On Sunday March 1, the MSC branch of Pilgrim State Bank will close. Transactions may be made until Friday, February 27. The MSC branch has operated on campus since 1973.

The MSC branch of Pilgrim State is a full service bank for the entire MSC community and state accounts relevant to the campus.

All accounts now based at the MSC branch will be transferred to the Pilgrim State Bank branch on 604 Valley Rd., Upper Montclair, and customers will be welcome at the other branches in Montclair, Roseland and Cedar Grove. Also, all account holders will be mailed a notice informing them of the change.

R.M. Delbridge, Vice President for Pilgrim State was not available for comment. However, Dr. Barry Cohen, Assistant Vice President for Finance at MSC, stated that the bank had "determined that their operations have not provided them with the profit levels that they are seeking." Dr. Cohen handles MSC accounts at Pilgrim.

Last year in an effort to increase revenue, Pilgrim raised money order fees from 75¢ to $2.00, and implemented a $1.00 check cashing charge for non-account holders.

Cohen stated direct state involvement with the bank may have influenced Pilgrim State's decision to close its' campus branch. Cohen said, "Partly as a result, negotiations were not resolved to the bank's satisfaction and that was a major influence in the bank's decision to leave."

Cohen stressed, "The college attempted to work out a solution that would be acceptable to the bank and to the State Department of Cash Management (who administers the funds)." It was at this time the bank decided to close its' branch.

When Pilgrim State made the final decision to pull out of MSC, they gave the college less than 4 months notice to find a replacement bank.

Pilgrim's state involvement with MSC will continue until June 1988. The space is rented from the Faculty Student Co-operative and rent payments will continue until such a time as a new bank would need the space.

Even with the freedom granted to MSC by the new autonomy law, it will be difficult for MSC to attract banks that will provide the same services that Pilgrim State did. As Cohen explains, "Banks in general are quite interested in servicing the college's accounts, the accounts of the Student Government and the various organizations at the college. But there has not been a terribly enthusiastic response in regard to them opening a branch on campus."

As an alternative to an on-campus bank branch, the installation of an automatic teller machine has been discussed. While the advantage of 24-hour banking will appeal to students, the limitations of an automatic teller machine make it, in the eyes of the college, a second best solution.

But as Dr. Cohen states, it is also the more probable solution, saying, "I think we have a reasonably good prospect of getting an ATM, but I am less optimistic about getting a branch office at the college."

On Tuesday, Jan. 29, President Donald E. Walters addressed the faculty, non-teaching professional staff and librarians in a meeting designed as a mid-year review update.

The audience was informed of MSC's receipt of $1.1 million in Challenge Grant funds. The New Jersey Board of Higher Education awarded the unprecedented second grant to MSC for its' proposal in the area of critical thinking.

Walters also informed the faculty of a newsletter, "We are justifiably proud to be recipients of...this second grant for critical thinking programming."

The money will establish an Institute for Critical Thinking, Challenge Grant funds awarded to MSC total $6.8 million. Dr. Wendy Osman, formerly of Educational Leadership at MSC, was appointed director of the new program.

The program will have campus-wide emphasis on critical thinking principles used to encourage analytical thinking. In addition, the grant will also fund a newsletter, a campus test design center and efforts to aid outside business and professionals in their reasoning and problem solving skills.

The main thrust of Walters' address concerned the findings of marketing surveys conducted by Enrollment Management Consultants on MSC's behalf.

The Baltimore-based firm of Barton-Gillette sub-contracted EMC to study matriculated and non-matriculated students concerned with MSC.

Dr. John Maguire of EMS explained the interview subjects were asked why they were attracted to or repelled by MSC.

The 11-month study yielded results that may be implemented by the college upon recommendation. They study was funded by the state for approximately $250,000.

The study's results included the influence of parental preference. According to Maguire, college-bound high school seniors are strongly influenced by their parents opinions regarding the school of their choice.

The study also found the negative influence geographic location may exert. The further away a student lives from campus negatively influences school choice.

The academic reputation of MSC was found to influence students' choice of school. MSC received a higher grade from matriculated students as opposed to the lower grade received form non-matriculated students.

Student body size was also found to influence students decision making process.

The most significant result of the study was the influence of the sense of campus community. Said Ivan Tolbert, Assistant Director of Public Information at MSC, "The college needs a greater sense of 'esprit de corps.'"

The final report from Barton-Gillette will be received in early spring with the company's recommendations for formulating an MSC marketing plan. Said Walters, "The study will develop a marketing program which will allow the college to influence the decisions of college-bound students.

Public hearing to discuss procedures

By Mike Heelan
Staff writer

At the first SGA meeting of the new year, Mike Rodak, student representative to the Board of Trustees, announced a public hearing to take place on February 5, 1987, in room 412 of the Student Center. The purpose of this hearing is to discuss possible procedures for electing a student to vote on the Board of Trustees. Until this new bill was signed into law last October, student representatives to the Board of Trustees were not allowed to vote. The new bill takes effect in the Fall of 1987.

Some students are in favor of having the SGA legislature appoint the representative. Others called for a direct election by the student body. All those interested in speaking at the public hearing must contact Lisa Greene at 893-4213 by Monday, February 2, 1987.

In other news, Rosemarie Savino, Co-Coordinator of Spring Week '87, discussed plans for this year's event. In addition, she encouraged any students interested in participating to attend the first meeting on Tuesday, February 3, at 1 p.m. in room 417 of the Student Center.

This February is Black History Month. The Black Student Cooperative Union has a calendar of events to address issues pertaining to blacks. All students are welcome to visit the BSCU office at Room 119 of the Student Center or to call 893-4198.

Big blue wrecking crew comes through—finally

You didn’t think we could let this week go by without capitalizing on the opportunity to say something about our beloved New Jersey Giants, did you? Face it, the past two years have been successful for Metropolitan area sports. First, the Mets claimed baseball’s top prize in October. Now, the Giants are in the spotlight, as their turn to have homage paid to them from their adoring fans.

You’ll have to search very hard to find a group of fans who have suffered as long as the New York Giants. Twenty-three years, to be exact, since the last time the Giants participated in a championship game. You would have to go all the way back to 1965 before you would find the Giants on top of the football heap.

Since then, it hasn’t been pretty. In fact, it’s been a dismal story. Sometimes it seems as if the Giants would be rebuilding for the rest of the century. Their climb to the top began in 1979 when the feuding Mara uncle and nephew tandem finally came to one conclusion—that they couldn’t come to any conclusion. In their ultimate wisdom, or lack thereof, they agreed to appoint Mr. George Young to the position of General Manager and gave him complete control over the team’s football operations.

With Young came Mr. Ray Perkins. Perkins was supposed to be the Giants’ saving grace as head coach. The first three and a half years showed some improvement. Then, it happened. In 1982 Perkins left to become head coach at the University of Alabama. In 1983 the Giants won a mere three games out of 16. The team’s supposed rise to respectability appeared to have run into a brick wall. Bill Parcells, the man hired to replace Perkins, was not to be denied success, however.

With last Sunday’s Super Bowl win, the Giants have finally (and we do mean FINALLY) exorcised all the ghosts of seasons’ past: The Fumble of 1978; the endless years of wasted draft picks; the wasted Sundays in front of the television set, all the fading memories.

The new memories: an elated Phil McConkey dancing in the end zone after finally hauling in a Super Bowl touchdown pass; the wasted drafts; the wasted Sundays in front of the television set, all the fading memories.

These are all the memories that will last as long as, if not longer than, the memories of all the losses. All hail the Giants!
Every horror movie has its sequel and this is no exception. Producer and doctor Bernard Nathanson is at it again. He has put together Silent Scream II, or what he has entitled "Eclipse of Reason." Last time out, the right to lifers favorite filmmaker purported to show a first trimester abortion. It was a box office sensation, especially on the home tube. This time he has used two lenses, one inside and one outside the womb, to focus on a politically more vulnerable spot, the one outside the womb. This time he does not watch Nathanson's work without wondering about its direction. Where does this doctor find the players for his films? Presumably, a patient had to perform the abortion for her or for her doctor to perform the abortion for her or for Nathanson's audience? Did Nathanson pay for it? This is symbolic of the Nathanson cinematic political style. His lens looks straight through the woman, as if she were an invisible vessel. We learn nothing about her, her life, her health, or the specific, murderess. We learn nothing about her life, her health, or the reasons that she chose abortion. All we know is that she bleeds.

Nathanson plays to an audience that is uneasy about abortions that take place after the first trimester. Most of us are. At some point we are legally allowed to abort a fetus that can also be saved. The law, as Justice O'Connor wrote, is on a collision course with technology. Today, 92 percent of abortions are done in the first trimester. Only one percent are done beyond 20 weeks. In practice, we are already restricting the outside limits of abortion. But the dilemma ignored in this polemic is that those who choose abortion in the 16th week or the 18th week are most often teen-agers who haven't been able to face their pregnancies or their parents. The rest of second-trimester abortions are chosen by and large by women who have serious health problems or have found they're carrying abnormal fetuses.

At the end of this film, in his best medical voice, Dr. Nathanson intones, "Abortion, all abortion, is violence... there is no rightful place for violence in a world of reason." Indeed there is a place for reason, for reasonable debate about mid-term abortions. But it does not have room for the man who originally called this tract "Revelation and Nightmare."

Dr. Nathanson does not reason, he manipulates. He doesn't make documentaries, he makes propaganda. The scary part of his horror films is that banks in the Willowbrook Mall and Upper Montclair are both accessible by public transportation. Of course, there are other facilities as well in the surrounding community. Another concern would be that of our student employees who need to cash their checks. This problem is also being addressed and the possibility of developing a check-cashing station is under review.

For 12 years the college has been fortunate to have a bank on campus and, unfortunately, that luxury could not be sustained since so few students maintained accounts with the bank that it was unable to remain open. Students who have further questions may wish to address them to me, Barry Cohen, and/or Mark Brancato, President of the Student Government.

Help your parents through college.
Instead of a dorm or a rental, invest in a Crescent Park co-op.

Starting this January, loans for college expenses won't be tax deductible. Which means all room & board or rent money your parents are paying will cost even more. But there is an alternative.

A co-op apartment at centrally located Crescent Park in the heart of the Oranges. The co-op loan (as well as 42% of the monthly maintenance costs) will be fully tax deductible. And after you've graduated, you'll have a luxurious desirable property to sell or continue to call home.

Crescent Park is a fantastic 20-story cooperative ideal for college living. In addition to huge 1 bedroom apartments, there are 2 and 3 bedroom units that are perfect for sharing. Many have balconies and picture window views of the Manhattan skyline.

The large, European-styled kitchens are geared for any kind of cooking—for entertaining friends or those study-all-night microwave meals. Potscrubber dishwashers make for quick clean-ups. Each residence also features polished oak parquet floors and loads of oversize closets.

The further convenience of on-site garage parking and an on-premise dry cleaning service are both available at additional expense.

For staying in shape, there's a relaxing outdoor pool, private lockers and a soothing sauna.

So take a load off your college load, and let your parents turn some of the high cost of education into a sound investment.

MSC graduate Mills back in the NFL

By Perry Schwarz

Staff Writer

It was a long, suspenseful period of waiting, but once the wait was over, Sam Mills resumed his professional career. However, there were a few changes when he returned.

The 1981 MSC graduate completed his first season for the New Orleans Saints in the National Football League (NFL). The Saints finished the season with a record of 7-9. Many remember the all-league linebacker with the two-time champion Baltimore Ravens as the United States Football League (USFL).

After the Ravens won their second championship in the Meadowlands, the USFL went on a two-year layoff. Many players like Herschel Walker (Dallas), former States teammate Kelvin Bryant (Washington) and Mills jumped into the NFL in order to further their career. The three-year linebacker went through transitions during the season, but is happy in his present situation.

"Although I was away from the game for two years, I felt I was in good shape entering the NFL," Mills said.

"The hardest part in making the transition was the layoff itself. It took awhile to get accustomed to the field situation."

The USFL is still in existence. In fact, some players are still under contract with teams. They receive a sum of money for staying with the team. The league is in the process of appealing the anti-trust suit against the NFL.

Mills and one other distinct area between the USFL and the NFL. He said the offensive line in the NFL is much tougher and solid. The USFL's "O-line" was good, but not as good as the NFL. This is attributed to the type of players in the USFL.

Mills was happy with his performance, but not satisfied. Major areas he plans to improve for the 1987 season are running and agility in addition to back pedaling and ball handling skills.

Before his successful USFL career, Mills was cut from the Cleveland Browns. His second venture back to the NFL lasted longer due to his previous USFL experience.

"Coming out of Montclair State I didn't know what to expect in the NFL," Mills said. "With the professional experience I received, I knew what to expect from the team and players. I felt good about my chances because I would have a fair shot at making the team. Coach Cimino Mora knew what I was capable of from my performance in the USFL."

Mills joined three of his former States teammates along with most of the Stars coaching staff in Louisiana. However, he had no trouble meeting the other players in training camp, in fact, many had known of him from his participation in the USFL.

As the season progressed, the Saints hit rough spots. However, Mills had no trouble in motivating himself when times were hard. He kept a positive attitude.

"I maintain a positive attitude when I'm no the field because being able to contribute is a motivational factor," said Mills. "For example, the Los Angeles Rams run the ball, so I am in a lot of the play activity. I try to believe in the things we do defensively and as a team."

Mills feels similar minor differences between the Saints and the Stars. They ran the ball the same and he believes he could make more mistakes there. However, the Saints bitized more often on pass situations than the Stars did this year. Mills said, "We need to learn new defensive terminology in order to perform at his position."

"The biggest adjustment was learning the terminology. Our defensive coordinator in Baltimore coaches in Chael, for example. A different person coaches me this season," he said. "Although we did the same things in the USFL, the NFL had a different technique. A particular formation or defensive scheme might have been different in the USFL."

Another NFL season is history and Mills knows what league he will be playing in next year. The goals and positive ideas are set in New Orleans.

"The first goal for the Saints is to make the playoffs," Mills said. "We proved to the league that we are a respectable team and next season we want to contend with others. Look for the point spread to be in our favor. Hopefully, we won't be the underdogs each week."

It appears as if Mills fits right in the NFL and professional football. With his individual and team goals set hopefully the young NFL linebacker can add an NFL diamond ring to his collection of USFL rings.

Controversial 3-pointer introduced into college hoops

By Perry Schwarz

Staff Writer

In the last two seasons, collegiate basketball has seen noticeable rule changes. Although every sport might alter rules without public attention, collegiate basketball has been in the light of the media.

Last season's institution of the mandatory 45 second clock alerted people and this year's three-point shot, legislated into existence last April, woke the nation to NCAA changes.

The three-pointer, which is awarded from 19-feet 9 inches or farther, is here. But is it good or bad for the game? That's the question. Opinions about the rule are mixed.

Just as the instant replay in the National Football League (NFL) was experimented with, so has the three-point play. However, there was a long process before experimentation occurred. In February, 1986, a 25-30 item annual questionnaire prepared by the National Association of Basketball Coaches (NABC) is a division of the NCAA) was distributed. They were able to provide input on the previous year's rules and voice any areas of interest during the basketball pre-season.

The questionnaire uncovered that 65% of college coaches were against the rule. However, the NCAA committee decided to experiment with the three-point play despite the initial findings when it passed the legislation.

Conferences interested in experimenting with the rule had to follow the criteria set by the rules of committee. The conference reported its findings to the committee. Eight conferences, including two Division I schools participated.

Two of the eight conferences were the Big Sky and Pacific Coast Athletic Conferences (PCAA). The long range bombers shot 39% with the three-point goal. The NCAA of the 10 coaches favored the rule.

"I thought Jeff made a mistake because a shot worth three points when he was open is a better shot than having somebody else shoot for two at six feet," said Smith.

Smith, who is New Jersey's winningest college coach, says the three-pointer is one of the many checks and balances in the game. When the shot clock was implemented, it eliminated the four-corner spread and teams had to play man-to-man defenses.

"The three-pointer gives coaches another weapon. It can be a team back into the game quickly," said Smith. "It's part of the checking and balances that permits habit. It also reduces the premise that a player's size and quickness makes him better able to play the game."

TheMSC Indians altered their offense this year to the rule. MSC used to be a man-to-man type team, but now the players are coming away from the basket and taking three-point shots. Wilson Rodrigues, Mark Scott and Steve Swinton are players on Kansas State's list of three. Wilson Rodrigues, Mark Scott and Steve Swinton are players on Kansas State's list of three.

Mills noted similarities and minor differences in the USFL and the NFL. It appears as if Mills fits right in the NFL and professional football. With his individual and team goals set hopefully the young NFL linebacker can add an NFL diamond ring to his collection of USFL rings.

Jerry Krause, newly-elected chairman of the NABC and former rules researcher said, "I don't want the college game to emulate the professional one. The college game should remain unique."

Krause, who is the physical education director at Eastern Washington University, said each rule addition goes under an evaluation process at the end of the year. He said there are two areas where the three-pointer is positive.

With the rule, defenses spread and open more activity for inside players on offense. It also opens up the court, and as a tactical factor is important. Fewer teams throw in the towel and earn a edge because three-pointers cut a team back into a game. Teams that are behind won't send opponents to the free throw line in order to have a winning chance.

The rule is here, but will it stay for another year? Whether it is good or bad there's one point that could be made about the three-pointer - it's certainly a controversy in the eyes of many.

Men's basketball team struggling but surviving

By Dennis Campbell

MSC's basketball season had been filled with a few twists and surprises. The Indians opened the season with major question marks. With the graduation of leading scorer and rebounder Robert Smith, the smaller Indian lineup was faced with the task of being competitive against much taller teams.

The Indians opened strong against Whittier of California at home, and were aggressive and competitive during the whole game. Despite losing in the closing seconds by two points the Indians proved that they could be competitive against bigger teams. The surprise was the teams' ability to handle itself on the boards. The twist though, was the team's inability to handle a pressure defense. The Indians' major problems this season was due in part to pressing teams. One major surprise this season has been the development of John Bennet the sophomore center from Irvington. He spurred the Indians with a key a run of six late in the game.

This season belongs to Mark Scott. The sophomore forward has become the floor general for the Indians this season, directing and controlling the offense. Rounding out the lineup is forward Mike Wegrzyniak whose play had been consistent and Darrin Johnson, whose play has improved throughout the season. Steve Swinton and John Vogel are the starting guards with Wilson Rodriguez receiving valuable playing time off the bench. Barry Brown has been brilliant at times but his play has been inconsistent.

Dec. 29, Tufts 52 - MSC 50

What was an exciting, action-packed game for the fans turned out to be a disappointing last-second loss for the MSC basketball team. It fell at the hands of Tufts University 52-50 in the opening round of the Yule Cup Classic. The contest was played at Upsala College in East Orange.

Kevin Blatchford sank a three-point shot from the corner with three seconds left to give Tufts a 52-50 lead with 1:53 remaining. Bridges' points gave the Vikings a 72-59 lead with 1:53 remaining. The final results of the tournament were as follows: Tufts University, Champions; Widener College, Upsala and Montclair.

Jan. 5, Rider 81 - MSC 64

This game was a battle of the boards and the Indians were totally dominated by the bigger Rider team, they controlled most of inside play with their height and superior rebounding, used a pressing defense to give the Indians a 61-64 loss at Panzer gym.

Mark Scott scored 20 points and grabbed nine rebounds to pace the Indian attack. Steve Swinton and Darrin Johnson chipped in with 11 points apiece.

Jan. 7, Paterson 83 - MSC 61

William Paterson utilized its quickness to stave off a 46-29 lead at the half, neutralizing the Indians frontcourt. Paterson came away with a 83-61 win at Panzer gym.

Steve Swinton led the Indians with 23 points and John Bennet had seven rebounds.

Jan. 10, Hartwick 66 - MSC 58

Hartwick outscored MSC, 41-25 the rest of the way to overtake the Indians.

Jan 13, MSC 71 - Rutgers, Camden 59

MSC received balanced scoring from four players to record their fourth victory of the season 71-59 over Rutgers-Camden. Mark Scott led the Indian attack with 20 points and six rebounds, Wilson Rodriguez and Steve Swinton 14 and 11 points apiece.

The Indians led 30-23 at the half and outrebounded their opponent 42 to 29.

Despite losing in the closing seconds by two points the Indians proved that they could be competitive against bigger teams. The surprise was the teams' ability to handle itself on the boards. The twist though, was the team's inability to handle a pressure defense. The Indians' major problems this season was due in part to pressing teams. This season belongs to Mark Scott. The sophomore forward has become the floor general for the Indians this season, directing and controlling the offense.

Rounding out the lineup is forward Mike Wegrzyniak whose play had been consistent and Darrin Johnson, whose play has improved throughout the season. Steve Swinton and John Vogel are the starting guards with Wilson Rodriguez receiving valuable playing time off the bench. Barry Brown has been brilliant at times but his play has been inconsistent.

MSC still in good position for playoffs

Up and down winter break for Lady Indians

By Jim Nicolas
Editor-in-Chief

MSC Head Coach Jill Jeffrey admits that her teams have never done too well over the break. Despite a 4-4 record this winter, the Indians, she insists are still in good shape for the rest of the season.

"My team has had problems with the winter break every year," says Jeffrey. "We get out of sync and it takes us awhile to get back on the right track.

Jeffrey pointed to the string of road games and extra added burden of commuting to school as big problems in keeping the team consistent.

"It's tough to play well in those conditions," said Jeffrey. "They have to live like gypsies."

"We're still building towards the (New Jersey Athletic Conference) playoffs, though. We're not in bad shape."

Although the Indians' 4-4 record over the break seems mediocre, three of the losses were within 5 points, and the fourth was against 19th-ranked Stony Brook. All were on the road.

Among the highlights of the winter break was the Indians' 102-43 dismantling of Rutgers-Camden in Camden on Jan. 7. MSC followed that win with a victory over Rutgers-Newark on Jan. 10, 86-56.

Salem 58—MSC 54
Salem (4-4) connected on 20 of 35 free throw attempts to help propel them to a 58-54 victory over MSC in the first round of the Western Connecticut Tournament in Danbury, Dec. 12.

The loss, only the Indians' second of the year, spoiled their hopes of capturing their second straight tournament. They took the Dial Classic title at Panzer Gym, Dec. 6 and 7, Forward Nancy Phillips led MSC with 15 points, followed by center Sue Ehrmann's 12. Melissa Schwarz of the West Virginia school led all scorers with 19.

MSC 68—Castleton 62
Phillips scored 24 points to lead MSC to a 68-62 consolation round victory over Castleton (4-4) in the Western Connecticut tourney.

Phillips scored 20 of her points in the second half to help the Indians overcome a 31-30 deficit and improve their record to 8-2. Senior forward Lorraine Bratton added 10 points and grabbed 13 rebounds for MSC. Castleton was paced by Brenda Keenan's 26-point effort.

NYU 59—MSC 54
NYU's Jennifer Goeke hit on a field goal with two minutes left to give NYU (4-5) a 53-52 lead they wouldn't look back. The Violets ran away with a 59-54 victory over the Indians in New York on Dec. 20.

Bratton led MSC with 18 points, followed by Phillips, who had 14. Ehrmann grabbed nine rebounds to pace MSC under the boards, but the Indians fell to 8-3.

MSC 102—Rutgers-Camden 43
The Indians returned to NJAC action on January 7 with a bang, as they dismantled Rutgers-Camden, 102-43 in Camden. It was no contest from the outset.

Phillips had 11 points and Bratton had 10 to ignite the Indians' 51-23 first-half performance. Phillips and Bratton paced MSC with 21 and 15 points, respectively. Freshman guard Cynthia Kaigler added 14 points and forward Cathy Drummond pumped in 10 to help lift MSC to 9-3. Rutgers (0-9) was paced by Tara Harris' 15 points.

The win boosted MSC's conference record to 4-1, and dropped Camden to 0-4. It also marked the highest MSC output since Jeffrey took over as head coach in 1984.

MCS 86—Rutgers-Newark 56
The Indians' domination over Rutgers schools continued on Jan. 10, when MSC thrashed Rutgers-Newark, 86-56 in Newark.

The 10-3 Indians jumped out to a 42-24 first half lead as Bratton and freshman Tomaszewa Powell chipped in eight points apiece, followed by Kaigler's 7.

Ten players figured in the 86-point onslaught, with six Indians hitting double-digits. Bratton led the way with 13, then came Drummond, who had 12, Phillips, Jackie Holle, Carolyn Savio, and Powell, who each notched 10 points.

For her performances in conference play against the two Rutgers schools, Phillips was named the NJAC Player of the Week.

The Indians improved to 5-1 in the NJAC, dropping 7-3 Rutgers-Newark to 3-3 in conference play.

Stony Brook 79—MSC 66
19th-ranked Stony Brook College overcame a 44-41 deficit early in the second half to outscore MSC 79-66, in Stony Brook, N.Y. Linda Hathaway scored 21 of her 29 points in the second half to help Stony Brook overtake MSC (10-4).

Bratton had 20 points and Kaigler finished with 17 for MSC in a losing cause.

Trenton 60—MSC 57
Trenton State kept its string of mastery over the Indians intact on Jan. 17 when the Lions bested MSC, 60-57 in Trenton. MSC has yet to beat Trenton since the Indians joined the NJAC last season.

The Lions (10-4, 6-1 in the conference) took over sole possession of first place in the B Division of the NJAC, dropping MSC to second with a conference mark of 5-2.

The Indians trailed 33-25 at the half, and by ten points at one point in the second half, but managed a rally to pull within four, 52-48. Kimm Lacken, leading scorer with 22 points for Trenton, then retaliated with a four-point play on a layup, free throw, and technical foul.

Bratton had 19 points, Ehrmann 12, and Phillips 11 to pace the Indians, but their second half comeback bid fell short in the end.

MSC 67—William Paterson 60
The 11-5 Indians scored the final eight points of the game to overcome a feisty William Paterson team and claim a 67-60 NJAC victory on Jan. 20 in Wayne.

The Pioneers, behind the 26-point effort of Sherry Patterson, had jumped out to a 34-24 halftime lead, and clung to a 60-59 advantage with under four minutes remaining.

Sophomore guard Sue Becker, Kaigler and Phillips each hit a pair of free throws, then Bratton followed with a layup to secure the win.

Phillips paced the Indians scoring with 18 points, but once again MSC relied on a balanced scoring attack. Kaigler finished with 16 points. Bratton had 15, and Becker 11.

The win upped MSC's conference mark to 6-2, while dropping William Paterson to 3-5, 7-7 overall.
Ed, Miguel, John Hernandez: a successful trio for MSC

By Perry Schwartz

Athletic competition takes determination and continuous physical effort. However, when one's brother is playing on the same side of the ball, one has got to think the pressure must be greater to excel. This is not the case with the Hernandez brothers on MSC's football defense.

Ed Hernandez doesn't have to worry about competition with his two brothers Miguel and John. He is a fullback on offense. It is Miguel and John Hernandez that play on the same defensive unit. However they don't worry about the competition either.

John Hernandez is the newest addition to the MSC football program. He broke into the lineup as a freshman free of any competition between each other. "It doesn't bother me that my brothers are at the same school and playing on the football team," Hernandez said. "In a way I am glad. Miguel is here and he has helped me learn the MSC system. When Miguel helped me understand the new techniques, I found it an advantage to have brothers at the same school."

Miguel, a junior linebacker who accumulated 69 tackles in 1986, does his part and he does his. The main goal is to help the team win. The freshman linebacker who finished the season with 44 unassisted tackles doesn't image himself after another player. He said that one has to be himself on the field because if he is anything less, his performance wouldn't be at its best. Although they played at the same high school and now college, both athletes find time to spend with different friends and are independent of each other.

John's goals include returning to the field and do what the coaches expect him to do at a high peak. Miguel is the middle brother. He is stronger than John. His approach to the game is similar to John's.

He performed each week giving every ounce of effort he could muster. Unlike John, Miguel models himself after the 5'8'' former MSC All-American Sam Mills. Mills was a three time All-league selection in the United States Football League (USFL) and is currently in the National Football League. Hernandez and Mills stand at the same height.

John finds no negative attitudes with his brother on the team. "When on the football field we think about the other teammates also," John said. "Although Miguel and Ed are my blood brothers, everyone around me makes up a family situation - inside the huddle and out. The players pick each other up a little higher in order to reach their full potential. In some ways it's like having two families."

Giants are champs of hype

Finally it's all over - at least for another year. The National Football League (NFL) officially crowned its 21st Super Bowl champion, The New York Giants defeated the Denver Broncos 39-20 in front of 105,000 people and 130,000,000 worldwide television viewers. However, did the NFL or the media crown the Giants Super Bowl champs?

For two weeks, Giants hype dominated the media while Denver captured 30% of the attention. John Elway was featured in that 30%. The media declared the winner of the Super Bowl before it was played. After three decades of waiting, the Giants deserved the media attention and I expected the hype about them. Don't forget, the Super Bowl - not the Giant Bowl - includes two teams.

During Spring Break, I went to Houston, Texas. On my return flight I was diverted to New Orleans and Kansas City. The Giants hype in those cities were just as great, if not greater. I watched the game and the commercials for which companies paid an estimated 1.2 million dollars for the slot.

Looking back at all the features and reports about the game, one was worthwhile and a good human interest piece. Mike Gillick, a seven-year-old from Toms River (NJ), was featured by CBS reporter Mory Alter. It was a heartwarming feature about a boy going to Pasadena to see his Giant Idols play. The boy suffers from a cancerous disease which stunted his growth and formed facial impairities. It was the best segment in the two weeks I watched for.

"The Super Bowl is nothing more than a social occasion," Todd Christensen, Oakland Raiders tight end and said. "We have to get back to the essence of the game and away from all of the hype."

The Rose Bowl was a mecca for 2,500 reporters looking for that exclusive angle or controversy to replace Jim McMahon's headband. No one got the angle so the "Bill Parcells's Gatorade Plunge" served its purpose.

I am happy that the Giants won, but the media should make an attempt to be objective. In fact the hottest team publicized by the media won eight out of 10 Super Bowls. Or maybe the National Football Conference is the media's pet peeve. Five of the last Super Bowl Champs were from that conference.

The bottom line is that the NFL publicity is outrageous. But Pete Rozelle, a former public relations director, and he is doing the best for his league. Since he's in office for another five years things will get probably worse - that is if the media continues to play backseat to the NFL and give the fans continued biased team reports.

Combine make NFL’s scouting chores simpler

By Perry Schwarz
Staff Writer

The New Jersey Giants celebrated one of their most successful seasons in over a decade. In 1987 they earned a conference title, 1-4-2 regular season record and the World championship.

However, “The year of the Giants” didn’t come because of players walking into Giants Stadium from off the street. Endless hours went into shaping the Giants squad and other teams also. Here is an inside look of what goes into the compilation of players to a certain team:

Players are discovered and hopefully selected to a team through scouting. The new advances made in scouting could be connected with the computer system. To note, 31 of the 45 1986-87 Giants were original draft picks dating back to 1981.

Computers are used within scouting combines and the team. The team’s computer function is to hold names descriptions of players with professional football ability.

Two scouting combines within the NFL are National Football Scouting Inc., and the Barlow Combine. These combines are contracted by teams. They supply the team with computerized reports of seniors in college. The will follow up on the list. This is a service a team pays for. Many teams use these to make conservative computer-generated lists from the combine. They give us player’s names from Divisions I, II, and III teams that have professional football potential. The second piece of information is from our field scouts. The information we get from them is cross-referenced with the first set of data and plugged into our computer in East Rutherford. We use this information in preparing for the upcoming draft.

Scouting combines do a majority of the work for teams. It enables the team to see a player on paper so the team scout can concentrate on his performance.

The second type of computer use in scouting is the team’s. The computer system used by the NFL and many of the teams is called the “Digital Micro-IC.” It is used interoffice. That is, it’s not tied into a mainframe. Only the Giants personnel are able to see the names in the unit. This ensures privacy.

The administrative people get 5,000-plus names they receive from the computer along with the scout’s data and plug it into the computer. The difference among the two is that the combine’s data is computer generated and the team scout’s hard copy. The computer acts as a giant filing cabinet of names. Once names are stored into the computer, month-long meetings are held and a strategy is developed for what players should be selected to a position.

When draft time arrives, the general manager has a pre-conceived strategy of who to pick for their team. If a player is taken unexpectedly during the draft he/she would contact someone operating the team’s computer and suggest the next available pick at that position.

The information stays in the computer up to five years. Once a player leaves college, his name is deleted or moved to the professional team list. However, the computer keeps a list of all players born the same year as the players. The name would be visible on one list, not both. This is the answer when a player is on waivers from a team, another organization might pick him up the next day — as in punt Dave Jennings (New York Jets).

The computer system is a complex instrument and is only one tool in making a championship team. It’s one facet of a team’s progression in the NFL. Keep in mind that anything looks good on paper, but it’s up to the player to produce on the field and the coach to enhance the talent.

Combines make NFL’s scouting chores simpler

Student schedules, grades, financial bills, and important documents processed at MSC are done with the side of computers. However, computers also play a vital role in the MSC football program.

The Indians, who posted a 10-2 record, have used computers in their scouting for the last three seasons. They have a major role in the compiling of data and helped coaches devise effective game plans for each week’s game.

Any coach knows that in order to devise a successful game plan he has to uncover his opponent’s tendencies and anticipate its plays. Computers give coaches an accurate account of an opponent’s plays. If a coach has a good idea what to expect, he can teach his players the best way to score or defend against the adversary.

Scouting is a long, tedious process, but a vital part of coaching. The computer saves time and effort so coaches can work out a plan of attack and spend more time with the athlete.

Only an accurate account of tendencies enables coaches to develop a strong game plan.

Former MSC defensive coordinator McKInly Boston said computer utilization has been a strong contributing factor for his defense. The MSC defense has been ranked nationally under Boston’s tutelage. Computer tendencies along with talented players and coaching helped make this defense one of the nation’s best.

Scouting teams and players is a long process in itself. The data compiled by coaches includes down and distance, formation, and type of play.” Boston said. “They obtain the data by breaking down football films of each play and watching games. Once we know the commonalities of a team along with other information then we can formulate an effective defense or offense.”

Boston illustrated this concept with an example. “If a team lines up in doubles or twins formation (receiver each side) and throws the ball 80% when it’s second down and six. At MSC’s 40, then the coach would play the pass. Boston said the computer sheets enable him to play the odds.

“The use of the college mainframe was a big help in preparing strategy and saving time,” MSC head coach Rick Giancola said. “Computers save our staff hours of time and individual tabulations. We compile the data by breaking films down on Sunday, but the computer programmer processes it into the computer. The result is a tendency sheet on what the opponent will do each play and from what formation. There is no charge for the use of the mainframe,” he continued.

Computers are an effective and valuable part of the game, however, it can’t replace what happens on the field. It’s another tool for the coaches to use for achieving an edge over opponent. The real work must be done on the field.

“We are given every possible situation that a team might use in a game,” Boston said. “After assessing the tendencies I call my defenses on what the offense sets up in. I find computers contributory to our success. I play the odds in calling defenses, but anything can happen on the field. It’s only one tool of many facets to a complex game.”

Steal Away: compelling comedy with a message

By Paul D. Rickert
Correspondent

Clever, fast-paced comedy is the key to success for "Steal Away" at the Whole Theatre's current production of "Steal Away" by Ramona King. A highly talented cast directed by Billie Allen, along with superb scenery, result in a sometimes compelling and always heartwarming comedy. Stay tuned in Chicago during the depression.

Tracy Ada Kyzer, played by SUN Y/Addison graduate Shawn Judge, is a girl fresh out of college. Her education was funded by five black churchwomen (including Tracy Ada's mother) called the Negro Women's Organization for Youth Education. Tracy is determined to carry out a plan that will "recover" money from a Chicago bank and help the organization send more girls to college. Shawn Judge is very convincing in her role, and audiences love her telling the story of the money from the ladies she tries to persuade to take part in her plan.

Tracy Ada's mother Stella, played by Minnie Gentry, is a caring mother who worries about her daughter's almost blind ideation. Tracy Ada comes across as bright and energetic, but the older women often take her with a grain of salt, knowing that time and history will take its toll on Tracy Ada.

Lizan Mitchell as Jade Long and Darryl Hall are a dynamic duo who help keep the audience laughing. They are also the main comic ingredient.

The best performance comes from Louise Stubb as Renita (Redd) Ruth. She is an obviously understated but experienced actress with charm. Playwright King is a member of the Negro Ensemble Company's Playwriting Workshop. Ms. King has worked consistently with and dedicated her time to people that deal with the black experience. In a press release, the Whole Theatre's artistic director Olivia Dukakis writes, "Ramona King's potent message is clear: An education, especially for black women, remains the key to a meaningful future."

While the young playwright's message is not lost in the action and excitement, it is not as strong as it could be. The play lacks the essence of the black woman's struggle, leaving Tracy Ada's crime without any clear moral justification. This does not take away from the play's good fun.

Billie Allen, who directed the Whole Theatre's past production of "Home" by Sam-Art Williams, worked well with the actresses and let them use their instincts to perfectly the interplay among the characters. The excellent scenery is by set designer Randy Benjamin, who will be working on the MTS production of "Sho Stoops to Conquer" as guest designer.

"Steal Away" has all the qualities that make a show interesting and captivating. The Whole Theatre made a good choice with this one.

"Steal Away" runs through Feb. 7. Performance times are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturdays at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. Half-price resident rush tickets are available. The box office phone is 744-2989.

ONLY 60 SEMESTER CREDIT HOURS NEEDED FOR OCS.

If you have 60 accredited semester hours, and can achieve a high score in a special aptitude test, you could be just 22 weeks from earning the gold bars of a second lieutenant in the Army Reserve. And ready to take on your first Reserve leadership assignment.

Qualify, and you’ll attend an 8-week Basic Training Course, then go on to a 14-week Officer Candidate School (OCS) which will challenge you both mentally and physically. When you graduate, you’ll receive your commission as an officer in the Army Reserve, and continue training in a branch Officer Basic Course. Then you’ll return home to serve in a nearby Reserve unit—usually one weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

It’s a great opportunity to gain the skills and begin the practice of the kind of leadership and management prized so highly by civilian employers.

You need not have completed your degree, just have 60 semester hours and a lot of ability and confidence, to qualify.

If you’re interested in OCS, call:

“TO KEEP THE GIRLISH FIGURE”
Lady Indians fall to 2nd-ranked Kean

By Jim Nicosia
Editor-in-Chief

Kean 80 — MSC 51

The Kean Cougars proved to be too much for the MSC women's basketball team Tuesday night at Panzer Gym. Simply put, the Cougars had too much speed, too much power, and too much defense.

In fact, it took the Indians seven minutes to get on the scoreboard in the first half. By the time MSC forward Nancy Phillips hit the first field goal of the game for the Indians, MSC had already found its bright spots.

By the time the game had run its course, the second-ranked Cougars had themselves an 80-51 victory. But, for Head Coach Jill Jeffrey and her team, the loss was not completely without its bright spots.

"Kean is the most offensively potent team we've faced," admitted Jeffrey. "Every one of its players has the ability to score from 18 feet in and they're all great athletes. Against a great team, little mistakes add up to a lot of points."

Kean, Jeffrey admitted, is a great team, and she chose not to dwell on her team's shortcomings Tuesday night.

"We just came out too slow in the first half," she said. "It's tough to start off 13 points down against a team like Kean."

"I was very happy with our second half effort, however. We had their lead cut down to 12 at one point and had gotten three of their starters into foul trouble. If we hadn't missed a few key foul shots, we could have gotten the game back into the close-up range. We played a very good move and played good pressure man-to-man defense."

The good points of the game seemed to be enough for Jeffrey, who says the loss shouldn't bother her team too much. Instead, she has them preparing for the conference playoffs at year's end.

Stockton 51 — MSC 42

Another slow start KO'd the Indians chances for victory, this time on Saturday against Stockton State College.

The Indians failed to score in the first eight minutes of the contest and couldn't mount a strong enough comeback bid to win their seventh conference game. Instead, MSC fell to 6-3 in the NJAC and 11-6 overall.

Jeanine Taylor led the upset Ospreys with 21 points and 9 rebounds. Sue Ehrmann paced MSC with 18 points on 7-for-10 shooting from the floor, and pulled down 9 rebounds in a losing cause.

Putting America back in the Cup

It has slowly, gradually, but surely progressed from the bottom corners of the back recesses of the sports pages in September to the front page of The Record's sports section on Super Bowl Sunday. Not a bad jump, actually.

It is something that I had not even heard about until 1983. It is also something most refer to as being as exciting as watching ink dry. (I contend that the latter may even hold a slight edge over the former.)

"It is the America's Cup competition. For those of you who don't have a clue as to what the America's Cup is (and I can't say I blame you), it is the true world's championship of 12-meter yacht sailing. So what, right?

Now in the world did yacht racing get to the front page of the sports section? You can thank the designers of Liberty, the United States' boat in the 1983 Cup races. Liberty was a marvelously slow boat that allowed Australia to win the cup from the U.S. for the first time in the 132-year history of the tournament.

That loss has brought more attention to the sport of yacht racing than the 132-year winning streak broken is not.

By the time a race is completed, we're talking 4 a.m. So, if you hadn't guessed, not too many people have gotten the opportunity to watch the events unfold in Fremantle. Except, of course, for those few of us insomniacs with cable tv.

For the most part, we have found that, despite the lack of excitement, the America's Cup is interesting.

It doesn't take long for the uneducated (with reference to yacht racing, of course) person to get a sense of the nationalism that is such an integral part of the races. Winning the Cup put Australia on the map in '83 and the Aussies do not want to give it back.

Dennis Conner, on the other hand, is a man possessed. He does not want to go down in history as the guy who allowed Australia to put a cap into the cup. Instead, he wants to be known as the only American challenger to win the cup back. Having a 132-year-old winning streak broken is not something he takes lightly.

Just as the Australians don't want to let go of their top prize (they spent over $40 million in preparation for their defense), Conner and his crew feel the America's Cup belongs, as it were, in America. It's a nationalist pride that is easy to get caught up in.

The only thing standing in the way of Conner's quest is an Australian boat syndicate headed by television mogul Kevin Parry. Parry waited until Monday before deciding to send his boat Kookaburra III up against Stars & Stripes. Kookaburra III legally won the right to race in the finals, but the Australians wanted to make sure it was faster than its sister boat. Kookaburra II was. The best-of-seven finals begin Saturday at, you guessed it, 12:30 a.m. EST.

Whether the Australians wanted to send Kookaburra II or III, is immaterial, Conner claims. Either way, he is determined to recapture the Cup. Either way, yacht racing has found some publicity and some new fans. Should he succeed, Conner just may become a household name—certainly in Australia if not here.

MSC got some impressive performances at the PAC women's track championships last week.
