Dean Harris to be honored by campus organizations

By Shawn Smith
Staff Writer

This is the first of a two part series.

The Black Alumni Committee, the Black Student Cooperative Union and the Association of Black Faculty and Staff will gather on May 7 in the Student Center ballrooms to honor one of MSC's most dedicated, distinguished and loved administrators: James E. Harris, associate dean of students.

Jeanette Pinkney, co-chairperson of the BAC and one of the coordinators of the event, described Harris as "a main thread in the fabric of MSC; he pushed a lot of people to get their education. We see him put out—not just for black people, for all people—now it's time for him to receive."

It is easy to see why Dean Harris is one of MSC's most valuable administrators. He has an easy rapport with students that makes him so approachable, that during this interview we had to sit tucked away in Blanton cafeteria for fear of constant interruption.

Undoubtedly one of MSC's most outspoken officials, the young James Harris had rather modest beginnings. One of nine children born to a sharecropper in Castalia, North Carolina, he explained that his parents were the exception, rather than the rule, in allowing him and his two brothers and six sisters to go to school. "In my parents' eyes, I was 'going to be something,'" Harris said.

When they moved to New Jersey he attended South Side High School in Newark (now Malcolm X Shabazz), from which he graduated in 1964. He then entered MSC, receiving a B.A. and teaching certificate in social studies and a master's degree in student personnel services and counseling. He is currently enrolled in the Masters of Public Administration Program at New York University.

Although he was able to finish his high school education at the top of his class, he said he began college unprepared, and his tone revealed a sense of betrayal by the urban school system.

"My first semester here was a disaster," he said. "What they taught at school left me non-competitive with the preparatory students getting at other schools. There were valedictorians from other schools; when matched with those kids, my education placed me at a disadvantage. Even though I got good grades, I didn't get the education that went along with those grades. I had to work real hard."

When he was a junior, the climate of the American nation was fogged with racial disturbances; when he was a senior, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated. The unfolding scenes of the 1960s provided dramatic changes for African-Americans of the future.

"There was a nationwide campus upheaval; demands were being made for more black personnel," said Harris. While still a senior in 1968, he volunteered to recruit students for MSC from urban areas such as Jersey City, Newark and East Orange. As he prepared to enter the New Jersey Army National Guard that same year, the Equal Opportunity Fund was instituted.

Two years later, MSC offered Harris a job as a full-time student counselor for the EOF program.

In 1971, he married his high school sweetheart, Justine Erma Perry. They have two children: Kasheena, 16, and Jamillah, 12, who are both "Afrocentric as hell," said a proud Harris.

In 1972, he was placed in a newly-created position: Assistant Dean of Students. At the age of 23, he may have become the youngest deans in the state. He supervised the counseling services department and was advisor to the Black Organization for Success in Society (now the BSCU). He also coached MSC's cross-country team from 1975-1986.

Dean Harris did not set out to be the monumental administrator that he has become. He originally planned to teach, "to influence the thinking and behavior" of the students he would have taught. He then rationalized that if he worked in a college setting, he would be able to "train teachers to influence a lot more students than I ever could."

SGA News

Constitution approved

By Mike Heelan
Staff Writer

After a long heated debate, the SGA legislature passed the Greek Council constitution. This will eliminate some of the responsibility which currently rests with the SGA.

"I'm relieved after ten months of diligent work by the SGA, that the legislature passed the bill unanimously," said Rob Acerra.

The constitution will provide for the Greek council to exercise partial control over the participating fraternities, sororities and sororities. Some legislators expressed a concern that the council possesses too much power if they would be able to de-charter organizations.

The legislature approved the appointment of Mike Borgia as SGA attorney general for the 1988-89 school year. The attorney general is responsible for seeing that the SGA statutes are being followed.

A question was raised in relation to Borgia's objectivity. According to SGA legislator Myra Rosa, Borgia was not objective during the recent SGA elections.

"I don't have any comment to the charge of bias, to do so would be unobjective. I hope to make some changes in election rules including ending Blanton Hall balloting and looking into creating a real judiciary for the SGA," responded Borgia. He had the support of the entire legislature with the exception of two votes and one abstention.

GROUP ADVISING SESSIONS FOR FALL 1988 ADVANCE REGISTRATION

Advance registration for Fall 1988 begins on April 25 and ends on Friday May 13. Student course request forms (registration forms) for UNDECLARED FULL — TIME students will be available at the Academic Advising and Tutorial Center (building E) beginning at 8:30 AM Monday 4/25. Part-time students who are enrolled will receive student course request forms by mail shortly before the advance registration period.

Please come to building E to sign up for one of the following group advising sessions. We need to keep track of the number of students planning to attend in order to insure adequate counselor coverage. Due to the number of undeclared students and the number of counselors available to advise, we must insist that you attend one of these sessions in order to obtain a signature on your course request form. Please bring your course request form, a Fall 1988 Schedule of Courses book, a college catalog and your most recent transcript (the pink and white paper on which you got your last grades in January).

Because of the great demand, three of the sessions (4/28, 5/3, 5/11) will focus on the questions and concerns of undeclared students who want to meet the entry requirements for Business Administration and/or Computer Science. In order to insure maximum counselor availability for all undeclared students, any undeclared student may sign up for any of the following sessions:

Day/Date  Time  Location                  Group

Is college relevant?

Last May, surveys were given out to undeclared freshmen who advance registered on the 30th of that month. Of the fall 1987 freshmen that answered these surveys, when asked to select only one reason that they were attending MSC, 76.4% chose, "to prepare for an occupation." Other possible responses to the survey's question were, "to become an educated person," and "for personal growth," neither of which came close in popularity to the top answer.

"Businesses today require a college degree for jobs that don't really need it," says a full professor of psychology at MSC, explaining the rationale behind such reasons for seeking a secondary education. Such seems to be the trend in today's job market.

Perhaps current students' parents didn't need a college degree for careers where skills were taught on-the-job. We all know of Lee Iaccoca, who didn't have a college degree but business or otherwise, is presently one of the top entrepreneurs of our country.

Of the seven editors polled in The Montclarion, five said that they came to MSC to better their chances of a higher-paid job. Although many of their majors do not train them to work towards a planned career, they still need the degree to acquire a job.

"Was their time— and yours —spent at college a waste, an unnecessary but required step towards a career?" It depends on the person. Many students report studying subjects, for four years, that they may never use again. Generally, these are also students that ask, when a professor begins to expand on an idea, "Are we responsible for this?"

Another way to view college is a well-spent four years of growing up, of experimentation with different choices. How many people have switched majors since they have come into college? Or future plans for careers? How easy would it have been for them to change their minds if they immediately entered into a job, started training, and found they didn't like it?

After four years of college, we've had time to grow, to experiment. What's more, we're not afraid to continue experimenting. It all depends on the person.
Discontent with selection of track coach

To the editor,

After monitoring from a distance the administration’s blundering performance in hiring a new men’s track coach, I would like to express my discontent with the selection process, and with what I hope is not the final decision in this matter. As the student/athlete member of the selection who, late in 1984, originally recommended Vic Mizzone to be hired, I would like to provide some insight as to why I feel Vic should be offered the coaching position.

While interviewing the pool of candidates, I distinctly recollect one of them having been at his present head coaching position for only one year. I stressed to the rest of the committee that we wanted to hire a head coach who planned on being around MSC for some time.

All too often our school has hired coaches who use their positions at Montclair State for personal gain, as stepping stones to larger programs. The recent departures of two head baseball coaches in the past five years is a prime example. Vic Mizzone only wants to coach at his alma mater; he has no aspirations of jumping to a larger, perhaps more lucrative position. As a underpaid, part-time coach the last four years, Coach Mizzone resurrected a dormant program back to being a national power, like it was when ran here in the early seventies.

He waited patiently, hoping his job would become a full-time position, only to see it given away to an unqualified, girls high school coach. What a great way to reward a member of our Athletic Hall of Fame for producing twelve All-Americans in four years.

If the powers to be remembered the old adage, “if it is not broken, don’t fix it” this whole fiasco would have been avoided. In order for any athletic program to be successful, it is imperative that tradition and consistency be instilled. Hiring an outsider has destroyed those ingredients Coach Mizzone has provided the men’s track program with.

As far as the selection process goes, the campus community would be better served if the Athletic Department had the autonomy to do their own hiring. This way, the process would be devoid any of the political pandering, which probably permeates other administrative hires.

Speaking of our Athletic Department, where was our new Athletic Director during Coach Mizzone’s ordeal? As the former MSC swim team coach, Greg Lockard should know first hand how difficult it is coaching one of the more obscure sports on this campus. Because of that reason alone, he should be a staunch supporter of Vic Mizzone.

Indeed, the administration’s arm twist tactics has reduced his role to Montclair State’s newest marionette. His puppet show should be shown at our Summerfun Theater.

The final blow to this debacle comes from Murray Cole and his pusillanimous Board of Trustees, who had the opportunity to clearly right a wrong. Instead, he chose to ignore the pleas of the athletes. If nobody listens to the men on the team, who will they listen to? Is it the obstinate Board of Trustees who now must walk around campus with omelets on their faces for hiring a coach who now has no team to coach.

The men’s track program was thriving under Vic Mizzone. By approving the firing of him, and the simultaneous hiring of John Blanton, the Board of Trustees are responsible for the conscionous blow the program has incurred. It was obvious from the beginning nobody took into consideration what might be best for the track program itself.

Although I find it somewhat ironic, I would like to laud Eastside High School principal Joe Clark for his show of support for one of his teachers, and for calling a press conference to try to bring some attention to what is clearly an administrative miscarriage.

An incident like this, where an alumnus is treated like a stranger, can only generate negative repercussions throughout the alumni community of MSC. I for one would now twice of ever helping my alma mater, be it physically or financially, after the way it treated Vic Mizzone.

In support of Sontag

To the editor,

I wish to respond to Professor Spencer’s commentary on the Susan Sontag lecture on April 12, 1988 (The Montclarion, April 13, 1988).

Her first and strongest criticism is leveld at Sontag for her failure to sympathetically address a question regarding Palestinian exiles. In her letter, Spencer unfavorably compares Sontag to another American Jew who handled this issue with diplomatic aplomb: What is Professor Spencer actually suggesting by her criticism?

I am certain she would agree to expect all American Jews to treat this issue in an identical manner is ludicrous and terribly offensive. “American Jews” are perhaps as variegated in opinion as any other “group” in our culture.

In the same rambling, unfocused paragraph, Professor Spencer also attacks Sontag for not mentioning the fact the number ten is a basic unit of measurement. Sontag was not focusing on descriptive definitions of time but rather the prescriptive meanings of time and the impact of these imperatives on our lives. Spencer’s objection is irrelevant here.

Professor Spencer aims another criticism at Sontag’s failure to embrace a non-Western perspective of the lecture. Perhaps Spencer arrived late for the talk, because Sontag remarked at the outset that she was going to concentrate on a more narrow, traditional Western perspective in order to closely scrutinize our conceptions of the passage of time.

Additionally, Sontag made reference to the Japanese ca

Professor refutes columnist

To the editor,

In his answer to my letter of April 14, 1988, Mr. Oren Zeve couldn’t refute any of the documented facts I presented except to say:

The Palestinians can live in peace as long as they acquiesce to Israeli occupation of their land. He says that “the testimony of all Israeli leaders, and of the majority of the population, confirm that all peoples can and do live peacefully in Israel everyday, respecting each other as human beings.”

Which country is he talking about? Is this the country whose Defense Minister, Yitzhak Rabin (the man in charge of the occupied West Bank and Gaza), states in front of the whole world that the official Israeli policy is the policy of “Force, might and beating.”

It is definitely pathetic that someone would succumb to such a level of illogical, meaningless debate.

Morty mouths off

By Raymond Ecke
Staff Writer

The motor mouth, Morton Downey Jr., blew into MSNBC Tuesday leaving behind an evening full of degradation and an audience filled with pumped up college students. The topic of the presentation was alcohol and its effects. The panel for the discussion consisted of a forensic pathologist, Mike Dziiuba, student representative from the Greek President, James Harris, Associate Dean of Students, and Liz Murphy, a representative from MADD.

Downey started off the hour-long show with a completely irrelevant and offensive sexual remark about a groupie in Syracuse. He followed this by falling to his knees and begging the forgiveness of Father Arthur Humphrey. For this, Downey received cheers from the audience.

For the most part, the show did not differ much from his daily show on WOR-TV. Downey is known for his out of course for his course in language. Complete with his chain smoking and day-glow socks, he began by asking "How many of us were taught responsible drinking in high school?" Nobody in the audience responded. "Maybe we should then blame the public school system for the alcohol problem," Downey shouted.

As usual, Downey did all he could to give the issue an "us against them" theme. This, in essence, is the key to Downey's success. Whether it's conservative "pabulum-puking intellectuals" or students against administration one thing is certain, Downey does all he can to keep the tension high. Thus, many of Harris' sensible comments about school policy in regard to alcohol were met with jeers, while all student remarks brought thunderous applause.

Still, this was not a serious debate—it was meant to entertain, and no one in the audience seemed to take it as real. The most surprising thing to me was that Downey did manage to address a few important topics such as the teaching of alcoholism in elementary school. Wonders never cease!

Saturday morning childrens show at airing on the fall on NBC.

The Misadventures of Ed Grinkle will star Short and will consist of a mixture of animation and live action. It can be seen in the 11:30 to noon slot.

This is a story of an art teacher and his class. The show's creator is Ed Grinkle, the poet and character creator from Saturday Night Live star Martin Short. (you know, the guy with the pointed hair) will be a cast.

The Misadventures of Ed Grinkle will star Short and will consist of a mixture of animation and live action. It can be seen in the 11:30 to noon slot.

From the story we know we're on in the morning and in the evening but we have to be on in the afternoons that's where the big money is, "you tell them," Pat Sajak and Vanna White will appear on NBC's soap Santa Barbara. Characters Ed, a poet and Martin Short's Wheel in an attempt to win some big money. Someone should tell them that Wheel of Fortune doesn't give away money, just some dopey prizes.

Lame Movie of the Week:
They Still Call Me Bruce (1987)

Tuesday afternoon at 12:30 on HBO. This spoof on the old Bruce Lee films leaves something to be desired. Unless you're a fan of bad jokes, and I don't mean bad as in good, I mean bad as in bad. Until you read again!

Short Cut

Deacon Blue—Raintown

Scotland's much heralded Deacon Blue has released its equally acclaimed Raintown album. Credited with being one of the best new bands to emerge from the U.K. music scene, the album is a vindication of the standing they have received.

Deacon Blue is lightly influenced by contemporary sounds. If I was forced to classify it, I'd call it good Euro-pop with a very wide variety.

The album is already receiving some airplay from progressive radio stations like WNEW-FM, WDRR-FM and college radio stations.

Possible single releases from the album could be "Raintown," "He Looks Like Spencer Tracy Now" and "When will you (Make my phone ring)."

Some of the songs seem heavily influenced by some rather contemporary artists. For instance "Chocolate girl" has a very John Mellencamp feel while the melancholic "Town to be Blamed" brings to mind Suzanne Vega.

The slower songs on the album are better than some of the uptempo ones, still good stuff all in all. And that's something you can say for too many albums currently being released.

Yup! This one gets my "guaranteed you will like it" recommendation.

Go ahead try it.

Thought for the Day
"God is found in the peaceful heart"
The following thought is from Gerhard Tersteegen, an 18th century German quietist.

God is a tranquil thing, and abide in a tranquil manner. So must thy spirit become a tranquil and clear little pool wherein the serene light of God can be mirrored. Therefore shun all that is disquieting and distracting, both within and without. Nothing in the whole world is worth the loss of thy peace; even the faults which thou hast committed and peacful spirit. Avoid all anxious care, vexation, murmuring, and melancholy, which derail thy soul and render thee unfit to turn gently away from than.

Second annual contest a success

Bodybuilding contest beneficial for ‘every body’

By Dennis Campbell
Staff Writer

The Second Annual Bodybuilding Extravaganza got off to a raucous start, as free t-shirts with their own unique posing track team of MSC, the contest, through fitness, nutrition and drop it off at The Montclarion office in Room 113 of the Student Center Annex. The names of those submitting the correct answer will be published in the next week’s issue. Deadline for submissions is Monday at 3 p.m.

1. Who was the first rookie to win the Cy Young Award?
2. How many times did Sugar Ray Robinson fight Jake LaMotta?
3. What college’s football team responds to the fight song Boola-Boola!?
4. What was the halftime score of Super Bowl IX, between Tulane and lightweight (up to 159 pounds), while the females were divided into lightweight and middleweight classes.

The most competitive weight class in the male division was the lightweight as the six contestants were most evenly matched. The eventual winner was Steve Wolinski, while Kevin McGrath and Jim Hughes placed second and third respectively.

Five males competed in the middleweight class. Peter Gorgy placed first. Jeff Gramoni took second and Gene Segeda was third.

In the lightweight competition, Dave Chandler proved it’s better the second time around as he improved from last year’s performance to take first prize. George Irwin was second and Wilbert Jones came in third.

The middleweight female division consisted of three competitors. First place went to Dawn Martini, as Valerie Vogues and Ruth Sutherland placed second and third respectively.

Trivia Time-Out

Each week, The Montclarion publishes a list of sports questions and answers to test your knowledge of sports trivia. In addition, there is a sports stumper which will be answered in the following issue.

If you think you have the correct answer to the stumper, drop it off at The Montclarion office in Room 113 of the Student Center Annex. The names of those submitting the correct answer will be published in the next week’s issue. Deadline for submissions is Monday at 3 p.m.

Indian Info: Senior Gina DeAquino, whose pitching has been the cornerstone for the Indians’ success this season, has been named NJAC player of the week.

DeAquino was also named Star-Ledger Woman Athlete of the Week for her performance last week, as she won all five of the games she started.

DeAquino set an individual record for most wins in a season against Scranton when she pitched a three-hit shutout for her 21st win of the season.

DeAquino, a 1987 Division III All American, has been a model of consistency during her four years at MSC. Last season she compiled a 19-6 record with a 0.80 earned run average (ERA) and was 19-9 in her sophomore campaign with a 1.22 ERA.

The Indians host the Kean Cougars in a doubleheader Friday in their final regular season home games. MSC then visits William Paterson Tuesday in their final regular season games. The New Jersey Athletic Conference Tournament will be held next weekend, May 6-7, at a site to be determined...
