Dr. Walters resigns from presidency

By Virginia Delgado

On Sept 15 the Board of Trustees held their first meeting of the 1988-89 academic year. At the meeting, it was reported that President Donald E. Walters will terminate his presidency due to medical reasons after Nov. 1, 1988. Until a new president can be appointed, Dr. Richard S. Lynde will continue as acting president.

The board announced it will now be taking suggestions from all departments within the college for nominees for the search committee.

Mr. Murray Cole, chairperson of the board, said that under Walters' tenure, the college has won two challenge grants, one for the school of fine and performing arts, and another for the Institute for Critical Thinking.

Cole added that Walters has improved the physical appearance of the college and developed many outstanding programs such as the international studies program and the college honors program, and he has brought new ethics and values to the school.

"His leadership and contributions will be remembered and valued," said Cole.

Addressing the point that the committee will have a very short time to find a new president, Cole stated, "the process will not be rushed and it will be given the attention required."

During the conference session, Dr. Geoffrey Newnam, Dean of the School of Fine and Performing Arts, reported on the programs and activities the school has undertaken since 1986.

Two of their most successful projects were Theatrefest and The Ellis Island Project. They have also used the money to purchase a great deal of state of the art equipment.

The board members approved a policy for construction projects. In accordance with MSC policy and procedure for construction, the board must approve all projects in excess of $200,000.

A number of projects, aimed at improving the campus facilities will be awarded by the Division of Buildings and Construction (DBC).

A formal reception will take place Oct. 15 and 5 in front of the library. Balloons, pencils, bookmarks, and book bags will be handed out and refreshments will be served. In the event of inclement weather, the event will take place in the library lobby.

A formal reception will take place on Oct. 7. The keynote speaker will be Joan Segal, executive director of the Association of College and Research Libraries, American Library Association, said Rodriguez. Segal will speak about the relationship between the future scholar and library.

Other speakers will include Gregory Waters, acting vice president of academic affairs, and a retired MSC librarian. The reception is by invitation only, and Montclair State Deans, faculty, retired librarians, top area administrators and library directors are expected to attend.

An exhibit will be on display throughout the month of October, said Rodriguez. It will show the changes Sprague Library has undergone since it was built.

The Sprague building was constructed in 1963, according to Rodriguez. Library services were formerly conducted in Vail Hall.

The library was built in honor of Dr. Harry A. Sprague, educator and former MSC president, who visualized a "great central library and "adequate facilities" for Montclair State College, according to a library document.

As stated in a 1977 Star Ledger article, Sprague received his B.S., M.A., and Ph.D. from Columbia University. He received his honorary documents from Fairleigh Dickinson University and Montclair State University.

Library Director Blanche Hailer was able to see the changes the library has undergone in the past 25 years. Hailer said, "Montclair State has grown tremendously, which has resulted in the library's needs to adapt."

Dr. Walters initiated several new programs at MSC, according to the press release. These included an ongoing series of Ethics and Values Seminars for corporate executives and other professional, academic and community leaders, and a series of Public Policy Forums designed to focus attention on matters of relevance to New Jersey and its citizens.

Walters also instigated the annual Presidential Symposium, which gives participants an opportunity to examine issues of national concern to higher education.

During Walters' presidency, the Justice William J. Brennan, Jr. chapter of the Essex Inn of Court was instituted on campus as the New Jersey Bar Association's first effort in a program of career development, according to the press release.

Sprague Library's 25th anniversary celebrated

Dr. Walters resigned from the presidency on Sept. 15 due to medical problems.

With a festive, fall spirit, staff members will kick off Sprague Library's 25th anniversary in October.

Spearheading the event is Luis Rodriguez, circulation librarian. The focus of this year's celebration is to reflect on the library's history, the changes in services over the years, and its future, said Rodriguez.

Student related activities include a "Do You Know Your Library?" contest, where prizes will be awarded, and amnesty at the circulation desk, where students will be given breaks on book fines.

A student reception will take place Oct. 4 and 5 in front of the library. Balloons, pencils, bookmarks, and book bags will be handed out and refreshments will be served. In the event of inclement weather, the event will take place in the library lobby.

End of active career

Dr. Walters resigned from his position on Sept. 15, due to medical problems.

At last week's Board of Trustees meeting it was announced that Dr. Donald E. Walters has decided not to return to his active status as president of MSC. He will continue to be on medical leave through August 31.

According to a memo released by Murray L. Cole, Chairperson of the Board of Trustees, Walters has been on medical leave since last fall, following a diagnosis of a type of cancer of the brain. In a letter to the board, Walters said he had made his decision after consultation with and upon recommendation of his physicians.

Walters, 54, was named president of the college in 1984, following a national search for a successor to Dr. W.D. Dickson. Before coming to MSC, Walters had more than 20 years of experience in higher education, according to a press release from the Office of Public Information.

Board members said Walters tenure at MSC was marked by significant forward strides. Walters was active in the state-wide campaign for passage of the autonomy legislation which has provided the college with an opportunity to achieve large measures of fiscal and operational independence.

This bond, if passed, would bring $350 million to the state's public and private colleges and universities. According to Griffith, $308 million would be used for providing construction and renovation of buildings. The remaining $42 million would be dedicated to expanding the state's network of advanced technology centers.

The college would use $15.7 million of the funds from the bond act towards a new library, Griffith said.

With the bond issue passed, plus subsequent matching funds, MSC may also appropriate $1.3 million for an addition to the Mcalechern Music building.

The board members approved a policy for construction projects. In accordance with MSC policy and procedure for construction, the board must approve all projects in excess of $200,000.

At the meeting, it was reported that President Donald E. Walters has resigned from the presidency due to medical reasons after Nov. 1, 1988. Until a new president can be appointed, Dr. Richard S. Lynde will continue as acting president.

A number of projects, aimed at improving the campus facilities will be awarded by the Division of Buildings and Construction (DBC).

Vice President of Administration and Finance William H. Griffith updated the board on the Jobs, Education, and Competitiveness Bond Issue.

One million dollars would also go towards a new building to house the campus police, security staff, and central stores and receiving functions. A new access road into the north parking lot would be constructed with $1.5 million of the funds, said Griffith.

A coalition has been formed to urge voter approval of the bond issue. Robert E. Allen, chairman and chief executive officer of AT&T, will serve as chairman of the coalition. The coalition urges voters to support the bond issue to maintain New Jersey's standards in education, Allen said.

The committee includes organizations from all parts of New Jersey such as business, industry, labor, educators, and scientists.

Mentors help minorities overcome their difficulties

By Lynn M. Cowan
Editor-in-Chief

The Minority Student Mentor Program held its first reception on Monday, Sept. 19.

The “Get Acquainted Reception” was held in the Student Center Ballrooms at 4:00 p.m. Dr. Richard A. Lynde, acting president, said in his welcoming address that the program is a unique experiment.

“Some students now know they have someone to go to, someone to talk to who has been there before,” Lynde said.

Dr. Curtis M. Jackson, director of Intra-Collegiate Academic Programs (ICAP), provided a brief history of the program.

“It was modest to begin with,” Jackson said. “The program’s original goal was to provide a maximum of 75 students with about 20 mentors to help them in their transition to college.”

Jackson added, “Presently, there are over 100 mentors to serve 226 potential minority mentees.”

Dr. Carlos Pratt, assistant professor of psychology, stressed to the minority mentors that “faculty members want you to succeed—they are ready to help you.”

After the reception, Jackson spoke of the reason the college instituted the program.

“The program began as an effort to improve the retention of students,” Jackson noted. “Research tells us that the people who make a connection—a bridge between themselves and someone who can guide them—early in their college career, are more likely to stay at college.”

“A minority student has a more difficult time making such connections at college,” Jackson said. “Some students find the first few weeks of school traumatic, and are afraid of reaching out or getting involved in college activities.”

“Because of the racism that is prevalent in our society, minority students are faced with additional barriers such as preconceptions of their backrounds and values,” Jackson said.

He added that he hopes this program will be able to cut across racial barriers.

“I want these students to see Montclair State as a caring place,” Jackson said.

Jackson believes the program is the first of its kind in New Jersey, and he hopes that the advantages of the program will eventually spread to other students.

News Notes

Registration

Confirmation schedules were mailed to all students for the fall 1988 semester, on Sept. 22, 1988. Schedules for students who live on campus were sent to their home address.

Students must review this schedule to make sure that the courses agree (by number, day, and time) with those which they are attending.

If there is ANY discrepancy with your schedule, you must report to the Office of the Registrar, Immediately!

Failure to resolve these discrepancies will result in no credit or failing grades for some of your courses. All registration must be made by October 4, 1988.

If you have not received a confirmation schedule, you must report to the Office of the Registrar immediately.

All copies of your registration transactions should be brought with you when making inquiries.

Tour South America

The sociology department at MSC announces its “comparative social analysis” course, to be offered in the Winter intersession. This 3 s.h. course will combine lecture time with a 2-week tour of Brazil and Argentina. Dr. Benjamin Hadis will teach and conduct this course/tour.

The price of the tour is $1,250. This includes round-trip air transportation (Pan American); lodging (double occupancy) for 5 nights in Rio and 8 nights in Buenos Aires; airport transfers; and tips to porters at airports and hotels.

The tour will have a maximum of 15 participants. It can also be taken not-for-credit by both MSC students and friends/relatives, but enrolled students will be given priority.

For a brochure call Dr. Hadis at 893-7276.

Vehicle recovered in Lincoln Tunnel for a motor vehicle violation by a Port Authority police officer. When the officer pulled the driver of the car, Tito Ortiz, over he noticed that the key was missing from the ignition and that there was damage to the steering column.

The patrolman opened the door to grab Ortiz, but was pulled in by the driver and dragged 500 feet before the car crashed head-on into a bus.

The officer suffered superficial wounds. Ortiz was charged with aggravated assault, resisting arrest, possession of a stolen vehicle, and possession of burglar's tools.

In October 1987, several students were arrested for possession of marijuana.

On Sept. 13, the offenders appeared before Judge Savenda in Little Falls Municipal Court. They entered a plea of not guilty and that there was damage to the steering column.

Sprague Library celebrated

She added, "We've gone from the small, essentially teacher's college collection, to the sophisticated state-of-art library we have today."

Commenting on the 25th library anniversary, Haller said it is the perfect opportunity for a festive occasion.

Rodriguez also commented on the library's expansion. "I think we've made an enormous amount of progress since the Sprague building has been open."

Rodriguez added that there are up-to-date services which have allowed the library to expand. New services include an increased book collection, computerized retrieval services, interlibrary loan services, a separate government document depository department, non-print media services, and a change from the Dewey Decimal to the Library of Congress system.

Jarreau Israel, a junior majoring in political science, was asked if he was pleased with library efficiency and services. "It's fine, except for the hours. I wish they would extend them," said Israel.

Another student, who asked not to be identified, said, "the services are excellent in regard to updated book selections. However, the fault of the system is that there are no renewals of books. The highest mark is given for access time and updated book selections."

The last library anniversary took place in 1978, according to Pat Sanders, coordinator of reference services. Sanders said this year's anniversary is expected to be larger because of increased publicity.

Try a Macintosh today—you may win a Sony Discman.

Now that a new school year is under way, we have an idea that'll make both you and your parents feel a bit more confident come finals time:

Get a Macintosh® computer to help with your homework. Then you'll never have to spend another all-nighter retyping a paper just to purge a few typos and dangling modifiers. You'll be able to crank out assignments that look as though you bribed a friend in art school. And with an amazing new program called HyperCard®—which just happens to come packaged with every Macintosh—you can easily store, organize, and cross-reference research notes to your heart's content.

And if that isn't enough reason to look at a Macintosh today, here's another:

Right now, you have three chances to win one of Sony's Discman™ CD players—including the exciting Sony Pocket Discman, which also plays the new 3-inch CDs. And even if you miss out on the CD player, you may still win one of 15 Apple T-shirts. No strings attached—just fill out a registration form at the location listed below.

So come in and get your hands on a Macintosh.
If not for yourself, do it for your folks.

The power to be your best.

Quality should be job one

Though it comes as no great surprise to many, the Board of Trustees announced last Thursday the resignation of the college president, Dr. Donald E. Walters. For many students the choice of a new president is no great concern, but before one simply ignores it, consider what Dr. Walters had done during his four year term.

Walters set high standards for himself, his faculty, and the students. These standards contributed to many different and conflicting views of our former president.

Some saw Walters as a man dedicated to improving the quality of the college by raising standards of admission and supporting the organization of programs such as the college honors program. Walters set high standards for himself, his faculty, and the students. Higher education, hopefully the committee will not interpret this as the rhetoric politicians use about drugs. He forgets that Nixon, in fact, personifies the approach the country has taken on drugs. Appearing on "Meet the Press," he used the direst language to describe the situation is out of control.

And, believe me, those that engage in selling drugs. (Marijuana, for instance, kills no one, but it's sometimes sold by dealers who have an incentive to encourage heroin use.) The government could set standards so that overdoses would be rare and—most—important—reduce the price of the stuff so that it would no longer be such a profitable enterprise for criminals. Say what you will about the decriminalization of alcohol, it has rid the nation of bootleggers.

There is really no such thing as a victimless crime. But crimes in which the victim is complicitous are almost impossible to eradicate. A robbery victim will call the police. A drug buyer will not. Crackdowns invariably result in the action being moved elsewhere—up the street, in the case of street sales; from Florida to Texas, when it comes to drug smuggling. Except when it comes to encouraging criminal activity, the present drug policy has been a bust.

Both have proposed the decriminalization of drugs.

What? I hear you say, But you thought this was Cohen's crackpot idea. Pray, no. Support has come from the most unlikely quarters, some of it giving me second thoughts. My God, I say, if Buckley has been wrong about so much, why should this issue be any different? And, in truth, I can't be sure it is. The decriminalization of drugs would be a leap into the unknown. No one knows what would happen. We do know, however, that the situation is now and we have it on the testimony of some of the leading drug busts in the land (Secretary of Education Bennett, former President Nixon) that we are losing the war. To hear them tell it, the situation is out of control.

Maybe. But one thing that's out of control is the rhetoric politicians use about drugs. Everyone wants to use the military to seal our borders, although no one knows quite how this would be done—and at what cost. Nixon, who launched the so-called War on Drugs, in one of those calling for the Army. He forgets that in Vietnam, 500,000 troops could not seal South Vietnam from North Vietnam. (Maybe he wants to bomb Colombia, as he did Cambodia?)

In fact, personifies the approach the country has taken on drugs. Appearing on "Meet the Press," he used the direst language to describe the problem: "The purpose of our armed forces is to deal with an enemy of the United States. And, believe me, those that engage in selling drugs...are killing people just as much as an enemy does."

Oh yeah, how many people? The figure supplied by Ethan A. Nadelmann in Foreign Policy magazine is 3,562 for all drugs in 1985. Nadelmann, a Princeton University professor, compares illicit drugs with two licit ones: alcohol and tobacco. Alcohol, he says, was the "direct cause" of 80,000 to 100,000 deaths and "a contributing cause" of an additional 100,000. As for tobacco, Nadelmann cites 1984 figures: 320,000 deaths.

Of course, fatalities are not the only cost to society of drugs. Crime is another. But Nadelmann's comparison is apt. The United States has come to terms with alcohol. After seeing prohibition fail, the drug was decriminalized. We discerned the high consumption and abuse, set standards for its manufacture (when you buy scotch, you get scotch) and placed restrictions on the drug, such as prohibiting its sale to minors. The system has not worked perfectly (there are about 18 million alcohol abusers or alcoholics) and maybe not even well, but realization has prevailed: We live with alcohol.

Decriminalization of drugs might bring about the same result. We would still have addicts. We would still have a drug problem. Kids would manage to get their hands on drugs—just as they do beer. But we would learn to distinguish between use and abuse and between different drugs. (Marijuana, for instance, kills no one, but it's sometimes sold by dealers who have an incentive to encourage heroin use.) They can get high just on the pronouncements of American politicians.

Failure is a bitter pill but, once taken, at least we can move on. When I called the National Review to ask my memory ("Did you truly endorse the decriminalization of drugs?") I was told "endorse" was not the right word. "Propose" was—as in "it's worth thinking about." My sentiments, exactly.

Reverse racism vs. pure racism

To the editor:
Tom Mergola wrote last week of Senate Wyonna Lipman’s “unmitigated gall” in referring to what Mergola terms “the track coach incident” of last Spring as an example of racial conflict. Mergola suggested Lipman “ought to get her facts straight,” but himself fails to state the facts as he sees them.

I am far from wanting to defend Lipman. But I followed this incident carefully in the press. Let me summarize what seem to me to be the “facts” as they emerged.

Some MSC faculty and students attacked the hiring of a black applicant, Mr. John Blan-ton, over a white one, Vic Mizzone, as an example of something called “reverse racism.” However, no evidence to support this charge was ever printed in the articles on the subject that I saw, whether in The Montclarion or elsewhere.

The piece of information which was made public — that the Administration chose not to hire the candidate ranked highest by a faculty committee can hardly be counted as evidence of “reverse racism,” since (1) this has occurred many times at MSC without such charges being raised; and (2) it is clear from the fact that the faculty committee had to pick three candidates that this might occur. (Both Mr. Benton and Mr. Mizzone were among the top three candidates).

Charges of “racism” and of “reverse racism” are so serious that they should never be made without the presentation of full evidence, carefully presented. Those who brought the “reverse racism” charge certainly had ample access to the press and every opportunity to present their evidence. That they never did so strongly suggests their case is very weak, and they know it.

It appeared to me then, and still does today, that the “track coach” case was more probably an example, not of “reverse racism,” but of racism pure and simple. Since no evidence was presented, those who made the inflammatory charge of “reverse racism” seem to think that the hiring of a black candidate over a white one was illegitimate or immoral on the face of it, with no proof of the charge of “reverse racism” even being necessary.

If it is not anti-black racism to suggest that the hiring of a black over a white candidate is prima facie evidence of “reverse racism,” I don’t know what racism is.

The mass media deserves criticism as well for the way in which they echoed or gave publicity to the charge of “reverse racism,” without demanding evidence or pointing out, in their articles, the lack of it. I’m sorry to have to include The Montclarion in this criticism, since I am one of their strongest supporters.

In short: the charge of “reverse racism” was touted about at MSC and elsewhere, and then dropped without the evidence for the chance to examine the validity of the charge for themselves. This whole affair stinks of racism. Until Mr. Mergola, and those who raised the charge in this irresponsible manner, set forth their evidence publicly, some of the stink will stick to them.

Candidates avoid college vote

It’s that time again. Cool breezes, autumn leaves, campaign promises. Campaign promises? That’s right, it’s an election year. Your thoughts concern about your needs and show their support by voting. Those politicians, such as Pete Dawkins and Frank Lau tenberg, want your vote. To get it, they’re supposed to act concerned about your needs and show their support by voting. They’re supposed to send their campaign managers and representatives to various colleges and universities to drum up student support. Well, where are they?

Maybe the fact that only 17 percent of all eligible students actually vote allows these politicians to think they should concentrate elsewhere in their quest for voter turnout. Maybe they feel that students just don’t care enough to vote and make a difference. Or maybe they realize that students are simply too intellectual and want the promises cast aside to reveal the real issues.

Whatever the reason, it seems they’re reluctant to face our concerns without all the unnecessary political jargon.

For example, I received a phone call regarding an invitation to lunch with Senate hopeful Pete Dawkins (R). I was asked how I stood on the Dawkins campaign.

What I was basically and cleverly being asked was would I vote for Dawkins. When I responded that my political stance as an SGA president was non-partisan, that lunch invitation was withdrawn.

It was clear to me that as a student leader, unless you support the Dawkins campaign, you could not have the privilege to meet with someone that might represent you in public office. Since my non-partisan approach didn’t please those invitation senders, I guess my concerns and those of my peers at MSC just don’t matter enough to warrant a meeting, let alone lunch.

An example of reluctance from the Dawkins’ group is their educational stance, or lack of, in this case. Upon meeting with the Dawkins’ constituency this summer, I constantly requested information on his educational platform. I was told that the entire educational viewpoint from Dawkins would be released as soon as possible.

To this day, the Dawkins campaign has released minimal information on this issue, while touting in the Dawkins’ televised commercials that he was once a teacher.

And what’s Frank Lautenberg’s excuse? Several SGAs across the state have banded together to get the two to agree on a debate or political forum sponsored by students. Every time that Dawkins has agreed and committed to a date and place, Lautenberg bows out, claiming some conflict with his scheduling.

Come on, Frank and Pete; cut us some slack and let’s make this election year something today’s students can look back upon with some sense of history.

This all leads me to impulse you, the student, to register, vote and be heard. The SGA will be there to assist you. Keep your eyes open next week for information about the voter registration drive being sponsored by the SGA.

Minorities lack representation

To the Editor:
After reading over and over the article by Tommy Mergola, Sept. 15, 1988 entitled “Unmitigated Gall Ruins Commencement Ceremony,” I felt inclined to respond to some of the questions Tommy wants answers to!

First, to believe that racism does not exist, on M.S.C.’s campus is blind ignorance. If there are people who entertain the farce that this campus is free of this deplorable and terrible problem, then he or she needs to talk with any of the multi-culture, multi-ethnic groups on this campus.

It doesn’t take much to see that MSC does have a problem with providing adequate representation of all races. I do agree, we have a unique and diverse blend of cultures and races, but very often “direct representation” in the classrooms, the S.G.A., and the Administration is lacking.

Speed and intensity beat at Drum Festival ’88

By Matt Mendres
Correspondent

This past Saturday saw the gathering of five of the world’s best drummers in Memorial Auditorium, as Modern Drummer Magazine presented Drum Festival ’88.

The day-long event was easily a seat unfilled as drummers, percussionists and fans from as far away as Jerusalem, Israel gathered to learn from, and enjoy the performances of, some of music’s top players.

The show began with an appearance from legendary drummer/percussionist Carl Palmer. Best known for his work with Emerson, Lake and Palmer and Asia, he entertained questions from the audience and demonstrated various techniques and excuses for better playing.

Always enthusiastic and exhibiting a wry English sense of humor, Palmer commented on the “animalistic” nature of the instrument and climaxed his segment with a thunderous solo that left jaws hanging wide open.

Following Palmer was West Coast studio whiz Harvey Mason who, before saying a word to the crowd, sat down and performed an alternately sublime and not-so-subtle piece of playing. He went on to play along with recorded tracks from an upcoming George Benson album, and explained his use of triggering digital-sampled sounds from his acoustic drums.

Next up was a relatively new star on the drumming scene, Dennis Chambers, who mingled with his speed and intensity on the drum set. Chambers, who is currently playing with fusion guitarist John Scofield, took requests from those in the audience and drew a few laughs when he revealed that he wasn’t actually using the drum pedals of the company that he was endorsing.

After a brief intermission, the clinic continued with a performance from New Jersey’s own Peter Erskine. Erskine, who is the author of Modern Drummer’s Jazz Workshop column as well as his own book, spoke about his feelings about jazz in general and drumming in particular.

He said that the role of the drummer was to “make the music feel good, and to make the musicians making the music feel good.”

Formerly with Weather Report and currently a solo artist, Erskine expressed his interest in “improvised instrumental music” and stressed the importance of clarity in one’s playing.

Rounding out the event was a special performance from Steve Smith and his jazz/rock band, Vital Information. Recognized for his work with jazz violinist Jean-Luc Ponty and Journey, Smith turned his segment more into a concert than a clinic, and the rest of the five-piece band ripped through selections from the band’s past and current recordings.

The one-hour-plus performance brought a standing ovation from the audience, which had been there for over seven hours by that point.

Drum Festival ’88 was also marked by special appearances from Anton Fig (Fredriks’ Comets, The World’s Most Dangerous Band) and Rod Morgenstein (voted best progressive rock drummer in MD’s 1988 Reader’s Poll), both of whom drew winning tickets for various door prizes.

Noted session player Danny Gottlieb was also on hand to present the 1988 Hall of Fame Award to renowned drummer/teacher Larry Mizell, who received a generous amount of applause from the audience.

By the end of the day, a very satisfied crowd was left to compare notes and to look forward to Drum Festival ’89.

As informative and educational as it was entertaining, there is no doubt that this year’s gathering is going to be one tough act to follow.

Brat pack draws its young guns in Western

By Karen Fedorock
Correspondent

The Western returns in the summer film Young Guns. It’s the familiar tale of Billy the Kid and his band of desperadoes with the Hollywood Brat Pack style.

Emilio Estevez (The Breakfast Club) stars as the wicked and nutty Billy the Kid. He brings out the dangerous and unbridled quality of the famous outlaw while making Billy look like a victim of unfortunate circumstances, although he is a juvenile delinquent who kills for thrills and revenge.

Kiefer Sutherland plays the romantic and vulnerable poet, Doc, who is in love with a young, beautiful Japanese slave Yen Sun.

Doc is both a charming and sensitive poet/maverick who wants nothing but to leave the gang for a life of love, peace and freedom.

The rest of the cast consists of Lou Diamond Phillips (La Bamba) who portrays the wacky Mexican-Indian knife-fighter and Estevez’s brother Charlie Sheen (Wall Street). Surprisingly, Sheen was cast in a minor role, however, which provided the audience with a character that gave the film a breath of fresh air.

The sets and costumes for Young Guns were realistic and actually captured the magnetism of the old West. However, there was something missing from this film. Maybe it was the fact that it never possessed the careful storytelling of a traditional Western.

Young Guns neither illustrated the violent, vigilante theme of a Clint Eastwood film, nor did the film contain the suspenseful, supporting the bad guy theme of Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. It portrayed too much Hollywood style with the sound track of a music video.

Young Guns demonstrated no foresight beyond the movie’s theme of the outlaws’ violence. However, it was entertaining and the cast presented competent, memorable performances. Although Young Guns is not the best Western created, it is the money to see.

Drum Festival ’88 scored big with music fans of Smith, Erskine and Palmer.

On September 10 & 11 The 1988 New York Guitar Show made its way to 12th Street in Greenwich Village. This annual event provides one with the chance to play vintage guitars and the satisfaction of giving to charity.

This year, the guitar show was held as a benefit for the Aids Resource Foundation for Children.

For a mere six dollars, one got the opportunity to see and play dream guitars, get a cool Elvis stamp on the hand, and give money to help solve the growing problem of AIDS. Aids.

In addition to some great sounding guitars, the show provided its attendants with the priceless opportunity to talk with others with a common love; music! Even Billy (Manson, who received a generous amount of applause from the audience.

This reporter purchased a vintage ’57 Stratocaster and ’59 Sunburst Les Paul’s for charity, but was not the only deal which were offered to the public, at one table, one could purchase a packet of actual grass from Grace-land or a bottle of Mississippi River water.

So what,” you ask? Okay, you’re right; so what, but the table did exemplify the friendly, open and generally fun attitude of most of the people in attendance.

Guitars such as vintage ’57 Stratocasters and ’59 Sunburst Les Paul’s were widespread but the real (and truly affordable) treasures of the show lied within the bizarre realm of “innovative” craftsmanship. Such creations as the all-aluminum guitar, and the see-through electric violin were prime for the picking.

This reporter purchased a home-made Telecaster which plays like a dream and sounds like the end of the world for a mere $50. Other such “buys” were widespread. Some tables had box after box of used effects, cables, microphones, picks, etc. for fifty to twenty dollars. Most tables, however, specialized in the rare and hard to find.

The show also provided the opportunity to play the collection of guitars in the country. Dealers came from as far as Texas and Rhode Island to sell their guitars at the show. The variety of dealers spurned competitive price slashing and a great cross-section of vintage guitars which are still available for purchase today.

Overall, the show was a success and left this reporter looking forward to next year’s installment of the New York Guitar Show.

If anyone is interested in giving a donation to the AIDS Resource Foundation for Children, they can correspond with the organization at 182 Roosevelt Avenue, Newark, New Jersey 07107.

Nolan's Notes
By Jarrett Nolan

The chimes of freedom rang quite clear in Philadelphia Monday, as the Amnesty Human Rights Now tour made its only East Coast area stop at the John F. Kennedy Arena.

The show which featured; Peter Gabriel, Tracy Chapman, Sting and Bruce Springsteen and the E Street Band, got under way around 5 p.m. with a surprise performance by folk legend Joan Baez.

Standing alone center stage a young and obviously a little nervous Chapman began the eight and a half hour show.

In a set that included songs like "Fast Car" and "Talkin' Bout a Revolution" she truly set the mood for what was forthcoming.

I only wish that Chapman had used a full band. In a small club the acoustic guitar would have sufficed but with a crowd as large as the one at JFK, some of her message may have lost its impact.

Beginning with "King of Pain," Sting performed like a man with a cause. Looking quite dapper, the ex-policeman played many of his more political songs like "If You Love Somebody Set Them Free" and "They Dance Alone." During the latter he was joined by Gabriel who helped out on vocals.

At the end of Sting's set he was introduced by Springsteen who surprised everyone with a remarkable version of "Every Breath You Take."

Gabriel was introduced by Springsteen who called Gabriel a constant source of inspiration during the whole tour.

Without a doubt Gabriel turned in the most intense and creative performance of the evening. Many of his songs are the essence of the cause. Songs like "Games Without Frontiers" where Gabriel sang while he and the band marched military style around the stage added to the already prevalent feeling of anti-war.

"Biko," a song about the murdered South African leader was a constant source of inspiration. After a tear in his eye Gabriel said "the rest is up to you." He turned his microphone towards the audience and walked off the stage while the crowd continued to chant the final words of the song.

If Gabriel was the conscience of the show then Springsteen was the heart. Sporting six earrings in his left ear and one in his right, he played with more muscle than on any of the Tunnel of Love tour dates.

A Boss set would not be complete without a few surprises and this one had two. First, Sting joined in for a wonderful version of "The River" and later he played "Jungle Land," which he hasn't played since 1980.

The show was capped off with all of the performers together singing Bob Marley's classic "Stand Up For Your Rights." It was a fitting end to an amazing day of music and awareness.

Tune into the Arts pages next week for an up close and personal interview with ex-Go Go Jane Weidlin.

Records third and fourth shutouts

Stahl leads booters past Sony Brook, Jersey City

By Ian Saaramann
Staff Writer

One thing is certain about the 1988 MSC soccer team. As goalie Jim Stahl goes, so go the Indians.

Stahl has recorded four shutouts in the young season, and it is by no coincidence that the Indians have a record of 4-2-2. This fact is not overlooked by Coach Masur.

"Jim's come on real well for us," Coach Masur said. "He's always had the potential; but not the right motivation. At summer camp his play became much sharper. Now that he's playing every day, his intensity has grown and he has become a real leader for the team."

Stahl has been so good that Coach Masur has developed a small concern. It is the type of concern that a coach can live with, however.

"It bothers me a little that we have not won a game when the other team has scored," Coach Masur said. "I'd like to see the team respond in a more positive way when an opponent scores."

Coach Masur didn't get a chance to see that this week, however, because the Indians shut out both Stony Brook and Jersey City State.

Rob Chesney scored a goal and added two assists to lead MSC to a 4-0 win at Jersey City on last night.

Vinny McGowan opened the scoring for the Indians, and his goal was followed by Chesney's tally. The Indians took a 2-0 lead into halftime, and put the game out of reach early in the second half with two quick goals.

Freshman Louie Ken-Kwofie and Scott Logan finished off the scoring and gave some of the younger players a chance for some valuable playing time.

Co-captain Mike Nothofer of the MSC soccer team. Nothofer is an integral part of the team, as his experience and talent is vital to the team's success. Nothofer joins Rob Chesney as captain this year, and they, along with Head Coach Dave Masur, have done a fine job molding the young team.

Chesney receives Montclarion honor

By Mary Carlomagno

Staff Writer

Returning to the soccer field last week after a two game absence was junior co-captain Rob Chesney.

Chesney, who was suffering from a viral infection, came back Monday and scored MSC's only goal against Stony Brook, putting an end to a two-game Indian winless streak and earning him this week's Athlete of the Week honors.

"Rob started out having a great season, but then he was sidelined. We suffered a tie to NJIT, which was a mental letdown, and then a loss to Rutgers Camden. Without Rob, we were missing some leadership," said Head Coach Dave Masur.

The Indians are a young team, as their roster includes five freshman. Chesney, with three years of experience, offers leadership and sets an example for the younger players.

"The team has a lot of talent. Hopefully we will be able to put everything together, hit the right combinations and have a winning season," said Chesney.

Team unity will be a major factor for a winning season. Chesney attributed the Indian success to the combination of Coach Masur's new system and team unity.

Coach Masur is in his second coaching season at MSC. He feels that given leadership and composure, the team will be able "to play the kind of soccer we are capable of."

As far as what the season holds, Chesney feels very confident.

"We have a shot to win the conference. The teams to beat are Kean, Glassboro, and Trenton. We just have to go there with the attitude that we have to beat everyone," he said.

The team's schedule has many home games remaining, and Chesney hopes that fans will come out and be supportive.

Chesney stated, "It takes unity. Everyone working together is essential. What is most important is to maintain a positive winning attitude."

When MSC quarterback Ed Baffige called "split right 55 bangle" on third and ten from East Stroudsburg's 36-yard line, he wasn't exactly expecting what was about to occur.

The play called for Baffige to throw to his right, but it was broken up, and Baffige was forced to scramble as the Warrior defense swarmed in.

Seeing receiver John Fiore open, Baffige lofted a pass just as he was crunched by a Warrior tackle, causing the ball to act, as some would say, like a "duck."

The pass wasn't pretty, but it was successful, as Fiore leaped and grabbed the Indians' first touchdown of the game.

Baffige, meanwhile, lay on the ground, his only clue to the result being the roar of the 3,901 fans.

Baffige's second scoring pass of the game went to Scott Vega, which gave the Indians a 14-5 lead, enough of a cushion for the Indians to hold on to win.

The pass to Vega came just three plays after Baffige hit sophomore receiver Frank Marriconda, who raced down the right sideline for a 48-yard gain to the ESU 20 yard line.

Baffige has played quarterback for championship caliber teams since high school. Playing for Union High, the dominant team in Group IV New Jersey high school football, prepared Baffige well for the rigors of college ball.

While playing for Union, Baffige won three consecutive state championships, the final one coming in his senior season when he started and led the Farmers to a hard fought 15-8 victory over Roxbury.

MSC's young quarterback has started every game since replacing Leon Kisowski in the second half of last year's opener versus Wagner.

Baffige completed 77 of his 151 attempts last year for a 51% completion rate and racked up 1059 yards and seven touchdowns. This year, Baffige has already thrown for 279 yards and three touchdowns in just two games.

The young MSC quarterback has improved with every game and "sees good things coming up for the team" in this season.

Baffige also added that he was very happy with the win over ESU, which is "one of the toughest teams (ESU) we'll (MSC) face all year", and cited "great team effort" for the win.

He also was quick to point out that the team still has a big test in the October 2 game when the Indians collide head on with the Wagner Seahawks, the defending Division III National Champions.

Let's (not) see the replay  The opening kickoff of Sunday's Giants-Cowboys game was mishandled by Dallas' Darryl Clack on the one-yard line. The ball rolled into the end zone, and Clack retrieved it and attempted to run it out. But Mark Collins tackled Clack after a few steps, and referee Pat Haggerty mistakenly called it a safety when it should have been a touchback. The Giants then went on to win the game by the margin of the safety, 12-10.

In this era of technological advances, such a blown call is not likely to escape the eyes of the replay official. This one did and, but one should not blame Haggerty, or even the replay official, Armen Terzian. The blame should go to the NFL for instituting the replay rule and not carrying it out 100%. Because now every close play or questionable call is expected to be not only reviewed, but called correctly every time. And that's just not going to happen, because the officials are human and are going to make mistakes.

The point is, the replay rule stinks. Yes, there have been many instances where the replay has been shown the initial call by the official to be incorrect, and the calls were then changed. But what about when there's a late hit, holding, or even illegal motion that the officials miss? Technically, these are also blown calls, but since these are judgement calls, they are not subject to review (In actuality, isn't every call a judgement call? Didn't Haggerty make a split-second decision, thereby using his own 'judgement'?).

It's up to the NFL to either abolish the rule or modify it to ensure more consistency. As it stands now, it seems unlikely that the league will take a step backward and totally eliminate it. And that's probably good. But if the NFL should choose to keep the rule, it should be done right, or not at all.

Say it ain't so, Bobby O Disaster struck the Mets' pitching staff yesterday afternoon when Bob Ojeda severely lacerated his left index finger while trimming the hedges at his home. Mets officials say the microsurgery performed yesterday afternoon and night to reattach the tip of the finger lasted 5½ hours.

Indians tip East Stroudsburg, 14-12

By Bryan Moreytko
Staff Writer

Sophomore Ed Baffige led the MSC football squad to their ninth straight victory with a 14-12 win over East Stroudsburg University Saturday at Sprague Field.

The MSC streak has been running since October 3 of last year, when the Indians rolled past Ramapo, 65-0, and has continued since.

The Indians' home opener was plagued by rain and a slight wind. But those fans who braved the cold were fortunate to see a very close game.

Both teams found the weather to be a major factor, as the ball and field became extremely slippery. Coach Giancola's Indians prevailed despite the weather and despite the fact that they were playing a very respectable division II team in East Stroudsburg.

Baffige threw for two touchdowns in the game, accounting for all of the scoring for the home team. The first score of the game came on a strange but effective 36-yard pass play, resulting in an MSC touchdown.

Baffige dropped back to pass on the ESU 36-yard line, scrambled, and just as he was hit, let loose to receiver John Fiore, who leaped and came down with it for a score. The ensuing extra point by senior Tony Colasurdo made it 7-0, and MSC took that lead into halftime.

The Warriors scored in the third quarter on a field goal from 35 yards out and later benefited from a safety when the snap to MSC punter Paul Castiglia was high and he was forced to run the ball out of the end zone.

Towards the very end of the quarter, MSC struck back with Baffige hitting Scott Vega for 14 yards and six more points. The extra point kick was good, and the Indian lead jumped to 14-5.

The Warriors took the ensuing kickoff and began what was to become a 74-yard touchdown drive, highlighted by a 56-yard pass completion on a crossing pattern to a streaking Dennis Mailhot. After the extra point, the score stood at 14-12.

The MSC defense was led by senior Matt Clark, who had two...
