Writer in Residence: Successful writing must come from within

By Dave Williams
Correspondent

Philip Lopate, MSC's current writer in residence, said in a recent interview that there is no formula to becoming a successful author.

Lopate, a contemporary American writer, is the author of several novels, including The Rug Merchant, Bachelorhood and Confessions of Summer. He is currently teaching a creative writing seminar which meets Tuesday afternoons in Partridge Hall. He is also the recipient of the Guggenheim award for this school year.

He said that emphasis on character development is the key to successful writing.

Instead of teaching technique as central to writing well, he instructs would-be authors to be fair to their characters and to develop an attitude of compassion in an environment of keen observation.

According to Lopate, well-developed characters are almost predictable in their decisions and actions.

"When you reach that point of inevitability, then you know you've got it," Lopate said.

Lopate's love of reading was his personal motivation in becoming a writer.

Developing good fiction or poetry takes time and risks, said Lopate. Writing that is a pleasure will find its way onto the page, he added.

Most of all, the writer has to learn to live with himself and develop his own audience so that he might critique his own work from an honest, outside perspective, said Lopate.

Lopate's latest work, titled Against Joie De Vivre, (Against the Joy of Life), will be published in May 1989. The book is a collection of personal essays.

A native New Yorker and college professor at the University of Houston, Lopate said he hopes to tell the campus visitors in the future. The book is a collection of personal essays.

A native New Yorker and college professor at the University of Houston, Lopate said that he has found something very congenial here among the staff and students of MSC. He has given a reading on campus and is currently judging a writing contest sponsored by the English department.

Twelfth annual craft show is a great success

By Susan Sarlo
Staff Writer

The twelfth annual crafts show and sale, held on Thurs- day, December 1, had the largest number of exhibitors ever, according to the show's coordinator, Ms. Vera Brenten.

The show and sale was sponsored by the MSC Staff Association and the Women of MSC.

The variety of handmade crafts displayed and sold at the show included folk art, woodwork, stained glass, crocheted items, Christmas ornaments, flower arrangements, seashell crafts, decorated sweatshirts and jewelry, according to Brenten.

"The purpose of the show is to service the MSC faculty and students," said Brenten. "The MSC Community looks forward to it each year and the people love it."

All of the buildings on campus, including the dorms, were left without heat and hot water for two hours on Monday, Dec. 5, as a result of a fire on the boilerhouse roof near Sprague field.

Operating engineers noticed the fire shortly before 8 a.m. and notified the Montclair Fire Department. According to Joe McGinty, Engineer in charge of maintenance, it was "undetermined what the actual cause of the fire was."

As some buildings were without heat for longer than others, Assistant Engineer James Brighton said, "Each building has its own characteristics, but there are so many different types of buildings with different insulation and different heat."

He said that the heat in some buildings may be turned off a day or two, and no one would notice the difference, except if windows were open.

Brighton added that the system is similar to home heating, in that the central boiler heats all the buildings, resembling a furnace heating all the rooms of one's home.

In the case of an emergency, Brighton said, "We can't notify everyone, so we just called Campus Police, the department heads of housing, and the Student Center, and then shut down."

McGinty said the fire may have originated with wooden bridging around the stack, spreading down the smoke stack, through the rubber roof- ing, where it ignited the insula-

He said, "It was not a roaring fire, just a small flame."

According to Brighton, the Montclair Fire Department ordered the boiler shut down. He said, "The fire company wouldn't let us restart the boiler, otherwise we would have fired it off immediately."

He said that the entire campus' heat and water are provided by one boiler at a time out of three running in a series. The campus was without these services for approximately two hours, 8-10 a.m., at which time services were returned to normal, McGinty added.

Repairs are estimated at over $5,000 and should take place by the end of the week. The repairs entail removing the burned wood and replacing it with metal bridging around the stack, in addition to repairing cont. on p. 2

Speaker discusses Black awareness

By Amber Smith
Staff Writer

Dr. Jawanza Kunjufu, lecturer, publisher and educational consultant, focused on Black awareness and positivity in his keynote speech at the twentieth annual Harvest Ball on Nov. 19.

Kunjufu received his B.S. degree in Economics at Illinois State University in 1974, according to an African-American degree pamphlet. He received his Doctorate in Business Administration from Union Graduate School.

He is publisher of and educational consultant to African American Images Publishing Co. His latest books include To Be Popular or Smart: The Black Peer Group, and Countering the Conspiracy to Destroy Black Boys.

In his lecture, Kunjufu suggested that blacks should maintain a sense of self-pride and work harder in school.

Kunjufu said that college graduates should spend their money carefully. He said that many parents are "owned by visas", and that there is too much emphasis on material luxuries.

According to Kunjufu, business majors ought to consider owning a business some day. He said that 178,000 people with MBA's have no businesses, and many work for larger corporations. He urged the black community to support black businesses to build a stronger network.

Kunjufu presented some frightening statistics on rape, abortion, teenage pregnancy, education, child abuse, and drugs.

"America can solve the drug problem," said Kunjufu, adding that the government refuses to eliminate the problem.

He advised the black community not to get involved in drug abuse. "When you know who you are, you don't put drugs in your body," Kunjufu said.

On the topic of parent-child relationships, he suggested that parents should "bring their children home" every day and "turn off the TV" during dinner, adding that many parents spend less than half an hour with their children each day.

Kunjufu also said that the black community should believe in themselves and "put God first in life."

Good communication between parents and children and a fair amount of discipline are essential to healthy development and success of children, according to Kunjufu.

In a brief description on male-female relationships, Kunjufu said, "There are two types of females, the Donnas and the Kathys. The Donnas don't have to have a man and keep God first in their life."

He added that the Kathys keep a man, even if he is less desirable, and that there should be more Donnas among women.

Finally, Kunjufu advised males and females to screen their mates carefully and to take more time to learn about them. How the mate was reared in the past will determine how the mate will act in the future, he said.

Stacy Ballou, a sophomore and accounting major, said she was pleased with the lecture. "I especially like the fact that Kunjufu stressed the importance of knowing your mate and waiting before marriage, especially in the black community."

James Rhoche, a sophomore majoring in political science, said, "I enjoyed the Harvest Ball because of the family-type atmosphere. It made me feel good to see parents come to support BSCU's Harvest Ball. It shows that people are interested in developing the unity that BSCU is striving for."

SGA News:

Phone service is cut

By Perry Del Vecchio
Staff Writer

As of Dec. 8, 1988, the SGA will discontinue the free phone service. This is due to students abusing the service by vandalizing the phones and the phone area. So far, it has cost more money to fix the service than it has to keep it running.

At last night's SGA meeting the results of its commuter cafeteria food survey were released.

The survey addressed questions such as “How do you feel about the price of the food?” as well as the quality and service. Copies of the survey results can be obtained from the SGA office.

The next meeting of the NJSA will be on Tuesday, Dec. 13 at 7 p.m. in room 402 of the Student Center.

NJSA is made up of various student governments throughout the state. Its purpose is to discuss student concerns throughout the state. It has received public attention on their recent position on the Jobs/Education Bond issue.

Governor Kean has announced that there is a freeze on hiring of all new government jobs in N.J. This could have an effect on the hiring of a new president or director of student activities.

The Newman Community, a Catholic campus ministry and intervarsity Christian fellowship, and Tau Kappa Epsilon received charters for Class four status. The Marketing Association received a class two charter.

The parking committee has approved a proposal to make Lot 17 a general purpose lot which can be used by students, residents, faculty, and visitors, but restrictions do apply.

Anyone parked there during a snow emergency must move or they will receive a summons. Further action may be taken from campus police. Lot 13 cannot be reserved during exam weeks.

This was proposed by John Martucci and accepted by the parking committee and the vice president of administration and finance.

CLUB IS A CLASS I OF THE SGA
I'm going to miss the Reagan administration when it goes. I really am. It has a kind of insouciance, a devil-may-care quality about it that one does not usually find in world powers. You don't even find it in the bigger states. Take, for example, the decision to deny Yasser Arafat a visa to enter the country to talk to the United Nations. Almost everyone agrees, it's a dumb decision. Western European democracies, the Soviet bloc, the Arab states, China, the UN, all have raised objections, ranging from its illegality to its short-sightedness.

Yet when asked about it, President Reagan, vacationing in California, was able to say with a straight face that he had not participated in the decision, that it was Secretary of State George Schultz's call and he wouldn't dream of interfering. He did, however, assure us that he agreed with it.

And why did Mr. Schultz turn away Arafat? Because of Schultz's heartfelt aversion to terrorists, of which he considers Arafat one. State department officials said that Schultz's personal feelings about terrorism outweighed our obligations as host country of the UN and the harm it might do to peace negotiations in the Middle East.

That, I submit, is weird. It's like allowing the secretary of agriculture to cancel a Soviet grain deal because he doesn't like corn flakes.

I mean, it's nice to have a secretary of state who doesn't like terrorists but that doesn't do much to differentiate him from his predecessors. No American secretary of state likes terrorists, at least terrorists of the PLO kind. What we're talking about here, however, is foreign policy, the essence of which is achieving one's aims, not striking noble poses.

And if our aim was to diminish Arafat and, by association, all terrorists in the eyes of the world, we have failed miserably. We have instead made him a hero. The General Assembly of the UN will probably pack up and go to Geneva to hear him speak, thus giving him a stature that he could not have hoped to achieve without our help.

We seem to have genius for elevating two-bit thugs to the level of world class villains. We haven't even done that. We have allowed him to deny Arafat access to the UN, but that is an issue only the least powerful can afford to raise. Countries do what they can get away with and international law be damned. Thus it always has been, and thus it will be for the foreseeable future. I'm not sure that flaming UN rules we have sworn to uphold is a useful precedent, however.

I suppose what's really bugging Secretary Schultz is not so much Yasser Arafat but the revolting performance of the terrorist Abu Abbas at the recent PLO meeting in Algiers. The man who masteredmind the Achille Lauro hijacking was greeted as a hero by his PLO brethren and he held court for the international press, making jokes about throwing wheelchair-ridden Leon Klinghoffer overboard during the incident. He gave new dimension to the term “loathsome.”

One can sympathize with Mr. Schultz's desire to punish the PLO for so vile a charade, but shutting out Arafat doesn't do it. It is merely a vainglorious gesture that emphasizes not our resolve against terrorism, but our impotence in denying terrorists the fruits of their labor.

In any case, I've always thought our attitude toward terrorists excessively self-righteous. If one defines terrorism as the calculated murder of innocents in order to strike fear in the hearts of an enemy, then virtually all governments, including ours, are terrorists at one time or another. Indeed, it could be argued that Arafat's great mistake has been to associate himself with retail terrorism. Wholesale, that's where the respect is.

You doubt me. I was reading a book on the war in Vietnam the other day and ran across a passage describing the result of our bombing there. The author, Neil Sheehan, writes of visiting hamlets which he had known as prosperous fishing villages, now razed to rubble by two years of American bombing and naval shelling merely because they had the bad fortune to exist in a guerrilla-occupied area. The civilian casualties numbered in the hundreds.

And when he talked to the commanding general, William Westmoreland, about the slaughter of civilians, the general said: “Yes, Neil, it is a problem, but it does deprive the enemy of the population, doesn't it?”

If you push a man in a wheelchair over the side of a ship, you're a terrorist. If you have the good taste to dispatch him by dropping a bomb from an airplane, you're a military hero.

It's all a matter of altitude.

U.S. snub boosts Arafat and PLO

The denial of a visa to Yasser Arafat, far from being the only "alternative" open to the State Department, is pretty flatly indefensible. Bad politics, bad morality.

Does Arafat endorse terrorism? Answer: Yes, he does. A lot of people do and some of them become heroes. It is an old saw that history is the pomel of the victor. But it is of course true that Algeria got its independence by the most relentless acts of terrorism in modern times. The profiter of those acts of terrorism not only became a national hero, he became something of an international hero.

It is not correct to say that Israel attained its independence by acts of terrorism, but it is certainly correct to say that terrorism was widely used. Indeed, Menachem Begin was the leader of a terrorist organization. When, serving in 1973 as a public delegate to the United Nations, I gave a speech (under the direction of the State Department) urging the denunciation of terrorism, the motion was handily defeated as a result of the qualifiers inserted by the Third World. Their eyes, in those days, were as always on South Africa, and it was considered, which confused me, to rule over Angola and Mozambique. You cannot confuse a war of liberation with terrorism, is what the majority of the Third World spokesmen contended.

There is terrorism in South Africa today, and Nelson Mandela refuses to condemn it. Has that cost him the esteem of the anti-terrorist community? It is true that Mandela got out of the hospital and applies for a visa to visit the United States, I will eat the Lincoln Memorial if the State Department denies him that visa. He'll get it and a parade down Fifth Avenue.

Is there more sustained terrorism than in Afghanistan? Granted the Soviet Union is retreating from Afghanistan, but only after killing 1.2 million men, women and children, many of them by action that could not be interpreted as military (what do you call it when you put explosives inside dolls and sprinkle them about children's playgrounds?). But did anybody ever suggest a year or two or six years ago that a visa should not be granted to the Soviet representative—on the grounds that he was engaged in terrorism? Anyone desiring a rule of thumb for terrorism?

A very good argument can be made for saying that the United Nations shouldn't exist. But no argument can be made for suggesting that Arafat should not be permitted to come here now to address the General Assembly once again. The United Nations Headquarters Agreement of 1947 more or less guaranteed that the United Nations could invite to address it whomever it chose, ceding to the United States only the right to deny a visa to someone who threatened the security of the United States.

It is unlikely that that grisly old terrorist is going to pause while in New York to toss a hand grenade up into the Waldorf Towers. But our refusal to let him in among other things denies us the opportunity to put pressure on him to clean up the murky resolution by which he seeks to create a Palestinian state and to leave ambiguous the legitimate borders of Israel.

A very good argument can be made for saying that the State Department's decision this week has in effect been a movement within the Palestine National Council. Certainly not the kind of movement we should insist upon before recognizing the Palestine Liberation Organization. The decision to the council to abide by Resolution No. 242 is disingenuous to the extent that it is represented as acquiescing in the existence of an Israeli state. The not-so-fine print of the council's resolution suggests that the Israel they would consent to live with, is the Israel of 1947.

There is certainly a question of whether Israel has any right to continue to occupy the West Bank. But there isn't much question over the legitimacy of its seizure of the Golan Heights, a security requirement demonstrably indispensable to the security of the Israelis cannot reasonably be poised to give up East Jerusalem, let alone all of Jerusalem.

Still, there is motion. The PLO has fought a terrorist war against Israel for 40 years and for its pains has lost control of the Gaza Strip, the West Bank, Jerusalem and the Golan Heights. It has imposed on Israel an ugly policy of repression, which leaves many, probably most Israelis, disgusted, without quite knowing what are the alternatives. There is a small ray of light at this moment, and it is wrong to ignore it.

What is dismaying about the State Department is the fact that it has in some way become a defender of the State Department. Perhaps the United States, I will eat the Lincoln Memorial if the State Department denies him that visa. We should consider turning lot 13 into a several-story parking garage with more handicapped spaces on the ground level. Since anything done to benefit the handicapped would benefit every person on this campus, surely those items should be given extra consideration when planning for improvements and repairs.

My hat's off to Dr. McGee for putting thirty years on this campus!

Jethro Tull celebrates 20th anniversary

By Todd Colicchio

Jethro Tull has been among the biggest names in rock for 20 years now. Due to an overwhelming demand by fans, Crystals Records released a 5-LP anniversary album this past summer to commemorate this magnificent achievement of the band. The album is a gift to longtime "Tull" fans as well as upcoming new ones.

To appreciate the band, let's slip back some 20 years to unfold some of the early history of Jethro Tull.

The band (though not named Jethro Tull as yet) was formed Christmas week of 1967 in their hometown of Blackpool, England. Craving success, they traveled in whirlwind fashion down from Blackpool, with their sights set on London, in hopes of finding whatever club work they could get.

In little time, they secured a prestigious residency at London's famous Marquee Club. This at one time had been a second home to The Rolling Stones and Who. The band, playing their unique blend of music, needed a complementing unique name for themselves. It was at this time that they were christened Jethro Tull, who was an 18th century agriculturalist and a musician, too. Although Ian Anderson has always been the driving force holding onto the band, nevertheless Jethro Tull is a group. While playing the local club circuit in and around London, the band had acquired a very large underground following, even without a recording contract. It was in August 1968 that this small group made one of their most important appearances at the major English event-The Sunbury Blues and Jazz Festival. Fans and critics alike shouted their approval.

One newspaper proclaimed, "Jethro Tull is the group of the year and at least for the next decade." Little did anyone realize just how long their popularity would endure.

Now with a recording contract secured, the band released their best-selling album at the end of 1968. It later gained success in the U.S. in 1969. To promote themselves on the other side of the Atlantic, Tull came to our American shores in the winter of 1969 for their first of many American tours. But they were delegated to a college circuit, capturing, lurching and eventually the band charged the atmosphere with their musical virtuosity.

Their top ten single, "Living in the Past" (which, was recorded in West Orange, N.J. 1969), took the band to the top of the charts. Their second album,

The songs on that album showcased Anderson's disturbing philosophy on organized religion, with an element of humour injected into them. Harmony, wit, and eccentricity are all part of Jethro Tull.

This was never more apparent than on their follow-up album, Thickness as a Brick, released in 1972. The album contained one song that was spread over two sides of the record; and if that wasn't enough the record jacket resembled a newspaper when actually opened up, it turned into a newspaper.

At times Jethro Tull took their music over the edge while other bands decided to play it safe. In 1973, with the release of A Passion Play, critics, not fans, turned their backs on the band rarely, even in the future, to acknowledge the band as a creative and valid force in the music world. But the fans saw it differently.

Jethro Tull were selling out the largest arenas, making them the top concert attraction in the world. The 1974 album, War Child, containing the hit single "Bungle in the Jungle" proved to be an excellent indication for the band's future.

On the other hand, the group's personnel has changed as well as many of their musical directions: most notably the English folk album Songs From the Wood, and 1982's The Broadsword and the Beast. Both have been hugely successful for the group. With each new release, the band gains a new generation of fans as well as keeping the old ones. Still at the forefront of Jethro Tull's music are Ian Anderson's highly personal lyrics, setting "Tull" apart from any other band in the world.

After a three year hiatus, 1987 saw the full-scale return of Jethro Tull, with their masterpiece Crease of a Knife. This album and tour proved to be the fans, critics, and the world that Jethro Tull was still a band to be reckoned with-and not just for nostalgia's sake, either.

To carry on their hard working tradition, they are now recording a new album and planning a 1989 Autumnal tour of America. That brings us to the present.

The Jethro Tull 20th Anniversary album is a 5-LP, 3 CD, or 3 cassette package of unreleased masters, rare B-sides, Remixes and archival "Tull" material and live recordings from radio broadcasts dating back to 1968. Fanns have been screaming for this for years. It has finally arrived. Still, though, for those of you who've never heard of Jethro Tull, it is never enough. There is some valid music on this album and I think the fans will love it," states bassist Dave Pegg.

Guitarist Martin Barre adds, "The presentation of this album is excellent; a very good package."

In concert or on record, Jethro Tull will show you just what has made their popularity endure. And to sum up the last 20 years of the band, I borrow a liner note that appeared on their second album Stand Up; "...or well yes! It really has turned out nicely."

Cancel the ‘Waltons’; Yanks? loyalty? Nah!

By Kenny Peck and Ian Saarmann

Joe must go Once again, the Jets are not going to the playoffs. Surprised? Why? Let’s be honest. Joe Walton has simply got to go. OK, the Jets aren’t, and haven’t been, the most talented team in the league. But they have got to be better than they’ve shown over the Walton era. It’s time for Jets’ management to take a stand and do something to shake the team up. Maybe they could hire Gastineau as the head coach or something. But Joe has to go.

Yankee fever—lose it Well, the Yankees have really done it this time. Captain Willie Randolph has been banished from the house that George built. Randolph had been the stabilizing influence throughout all the craziness in Yankeeland. And this is the thanks he gets? New manager Dallas Green says that he doesn’t care what Randolph has done for the Yankees in the past. He wants a younger, more talented second baseman. Yeah, well Steve Sax just learned how to throw the ball to the first baseman instead of the hot dog man in the eighth row.

Green also has done a clean sweep of the coaching staff. He has brought in all of his coaches from his glory days with the Phillies. One of those let go was hitting coach Chris Chambliss. Chambliss was a vital part of the Yankees championship teams of the 1970’s. What thanks did Chambliss get? Not even a letter or phone call telling him he was let go. Nothing. Nice loyalty, from his glory days with the Phillies. One of those let go was hitting coach Chris Chambliss.

At the Meadowlands Mudstone is nowhere to be found. But we're not giving up hope. For the final time, we'll tab the fabulous Mudstone as the horse to watch.

Last week's selection: Once again, Mudstone didn't run.

‘Confidence and hard work’ enable Monaco to succeed

By Mary Caralomagno Staff Writer

In addition to being named "Outstanding Wrestler" at the Coast Guard Invitational Tournament last week, MSC's Karl Monaco, ranked second in the country, is this week's Montclarion Athlete of the Week.

Monaco, in his fourth year at MSC, has collected his share of honors. As a freshman, he placed seventh in all of Division III. He has won the Division III Nationals twice, and earned third place in Division I Nationals last season.

So far, Monaco is undefeated this season, beating Columbia's Toby Johnson last week by a score of 11-1 to notch his latest victory.

His goals for this season seem very simple: "To be undefeated, to win Division I Nationals and to be on the East-West All Team.

Monaco's personal performance will concentrate on "getting into better shape and becoming more mentally tough." Wrestling at 150 pounds for the first time this season, Monaco feels a lot stronger. "Now that I'm not cutting so much weight, I have endurance to work even harder," he explained.

Judging by his accomplishments so far this season, Monaco at 150 pounds has pinned a winning combination.

His main opponent is number one ranked Tim Krueger of Iowa State, but according to Monaco, "Confidence and hard work should give me a good shot to win."

Upcoming for the grapplers is the Christmas Tournament on December 28 and 29 on MSC's home mat. Monaco is undecided about wrestling here, or attending the Florida Sunshine Open.

For the future success of the Indians, Monaco maintains that "unity" will carry the Indians to victory.
Wilson named tournament MVP
Women take Dial Classic for fourth consecutive year, 71-51

The lady Indians captured the Dial Classic for the fourth straight year with a 71-51 victory over Carrol College Saturday at Panzer Gym.

MSC (4-1) reached the championship game courtesy of a 58-50 win over Westfield State Friday night.

The Indians were down early in the final game, as Carroll's Chris Jisa sank three straight baskets to put the Pioneers up by a score of 6-1.

But MSC responded with 10 unanswered points, as Carroll was held scoreless for over five minutes, and the Indians had an 11-6 advantage.

MSC co-captain Sue Becker and tournament Most Valuable Player Kim Wilson then combined for 17 of the Indians' next 21 points, as the home team took control and built a 32-19 halftime lead.

But the Indians countered with eight consecutive points, capped off by a Francis Collins layup, and MSC took a 42-24 lead.

Carrol never really challenged the Indians again, as Wilson proved to be too much for the Wisconsin school to handle.

The sophomore scored 16 of her game-high 30 points in the second half, as she continually buried the Pioneers' chances with turnaround jumpers to ice the win.

Co-captain Carolyn Savio dominated the boards for the Indians, as she grabbed 21 rebounds. The junior also added 16 points.

In their opening round game against Westfield State, the Indians were led by Becker, who scored 17 points and added seven assists.

"We were really relieved to win the first round game," said Indian Coach Jill Jeffrey, explaining that there is "a lot of pressure on the host school to make it to the championship game."

MSC took a 12-1 early lead enroute to a 23-13 halftime advantage. But the Indians received a scare in the second half when the Owls took a five-point edge, 40-35, on a seven-point run six minutes into the period.

The Indians responded gamely, however, as MSC outscored Westfield State by a 14-4 margin over the next seven minutes to once again gain control.

Wilson added 15 points while Collins scored 16. Savio contributed seven points and four rebounds.

"Everyone who played really contributed," Jeffrey said. "Everyone is looking to be a scorer, and that's really helping us out."

MSC, 56-54

By Ian Saarmann

The MSC men's basketball team lost a tough 56-54 decision to Stockton State last night at Panzer Gym.

Vince Gulbin was the high scorer for the Indians with 20 points and Pat Brunner chipped in 13 points, but it was not enough to pull out the win.

The lead changed hands many times in the first half, but the Indians came away with the halftime lead as Gulbin made a shot as the buzzer sounded to give MSC a 25-24 lead going into the lockerroom.

The second half was much the same, as the two teams took turns on the lead. But with 59 remaining, Stockton State's Frank Christmas hit a free throw to put the Ospreys up by four, 55-51.

But MSC's Mike Fitzpatrick quickly answered with a three-point shot to move the Indians within one.

The Ospreys held the ball until a foul was called on MSC with 18 seconds left to play. The free throw was missed, and the Indians had the ball and a chance to win the game.

Freshman guard Russell Murdock dribbled the ball up and was trapped at halfcourt. He managed to slip through the trap and find Timothy Liddy open under the basket.

Liddy was up for the shot, but was called for travelling on the play. After a timeout, MSC again fouled and sent Stockton State to the line with six seconds to play. The Ospreys made one free throw to make it a 56-54 Stockton State lead.

MSC had one more chance to tie or win the game, as the ball was thrown to Brunner outside of the three-point line. Brunner found Liddy open again under the basket.

Liddy made the layup, and the game was apparently tied. But the referees correctly ruled that shot was made after the final buzzer had sounded.
