Bradley addresses editors' concerns

By Maureen Freeburg
Editor-in-Chief

United States Senator Bill Bradley (D-N.J.) met with editors from New Jersey college newspapers at the first Collegiate Editorial Board Conference hosted by MSC, in an attempt to establish relations between his office and the collegiate press. Bradley addressed several issues during the one-hour conference on Monday, March 7, including future plans regarding his presidential aspirations.

"I sensed that '92 wasn't the right time for me," said Bradley. "You have to be at your best." He stressed that a candidate must know the country—not just by appearing on different television stations across the nation.

"You have to really know New Mexico, Maine and Alabama. You have to know foreign policy and communication, not just where Japan is on the map," said Bradley.

Bradley also spoke with great concern over the high infant mortality rate in New Jersey. He attributed the problem to lack of pre-natal care available to women just above and at the poverty level.

"Bradley accused the President of "ignoring the long-term importance of funding for education.""

In an effort to combat the problem, Bradley sponsored a bill—passed last December—that raised the poverty level cut-off point for pregnant women. The current cut-off point is approximately $13,500, which is 185 percent above the national level.

Last month, Bradley proposed a bill for a N.J. Coastal Heritage Trail. The Trail would offer residents and non-residents the opportunity to "get off the superhighway and see New Jersey in a very special way," according to Bradley.

"When you mention New Jersey most people automatically think turnpike or parkway. I encourage residents to send me their favorite location in New Jersey to be considered for the Trail," said Bradley.

He referred to Ronald Reagan's 1988 budget proposals as "Reagan's good-bye budget." Bradley accused the President of "ignoring the long-term importance of funding for education.

He also believes Reagan is not "serious" about the new budget plans. "He (Reagan) criticizes people for not presenting a balanced budget, yet he doesn't present a balanced budget."

Bradley intends to continue meeting with college journalists to discuss state and national issues of concern to N.J. residents.

Board of Trustees meeting

Tuition raised despite boost in state support

By Jane Bech
Staff Writer

Despite an increase in state support, students at MSC should expect a tuition increase for the 1988-89 academic year.

The increase was part of the projections made by Vice President of Administration and Finance William Griffith at the board of trustees meeting last Thursday.

Although the exact figures were not given about the tuition increase, Griffith expected to have them prepared in time for the next board meeting.

Faculty representative to the board Dr. Kathleen Wilkins and Dr. Joseph Moore, vice president of the Teachers Union, expressed concern over the tuition increase. They contended that the proposed increase will make the college less accessible to minorities.

Dr. Deborah Wolfe, chairperson of the N.J. Board of Higher Education, appealed to increase minority student enrollment and insuring that MSC is kept affordable for all students through financial aid and other sources.

Some of the college's programs, such as the institute of critical thinking, the legal studies center and the School of Fine and Performing Arts were praised by Wolfe.

She asked for the cooperation of the MSC administration to help implement the long-term goals of the Board of Higher Education, and stressed the importance of strengthening undergraduate education in all fields.

Wolfe emphasized increasing the college's contribution to New Jersey's economic development and upgrading MSC's physical facilities.

Dr. Joseph Moore suggested that the college use $600,000 that was saved through cuts in salary and early retirement of staff, in order to directly reduce the number of adjuncts teaching at MSC.

The alcohol related death of a fraternity pledge at Rutgers was discussed.

Dean of Students, Edward Martin said that the college was well aware of the alcohol problem, but the situation at MSC was different since the campus has no fraternity/sorority houses.

Martin briefly addressed the problem experienced at the Rathskeller on Feb. 18. He said that the school bar was very careful in proofing individuals and measures were being taken to handle the problem.

A brief report on the success of the International studies program was given by Dr. Harriet Klein, director of international studies.

Klein attributed the three-year-old program's success to the faculty's vast international experience.

The program, which sends students to foreign countries for extended academic periods, includes England, Denmark and Israel.

A minor in International Studies is being developed in conjunction with the program. The minor will consist of courses that pertain to international matters in foreign relations, polities, trade and culture.

The college is sponsoring, for the second year in a row, the March of Dimes. Approximately three thousand are expected to participate in the event.

Abuse of parking policy is alleged

By Mike Heelan
Staff Writer

At last night's SGA meeting, the legislature was informed of parking policy violations by the college and some of its employees.

Yesterday, the administration violated regulations by reserving lot 13 without informing students in advance.

Another violation was brought to the attention of the legislature. There has been an alleged abuse of parking privileges by college parking attendants; according to an SGA legislator special parking considerations have been given by the attendants to family and friends.

A resolution unanimously passed by the legislature on Feb. 10, concerning names being announced at this year's graduation may be defeated by the administration.

"The administration is jumping to a hasty decision. The SGA was not contacted to seek out the research which it conducted. Their concern was time but our information shows that the addition of all names being called will only add 45 minutes to the ceremony," said SGA president, Rob Acerra.

The SGA urges all parents and students in favor of all graduating student's names being announced to send letters to the Assistant to the President, Dave O'Brian. These letters may be addressed to the President's office, located in College Hall.

A vote to reinstate Phi Chi Theta, a co-ed business fraternity, was approved by the legislature. They were dechartered last week due to an oversight. Organizational update sheets submitted by the organization were overlooked.

The executive board approved a special appropriation of $1000 to the ski club for qualifying in the national ski competition in Minnesota. They are currently ranked 3rd in the region and are rated among the top 16 in a field of over 300 teams.

In approving the money, Acerra expressed his disappointment at the lack of funds and support by the administration and the athletic department.

A class III charter was granted by the legislature to Delta Theta Psi for the 1988-90 academic years. They are oldest existing social sorority at MSC.

Students in the MSC School of Business Administration can now get an added measure of practical management instruction, with the addition of Stanley Leavitt to the school's faculty. He is the pioneer of "action education", a program that tries to effectively merge classroom activities with community problems. His activism on behalf of those in need has led to the creation of the Bank for Socially Responsible Lending.

Election fever, having finished with Super Tuesday, takes over at MSC.

Perry Del Vecchio and Tom Mergola, candidates running for treasurer and president respectively for the upcoming SGA elections, seek signatures from students.

The candidates will start campaigning extensively in the following weeks. The elections are scheduled to be held on April 9 through April 13.

How to set up a network

Creating a network early in your college career will help you get the information that can help in career planning and eventual job hunting.

Once you are in contact with someone through your network, you should have a list of well-focused questions prepared.

- Asking questions such as those which follow can provide a solid beginning to decide whether or not a certain career area is right for you.
- What kind of educational background and/or work experience is required to enter this field?
- Is study in a particular major required?
- What classes outside my major might it be helpful for me to take? Do I need special credentials, licenses, or certificates to enter this field? How do I get them?
- What do you do on an average day? What are the work tasks? What personal qualities are needed in order to succeed in this line of work? What specific skills are needed?
- What is the work setting like? How many hours a week do you usually work? What are the typical entry-level positions? What is a typical entry-level or mid-level salary?
- Is promotion possible in your occupation? What aspects of the work do you find most or least appealing?
- What, if anything, did you have to give up in order to pursue your occupation? What professional associations or people would you suggest contacting?
- The process of interviewing people in person or on the phone to learn more about the work you are considering is called information interviewing and is one of the most useful purposes of the network.

However well your networks develop, remember that people are generally more than willing to help and provide information. Most people are flattered to be asked, so pick up the phone and start researching.

Pass-fail policy revision

Under a new policy instituted this semester by the Registrar’s office, the pass fail option may be rescinded until the mid-point of the semester which is March 21.

Any student electing to rescind this application must present their copy of the pass-fail form to the office of the registrar before the midpoint of the semester. Upon submission and verification, the pass fail request will be voided and a letter grade condition will be in effect.

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college. They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for a little pay.

But I joined the Army National Guard. And I’m earning $18,000 by working just 2 days a month and 2 weeks a year.

I got a $2,000 cash bonus when I finished my advanced technical training, and I’m getting $5,000 in educational benefits, thanks to the New GI Bill. And over 6 years, I’ll earn a minimum salary of $11,000.

It all adds up to $18,000 that I can put toward college.

And that’s a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

My first time tutoring was a night to remember. My student was something called Bone Crusher Reed, a.k.a. Billy Jo, defensive tackle for the football team.

I had the shock of my life when he answered his dorm room door. He was about six foot seven...in diameter. And when he shook my hand, I thought I’d never get it back.

So there I was, face-to-knee with the big man on campus, wondering how I was going to relate American Literature to The Hulk.

But then he pulled out a can of Orange Cappuccino. I was shocked! Could it be that this tough jock liked its delicate taste? And when Bone Crusher brought out the bone china, I was beyond belief.

Reading the expression on my face, he said, “What can I say? I like it. The Café Français is pretty good, too.” Well, who’s going to argue, I thought. As we sipped our Orange Cappuccino, I discovered that Billy Jo loves reading novels; his only problem was poetry. So I gave him tips on reading Emily Dickinson, and he gave me a copy of Ann Beattie’s “Falling in Place.”

All I could think was, Dad’s never going to believe this!

Drug testing: public good vs. private rights

Have you ever flown on a plane? Most people are a little uneasy about leaving the ground for an extended amount of time. Thoughts of plane crashes come to the minds of even the most seasoned travelers.

Human thought on surgery follows the same lines. The idea of having no control over what happens to your body once under anesthesia may well be more unnerving than the thought of the operation itself. Your body and its existence is in the hands of a few paid strangers.

Well, how would you feel if you knew that there was no regulation to ensure that the pilot flying your plane was not under the influence of alcohol? Or that the surgeon removing your appendix was not high?

The idea of drug testing came about in order to regulate people who work in jobs that make them responsible for human life. It provides an assurance that air traffic controllers and train engineers will not have their performance affected by mind-altering substances.

It has also become popular for companies and corporations to test employees for drugs. The rationalization for this form of drug testing is that, like air-traffic controllers or train engineers, drugs affect an employee's performance. Whether or not that employee's performance has more bearing on the company's public good, and you can be sure that any loophole will be used to impose on individuals unnecessarily.

The main question, of course, is public good vs. individual rights. If a worker's performance can affect the safety of people other than himself, then it is for the public good that his personal lifestyle be controlled. But when an employee has no responsibility for anyone other than himself, and the safety of others is not in question, then it is an infringement of individual rights to force such an employee to undergo drug testing.

Well then, now that we have discriminated where drug testing is necessary, how is it to be enforced? First, the concept of 'public safety' must be rigidly defined. Once that is done, the proper regulations must be set up designating specific jobs to regulate and for what substances. Who is to do this? Each company making its own regulations would accomplish nothing, for the main aim of company drug testing is increased performance, not public good, and you can be sure that any loophole will be used to define "public good" for the company's benefit.

Such an operation must be centralized. The federal government must regulate drug testing to protect lives but not to impose on individuals unnecessarily.

WASHINGTON—Is Bob Dole fit to be president?

Note the question. It's not whether Dole is qualified for the presidency. That he is. He has been a senator since 1968. He has been both majority and minority leader of the Senate. He has run for the vice presidency (1976), been chairman of the Republican National Committee and possesses—in addition to a charming and talented wife—a keen intellect and refreshing sense of humor. His qualifications for the presidency are manifest.

But not his fitness. When it comes to that, there are questions galore—and Dole has done nothing to put them to rest. Question number one has to do with his notorious temper. That he has one, there is no doubt. During the New Hampshire campaign, he responded to a polite question from a voter by snapping, "Get back to your seat." When Tom Brokaw on NBC asked Dole if he had anything to say to George Bush, he replied, "Stop lying about my record." The remark seemed spontaneous and uncontrolled—a geyser of bile rising within him.

Possibly a psychotherapist would have some nice words to say about Dole's temper—that, for instance, it's healthier to let things out than to keep them bottled up. But the presidency is no ordinary job and a President cannot be an ordinary man. Americans would soon tire of a president who displayed his temper as often as Dole does. The comity essential for the conduct of politics would be shredded and the electorate, not to mention Congress, might come to mirror the President's foul mood. Happy days would not be here again.

The second question about Dole has to do with his inability to organize. This is an essential presidential talent and Dole seems to lack it entirely. His campaign is a mess. Not only does the candidate make decisions he should delegate, but long after his campaign should have been a smooth operation it has almost fallen apart. Recent campaign manager, William Brock, fired two top aides—literally ordering them off the plane at a Florida stop.

Other campaigns have had their difficulties and out of them have sometimes come successful presidencies. In 1980, Ronald Reagan canned his campaign manager, John Sears, and replaced him with William Casey. About eight years later, that episode seems unimportant. But Reagan's difficulties with Sears had to do with strategy.
Advice for a failing system

To the editor:

Students of MSC—it's time to make some noise! We have a real adversarial problem on our hands. Do you have an advisor? Do you know your advisor's name? Have you ever even been to see your advisor? If yes, what? For what? To get your schedule signed?

Now here is the biggie...has your advisor ever sat down with you and outlined the courses you need to graduate?

If you are a typical student at Montclair State, you probably answered "no" to most of these questions. How about this: do you have a Montclair State Handbook or a requirements book? If not, you had better get one. Or didn't you know that it is your responsibility to get these books that no one ever told you about?

Ok, here is one more. What's the difference between a survey course and a topic course? If you don't know you had better find out because you need both to graduate.

Now be careful. You're probably thinking, "Aha! I have my sheet from my major with all my information on it!" Pretty slick, eh? Too bad most of these are wrong. Upon pulling out various majors (business, graphic arts, English), I was dismayed to find that none of these actually detailed the contacts through his work for the government during the war. In early 1917, he decided it was time to approach Britain for assistance in developing a Jewish nation in Palestine. He was not aware, however, that the Sykes-Picot agreement did not permit Britain to grant such a request.

A few months later the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs Lord Robert Cecil informed Weizmann that Britain would endorse the idea of a Jewish homeland in exchange for a request for a British protectorate over the territory. Weizmann agreed.

On November 2, 1917, Foreign Secretary Arthur James Balfour sent a letter to Lord Rothschild, emphasizing the need to redefine its control in the area while strengthening its authority under Sykes-Picot.

Chaim Weizmann, a chemist at the University of Manchester, was a prominent Zionist leader in England and had developed many well-placed contacts through his work for the government during the war. In early 1917, he decided it was time to approach Britain for assistance in developing a Jewish nation in Palestine. He was not aware, however, that the Sykes-Picot agreement did not permit Britain to grant such a request.

After the war, Emir Faisal, Husein's son, immediately went to Paris to discuss the Declaration with the Allied Powers. Arab countries wanted reassurances for what had been made in 1915 by McMahon. Britain, however, viewed the agreement less strictly, utilizing the territorial constraints of the McMahon promise as an imperative sticking point. Faisal left disappointed but open to discussion.

Faisal met with Weizmann in early 1919 and initially displayed positive hopes for a peaceful coexistence. In a letter to Felix Frankfurter of the American Zionist movement, Faisal wrote that "we will do our best...to wish the Jews a most hearty welcome home." Faisal's sincerity would soon be tested by other Arab nationalists.

The great betrayal of the Arabs was perpetrated by the British government. Concerned with the safety of the empire, the Foreign Office did not consider the possible repercussions of these promises in the Arab lands. British and French direction encouraged Arab nationalistic tendencies in a manner neither could have predicted.

Chaim Weizmann is a faculty columnist and an MSC alumnus.

Faculty/staff parking: students—preserve fairness

But, the Russ Hall and Free­man Hall areas are not the only spots that faculty and staff flock to. There is also the sidewalk in front of Partridge Hall, along College Avenue. Faculty and staff have practically painted white parking lines on the sidewalk. Cars parked here are rather disturbing, for the reason that it is a busy intersection of people going to and from classes and the amount of space left is rather miniscule.

If a student was to park in an illegal spot as mentioned above, they would surely get ticketed or towed. It seems to be that the administrators are going to great extremes to control the student parking problems and their violations, but does not lift a finger or issue a ticket when it comes to faculty and staff. I would like to know what type of cars faculty and staff drive—would they see the student parking aid from ticketing them.

Students need to be informed

Let’s try to remember the first day of classes in September. The majority of you were probably driving onto campus via College Avenue. You were cautious not to hit any administrators crossing from lot 9 between 8:30am. and 9:30am.

You drove a little further but were suddenly confronted with a long line of cars. Curiosity sets in. Oh no, not a conference on the first day of school?

You’re moving at a snail’s pace behind some twenty cars and your eye catches something strange in the distance. You notice the regular entrance into the student lot (Lot 13) has been blocked by a metal gate. Proceeding slowly, you’re shocked to find a mini-toll booth blocking the main entrance to the student lot.

Having personally spent the first few days of classes in front of the entrance speaking with students, I soon realized the student body was largely opposed to the gates. I found the opposition was primarily due to the student body not being properly notified of this new policy.

Perry DelVecchio, SGA legislator and member of the college—wide parking committee, commented, “The gates are essential to regulate non—decal parking students from taking convenient parking from those who have paid.”

The intent of the gates are fine. I applaud the members of the administration who have come to understand the problem of illegal parking. Yet taking action to solve the problem without conceptualizing its full impact has only increased the problems.

DelVecchio insists a standard set of procedures must be developed. That is the first step to resolving some of the problems.

These procedures must clearly explain the regulations on visitor parking, conference parking and the penalties a member of the campus can expect if these procedures are violated. They must be given to the parking attendants who are currently doing as they please.

If those individuals who are responsible for the gates want to see their true benefits realized they will communicate their intent to the entire campus community.

Animal rights: self hatred?

Ms. Ryan’s response to my letter in the March 13 edition of The Montclarion is merely a reiteration of her fallacious first missive. The alleged facts which she presents are obviously culled from the tracts of the anti-human terrorist organizations who masquerade as “animal rights” groups.

These groups would deny man the right to responsibly use animals for food, medical research, entertainment and clothing. To artificially elevate animals to the level of man is to deny all of human history.

As an adult in a free society, My personal opinion is that students are getting their money's worth, education wise. As long as the increase is fair, I would not oppose it.

Mampilly’s column seemed anti-semitic

To the editor:

I read with interest Paul Mampilly’s editorial of Feb. 25 on the current situation in the occupied territories. I was delighted to see our college newspaper being utilized as a forum for issues of international interest, in addition to the campus and regional issues which more immediately touch our lives.

Unfortunately, I found Mampilly’s treatment of the subject simplistic, uniformed, and bluntly anti-semitic. The issues, although not presented as such, are involved and complex.

Simple statements such as, “Israel has no legal or moral right to occupy the West Bank and the Gaza Strip,” indicate the writer’s lack of sophistication on this subject.

However, I choose not to concentrate on the historical and social realities which inform this issue. Hopefully, others will rise to that task. Instead, I wish to address the anti-semitism which struck me with its angry intensity. I readily concede that conditions in Palestinian refugee camps are unpleasant, even revolting. But to compare them with Nazi concentration camps is absurd, an affront to the six million Jews and countless others who were killed there.

Mampilly has a curious view of the Holocaust and its implications. He declares, “If Israel, the nation born of Nazi Germany’s oppression and hatred, does not recognize what is happening, the world has learned nothing from the tragedy of the Holocaust.” Why is it that the burden of responsibility, of learning from the Holocaust, is placed on Israel alone? I would submit that Israel learned its lesson very well—it learned that Jewish blood isn’t cheap. Sure, Israel has a moral obligation to respect human rights and act fairly, but not because of the death of six million Jews. That is the lesson the rest of the world, not the victims, should have learned.

Finally, the writer suggests that if Israel continues to justify its actions vis-a-vis the Palestinians, the same justification should be used concerning the plight of the Jews in the USSR. I fail to see the logic in this question. In fact, there is none.

Students Speak

“The college is increasing the tuition fee for the upcoming academic year. Do you feel that this increase is substantiated?”

Compiled and photographed by Wally Acuna

“I have no problem with an increase in tuition costs as long as there is an increase in what this school has to offer. Security, parking, and library hours are just a few of the problems that need attention. If raising the tuition is the only way to solve these problems, then they should do it.”

Michael Falzon

economics/junior

“It’s unfortunate that the board of trustees were to increase the tuition fee, they should also increase their educational programs. As of now I am getting my money’s worth, because I have taken advantage of many programs the school has to offer. Independent studies, co-op programs were all administered well and I was able to learn more than if I was in a classroom.”

Karen White

communication studies/senior

“No, I do not feel MSC offers enough for the students. The security system should be enhanced so that walking on campus at night isn’t so dangerous. The library hours should be lengthened to cater to the students’ need and the administrative offices should make a schedule so that there is someone competent in the office at all times.”

Maryann Zoppi

home economics/senior

“Yes, I feel that I am getting my money’s worth. There is a lot that this school offers that many people take for granted. Also, tuition goes up each year, so it’s to be expected.”

Fish fans float on top

Something fishy has hit MSC! And what a hit it was! The New Orleans Radiators, presented by Class One Concerts, put on a really hot show Tuesday night in the Memorial Auditorium.

The audience ranged from high school students to older adults, but all had an equally great time dancing (some barefoot) and singing to the bluesy, southern-fried rock and roll of the band. They performed in a synergistic manner, no man taking center stage, rather all six members equally contributing.

The band consists of master keyboardist, vocalist, songwriter, guitarist, and bassist Reggie Scanlan, 36; percussionist (bongo, tambourine) Glenn Sears, 37; and drummer Frank Bua, 41.

The Radiators opened up their first set with "This Wagon's Gonna Roll," off their current LP Law of the Fish which pleased their fans, the "fish-heads."

The band rocked the house with some of their not so popular songs before hitting the dancing and singing fans with the song "Like Dreamers Do." Through much radio airplay, the song has gained the band much recognition in recent months.

After a short break, the Radiators or "Rads," as their fish followers call them, primped the audience for the second set with "Bommerang." Guitarist/vocalist Dave Malone went off on a guitar lick displaying a sense of professionalism which is not foreign to the rest of the band. They performed in a synergistic manner, no man taking center stage, rather all six members equally contributing to create an audio experience of euphoric proportion.

Later in the set the Rads played their attention-getting song entitled "Suck the Head." Believe it or not, it's about a crayfish.

The first encore included a cover of Van Morrison classic "Brown-eyed Girl." The second encore was composed mostly of an instrumental similar to that of the "drums/space" set at a Grateful Dead show. In the final encore, the band satisfied the crowd by playing the Dead cover tune "Loveboat."

When the Rads finally left the stage after their third encore, their fish-heads proceeded to plead for a fourth encore but to no avail. Almost three hours had passed since the band struck its first chord. The houselights came up and many stood in awe of the display of musical talent and tightness they had just witnessed.

Lightness: a film of unbearable length

When was the last time anyone has heard of a three hour long movie? Yes, I mean a 180 minute film about a trio of campy comedians...Buddy Holly and the Crickets: A Tribute. The show has been given an A_Tribute_ney will host March 10 and 11. Its the Garry Shandling Show made its network debut on Fox Sunday night. I cannot stress enough how ingenius this show is. Obviously, I am not the only one, as Shandling_show helped Fox beat out ABC in the ratings race for Sundays. Its the Garry Shandling Show can be seen at intervals throughout the day. From the _Oh no, not another damn rerun_ file, some 9,000 members of the Writers Guild of America went out on strike on March 9. The writers are seeking a greater share of foreign residuals on film and T.V. productions, as well as more creative control over their scripts. NBC is likely to be hit hardest. Already, \

Watch for James Taylor in Concert Saturday at 9 p.m. on PBS. A brilliant performance, taped at Boston's Colonial Theater.

Lame Movie of the Week: The Terminator (1984) airs Sunday at 9 p.m. on NBC. Arnold Schwarzenegger stars in this non-stop thriller about a robot and a future mom, directed by James (Aliens) Cameron.

Steve Allen will also show up as the father in the 79 students were chosen to attend the event. Fifty-four of the honor men and women were _seat fillers_ and the remaining 25 were talent escorts. Through the mazes of Radio City Music Hall, the students led celebrities such as Miles Davis, Belinda Carlisle, Al Jolson and others.

Prior to the Grammys, students of the department and those of New York University attended the Lifetime Achievement Awards, arranged through Dr. Howard Travis. Their participation was approved by ASCAP who won the invitation to last Wednesday's festivities.

Senior Karla Lambert, student coordinator at the Awards show said, _It was an exciting evening, and a great learning experience._ She added, _It's very rare that you get to work for a nationally televised program as prestigious as the Grammys._ Soprano Caroline Scott escorted Sandra Crouch and said, _It was a hard work._ Different performers were led to their seats or to the stage and brought to their dressing rooms at intervals throughout the day which were full run-through of the show. It was a wonderful experience, _Scott added, _We were fortunate to be selected. Overall it was great._ The Broadcasting department is also actively involved with the New Jersey Television Network, an opportunity available through the Governor's Challenge for Excellence Grant. Students have been trained to operate new equipment and enhance their creative skills. To remain in the program, they must maintain a 3.0 grade point average and be active in the department. Soprano Geraldine Dakak said the Grant offered her _interdisciplinary experience._ She would not have received anywhere else. She remarked, _The hands on experience with the equipment and the work involved has helped me tremendously._ The department's first collaboration of the network is expected to air this month. It will reveal the advantages the students have molded into a fine performance.

One real asset of this movie is that it excels as a photo-journalistic depiction of Czech culture and European scenery. You get a good taste of life before, during, and after the invasion. Furthermore, this is contrasted against the luxurious lifestyle of the West yet in the long run, these advantages do not overshadow the disadvantages.

It was a good vantage point for some performances, but like all good things, it came to an end, when the frantic lady came back with the people whose seats I had been in. I rushed to an empty seat. I got up and ran down to the stage, where I was ushered into an empty seat. I stayed there for a close view of performances by Cab Calloway, Run DMC, Janet Jackson, Paul Simon, Lou Reed and Suzanne Vega, along with our audience mates, Mayor Ed Koch, Cyndi Lauper, Christie Brinkley and Prince.

It is this possible?
Jackson proves who’s bad
By Raymond Ecke
Staff Writer

Let’s face it, Michael Jackson is a little wacky. Whether it’s his slumber in an oxygen chamber, traveling with a chimp or bathing in ewan water, Jackson has become something of a 1980’s Howard Hughes.

Regardless, his performance Thursday at the Madison Square Garden reaffirmed his status as one of the most exciting and innovative performers in the entertainment business. It began with a huge marquee displaying some of Jackson’s fancy footwork, as the marquee began to rise it became a wall of blinding white light. As it descended, the band added to the excitement by playing some dramatic choruses, finally resulting in five silhouettes standing center stage. The man in the middle would soon command the attention of every person in the sold-out arena for the next two hours.

Jackson kicked off his first solo tour with “Wanna Be Startin’ Something” off the Thriller LP. On stage with Jackson were four dancers and one keyboardist, each dressed in dark red leather jackets.

The elaborate show also included some mind bogglng theatrics. Of course he had lasers and pyrotechniques and some sophisticated lighting but also he had some Mattifying illusions.

At one point a staircase was brought out, and at the top was a small platform where Jackson stood. A curtain fell around him, exploded violently and he reappeared at the other side of the stage dressed in a completely different costume.

Jackson periodicaly slowed down to play some of his ballads, like the infamous Human Nature” and later during “She’s Out of My Life,” he asked the audience if he could come down into the crowd and sing to them. At the climax of the song he fell to one knee and began to cry. Anyone who can cry in front of 16,000 people is okay by me.

One problem still remains with Jackson’s performance in that he needs to communicate better with the audience. He virtually did not say anything except occasional “thank you” or “I love you.” Perhaps this lesson can best be learned by visiting an upcoming Bruce Springsteen concert.

Jackson came back to perform “Beat It.” First to do a riviting version of “The Way You Make Me Feel.” Then again to do an inspiring version of “Billie Jean” which brought the crowd to their feet. By the smile on Jackson’s face you could tell he was satisfied.

Thursday night’s performance was a benefit for the United Negro College Fund. Jackson’s solo; the reformed (but not yet reincarnated) UNCF president Christopher Edley with a $600,000 check which represented all the proceeds from the sold-out event.

New Order—Substance (Quest)

As compilation albums go, this is an outstanding one that’s worth the trip to the record store. The 12-song double album truly boasts the best from New Order’s six-year history. The band’s inception in 1981, Substance eloquently displays the quarter’s masterful delivery of straight-ahead dance music with a definite New York disco edge.

Though a steady, pulsating beat is always present, New Order separates itself from the rest of the crowd by its extensive use of acoustic drums and electric guitars—something uncommon to most dance-oriented rock bands—as well as the synthesizer. In fact, New Order seems to consciously limit the appearance of the synth and programmed drum tracks.

New Order’s music has always been aimed at the college audience. Substance does an excellent job of keeping that image intact. The band constantly forges forward on each and every track with an avant-garde fervor, its unreecharred sound never sound any better.

One of the best things the band did was to team up with guitarist Steven Hague (most noted for bringing OMD into the spotlight) for the magnifiicent new single, “True Faith.” Compact disc enthusiasts are urged to opt for the double-CD version of Substance, complete with 24 songs, another excellent collaborative effort with Hague (“1963”), and over two hours of total music. The only complaint about either package is that New Order has to go through its licensees which would have the nerve to buy this stuff, let alone supply the lyrics to the buyer. Not every record has to be woven of moral fiber, but I just want to slaughter your sister, with my sex machine gun is too much!

The music that this group makes is of the “trash rock” variety. This Zodiac person, he can’t sing but, he can shout and mutter those wonderful lyrics that probably better than anyone around. Not that I’d like to hear Luciano Pavarotti singing them, anyway.

Maybe I’m asking too much-decent writing. It doesn’t have to be decent, just okay, l’ll settle for that. The band is good and I’m human and I need it! And I must have my beliefs! I open myself to the love! And love you, love you, love you showed me! A merciful release show us a mature side of Spring-field that other things he’s done have not.

Listening to this album is strange. You can’t help but think this is Rick Springfield, I’m listening to, and chuckle to yourself. It’s hard to dr. Noah Drake, I’m sorry, Springfield, seriously. The days of Luke and Laura are, now that whenever I hear his name and it’s a shame. The songs on this album are so similar to his earlier works that you honestly would have a problem with taking his music seriously, also.

A few years back, Springfield owned the radio, now that’s changed. The teenie boppers that once “needed” him are older. And the teenie bopper power comes from girls who aren’t much older than they are. If you want some good memories, get this record.

Rick Springfield-Rock of Life (RCA)

Rick Springfield’s new album Rock of Life, is well, Rick Springfield. It’s set up like his other records, a medley of rock and roll songs thrown in so Springfield can get away with looking so intense in pictures and videos. This record sounds good, but I believe it has been released when he was still on General Hospital.

All fun aside, this album is really pretty good. It’s calculated and shows zero growth, musically for Springfield. His writing on this record is what does separate it from his previous albums. What he has to say is much more mature than his earlier recordings (remember “Jesses’ Girl”?).

Lines like “I’m human and I need it!” And I must have my beliefs! I open myself to the love! And I love you, love you, love you showed me! A merciful release show us a mature side of Springfield that other things he’s done have not.

BSCU sings out
By Jennifer G. Stelech
Arts Editor

Saturday night the Montclair State Contemporary Gospel Ensemble joined voices with the Black Student Cooperative Union for their 1st annual reunion.

The Blanton Hall atrium echoed the magnificent sounds of both choirs. Accompanied by a band consisting of keyboards and drums, a rich, entertaining sound filled the hall.

25 members of BSCU participated in the musical event. An equal number of Black Student Cooperative Union performers, from all over the U.S., also graced the scales.

Reverend George Ryder gave the history and welcome ad-dress. He told the audience, “Whatever the Lord does with you, it’s alright with us tonight.” Ryder then asked every one to take off their shoes and dance and sing their praise to Jesus.

With powerful voices, the singers delivered an inspirational presentation to the culture and sounds they performed so well.

From the young to the old, everyone shared in the inspirational words of the gospel singers and the speakers. The solo performances were strong and impressive.

One audience member remarked, “You can’t help but be taken in by it.”

Amanda Williams, Vice President of BSCU, and chairperson of the gospel choir, said, “The choir basically brings recognition to BSCU as well as to M.S.C. I feel that within the past couple of months we’ve done more to enlighten the campus community as well as the outside community of our cultural heritage.

Several pieces performed by the groups included “Jesus is Mine,” “Harvest is Ripe,” and “There is No Failure in God.” Reverend Pete Winsted chimed in with a rousing rendition of “Don’t Let Nothing Get You Down.” His booming voice lifted and carried the audience members who sang the verses with him.

The reunion was an entertaining benefit and all proceeds from the evening went to the William Dorchy Scholarship Fund.

The 1988 MSC baseball season gets underway this weekend when the Indians travel to Florida for a seven-day, eight-game trip beginning with Purdue on Saturday.

MSC, the 1987 Division III national champion, looks to defend that title with a new leader in first-year head coach Norm Schoenig. Schoenig takes over from Kevin Forney, who left MSC to take over the head coaching job at Division II Florida Atlantic this season.

Schoenig brings 14 years of coaching experience to MSC, though this will be his first head coaching job in the collegiate ranks.

He was an assistant with the Indians from 1977-83 before coaching at Rutgers University as an assistant from 1984-87. In 1986, the team won the Atlantic Ten Conference title and a National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III Wrestling Championships in Wheaton, Illinois, and three of them came in the process.
