Linnehan SGA president

By Lynn M. Cowan
Editor-in-Chief

Mary Jane Linnehan won the position of president of the SGA yesterday after a close race against incumbent SGA President Tommy Mergola. Linnehan won the presidency by 54 votes, while Mergola was 228 votes ahead of the third candidate, Anthony Tuths.

It was also a close race for the position of SGA secretary, with the winner—Helen Archontou—coming out ahead by only 10 votes.

All unopposed candidates won the positions they ran for, including Thomas Czerniacki for vice-president, Tim Nee for treasurer and Tammy Brick for Board of Trustees alternate.

After the results were announced, Linnehan thanked her fellow candidates in a prepared statement. She said that her campaign platform of communication and compromise would continue into her presidency as policy next year.

Women should send out the proper message to achieve success in business

By Laura Lawson
Staff Writer

Why do women occupy only two percent of senior management corporate positions today? This was the question asked at the lecture, "The Paths and Pitfalls to Corporate Success" presented April 16, by Women in Business Network to a full hall of both female and male MSC students and faculty.

Carole Brand, director of Management and Organization Development, Hoffman-LaRoche, outlined factors affecting success which were derived from a survey of women in business, studying "high potential women who were derailed."

According to the survey, the criteria for success included: help from above, ranked as most important; a good track record; a drive to succeed, which requires putting work before family; setting priorities; the ability to manage subordinates, especially men; taking career risks and a willingness to relocate; being tough and demanding; having an impressive image; being adaptable to change; and handling the woman issue well.

Nina McLemore-Maloy, president of Liz Claiborne Accessories, suggested that both the attitudes of men and of women affect the success of women in the corporate world.

She stressed the importance for women to "send out the proper message" that their goals are "career primary" not "family primary."

"Accepting loss and failure and going on from there, which people in team sports understand," and seeing "failure as just another way of learning," said McLemore-Maloy, are key factors in success.

"Women don't move nearly as quickly as men because we don't expect to. We don't think of ourselves as being as good or as able," Brand said. "Women who succeeded didn't start off being successful. They looked at their flaws and insecurities and changed their behavior."

Each of the five panelists emphasized the need for women to prove their capability and to exhibit a desire and willingness to pay their dues.

Joanne Dixon, president, Q., Inc., pointed out that "a lot of people just want to slide along and take it as it comes." She said it's important to "go the extra mile," and that success entails a lot of sacrifice.

The participants discussed their 60-80 hour work weeks. Dixon stressed the need for women to "do your homework, do a good job and become a value to the company."

McLemore-Maloy said, "Orient your conversations around profit and set objectives. Learn about money in the company; what makes it profitable and concentrate on sales growth."

McLemore-Maloy discussed the "power image." She said, "Being perceived as somebody on the career track depends on how you look and how you present yourself. You should dress acceptably for the company and look important."

She stressed the necessity of "looking at the big picture," and "associating with excellence." It was Brand's contention that, "The most important issue for you is recognizing the need to help others: give something back."

Florio seeks the democratic candidacy for November's Gubernatorial Election.

"It hasn't even been handed off," said Florio. "We certainly can't have a healthy New Jersey if parts of the state are still suffering."

If elected governor, Florio said, he will have New Jersey undergo a statewide audit.

As much as $6.8 million has been lost through state bungling, according to Florio. "The first thing we must do is figure out where all the money went," said Florio.

Florio also plans to change auto insurance guidelines if elected. "If you are a good driver, they can't turn you down," said Florio.

Florio said he believes that residency and marriage status should not affect residents' insurance rates.

Congressman James Florio
told students Monday that Governor Tom Kean's administration is responsible for irrational growth in New Jersey.

Economic prosperity has taken precedence over affordable housing, public transportation and the environment, according to Florio.

"We have come to realize, you just can't dump things," Florio said.

Florio, whose wife is a third grade teacher, said he holds education in highest regard.

"Education is another word for opportunity," said Florio. "We must provide teachers with incentive and keep their motivation rising."

Florio said he plans to change environmental protection laws and prepare for a better future, according to Florio. "We must provide teachers with incentive and keep their motivation rising."

Power failure cripples campus

By Anthony DiPasquale
Staff Writer

Webster Hall along with Stone Hall, Richardson Hall, Mallory Hall, McEachern, and Life Hall were evacuated Tuesday after a power failure caused their closing between 10:45 a.m. and 9:30 p.m.

“The entire campus experienced a momentary loss of power for about five seconds,” said Joe McGinty, director of maintenance operations. “When the power came back the feeder splices located in a manhole behind the Student Center were burned crisp.”

Outside contractors experienced in dealing with high voltage situations were called in and immediately began working on the dilemma, said McGinty.

Classes were cancelled and students living in the residence halls were evacuated by resident assistants (R.A.’s).

“Most students either went home or stayed in Bohn and Blanton Hall while many just waited in the library until they were able to return to their rooms,” said Pamela Fields, an R.A. in Webster Hall.

Use of the Pill may be cause breast cancer

By Laura Elhilow
Correspondent

The most dangerous period for a woman who is taking the pill to develop breast cancer is between the time she first begins to menstruate and her first full-blown pregnancy, said Erica Gollub, M.P.H. of Columbia University, School of Public Health in a College Hall lecture on April 12.

During the lecture, titled “The Pill and Breast Cancer—Evidence and Public Health Policy,” Gollub told a female-dominated audience of the link between breast cancer and the pill.

The theory is that a woman’s breast tissue is sensitive at this time and reacts to the carcinogen, estrogen, which along with progestin, formulates the oral contraceptive, said Gollub.

Gollub added that the duration a woman is on the pill is another risk factor. If a woman takes the pill for two years she might not be at risk because she hasn’t had enough exposure to estrogen.

Gollub informed her audience of background information concerning breast cancer. She said that a woman whose mother has breast cancer is two times more likely to get it than a woman who does not have it in her family history. Nutrition, particularly a high-fat diet, is also linked to breast cancer.

During the question and answer period a student asked what a woman should do if she was taking the pill for medical reasons.

Gollub responded, “Doctors far over-prescribe the pill. There are reasons why women skip periods, stress being a common one. Doctors use the pill as a convenience. It should come down to our own assessment. Too many women don’t know the risks of the pill.”

Gollub also stated: “We’ve created a ‘Pill Generation’ of women who know nothing about their bodies. Women should be educated.”

The audience appeared alarmed at the evidence of risk factors linked with birth control pills. Some individuals went as far as to blame the media for not informing the public about the risk factors due to the high profit of the pill.

The issue of AIDS was also brought up during the question and answer session. Gollub said that condom promotion could be responsible for a fading trend of using the pill.

Music building should be gutted despite recent renovations

By Susan Sarlo
Staff Writer

"Sound transmission makes it difficult to practice and it's not only unpleasant, but harmful to the development of a young musician," Mintz said.

Mintz noted that "where you lack adequate temperature controls, you aren't only damaging the musicians, but you are also damaging the instruments."

According to Jerome Quinn, director of Facilities Planning, an evaluation of whether or not Meachern Music building should be gutted isn't complete. He said, "The architect believes, at this point, that the building can be renovated and upgraded so that it can be made acoustically appropriate."

If the building does need to be gutted, Quinn said, the money will have to be obtained through the bond issue.

The bond issue requires us to match one dollar for every two dollars out of the issue," Quinn said. "Part of that money comes from the $3.5 million targeted for the music building and another part comes from the tuition increase."

Quinn said the School of Fine and Performing Arts had received a challenge grant which included renovations to all of the fine arts buildings, including the music building.

Two projects, according to Quinn, were developed; one being designed by the architectural firm of Mylan-Valk in which plans are developing to construct a music storage room. All of the other things that had been planned to be done under the grant couldn't be afforded and some items had to be cut, he added.

Quinn added that the second project was the air conditioning system which was essentially completed at the beginning of the current term. When the air conditioning system was turned on, it was extremely loud, he added.

"We were appalled because the engineers, Jeffrey & Kallaur, and the architects were instructed to pay attention to the aesthetics because it is a music building," he commented.

Modifications, Quinn said, were made over the spring break which consisted of repositioning of the air diffusers that discharge the air so that the flow of air will be more gradual and less noisy, and the sealing of some of the leaks in the system. Other modifications made were to remove a moisture eliminator from the ducts and to add additional insulation around the ducts, he added.

"We're hoping that at the completion of these steps, the system will be acceptable," Quinn said.

Project dinner

The specialized food production class of the home economics department at MSC is sponsoring a "project dinner" on April 20, at Finley Hall. This project of the class is designed to give its members an opportunity to practice their management skills.

The menu consists of a choice of two full course meals:

- Roasted Breast of Chicken w/ Wild Rice
- Salmon w/ Mushroom Risotto and Green Beans
- Spaghetti w/ Meatballs
- Beef Stew w/ Vegetables

Tickets for the meal were sold for $4 pre-fix. per person.

SGA Executive Board members unhappy with election procedures

By Tom Checkur
Staff Writer

SGA Executive board members ridiculed this week's electoral procedures at the SGA meeting last night.

Vice President Matthew Quinn said, "The freeze went into effect over 200 students and 30 full-time faculty members.

Mintz said that two things are wrong about the building: the sound transmission and the lack of adequate temperature and humidity controls.

According to Department Chairman Dr. Donald Mintz, the building is unsuitable for the uses to which it is put. Mintz said the building was originally built for 90 students and ten faculty members and now has over 200 students and 30 full-time faculty members.

Mintz added that two things are wrong about the building: the sound transmission and the lack of adequate temperature and humidity controls.

New sorority suggested

Twenty-five girls met in the Blanton Hall atrium on March 15, to discuss plans for founding a new national sorority, Delta Phi Epsilon, at MSC.

The girls are awaiting acceptance from the national headquarters in Indiana to become a colony by May of this year. The members will be accepting pledges for the Fall semester if the chapter is approved.

The idea for starting the sorority was initially activated by Blanton Hall residents, Kerry Raftery, Lisa Balcom and Michele Blanton.

After speaking to members of the Alpha Chi Omega chapter at Rutgers, Raftery received permission from Dr. Edward Martin, Dean of Students, and the Greek Department to carry plans for founding the sorority.

If the national headquarters accepts the proposal for an MSC chapter, representatives from the Indiana chapter will visit the founding members this semester to advise them on the rules of governing the sorority.

Also, members will be elected for office, a budget will be settled and weekly meetings will be held.

A sorority interested in obtaining further information concerning the sorority may contact Raftery at 783-2688.

SGA News

Committees to be formed

Acting President Richard Lynde has requested volunteers, including students, to serve on various college-related committees. The committees, along with response forms, are available at Dean Edward Martin's office (C-217), the SGA office, or the front desk of the Student Center. Return completed forms to the SGA office.

SGA President Thomas Merola was satisfied with the cancellation of a debate between the candidates. The debate, which was to be held on the-air of the WMSC radio station, was cancelled by the Attorney General because of automobiles' problem.

"You don't just cancel a debate," Mergola said. "Talk about hindering the possible outcome of an election. There's no excuse, and I don't even want one."

Mergola, who was not re-elected, said, "I've been here for three elections in the past five years, and I'll admit this was the most shabbily run."

The Drop-in Center's budget was frozen, according to SGA Treasurer Perry DelVecchio. "The freeze went into effect as of Monday. No supplies, no services, will be rendered that require a fee," DelVecchio said.

SGA President Thomas Mergola was dissatisfied with the re-institution of a pass/fail option for General Education Requirements (GER), won by 310 votes, while the second question, concerning the re-institution of a pass/fail option for General Education Requirements (GER), won by 706 votes.

Campus Police Report:

Fireworks set off in Blanton Hall incident

By Jane Bech Nielsen
Assignment editor

Fireworks were thrown from the fourth floor down onto the desk area in Blanton Hall, on April 11, at 12:15 a.m. A second incident took place at 1:30 a.m. on the same night, when fireworks, placed in the 3AD study lounge in Blanton Hall, went off. There are no suspects in this incident.

Mark Litarowich, an MSC student was fined $350 for pulling a fire alarm in the Clove Road apartments. He also received a 30-day suspended jail sentence and was put on one year supervised probation.

Litarowich was required to attend an Alcohol Counseling Program. If he fails to attend this program he will have to serve his jail sentence.

On April 12, Lee Seranni was fined $155 for possessing stolen property. When arrested by Campus Police on April 1, Seranni was in the possession of an MSC traffic sign. He was put on one year supervised probation.

Sometime between 11:15 p.m. on April 11 and 3 p.m. on April 12, a 1988 Jeep Suzuki was stolen from lot 21. The car was recovered in Newark the same night.

A 1980 Oldsmobile Delta 88 was broken into on April 12, sometime between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. When an attempt to steal the car failed, the thieves stole the radio.

Sometime between 11:00 p.m. on April 15 and 4:00 a.m. on April 16, a 1980 Chevy two-door was stolen from lot 17. The car was recovered by the Essex County Narcotics Bureau in Newark on April 16.

Advanced planning makes on-line registration easier

Contributed by Carl T. Snipes
Director of Academic Advising

In the past, there were long, long lines with no end in sight. Then there was uncertainty, usually resolved on a hot August afternoon in Panzer Gym. MSC students, dread no longer. The wave of the future is here.

The new on-line registration system will debut on Tuesday, April 25, as the course selection process for fall schedules begins. While the system provides for major improvements in simplifying registration, like all advancements, it also comes with its share of headaches which can be avoided if students are properly prepared.

A key feature of on-line registration is instant scheduling. It is now possible for a student to complete the registration procedure and walk away with a full schedule, all within minutes and without the early return for the August afternoon appointment in Panzer Gym.

In order to make this happen, however, students have plan to seek academic advisement prior to the registration period. They should familiarize themselves with the curriculum and arrange for advisement beforehand, or else the new instant registration will be plagued by the old frustrations.

Academic advising is an ongoing process, which involves more than pre-registration counseling, and should happen at various stages throughout the academic year. While there is an obvious connection between advisement and registration, the two need not occur only when course schedule booklets are published.

In fact, good advisement can and should take place before course schedule booklets become available. Planning your courses and knowing program requirements are areas which can be discussed with an advisor long before registration.

By preparing adequate list of course alternates and having an understanding of one's overall program, registration becomes a routine process of simply assigning a time to courses which have been previously selected in consultation with your advisor.

Seeking early advisement also ensures that your advisor has sufficient time to address all your advising needs. Faculty advisors are full-time teachers who must also meet the demands of the classroom. Instead of waiting for peak periods like registration, students should evenly distribute their advising time throughout the academic year to make things easier for all.

Academic advising involves more than just a signature on a course schedule. By setting goals, acquiring knowledge of academic policies, procedures, institutional resources, curricular requirements, programs and course offerings, the student and the advisor develop meaningful and useful educational plans which are supportive of the student's life goals.

In addition to advising, there are other ways that students might help themselves by thoroughly reading the undergraduate college catalogue and reviewing the first section of the course schedule booklet each semester.

The Academic Advising and Tutorial Center is planning a series of materials to cater to the varying needs of the undergraduate student body. First in the series is "Frequently Asked Questions About Advising," which provides students with some of the most important questions and answers the Center finds in the every day conduct of student advising.

Another soon-to-be-available hand-out is "Who's My Advisor?," which is aimed towards helping new and re-admitted students better understand how to contact their advisor and how the advising system at MSC works.

In addition to these materials, which will be available at the Center, the Academic Advising Newsletter will soon return to outline some of the demands the new system will place on students in order to maximize its potential.

If you have changed your major or are undeclared, or are a transfer or newly readmitted student, the Academic Advising and Tutorial Center invites you to call for any assistance that you might need at 893-42337, 893-4106 and 893-4146.

If you have already declared a major area of study, contact your major department to arrange for advisement.
Jane Gordon never wanted to go into the men's rooms in the first place.
She was searching for graffiti as a project for her final English course. Next to slang and words on the lovelorn, however, she found more than just interesting reading.

An English major, Gordon was assigned to write a controversy report for her final English course. She chose campus graffiti, a topic of Sprague Library only has one study on from 1978 from a college in California.

Gordon decided to speak to Edward Martin, dean of students, who assured her that “the janitorial staff does not run this college” and that Tom Stepnowski, assistant vice president of facilities, would give her a pass to carry out her research.

Gordon's meeting with Stepnowski, however, was less than successful.

She only got as far as her secretary, who, according to her, said she was speaking for her superior. “Mr. Stepnowski says that there is no graffiti on Montclair State's campus,” Gordon recalls her as saying.

Gordon relayed her order from Martin, and then called back his office for assistance. After speaking with his secretary, with what she calls considerable arguments on my part about my need for some kind of acknowledgement on the part of the college that I had permission to do this kind of research,” Gordon arranged for an appointment with Martin for Monday, April 2.

That day, Friday, April 7, however, Gordon went into action. She picked up her pass from Cohen's office through David Stuebler, and headed for the washrooms.

“I grabbed my camera and made sure I had enough film. By six p.m. I had taken photos of every men's and women's washroom on campus with the exception of the library, which was closed by the time I got to it,” she says.

Gordon found much of the graffiti fascinating. Along with the expected slang and curse words, she found despairing suicides that some had written back to and other cases where anonymous correspondents offered advice to Alcohols Anonymous or the Drop-In Center.

Sunday, Gordon says, she realized that the “cover-up” had begun. She made several copies of Dean Cohen's pass and returned with her camera to those washrooms she had missed on Friday.

“The men’s washroom in the basement of the library had literally been semi-whitewashed with a painting roller. I took photos,” she says.

“By Monday, April 10, both the men's and women's washrooms, primarily the men's, were being re-painted and scrubbed, and in Partridge Hall, paint remover was used to remove the graffiti.”

Gordon found much of the graffiti fascinating. Along with the expected slang and curse words, she found despairing suicides that some had written back to and other cases where anonymous correspondents offered advice to Alcohols Anonymous or the Drop-In Center.

Nevertheless, Gordon still wonders if the constant painting of the washrooms makes Stepnowski’s statement about the graffiti, or lack of it, on campus true. She also wonders if funds are appropriated specifically for this purpose.

The Master Planning Committee asked all department heads to be the student lounge that they converted to office space.

Departments all over campus have wanted with a lack of facilities for years. Last November’s bond issue will provide $19 million to improve the situation, but a master plan must be carefully drawn up first.

The Master Planning Committee asked all department heads in February to tell what is lacking in their respective facilities and to be “realistic” in their response to this question.

The custodians in the Student Center and in Partridge Hall told Gordon that the women's rooms are painted two to three times as much as the men's rooms. "That means that the graffiti I found in the ladies rooms is not representative of what we women are truly capable of," she says. "It was not a control group."

She wonders, however, why she was originally told there is no graffiti on Montclair State's campus.

The architects' recommendations will be presented on May 5 in Kops Lounge, Russ Hall at 1:00 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. The Master Planning Committee will also present. Campus maps will be shown and all possible new buildings will be discussed. All interested are invited; questions and comments are welcome.

"I'd like to see as much student input as possible, so we can have everyone's input before we proceed," Quinn added.

McEachern hears a second sour note

The McEachern Music building just had an entirely new air conditioning system installed. One would think that would be a good thing. However, in a report to the Master Planning committee, the building, besides having it demolished completely, is to have it gutted. Why? Because it was only designed to hold a fraction of the present number of students and faculty. So what would gutting the building accomplish? If the restructuring of the interior going to be sufficient to provide the building now holds?

That means that the college must provide one dollar for every two dollars in our tuition.

The question which comes to mind at this point is: is it fair to charge students to repair a blundered administrative decision? Why did the college allow the installation of an air conditioning system in a building which was inadequate for its means in the first place? To provide a comfortable yet functionally inadequate environment for the young musicians of our school?

And the second question is: What happened to the money received from the Challenge Grant which was supposed to go toward improving the fine and performing arts on campus? Isn't the McEachern building part of the fine and performing arts on campus? Isn't the McEachern building part of the fine and performing arts on campus?

It appears that there are only two possible solutions. One is to build an addition onto the existing building. Another is to prepare plans to build a larger building. Either way, it is the music students who will have to be inconvenienced for another semester.

Poor Ollie North. He still doesn't know what's going on.

Ollie North is now playing fly to Ronald Reagan's flywattter. A sad fate for a brave soldier, however flawed.

Hardest to swallow for North's supporters, I suppose, is the suggestion that some of the money he was hoveling to the contras spilled into his own bucket.

For example, he bought an $8,000 car with cash. Where did he get the cash? Well, he said, he had this box in his bedroom where he emptied the change out of his pockets every week. A nickel here, a dime there, it added up.

Which takes us from Shakespeare to musical comedy. "Fiorello," the musical play based on the life of Fiorello La Guardia, perhaps New York City's most warmly-remembered mayor. In one of its best scenes a couple of Tammany Hall pols are being grilled by the witness stand about the disparity between their high living and their meager salaries. They owe it, they sing, to "a little tin box, a little tin box, that a little tin key unlocks." They put their quarters in it at day's end, they said, and before you knew it they had a car, a mansion, fur coats for their women.

It was funny on Broadway. It was funny in the North courtroom.

It's not as though Ollie didn't keep strict financial records of the money that passed through his hands, you understand. But he destroyed them after the CIA director William Casey. Who is dead.

Not even the Broadway stage can match that one.

There's a modern play, "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," by Tom Stoppard, which follows the story of Hamlet from the fly-on-the-wall viewpoint of the two courtiers. Stoppard said he chose them as protagonists because they were "the most expendable people of all time. Their very facelessness makes them dramatic; the fact they die without ever really understanding why they lived makes them somehow cosmic."

The play has a scene in which the two are wondering what reward the corrupt king will have for them if they succeed in betraying their old school chum, Hamlet.

"Difficult to say, really," says Guildenstern.

"Some kings tend to be amnesiac."

Somebody should have told that to Ollie.
Abortion article lacked objectivity

To the editor:
I was rather disturbed by your article “Students march on Washington,” in your April 13 issue. Specifically, I am referring to its fourth paragraph.

In this paragraph, the author completely abandons journalistic objectivity, and begins to editorialize. While this can be forgiven, as the article was a feature, in the process, she makes statements which are recklessly inaccurate, which is inexcusable in any form of reporting.

The paragraph to which I refer reads as follows:

“If this case (Row vs. Wade) is overturned, abortion would become illegal in the U.S., and it was in the Dark Ages, subjecting women to numerous medical hazards through illegal abortions and causing them to be turned away by control over the right to choose what they want, to do with their own lives.”

The truth of the matter is that if Row vs. Wade is overturned, that action by itself, will not make abortions illegal. What would happen is that abortions would no longer be considered a Constitutional right.

As Americans we enjoy many privileges, such as drinking alcohol or driving a car. Neither of these are constitutional rights, yet neither is greatly endangered. However, as privileges, the states are given the power to regulate them as they see fit in the best public interest. This would be the result of overturning Row vs. Wade.

Continuing with the paragraph, as painfully a memory as the Nixon Era might have been, it was not the Dark Ages, but merely the early 1970s that abortion was illegal. Actually, I have told that abortions were legal during the Dark Ages.

Resident up in arms over volleyball problem

To the editor:
I would like to know if the only qualification for being a Residence Hall Association member is thinking like a jack-ass.

Last September, I returned to school to find that one of the volleyball poles was missing. I was told that a maintenance man had taken it, but it would be repaired as soon as possible. A week ago (only 7 volleyball poles were erected; yet like everything else, the new policy is backwards.

First of all, the new set is ridiculously low to the ground. Why waste the money and effort on a professional set-up if the primary factor of height is excluded. Who was consulted about the specifications anyway—a pigmy?

Secondly, the new net and volleyball poles have to be signed out at the Bohn Hall front desk and returned by 5 p.m. If a maintenance employee was originally responsible for the mishap, why does the Residence Hall Association insist on babysitting the residents?

This means that for the last three and a half hours of day-light, a time when classes are over and students want to relax, the poles sit locked in a closet.

Finally, I was told this weekend that I wasn’t allowed to use the equipment if we weren’t nice. What is the use of having the equipment if we can’t use it? And who determines what “nice” weather is anyway? Am I supposed to stay inside because someone else doesn’t like the cold?

In the past, there was never any problem with volleyball. I don’t understand why an organization, which we pay for, insists on making things difficult for the residents. We even went to one of their meetings to discuss our concerns, but they never showed up. What a waste of time and money.

Disappointment over ball bid battle

To the editor:

We would just like to express a couple of thoughts on the "minor inconveniences" that were bestowed on us at Thursday night's Spring Ball. We were very disappointed in the way C.L.U.B. organized the event.

My friend and I took the proper steps in buying our bids early to insure us the seats that we wanted. We carefully chose a table that was not in the flow of traffic and was away from the music. Our understanding of the purpose of bids was that it guarantees your seats in the location of your choice.

After taking the time to search for our table, we found that it was fully occupied. One of the occupants at the table, no less, informed us nonchalantly that we had been moved to another table because we were only a table of four and they were a table of ten and to accommodate them, we were moved elsewhere.

At that point, we went to find a waitress, who directed us to move elsewhere. We were also informed, after the organizer gave us our new table number, that we should have checked the master table list when we arrived. But a master table list was not even visible upon entering the hotel. Checking a list to find a new table arrangement did not occur to us. Again that was the purpose of buying a bid in the first place. Apparently C.L.U.B. appears to have come up with a new definition of the word bid.

After missing the entire cocktail hour while the confusion continued, we were excited to discover that our table was now four feet from a huge speaker and right next to the dance floor. Once again, that is why bids were purchased in the first place. Unfortunately, C.L.U.B. did not think that perhaps there was a reason a table at the back of the room was chosen. One of us has a hearing problem so we chose a table in the back of the room and away form the speakers to avoid a shouting match, and enjoy an evening of fun and conversation.

As it was, the entire evening was spent screaming at one another. We ended up leaving early due to pounding headaches.

For this minor inconvenience, we would like our money refunded as well as a formal letter of apology from the organizer of the event. If this is the way C.L.U.B. will be running its future functions, we strongly suggest heavy evaluation of its policies. We feel that if this is the normal procedure of C.L.U.B. to be holding their events, people such as ourselves, will not continue to support them in any manner. We would appreciate a response.

Money alone does not change everything

To the editor:

Secondly, Mr. Mergola did not mention the fact that Class One Concerts has had other successful years (before the increase) and has paid similar amounts to other bands as paid for Little Feat and Eddie Money this year.

Finally, during this year, because of the SGA fee increase, many student-run organizations have benefited and presented successful programs. Mr. Mergola's remark could be misconstrued that Class One Concerts was the only organization to benefit from the increase this year.

So for the benefit of everyone, it should be known that increased fees are not all it takes to make successful programming and sell out concerts. Of course, Class One Concerts is grateful, as I am sure other student organizations are, for the extra funding since it does make programming easier.

However, it should be remembered that money alone does not change everything.

ILIAMANNIA IS A CLASS ONE OF THE SOA

Film happening

“Film and Cultural Values,” a film and lecture series exploring humanitarian concerns in foreign film will conclude with the presentation of The Given Word, a modern Christian allegory directed by Anselmo Duarte.

The guest speaker will be Robert Stam, a member of the Cinema Studies Department at NYU, who has published and lectured widely on Third World Cinema.

The Given Word will be shown on Thursday, April 27 at 7 p.m. in Calcia Auditorium. Admission is free and open to all.

Art Forum Series continues

An unusual presentation will be given this week in Art Forum Series by TOTD, "a four person collaborative whose members wish to remain anonymous." They will conduct this week’s lecture in the Calcia Fine Arts Building Auditorium.

TOTD has produced work in a variety of media including painting, sculpture, photography, poetry, film and video. Their work has been reviewed by The York Times and Village Voice as well as other publications.

The lecture will take place Thursday, April 27 from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and admission is free.

Children’s theater performs

By Antoinette Doherty

The Sunrise Players - Montclair State College Theatre for young people will be presenting Androcles and the Lion in the Studio Theatre.

The show will be presented on Fridays, April 21 and 28, at 10 a.m. and 12 noon, and Saturdays, April 22 and 29, at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. This will complete the seven week run of the show for the newly formed children’s theatre group Androcles and the Lion.

Androcles and the Lion is based on the Aesop fable.

Director Nicole V. Demarest chose this play for the Sunrise Players as their premiere production because it is one of the most popular children’s plays throughout America and in twenty other countries.

Written by Aurand Harris, the play conforms to the Commedia dell’ Arte style which provides the children with a learning experience. Following every performance there is a question and answer session between cast members and the audience so that the children will learn about things that are unique to this style of theatre, such as slapstick and lazzi.

The play is structured to introduce such concepts as the true meaning of friendship and the importance of freedom. “The point is,” Demarest explains, “you can’t make another person your slave.”

Forty-five MSC students from many different majors auditioned for six normal parts, which Demarest expanded to ten.

The cast includes: Joe Dalo as Androcles, Anne Janoski as The Lion, Kevin “Scouter” Smith as Pantalone, Sarah Griggs as Tha Captain, Jane Hudnut as Lelio, Laura Pavlicek as Isabella, Jennifer Biddle as The Stage Manager, Carolyn Kowalski as The Prologue/Player, Michael Slattery as Lelio/Player, and Antoinette Doherty as Isabella/Player.

Tickets are $2 general admission. For more information call 893-5163.

In concert

Little Feat rolls across campus

By Raymond Ecke

Few bands can Let It Roll the way Little Feat did Monday night at Memorial Auditorium. The sold-out concert, presented by Class One Concerts, gave the students of MSC a chance to experience one of the most influential bands southern music has.

With 18 years of performing as a band under their belt, Little Feat has found a certain groove that many young bands lack from a musical standpoint, they are frighteningly tight and precise.

The two-hour-plus show began with a Little Feat staple, “Fat Man in the Bathtub.” TPOH (TPOH means you that are up and ready through songs off their grammy-nominated album, Let it Roll.) Songs such as “One Ones Moment” and “Business as Usual” which were dedicated to Jim and Tammy Bakker were played.

Enter Moe Berg. Berg, who is the singer songwriter and lead guitarist of The Pursuit of Happiness (TPOH) is a musician in his late twenties who was so proud of his group that he wanted to introduce them to the little people in the crowd (Rundgren propped). Berg, who states Rundgren as a major influence, sings with a husky voice which marks contrasts with his appearance which is that of a frail, androgynous guy who might be more comfortable behind a computer than stage presence.

His sardonic sense of humor shines through in both his lyrics and his between song babblings which deal with everything from the terrors of high school to the attitude of Starday Berkshire.

All in all, The Pursuit of Happiness is a band well worth checking out whether it be via their debut release Love Junk or at a local club. TPOH has just ended a tour opening for all bands, Duran Duran and are now in the midst of their own tour. This may be the last chance to see them in a small venue.

Being a fan of rock and roll in ones twenties can be a disillusions experience, especially in this decade of the eighties. Faded are the associations with such pubescent lyrics as: “We’ve got to fight for the right to party,” and “Every rose has its thorn.”

Things that just need to be said...

By Kenny Peck

Odds and Ends If anyone followed the Rangers and Bergeron this season, you'll probably agree with the theory that one of the big reasons Bergeron screwed the team up was because he played around with the top two lines. Granato or Wilson would 15 good games in a row, and then one bad one, and they'd be on a different line the next game. If you want to fool around and try different combinations with the fourth, or maybe even the third line, fine. But you need consistency with your top two lines. Check the teams still alive in the playoffs and you'll notice that each kept their top lines virtually intact for much of the season...Knicks are on a serious skid. I'd venture to guess that he'd go at least 52.8 or so.”

Field sets N.J. record

MSC runner breaks 400M hurdle mark with a time of 52.2

MSC's Amod Field set a school and state record at the New Jersey Athletic Championships last week with a time of 52.2 in the 400 intermediate hurdles.

Field's time broke the school record of 52.4, set in 1975 by John Keith.

"Before the race, Amod asked my assistants and myself what we thought he could go in," said MSC head track coach John Blanton. "We told him 'About 56 (seconds)'; because Amod is the type of runner who when you tell him something, he likes to prove you wrong. We knew he'd go at least 52.8 or so.'"

That he did.

Blanton feels that Field is just starting now to come into his own on the race track, as "he is just starting to realize the technical aspect of running, as opposed to just going out and running, which was what he was doing before.

"The 400 intermediates are just his specialty. He can do anything he was trained to do," continued Blanton. "In my opinion, he is the most versatile and talented athlete that has come out of Montclair State."

Blanton may have a good argument. In addition to his accomplishments on the track, Field is being looked at by professional football scouts. Also, Blanton points out that Field defeated supposedly superior runners in the Vitals meet, despite his lack of races going into the meet.

Blanton feels that with continued training, Field can do "almost anything" on the track. Right now, Blanton and his coaching staff are working on Field’s "step pattern", which they feel will maximize the senior's speed.

"Amod says that the hurdles are just a race with ten slight interruptions," said Blanton. "We’re just trying to get him to adjust better to those ten slight interruptions."

Laxmen wreck Stockton State, improve mark to 10-0

The MSC lacrosse team keeps rolling along. This time the victim was Stockton State, who the Indians defeated by a score of 16-4 last night at Sprague Field to improve to 10-4 on the season.

Is head coach Doug Alsofron surprised by the success of this team? “Without a doubt,” the second-year coach said. “But the biggest surprise to me was beating Fairleigh-Dickinson and Drew.”

In attempting to explain MSC’s great success this season, Alsofron says that team members are playing up to their potential, especially Zorich and Joe Petrone. “I expected a lot from both of them, and they both have improved their games,” he said. “Their assists are way up.”

Alsofron also had praise for Billy Van Ness, who he called a “legitimate feed man and a scorer too.” “Many of the players who I

Softball team takes three of four, gears up for Trenton State twinbill

By Kenny Peck

The long-awaited doubleheader between MSC and Trenton State the number two and number one ranked teams in the Mid-Atlantic region respectively, has now become the longer awaited doubleheader because of a rain postponement.

The rescheduling of the twinbill has brought the matchup a bit more attention, as it is such an important series for each school.

For the Lions, who have defeated the Indians five out of the last six times the teams have faced each other, a sweep means an almost certain clinch of the A-Division crown of the New Jersey Athletic Conference (NJAC), depending on the results of Glassboro State’s games.

A sweep for the Indians will mean that if MSC sweeps Kean Saturday in their final conference game of the season, the Indians will likely be A-Division champions.

If the teams split, Trenton, currently 4-0 in the conference compared with MSC’s 2-2 mark, will have the inside track.

Surrounding the rainout, the Indians played four games and won their last three of them, largely due to the play of Donna Brooks.

All told for the week, Brooks hit .546 (10-22) with six RBIs and a home run. This past weekend against Southern Connecticut, Brooks was five for eight with a double and a home run and four RBIs.

MSC held coach Willie Rucker had praise for both Brooks and Andrea Peters, who, according to Rucker, are the leaders of the young Indian team.

“Both Andrea and Donna are looked upon as leading hitters on the team,” she said. “Even as freshmen, they were looked upon by the seniors as key hitters on the team.”

Brooks’ performance this season is especially impressive as she is coming off an injury similar to the one suffered by Johnna Tolomeo, which will keep Tolomeo on the sidelines until next year. Peters, meanwhile, leads the team with a .408 average.
