Dr. Ruth Westheimer, posing with flowers from an admirer, is shown after her show at Memorial Auditorium Monday night. A crowd of over 900 came to hear the famous sex therapist speak.

When asked about the merits of being a star and about her livelihood, Westheimer's tone turned serious. She admitted that though she liked the attention of the public and of her producers, "all of it secondaries to the serious issue of sexual ignorance."

She feels her work has an effect on the population at large. She said emphatically, "I like to know that after my speeches students will use contraceptives and not forget to do so for the rest of their lives."

Westheimer suggests the overt use of condoms on television and added, "with all this love making and promiscuity, I want them to put a box of condoms right there on the table next to the bed."

Westheimer blamed television for promoting promiscuity and the spread of AIDS. She stated, "television is doing a tremendous disservice" to the sexual ignorance of the people of this country.

AIDS: Exactly what you need to know

College credit while you work

Students entering college want to achieve solid academic success and most want to reach graduation prepared to succeed in the workplace.

Co-operative education offers qualified MSC sophomores, juniors and seniors the pre-professional experience they need to help achieve that second goal.

The program enables students to work in an industry or service organization for pay while earning college credit.

Students take advantage of the co-operative education opportunity to confirm a career choice, to help finance their education, to practice classroom knowledge and to establish professional contacts leading to jobs.

Co-op staff members help participants clarify goals, evaluate their expectations and prepare resumes. Faculty advisors assist in the development of an individual "learning contract."

Interviews are arranged by the Co-op office with approved firms and agencies.

During a student's paid internship, academic faculty and employer supervisors provide guidance and periodically evaluate performance.

The Co-op program is open to students who have accumulated 45 credits and earned a grade point average of 2.25. Individual departments may have further requirements.

For further information contact the co-op office in the Student Center, Annex, room 104 or 893-4426.

An SGA financial report was presented at last night's meeting. Student fees collected to date total $143,700, with an estimated $43,631 still to be received from the college. "The SGA financial position is not at an optimal level. Our budget will be tight this year," said SGA treasurer, Jeannie Lomboy.

The SGA is operating at a net loss of $20,284. This figure does not include a carry-over of $34,225 from last school year's unanticipated surplus.

Speech waiver

The Speech and Theatre Department is sponsors an evaluation service to help students determine whether they will be able to waive MSC's speech communication requirement.

Students are requested not to submit an essay on these topics such as "Adding time to your 24 hours," "Learning success skills," and "Test-taking strategies" will be discussed.

Sign-up for tutoring services will continue through Nov 6. Faculty and professional staff are encouraged to refer students to the speech office before this date. Further information may be obtained by calling the Tutorial Center at 893-4177.

Free tutoring

The College Tutorial Center, located in Annex E, is posting its hours for fall '87. The center is open from 9 am to 5 pm on Mondays through Fridays, and remains open until 7 pm on Mondays and Thursdays.

Workshops in study skills are also available for the fall semester. Topics such as "Adding time to your 24 hours," "Learning success skills," and "Test-taking strategies" will be discussed.

OCTOBER '87 "A Time to Remember"

(These Dates Are Subject To Change.)
editorial

Don't get hung up on your future

Over the years, colleges across the country have developed many harmless traditions. Here at MSC, people have put soap or goldfish in the library fountain or stolen the tape from the College Hall bellowers. Fraternities and sororities have pledged spray painting Greek letters on the Clove Road bridge.

The letter from NJ Bell on the front page warns us that some people won't hold the line, though. Students have been illegally making AT&T credit card calling numbers and using them to make "free" phone calls. Not only are these calls not free, they also endanger future careers. NJ Bell must waste time correcting customers' bills, thus increasing the cost of phone prices and services in general.

The use of misappropriated calling card numbers is fraud and theft, and NJ Bell is pursuing lawbreakers. A conviction for telephone fraud requires the payment of restitution and court costs and runs the risk of a permanent police record. Remember that honesty and integrity now will pay off in the future. Don't let a stupid mistake ruin your life.

Personal safety

The students of MSC have two opportunities to consider their personal safety this week. As the Campus Police Report notes, a person who identifies himself as "Pat" has been making obscene phone calls to campus residents. This illegal activity invades the privacy of the individuals and upsets daily lives. It seems like a harmless prank, but it's actually a threat to your life. If you receive an obscene call or have any information leading to an arrest, contact Campus Police immediately.

For the Parade insert in Sunday's newspapers, Dr. Joyce Brothers wrote an article on date rape. This issue has been prominent on campuses throughout the Eighties, yet many people still do not understand it. Date rape is the crime of rape in a personal setting. It often occurs between a boyfriend and girlfriend, of any age, when he doesn't believe that she means "No" when she says, "No." As Dr. Brothers indicates, just because he loves you, or you love him, doesn't mean he is free to do as he pleases.

Even more than an obscene phone call, date rape is an invasion of privacy, both mental and physical and a direct threat to your life. If you believe that you are a victim, contact Campus Police immediately. For more information, read the article or contact either the Women's Center or Campus Police.

Will Reagan's Bork be worse than his bite?

By Ellen Goodman

BOSTON—What an unexpected way to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the longest hot summer that produced the U.S. Constitution: Instead of commemorating the document, we're going to argue over a new interpreter.

The fierce debate emerging over the nomination of Robert Bork can only increase the impression that a Supreme Court justice has more leeway than a home-plate umpire. It's sure to add to the uneasy sense that the law is a matter of opinion or appointment.

The left has accused the President of playing politics with the Bork appointment. The right has accused the left playing politics with the Bork opposition. They both hold their noses at the very word. We know instinctively that the prestige of the Supreme Court, perhaps the last institution that Americans overwhelmingly respect, is undermined by these personal games.

Consider the most vulnerable right that's left to judicial politics: privacy. Bork, who stands at the intellectual outer edge of the right wing, has said that the right to privacy simply doesn't exist. Does a right exist with one judge and disappear with another?

"As I said years ago, I thought the 'privacy' notion had little to do with the intent of the framers," Bork has explained. Indeed the Constitution doesn't spell out the private sphere, nor does the Bill of Rights list privacy.

The concept of an intimate family life protected from the government appeared in the 1920s when the Supreme Court ruled that raising your own family the way you saw fit was a kind of "liberty." It wasn't until the 1940s, when the Court struck down a law that punished buggery with sterilization, that they called the right to procreate a basic and fundamental one.

The case that put the word privacy itself into the language of rights came in 1965. Connecticut still had a law then that banned birth control for married couples. In striking that law down, the high court said in "Griswold" that it violated the basic privacy rights of these couples.

One of the justices wrote that privacy rights were deduced from others in-the first eight amendments: the freedom of expression, the freedom from unwarranted search, the freedom from having soldiers quartered in your home. A second found privacy in the ninth amendment. A third, the conservative John Marshall Harlan, said privacy was covered in the 14th amendment as personal liberty.

Later, in Roe v. Wade, the abortion case, the Court extended privacy to include the right to choose an abortion. Anyway you define privacy, wrote Justice Blackmun, it is "broad enough to encompass a woman's decision whether or not to terminate her pregnancy."

Bork has disagreed with all this. Not just the 1973 abortion decision, which he called "unconstitutional," not just the 1965 birth-control decision, but the whole emergence of a right of privacy. He disagrees because he says the "framers of the Constitution and its amendments did not "intend" to create such a right.

I have no idea what the original collection of men who spent that tortured summer of 1787 in Philadelphia would have thought about birth-control pills, suction aspiration, or contraceptives. There is nothing in the Constitution or its amendments about reproduction. But I know that they and their followers "intended" a free government for public life, not one that would reach intrusively into personal life.

Bork has said that the job of a judge is to figure out this "intend" of the framers and to uphold it, nothing more. Anyone looking for new law should go to the legislature. He opposes a so-called activist judiciary. Yet, if approved, this anti-activist judge would create enormous action, or should I say reaction. His swing vote could upend decades of law.

So we have this uncomfortable lesson for the 200th anniversary of our Constitution. The new candidate for the Supreme Court holds the view that the politics, even the personality, of a justice should make no difference in deciding the law. And by his very presence, he reminds us just how much difference it does make.

50 years of Light

By Michael Bullerick
Correspondent

Question: What’s the longest running show in broadcast history? Fans and trivia buffs know it’s the 53-year-old soap Guiding Light.

The Beginning

The story goes that Guiding Light was founded on Irna Phillips’ admiration for a preacher named Dr. Preston Bradley (The Reverend Dr. Ruthledge on the show). His reading lamp hung in the window of his home as a ‘guiding light’ to troubled parishioners. Their story is the story of GL.

Created by Irna Phillips (creator of As The World Turns and Days Of Our Lives), GL premiered on radio January 25, 1937. While other soaps—called such because they were sponsored by soap manufacturers—revolved around characters who were whisked away to exotic lands and remained 35-years-old forever, GL opted for realism.

The show’s ‘melting pot’ cast struggled along on their modest incomes and helped each other, even with depression era issues: labor unions, national prejudice and isolationism.

On To Television

“if it ain’t broke, don’t fix it.”

That’s the type of attitude that Irna Phillips had to contend with when she began her drive to transfer GL to television.

Men weren’t home to watch the show in the afternoon, and women, the sponsors thought, were too busy tending house to actually sit and watch. Because it was both affordable and convenient (people could still listen as they worked), radio in the early 1950’s was reaching a larger audience. Television was in its infancy.

Irina Phillips was determined to prove herself after failure with another daytime show, These Are My Children. Eager to capitalize on the growing television market, she went ahead and developed two pilots with her own money.

Proctor & Gamble liked the pilots but were leery of their audience. Would people actually like the physical personas of the Bauer family? To play it safe the sponsors continued the radio version concurrently with the TV show. (That was discontinued in 1956).

The first TV episode aired on June 30, 1952. The show hasn’t stopped since. GL competed with Search For Tomorrow on pg. 13.

The Bauer family of Guiding Light

Wow! Bananarama (Polygram)

Wow! does not quite live up to its name. A little more is expected from a group that is recognized as the most successful British “girl” group of all time. Wow! just does not have the quality of music in Bananarama’s last album, True Confessions, which included the number one hit “Venus” and was certified gold.

Wow! is the current hit “I Heard A Rumour” from the film Disorders and includes a new mix of the Supremes’ “Nathan Jones.” Two other songs that could possibly become hits are “Love in the First Degree” and “Some Girls.”

I was disappointed by the lack of variety in the key and tempo of the album. The music does not change from one song to the next. K & the words it would have been hard to distinguish one tune from another.

Bananarama’s new album is a good dance record, but it’s not a smash hit. The pop listener might want to get it for its Top 40 sound and the unusual “Show Than Jones.” For Bananarama fans, Wow! is disappointing and not worth buying. -Jill Ficarra

Richard Marx-Richard Marx (Manhattan)

Some artists are simply meant to be. Richard Marx is one that is definitely meant to be. At the age of twenty-two, Richard Marx has already played with Lionel Richie on his last three albums. In addition, he has some top names on his debut record. Among them are Fee Waybil of the Tubes and Eagles Alumni, Randy Meissner, Timothy B. Schmidt and Joe Walsh.

This is one hot record from start to finish. “Should Have Known Better” is successful and shows the rockin’ side of Marx. The ballads, “Hold on to the Nights” and “Endless Summer Nights” are done well without being overly soft like many of today’s pop songs.

As if that isn’t enough, “Don’t Mean Nothing,” FM’s favorite summer hit, screams with Joe Walsh’s slide guitar work. Richard Marx has given us something to think about with have Mercy.” I love the line, “I read it in the news, we ain’t got no worry! But it won’t be in the paper when D Day comes.”

Richard Marx is a class act with a great debut album and at the very least it is good to hear some old Eagles on some new vinyl! -Ray Ecke

John Mellencamp-The Lonesome Jubilee (Polygram)

Is The Lonesome Jubilee John Mellencamp’s Nebraska? Well, it is and it isn’t. Lyrically, there are thematic similarities to Bruce Springsteen’s stark masterpiece. But instrumentally Mellencamp has created a far more diverse sound than Springsteen did.

The Lonesome Jubilee has just acoustic guitar and harmonica, The Lonesome Jubilee is filled with a patchwork blend of emotions, fiddles, and banjos, in addition to the standard bass, drums, and guitar.

This album is filled with stories of ordinary people who just aren’t happy with the state of their lives in the 80’s. “Paper in Fire,” “Down and Out in Paradise,” “Hard Times for an Honest Man,” and “Empty Hands” all reflect a bittersweet attitude towards life in America.

“Cherry Bomb,” “Check it Out,” and “The Real Life” also share a common theme of looking back at your past and accepting it for what it is.

These themes are reinforced by the album’s wonderful instrumental blend. The Lonesome Jubilee is a great sounding mix of folk, country and rock and roll. This album takes the music of Scarecrow and moves it further down the road.

While the restrained musical style of this album might take some getting used to, I don’t think Mellencamp has given up uptempo numbers. So while you’re waiting for his next “Pink House” or “Authority Song,” accept an invitation to the Lonesome Jubilee. -Jim Nooney row and Love of Life for the number one spot, using as its weapon a realistic approach. These other soap operas resembled the land of dreams with surrealistic sets and characters surrounded by impending doom. GL brought to television the philosophy of social documentary. And to this a refreshed audience responded with a roar. Not long after the TV show began, Susan Douglas' character, Kathy, was killed. It was the "who shot J.R.?" of the 50's and GL took off, its producers wading knee-deep in a flood of hate mail.

In response, Phillips soothed her viewers with a memo which seems now to best represent GL's formula for success. Summarized, it read: In life there is death. It is our duty to reflect on this thing called life. We are sorry.

Later, during the 1961-62 season, with GL still at number one in the ratings, Irna Phillips' successor, Agnes Nixon, took the show's matriarch, Bert Bauer (who was played by long-time favorite Charita Bauer), to battle with uterine cancer. The result was another barrage of letters from women all over the country saying that after years without a check-up, they were going back to their gyn.ecologists. Several letters read: "My God, Bert Bauer saved my life! Such is the power of television.

Awards Abound: GL Today

The eighties has turned out to be the most powerful period for both GL and its fans. Brilliant writers like Douglas Marland and Pamela Long created characters—Roger (Michael Zaslow), Kelly (John Wesley Shipp), Lujack (Vincent Irizarry), Reva (Kim Zimmer)—who, played by dynamic individuals—helped GL to sweep the Emmy's. The show was named Outstanding Day Time Drama Series twice for the 1979-80, 1981-82 seasons, and was nominated for 1984-85.

Behind The Scenes

Guiding Light is videotaped in a pale grey box of a building on West 26th St. between 7th and 8th Aves. There's nothing fancy about it—inside or out. "It's the old, grey building with the small CBS eye," says assistant producer Mary O'Leary to appointment makers. "It's nothing fancy but we're here."

And they are there, and GL thrives because of that sincere 'let's talk about it, we're all family here "type attitude.

"There's a camaraderie here," says Ian Ziering, who attends William Paterson College while playing Cameron Stewart on the show. "We all help each other out and recognize each other as dedicated professionals," he added.

Others associated with the show agree, but say it's more than that. One crew member says, "We're all family here, the cast and crew. We all know each others' business. People often come in on their days off just to sit and chat."

Everyone at GL wants to do well. Each is aware of the show's marvelous history and wants to add to it. Though still fairly new on the show, Ian Ziering says, "There's a history here. You can feel it. There'll be times when someone will say, 'Oh, you did that just like so and so.' Or, 'that's like the time when...' It makes me feel good. I'm proud to be a part of it."

A cars of love and hate, life and death, good times and bad—and more to come. That must have been some congregation.

Good Luck to Guiding Light on another 50 years.

Fans must ‘back up’ Indians

Although the Indians lost to Kean College 16-14 Saturday, there was electricity and excitement in the air. Fan support and participation covered Sprague Field in a way that MSC hasn’t seen for a long time. Fans were standing, shouting, and doing the wave, never giving up on the team.

Fan support will be an important ingredient in 1987. They are promised competitive gridiron action, but they are asked for one thing in return: loyalty. Their support and presence will be a nonverbal implication of confidence in the program.

Kean overcame a 14-3 fourth quarter MSC lead to register a 16-14 victory over the Indians (1-2-1 Saturday). The game marked the first NJAC contest of the season for both teams.

Things were looking early for MSC as Kean (3-0) fumbled the opening kickoff. Nine plays later, Senior Ed Hernandez scored from three yards out. Tony Cosaluces booted the extra point, and the Indians had an early 7-0 advantage.

The Cougars came back right and drove down to the MSC three yard line. But the Indian defense held Kean to a 20-yard field goal by John Mattos, cutting the lead to 3-0.

In the third quarter, senior tailback Leroy Horn, who finished with 168 yards rushing, scrambled 71 yards for a touchdown, upping the Indian advantage to 13-0. Cosaluces added the extra point, making the score 13-0.

The biggest plays of the quarter, however, were two plays that weren’t. Long runs by Horn and freshman Scott Vegl were called back because of penalties. Kean went for zero, these gains made a big difference in the outcome of the game.

The Cougars began their comeback with an impressive drive, moving the ball 71 yards in 18 plays and scoring on a two-yard run by freshman Brian Gallaher. Kean went for zero on the two point conversion, but failed and MSC held a 14-3 lead.

After the ensuing kickoff, the Cougars were pushed back to the two yard line. After seven plays, Daryl Butts scored on a five yard run, and Kean had its first lead.

MSC had one more chance to pull the game out but turned the ball over on another fumble, and Kean was able to consume the remaining time.

“We had mental breakdowns both ways—offensively and defensively,” Hernandez said. “We just have to go out and play this game, and play the rest of the season week by week, like it’s a brand new season.”

On the free kick, the Indians went for a field goal but the holder mishandled the snap and it was blocked. The Cougars scored on a five yard run by senior tight end Ed Pedicine. "Even though we had the lead at the half, we weren’t happy with our performance,” said senior tight end Ed Pedicine. “We knew we didn’t play a good half at all.”

The Indians return to action tomorrow night vs. Upsala and Wednesday night vs. Kean.

MSC 3- Stockton St. 1

The Indians, down 1-0, came back to score three goals, two in overtime, to come away with their biggest win of the season over Stockton State at Stockton. The victory moved the Indians’ record to 3-2-1 overall in the NJAC.

Derek Lewis was again the spark that ignited the MSC offense, scoring two goals. His first goal tied the score at one after Stockton scored early in the second half. Lewis cut off a short goal kick and made a tough angle shot with the goalie out of position.

The score remained 1-1 for the remainder of the regulation. The Indians went up 2-1 with two minutes remaining in the first overtime when Lewis took a pass from Rick Caruso, weaved through three Stockton defenders, and shot the ball into the back of the net.

Just thirty seconds before the first overtime ended, the Indians scored again. Bob Briggs got a pass from Chip Hyde, dribbled to the end line, and crossed the ball in front of the goalie. Rick Caruso scored the goal, securing the win.
