental and some strategic. Then we came out in the second half and took control."

The Indians' defense forced Buffalo to shoot 33 percent from the floor in the second half after a 65 percent effort in the first half. MSC also limited them to 30 points.

Offensively, the inside game was forced into the smallball. After MSC opened a two-point lead, the tandem of Ehrmann and Phillips accounted for 21 of the last 29 Indian points of the game.

Buffalo State wasn't through, however, until only about four minutes remained in the game. After the score was 45-36, MSC fell victim to the press again and saw its lead dwindle to one, 47-46. Ehrmann forced the turnover for a three-point margin. Kaigler then made a pretty drive to the basket for a layup, giving MSC a three-point lead.

Last Saturday night saw the Indians capture their first win of the season by defeating Ramapo College, 60-53 at Ramapo. It took a big MSC rally in the second half to pull out the win, but when it was all over, the Indians had claimed their first New Jersey Athletic Conference win against 4 losses.

The Indians started off slowly, hitting only 33 percent of their shots from the field in the first half, meanwhile, combined with 11 of 22 shots to pull out to a 28-20 lead.

That small margin was MSC turn things around, however. They hit on 15 of 29 shots in the final 20 minutes, combined with 10 of 17 from the free throw line to storm past the Roadrunners.

Mark Scott was the scoring star for MSC. He hit for 17 points on 7 of 18 shooting from the floor.

With three minutes remaining in the game, MSC led 64-57, but the Indians were having trouble getting the ball in play. In the Gothic's applied pressure, Jersey City Cut the lead to two with 3:30 remaining, but Karl Wright free throws put the game out of reach, giving MSC a three-point lead.

Scott paced the Indians with 14 rebounds to go with his 17 points. Johnson and Swinton chipped in with nine and eight points, respectively.

MSC 67 - Jersey City 52

The win was not impressive for the Indians' defense and defense.

Fortunately for MSC, the team's tempo was enough to overcome what was mostly a sub-par performance to defeat Jersey City Athletic Conference foe Jersey City, 67-52. The win boosted the Indians' record to 7-1 (3-1 in the JAC), while dropping Jersey City to 2-3 (1-1 in the JAC).

The game was a "classic" example, if you will, of point play to give MSC a cushion again. It wasn't until Phillips followed one of Kaigler's points. The Indian guards opened the game with a furious offensive charge. Swinton and Johnson played well with confidence in the opening minutes of the game, as they penetrated and dished the ball inside. Darrin Johnson came off the bench to give MSC a 24-23 lead.

"I think Buffalo State matched up very well with us speed-wise and they had a good-sized inside game going for them, too," said Jeffrey. "That's the beauty of our team. You can shut down the post, but you can't shut down our offense but we still have the ability to score."

Mark Scott was the scoring star for MSC. He hit for 17 points on 7 of 18 shooting from the floor.

We came out of halftime with full-court and got some easy baskets," said Jeffrey."That turned things around for us. But then we slipped back into our regular defense and they really took advantage of it.

Tonight wasn't one of our best efforts. We had too many breakdowns on offense and defense. The one thing, the Indians got a balanced team scoring effort from their offense. Phillips and Kaigler led the way with a dozen points each, Ehrmann and Bradtton followed with 10 points apiece. Becker and Kathy Drummond, who had a hand in the off the bench, each came up with eight-point efforts.

Though the Indians now sport a 7-1 record, the toughest part of their schedule awaits them. They will play their next eight games on the road and won't return to the friendly confines of Panzer Gym until January 24.

Their first trip is to the Western Connecticut tournament this weekend where they will meet Salem (Va.) in the first round.

"Salem is a very, very tough team," warned Jeffrey. "They have great athletes. They match up well with us inside and have great speed, too. We'll have to be prepared on offense and keep them off the boards.

"If we play well this weekend," said Jeffrey, "we'll give an indication of the strength of other Division 3 schools around the country. It will be good to get this added exposure in different states, it should test our strength and help us see where we stand."

And the key to the Indians' success thus far in the season? "I don't know if it's because we're really this good or if it's just a fear of losing that's kept us winning," says Jeffrey. "We don't play well at all tonight. I'd say tonight's win was just a fear of losing... But we'll take it.
Lady Indians capture second straight Dial title

By Jim Nicosia
Editor-in-Chief

Chalk up another Dial Classic Championship for the MSC women's basketball team.

With wins over Lebanon Valley (65-44) and Buffalo State (65-53) this weekend at Panzer Gym, the Indians notched their second straight Dial title and fifth in the eight-year history of the tournament. The terms Dial champs and MSC are fast becoming synonymous.

It was a weekend that saw the 6-1 Indians come up with a pair of impressive all-around efforts. In both wins, the defense shut out its opponent to the final, scoring 22 points and gathering all-tournament team. Junior center as three Indians were named to the final. From there, the inside game took over.

Accolades didn't escape MSC either, as three Indians were named to the all-tournament team. Junior center Sue Ehrmann led the way by taking the well-deserved MVP award. Ehrmann notched 34 points and 22 rebounds in the two games. Junior forward Nancy Phillips was a big force in the final, scoring 22 points and gathering 13 rebounds. Freshman guard Cynthia Kaigler had 24 points in the tournament to earn her all-tournament status, as well.

All three Indians proved to be instrumental in capturing the title, but MSC head coach Jill Jeffrey reminded everyone, "Though three of them made the all-tournament team, I don't want the other players to feel slighted, because they all played a big part.

"It's very nice to single out players for individual achievement, but I don't want my players, or anyone else, to think that this was anything less than an 11-player effort."

MSC 65 - Lebanon Valley 44

The opening game of the tournament saw the Indians take advantage of their speed advantage over Lebanon. Kaigler led the Indians to a 20-8 lead by scoring 12 points and setting a pace that the Pennsylvania team could not keep up with.

By halftime, MSC already owned a 32-18 lead and built on it from there. With the Indian guards wearing out the Lebanon team, Ehrmann was freed from her defense that earned most of them made the all-tournament big part.

"Our defense led to a lot of our points in the first half and half of them came as a result of our defense Cynthia Kaigler put good pressure on the ball early and that got us some transition points."

That pressure helped the Indians run off a 16-2 streak in the first half. The outburst turned what was a 10-8 ballgame at the 6:33 mark into a 26-10 runaway with 7:00 remaining.

"I think we're beginning to see the difference the quickness we now have on this year's team makes," said Jeffrey. "We have been getting out to quicker starts and keeping our intensity for 40 minutes. That's really a lot to say for such a new team."
