Restriction lifted after nearly a month

Students’ access to Richardson Hall microcomputers reinstated

By Anthony DiPasquale
Staff Writer

Access to the microcomputer lab in Richardson Hall was reinstated Monday for students not enrolled in computer science GER classes, after nearly a month of restricted use.

The lifting of the lab’s restrictions came after several deans of other MSC schools, the vice president of academic affairs, and the vice president of student affairs, protested that it was in the best interests of the campus community to provide open lab time.

There were the restricted use, which went into effect Nov. 6, allowed only students taking math and computer science GER classes to use the Richardson Hall computer lab, one of the most popular on campus. The restriction resulted from complaints of overcrowding lodged by students in the GER courses.

“We are pleased to cooperate with the provost, and are making the lab accessible to all students in the good faith that the other labs on campus begin to make their labs more accessible also,” said Dr. Kenneth Wolff, chairperson of the math and computer science department.

The Developmental and Career Services office has also obtained a grant from United Parcel Service to purchase computers to be used by students preparing resumes, which will take an enormous strain off the facilities of Richardson, according to Wolff.

“We understand that more students are becoming computer literate, and plans are being discussed for expanding the current labs and the possibility of putting a computer lab in the residence halls,” said Jean Armstrong, vice president of student affairs.

The goal is to make individual residence rooms computer capable and link them to the nation network that the faculty currently uses. It would enable students to communicate and access the computer facilities of other colleges across the country.

“Computer systems of this magnitude will be of enormous educational value, and it is the way we are going to be living within the next ten years so we must train the students how to use the resources and to use them wisely,” said Wolff. The hours for students not enrolled in computer science GER classes are: Mon. and Thurs. 8-10 a.m., Tues. and Wed. 3-5 and 7-9 p.m., and Fri. 1-4 p.m.

Legislators argue gubernatorial race

By Carmel McAre
Correspondent

The 1989 New Jersey gubernatorial race really never began, Democratic and Republican legislators agreed in a recent public policy forum at MSC.

“The race was over by Labor Day,” said State Senator Gabriel Ambrosio, adding that Democrat Governor-elect Jim Florio cleverly adopted positions on issues—abortion and insurance—that the average New Jerseyan felt comfortable with. He thereby effectively put Courter all the way to the right, Ambrosio said.

Courter’s anti-abortion and hands-off-insurance stances served him well in the Republican primary election, but at the New Jersey state level, where there is no strong party loyalty, he needed to be much more liberal, Ambrosio said.

“We were a disaster in 1989. We tried to pass the baton from Kean to Courter and it was dropped,” said Assemblyman Bob Franks, who added that there was no cooperation between the Kean administration and the Courter campaign.

Courter never established credibility with the people of New Jersey and failed to succinctly answer why he wanted to be Governor, said Franks.

Dr. William Berin of the Political Science Department questioned the impact of negative campaigning on the race. Ambrosio said he is uncertain whether it affected the outcome of the race, explaining that it was easy to portray Courter negatively due to his incompetence.

Campus police records indicate between 20 and 30 cars were broken into since October, indicating that auto theft and the great number of cars broken into at MSC is becoming a danger for students and faculty. "No one parking lot is safe," said Sgt. Debbie Newcombe of MSC campus police.

"There is an average of about 40 cars stolen per year," said Newcombe. Since October, the majority of stolen cars have been recovered in Newark, she said, but Lyndhurst, Bridgewater, Paterson and Irvington recoveries lead campus police to believe there are several groups participating in the thefts.

Cars are stolen during the day as well as at night, according to police records. Cars have been stolen out of lot 13 while a parking attendant was present. "Whatever is in view inside the car is stolen," said Newcombe. Stereos, radar detectors, clothing, books, and, in a few cases, stuffed animals have been reported stolen.

Newcombe suggested having a parking attendant present to lead to convictions," she said. "We need students to be our eyes and report anyone who looks suspicious. While there are only four or five policemen on duty, there are over 8,000 students and there is only so much we can do. Everybody participating can help because we can't do it on our own."

Newcombe said campus police believe off campus juveniles were broken into since October, indicating that auto theft and the great number of cars broken into at MSC is becoming a danger for students and faculty. "No one parking lot is safe," said Sgt. Debbie Newcombe of MSC campus police.

Newcombe suggested having one or more prevention devices to reduce the risk of theft. Some methods she suggested included the armored collar, a shield which locks the steering wheel, and mock alarm control box, both of which are visible in the car and may discourage thieves. Other devices include the kill switch and fuel switch, which cut off the electrical system or fuel pump, making it virtually impossible to start the car, and the motion detector alarm, which activates a loud warning if the car is tampered with.

For thefts of personal belongings, Newcombe suggested keeping all personal property out of view, using false fronts to hide stereos, and keeping alarm deactivating switches out of view. "Shop around for alarms and ask how the alarm can be defeated," said Newcombe, adding that William Paterson is not as accessible as MSC.

Rutgers College in Newark, which has accessibility from numerous highways, was plagued last year by the car theft epidemic. According to Brian DeZavala, a student activist at Rutgers Newark, where the campus is patrolled by State Police, the number of incidents have decreased since the use of special task force was assigned to tackle the problem.

Newcombe said that she believes the car thefts vary and have no set pattern. To cut down on the amount of thefts, surveillance has been increased at times when campus police believe a lot would be struck. An unmarked vehicle has also been purchased to watch the parking lots.

The police's best tool against auto theft, though, is witnesses, according to Newcombe. "Witnesses have helped in the past to lead to convictions," she said. "We need students to be our eyes and report anyone who looks suspicious. While there are only four or five policemen on duty, there are over 8,000 students and there is only so much we can do. Everybody participating can help because we can't do it on our own."

Newcombe suggested keeping all personal property out of view to aid in preventing a theft. Newcombe said she believes that alarms will help in theft prevention to a certain extent. "Alarms will get people's attention," she said, adding however that cars are stolen even with alarms because students forget to turn them on.

Flag retirement ceremony held

By Richard E. Buckley, Jr.
Staff Writer

A crowd of approximately 25 people gathered on November 13 at 5:00 p.m. to watch the flag retirement ceremony at the flagpole adjacent to the student center.

The three-year-old flag had become quite weathered and was retired with a traditional ceremony in which the old flag was burned and replaced with a new one.

Pervert hangs out at lot 21

By Ruelda Dempster and Lizzette Perez

□ Two female students reported that a male was seen exposing himself in Lot 26 at 11:30 p.m. Nov. 20.
□ Two females reported being approached by an unidentified male outside of the library at 12:30 p.m. Nov. 12. The suspect made explicit sexual remarks and suggestions to them. The suspect fled toward Valley Road when the women spotted a Campus Police car and ran to it.
□ A bomb threat was called in to Bohn Hall on Nov. 10 at 1:40 a.m. The building was evacuated and nothing was found.
□ An '86 Chevy was stolen from Lot 17 between Nov. 10 and Nov. 13.
□ At the Clove Rd. Apts., between the hours of 4 a.m. and 10 a.m. someone forced open a ground floor window, entered the apartment, and burglarized it. A TV and two speakers totaling $450 were stolen.
□ An '84 Audi was stolen from Lot 22 on Nov. 13 between 10 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.
□ Four campus residents reported Nov. 22 around 12:30 a.m. they witnessed a male exposing himself in Lot 21, said Sgt. Debra Newcombe. When Campus police arrived at the scene, he was found standing next to a car getting dressed. The man, identified as an Upper Montclair resident, was arrested and charged with lewdness. He was arrested previously in Montclair on similar charges and his description was similar to the one seen two days earlier, police say. He is scheduled to appear in Little Falls court Dec. 6.
□ A concerned mother of an M.S.C. student Nov. 26 told police that her daughter's boyfriend has assaulted and threatened the student on several occasions at various locations on campus.
□ A dispute over parking led to an assault Nov. 27 at 11:00 a.m. in the meter Lot of College Hall. The complainant did not wish to press charges but asked that administrative action be taken.
□ An assistant manager of Blanton Hall observed someone driving an '83 Jeep at 1:10 a.m. Nov. 28 over a grassy area on the east side of Blanton, causing extensive damage to the cultivated areas. The driver, an MSC resident student, faces criminal charges and administrative action still pending.

Students from more than 28 surrounding high schools and community colleges crowded the Student Center Ballrooms at the fourth MSC Careers in Retailing Symposium on Mon., Nov. 13.

For a $5.00 fee, students learned about careers in retailing and met with executive personnel from companies such as Liz Claiborne, Lord & Taylor and Macy's. Attendees also lunched with retail executives and made appointments for job interviews.

MSC seniors from Delta Epsilon Chi Retailing Club and Epsilon Delta Epsilon Retail Honor Society were also there to give attendees a student's perspective of retailing.

"It was a great success," said Dr. Joseph C. Hecht, one of the coordinators of the symposium. Hecht said the "hidden goal" of the symposium was to attract prospective students to the college. "We want people to know about MSC," he said.

Florio's congressional record, which strongly supported New Jersey issues, his run for governor against Kean in 1981, and his vast exposure to electorate of New Jersey greatly contributed to his overwhelming win in which he got 66% of the New Jersey vote, according to Ambrosio.

Franks acknowledged the Democrat's widespread win in the 1989 New Jersey elections, but expressed his optimism for the future of Republicans in New Jersey. Franks said Cary Edwards, who was scheduled to attend the forum but was otherwise detained, would prove to be a formidable opponent if he decided to run for governor in the future.

Lisa Cavanaugh, a psychology major at MSC, expressed her concern regarding the rising costs of higher education, citing that most college students are graduating with debts of $7,000. Education was not widely debated in the campaign because both the Democrats and the Republicans agreed that education is a major priority, said Ambrosio. He added that New Jersey's education record over the past few years has been impressive. However, he said that inevitability, "Education costs are going to go up," and the only way to stem the cost is to put more money into the educational system.

Ambrosio commented that the Democrats are not liable for solving all of New Jersey's woes, namely the solid waste problem and the insurance costs, but added that the Florio Administration will need to be more involved than the Kean Administration. New Jersey needs a government that is active with hands-on abilities, he said.

"We want them to think about coming (here)."

The Careers in Retail Symposium, which stressed the link between education and business, was sponsored by the Retail Merchandising and Management Program of BEOSH and the Kinney Show Corporation.

Kathy Ahearn, personnel recruiter for Mandee and Annie Sez and a graduate of MSC, said, "There's a good mix of companies here. It gives students a choice."

Jessica Bieri, a freshman psychology major, recently conducted a survey of 500 MSC students to determine where the campus stands on the issue of abortion. The results were as follows:

- 5.2 percent (2.8 percent male, 2.4 percent female) — pro-life, regardless of circumstances
- 24.8 percent (13.2 percent male, 11.6 percent female) — pro-life, except in cases of rape, incest, or danger to the woman
- 68.8 percent (29.4 percent male, 39.4 percent female) — pro-choice
- 1.2 percent — undecided

Vote on Parking Issue

Did you know that under the proposed new Master Facilities Plan, parking lot 13 will be replaced by a new academic building? Did you also know that there is a proposal to build a new 600 space parking facility where the tennis courts presently are? The downside to the proposed parking facility is that it will cost $1.75 for the first 4 or 5 hours of parking and approximately 25 cents or more for subsequent hours. But why should MSC students pay for what has been free in the past? Basically, because the new parking facility will have to be self-financed. This means that the college will not be entitled to use any funds from the Bond Issue, passed last November, and will have to collect monies from either an increase in tuition or charge a fee for its use.

One thing to closely examine in deciding whether to increase tuition or charge a fee, is that if everyone’s tuition goes up, only the people who are able to get parking in this lot will be receiving the benefits of an increase in tuition, everyone else will still have to park in the Quarry lots.

If the new parking facility is not built, then lot 13, which currently represents 8 percent of student parking at MSC, will have been removed and no replacement parking space will be offered in its place. Thus, leaving all students to find parking in the Quarry or at Clove Road, which has the capacity to provide all students at MSC a parking spot.

Currently, there is much tension between students and administration, faculty and administration, and students and faculty over parking and parking availability at MSC. But what can be done? This campus is laid out in such a geographic manner that all major buildings are in a central location, while parking is located at the outermost points. A complete rebuilding of MSC would be the only solution to the parking dilemma.

Currently the Student Government Association and college administration are making efforts to get student input on the proposed parking facility. The SGA will be holding referendum voting on December 3rd thru the 7th and college administrators will be mailing out surveys to students.

The important thing to remember is that every student at MSC will be given the opportunity to vote on whether they want the proposed parking facility to be built or not.

There is no such thing as corporate loyalty in America today. An employee will move to another company if offered more cash. Does this mean that even our professional business class can be bought? I’m afraid so.

The 1980’s was a disappointment. We saw the nucleus of our society, the American family, evaporate. We saw the AIDS epidemic turn into a national crisis, the drug culture escalate to frightening heights. More homeless, more violence, more every day people going to shrinks, more prescriptions of valium being filled...the list could go on.

The question is not how did America start falling, but why? Is it money or the disintegration of values? The answer is both.

Prominently over the last five years, American society has gone downhill. What was once a me, my family, my country way, has turned into the me, myself, and I generation. We are looking out for number one.

Let’s start with our prominent figures we’ve seen over the last few years. And when I say “prominent,” I mean is who is in the limelight getting paid big dollars, not who is prominent in terms of intelligence and integrity.

Jessica Hahn, a church employee who slept with a married man which consequently gave her unearned fame and fortune. She used this scandal to her advantage by using her “reward” money (she was given hundreds of thousands of dollars to keep her mouth shut over the Jim Bakker scandal) in order to facilitate reconstruction and breast implants.

Bridget Neilson, another beauty, who once Sylvester Stallone’s wife has gotten breast implants which has elevated her career tremendously. America puts this female on a pedestal. They prove this by paying her millions of dollars. She was a nobody. She latched on to a millionaire, got breast implants, and now she is somebody.

The list could go on but since I am part of “America the Beautiful” where time is money, I must move on. So enough with the women, let’s look at a few of our men.

Ed O’Neil, the lead actor of one of America’s hottest sitcoms, Married...with Children, another star. He gets paid an exorbitant amount of money to glorify the untruth that it’s wonderful to be low class and crude.

We idolize the Yuppie of Wall Street. The “wanna be” of many young men. The trend is cut throat. Step on anyone and everyone as you climb the corporate ladder, unethical or not. The Yuppie wants to make money and impress his friends because he knows driving a Mercedes will get you further in America than having a Ph.D. in philosophy.

So here we see just a few of the trends in American society. Notice I don’t refer to the American “culture.” That is because there is none. As far as culture is concerned, the U.S. is as hollow as the Lincoln Tunnel.

Money is not culture. Children are raised today to take care of themselves and not to worry about anyone else. Me, myself and I.

And there you have it. The trends in America.

Who makes friends for all the right reasons? Who makes friends that can do them favors? Who looks for love without money? Who looks for money without love?

Who, as Voltaire put in Candide, “cultivate your own garden,” by striving for higher knowledge, a system of beliefs, morality, integrity, comradeship, philanthropy? Who strives for petty fame, powerful, superficial possessions, meaningless sex, an American Express Gold Card?

These are just a few questions America needs to start asking itself. Until people start rejecting flash over substance and start praising substance over flash, America will soon be another name on history’s list as a kingdom who rose and a kingdom who fell.
Computers for everyone

To the Editor:
I am writing in reference to the article "Students Denied Computer Access" in the November 9 issue of the Montclarion.

When Anthony DiPasquale asked what I thought about the computer lab at Richardson Hall's being open only to Math majors, I did indeed say he was unfair, and I (along with many others) still maintain this belief.

I also did mention that the Life Hall Computer Lab has, in fact, become bogged down with students, since very few labs are available on campus.

The article inaccurately quotes me, however, as saying that if the number of students increases to where we will be open only to students in the English Department.

What I did say was that I felt the closing of Richardson Hall to only math majors was unfair and that the decision was as unjustified as if, for example, the computer lab at Life Hall were to suddenly make an announcement that they were open only for English majors.

The computer lab here at Life Hall is open to students of all majors, regardless of their involvement with the English Department.

Exercise your student right to vote

To the Editor:
By now, you may have seen the walls plastered with the slogans, "Vote to Vote" or "Would you pay $1.75?" Well, during the week of December 3rd-7th, you will have the opportunity to answer these questions. Beginning December 3rd, the SGA will be holding student referendums to discuss important issues. The questions on this referendum are about issues that directly affect you as a student.

The first question asks if students should have a vote on the proposed $600 space parking garage.

Vote to vote: Currently, there is a proposal on this campus, awaiting final approval. The proposal is for a new all College Senate. This Senate will be composed of faculty, administration, non-teaching staff professionals, and students. This Senate will commission committees on this campus and have a great influence on the decisions that are made at the college. These decisions will affect you. Are you the main consumer of this college? You are the one most affected by the decisions made on campus. Therefore, you should have a say on what affects you. You pay to go here!

As calculations currently stand, there will be a $1.75 parking fee charged for approximately the first five hours of parking, then additional charges every hour thereafter.

Granted, you will not have to park in the garage, there are other spaces available. The question however, is if a garage is built - are you willing to pay for convenient parking in the garage? The decision is yours, so think about it.

A referendum such as this, really gives you a chance to be included in the major issues affecting you. There are people on this campus who are interested in your input, and who are in a position to advocate the student and that of students succeeding you. Students need to be informed of issues and to continue to protect their rights - so, please come out to support your student body and vote on December 3rd through the 7th.

Once again, as students...let's come together!

Mary Jane Linnehun
SGA President

Lorenzo: An ode to injustice

To the Editor:
The enclosed "Ode" expresses my feelings toward Frank Lorenzo, who owns Eastern Airlines and is giving the pilots and mechanics a raw deal.

Too few of us even know who Lorenzo is or that Eastern has been on strike since January. The Eastern planes that are flying have mostly new, inexperienced crew members and are not even safe to fly due to the lack of proper maintenance by qualified mechanics.

ODE TO INJUSTICE
The real Eastern Pilots still are not flying
They stay on strike to keep patrons from dying.
The owner, Lorenzo, cut service and pay.
These are considerations the public must weigh.
Achieved in a manner quite slick and contrived
Leads one to wonder where-from motives derived.
He owns Texas Air, then purchased Continental,
Outbidding for Eastern, bogging one's mental.

Now why would one purchase, then borrow and steal.
Giving faithful employees a horrible deal?
His actions hurt more than employees who buffer.
It's ethics and justice and safety that suffer!
Investigate Lorenzo! It's a duty!

VOTE TO VOTE

Currently there is a proposal on this campus, awaiting final approval. The proposal is for a new ALL COLLEGE SENATE. This Senate will be composed of faculty, administration, non-teaching professionals and students. This Senate will commission committees on this campus, and have a great influence on the decisions that are made in the college.

These decisions will affect you. You are the main consumer of this college. You are the one most affected by decisions made on campus. Therefore- you should have a say in what will affect you. You pay to go here. However, students do not have a vote in this College Senate as it stands. They are allowed to sit in on the Senate - but with no official input - with no vote. If you want students to have a vote in issues concerning students, then vote in support of students having a representational vote on the All College Senate.

It’s time that all components on this campus came together.

VOTE TO COME TOGETHER
Rush, the Christmas Album

By George Olchewski
Staff Writer

Rush has had a few changes, none of which have affected the quality of their music. First, they've turned their attentions to the Mercury/Polygram label. They've changed labels to Atlantic, under the imprint of Anthem Entertainment, RUSH's corporate name.

Second, the music style has changed again. Fans will remember the first change with their album, A Farewell to Kings. There was much more keyboard orientation and more refined lyrics. The next change came with Signals. We had more synthesizers and the more traditional rock and roll heartthrobs and the more traditional rockers.

The latest change with this album is the only way you'll be able to buy tickets or souvenirs at the show. MINI—NOTES II: As promised, I have my predictions for the season. My top pick is the band! I expect the album to convert non-Rush fans with. Its future looks bright and brilliant. This may be the album to convert non-Rush fans with. Its future looks great.

NOLAN’S NOTES

Hello, all. I hope you had a festive, fun and fattening Thanksgiving. Well, you may know by now that Bruce Springsteen has disbanded his E Street Band and has decided to go it alone. It seems that his ego has matched the size of his bank account. But Clarence Clemons, Presto, Bruce’s former saxophonist, has said that Springsteen split it with him down. He’s been working on his solo career since 1985 and is currently finishing a new album with his group, the Red Bank Rockers. Ironically, Clemons’ band is made up of all west coast musicians.

Bruce has been quoted as saying, “If I can make the average Rush fan a little embarrassed, Hold Your Fire was almost up to par. But on Presto, Neil really shines.”

Back to the music, Geddy Lee has been so buried in his synthesizer duties these past five years, that he hasn’t been playing some of his remarkable bass lines that have made him a press favorite. One particular bass riff that impressed me was the opener on the song “Scars.”

The overall feel of this album is earthy, probably due to the deep, resonating snare that Neil Peart uses throughout most of it. Also, it is due to the way the music was originally written. Peart said in a recent interview that the album was built from the basic instruments, and then the synthesized sounds were added.

Because this album is so harmonious and has a very pleasing quality, this will more than likely be a big album for Rush. The harmonious blending of Lee, Lifeson, and Peart may just give their second Top 40 hit (the first and only so far). Rush fans with. Its future looks great.

A Birthday Party shows a psychological weakening of his birthday being teased by “normal” people until he succumbs to utter insanity.

Mountain Language is twenty minutes long, and uses most of the same actors as the longer drama. Jean Stapleton (Edith, in the old TV series All In the Family) presides over the stage in the three-act A Birthday Party with outstanding conviction of character.

The personal overtones of the two plays are quite powerful; the details quite gory. Attending them could bring a fresh, new outlook on life, or could drag one into the doldrums of despair. Caution is advised to the sensitive of heart.

Criminally insatiable!

By Luis Carroz

A spectrum of tragedy and triumphal existence is unveiled in Beth Henley's Crimes of the Heart, a Mainstage Theatre Production directed by Joseph Patenaude.

This vibrant story of the three McGrath sisters of Hazelhurst examines a family under crisis haunted by a painful past and a not so promising present.

There are varying degrees in defining what a tragedy consists of and how it effects the general scheme of a person's existence. Crimes of the Heart expresses the pure devastation of these occurrences.

This is the conflict that Babe, Lenny and Meg face and its outcome leaves rich insight into the lives of people on an extraordinary level.

As Patenaude, director of last semester's Equus, explains, this production attempts to show "the eccentricities of Hazelhurst in an authentic way. [Crimes] is a loving portrait of the crazies the author grew up with and we hopefully depicted it accurately."

"The role of the youngest sister who shoots her husband was innovatively played by Dana Huttar. Huttar was continuously full of surprises as Babe due to her unique and highly intriguing approach to this disturbed character.

The motivation of her character's actions were sometimes vague, a flaw that may exist within the play itself. It would have been more informative and thus enlightening to delve more deeply into the reasons why she committed her heinous crime in conjunction to the ones that were already given.

Jennifer Biddle is sensational in her performance of cousin Chick. Biddle takes on the mannerisms of this vexing woman as if they were her own, but much to her credit. The true humanity of this character's barren life was displayed even through the layers of bitterness, a detail only a skillful actress like Biddle would be able to convey.

The gentle moments of Doc Porter played by Doug Bollinger enhanced the production even more so.

Director Patenaude made great staging choices within this terrific space. A tremendous job done by all."

The tough exterior of this young man has been more informative and well handled by Arlo. Arlo opened the second half with a perfect rendition of his "Motorcycle Song" and "Dark Hour." He also performed a moving version of "Gabriel's Mother's Hideaway" which he dedicated to a lifetime friend of his who recently passed away. Arlo closed the show with "Amazing Grace," but came back for an encore with a perfect rendition of his signature ballad "Highway in the Wind."

Throughout the show, Arlo held the audience in mysteries with his natural stories. Of all the performers I've seen, there's no doubt in my mind that he relates to the audience better than anyone else. He gave the feeling although he is on the stage singing, he is also part of the audience, feeling and thinking the exact same thoughts that you are.

Arlo Guthrie is truly a living legend and nobody should pass this opportunity to see him at least once. In the year of the big sixties' comebacks, he has been overshadowed. However, all of his fans know that he has always been here and that his spirit and his music will live on forever. He tells it best in his encore:

"The-fortune-teller tells me that I have somewhere to go Look and try to understand and wonder how she knows So I must be going now, I'm losing time, my friend Lookin' for a rainbow down this highway in the wind."

We're right behind you, Mr. Guthrie.

You know, it's got to be awkwardly hard to follow in Woody Guthrie's footsteps, but once again, his son Arlo has done it and proved that he, himself, is a brilliant folk singer, story-teller, and musician.

Arlo played to a nearly sold-out audience at Carnegie Hall in New York City on Nov. 24. The legendary 60's-bred folk singer was in top form. For more than two hours, he mesmerized the audience with his incredible musical ability and his extraordinary stories about life.

The show was broken into two halves with a fifteen minute intermission. Arlo opened the show with "Stealin'" and soon followed with his classic Woodstock song of drug adventures in "Comin' into Los Angeles." He then led the audience in a rousing version of "Garden Song." The first part of his show also included hits such as "The Motorcycle Song" and "Dark Hour." He also did an excellent version of one of his father's songs.

Arlo opened the second half with the song that made him a counter-culture hero, "Alice's Restaurant." Even more than twenty years after its release, the song remains a classic. He also performed a moving version of "Gabriel's Mother's Hideaway" which he dedicated to a long-time friend of his who recently passed away. Arlo closed the show with "Amazing Grace," but came back for an encore with a perfect rendition of his signature ballad "Highway in the Wind."

Skating on the thin ice of a new tour...

By R. Campos
Staff Writer

The lights went on after the opening band left the stage. "Praise the Lord," muttered my companion. It seems as if most opening bands, like, It Bites, who opened up for Jethro Tull on Nov. 9, are used to making the feature band seem that much better. Actually, after It Bites, anything would have been good. Unluckily, coming to this realization too late, we sat anxiously waiting for the feature band to come out on stage.

I had seen Jethro Tull on their last tour, but, unluckily, remember none if it, so I was excited to see what I had spent $25 for two years ago and missed.

As we sat waiting, we realized the importance of an intermission. It gives people a chance to go to the bathroom, relax, discuss what they have just seen and a chance to roll another joint and smoke the pot they had brought with them.

Jethro Tull has been playing together for more than 20 years. A good part of the audience at Brendan Byrne Arena were of this older generation: people who have been going to Tull concerts since their first album was released in 1967.

As I looked around, I noticed people losing themselves in an attempt to recapture their youth and kindle forgotten dreams. Businessmen forgetting themselves in this facade and then going home to preach to their children about the ill effects of drugs and alcohol. If their children could only have seen them there.

All these hypocrites were there to see the old stuff. This was the reason I was there too, and I felt uncomfortable having a common bond with them.

I had already heard Tull's new album, Rock Island, thanks to my roommate, another big Tull fan who was also somewhere in the Arena, who had bought the CD. It didn't come off the CD player from the time of its release and, as I recall, was still going when we left for the concert, so I was sort of familiar with the material.

The lights finally went out. The band came on stage.

This was one of the most amazing shows I've seen in a long time. Every now and then, a band comes along that play together so tightly, they blow you away. Jethro Tull is one such band. They played their entire new album but also incorporated just as many of their old songs into the concert. It was a beautiful experience.

Like many 1 mds today, the concert also included a screen show. Different pictures were shown behind the band during their performance. Their set also included numerous theatrics in between and during the songs. Some that come into mind are their "coal-powered organ" and men dressed all in white with white masks and white helmets with flashlights in them, similar to a miner's helmet. This succeeded in confusing the hell out of me and made me realize what a strange man Ian Anderson really is.

They played for about two hours without an intermission, but with an encore.

As we walked out of Byrne Arena into the cold midnight air, we opened the last two beers and looked around for MADD mothers and homicidal security guards. Once finished, we got into the car and my companion said, "So, what's next buddy?"

"I don't know," I replied. "I hear Pavarotti is playing at the Met."

"No, seriously, man..."

Look for the Pavarotti review in next week's Arts section.-Ed. Note

CLUB is Class I of the SGA
The Bottom Line

by Matt Wintner

Something had to give. Notre Dame, with Heisman candidate Tony Rice, took their 23 game winning streak into the Orange Bowl to face the Miami Hurricanes this past Saturday. The Canes, with a 31 home winning streak, were 60 against #1 ranked teams in the 80's. Plus, they had lost to the Irish in Miami this decade.

What happened? In the Superstition Bowl, the Irish left their front on South Bend, and the Orange Bowl jinx continued to hunt UM opposition. Canes 27 ND 10.

Despite the fact that Notre Dame was ranked #1 in the country, while Miami was 7th, it was Notre Dame that was a 1 1/2 point underdog. With the exception of the South Florida area, many fans, betting and non-betting alike, were favoring the Holtz' team. On November 25th, on a warm, breezy night in the Sunshine State, the men in Orange and Green, turned the Irish black and blue, crushed Notre Dame's Heisman dream, and reopened a door which reads: National Champs Enter Here.

In the second half, the Canes left hope for a national title alive when they opened the 3rd quarter with what simply be called "The Drive". With the score tied at 10, Miami held the ball for 10 minutes and 47 seconds. The drive was highlighted when Miami converted on a 3rd and 44 play when QB Craig Erickson connected with Randall Hill for 44 yards. From there, the defense clamped down and shut down the opposition for the remainder of the ball game.

The Notre Dame loss creates an ironic situation for both teams. Miami will travel to New York Bend, and the Orange Bowl jinx continued to haunt UM opposition. Canes 27 ND 10.

In order for either Sugar Bowl participants to have a shot at a national title, the defense must step up to par. Besides, the offensive players the Devils left on the ice had to stop scoring. One key was the team's ability to get goals back in the back of their minds. This was not something that had been done before. The Devils, with a sprained knee, players last season. And last season.

I'm sure Burke and Terreri will be prepared to free themselves, or be prepared to free the offense play to the Devils beat the Winnipeg Jets. It would be asking too much of Sports Channel to transmit the game back to the New Jersey area. Instead, Sports Channel choose to broadcast a soccer game from somewhere in Europe. I subscribe to Sports Channel to watch the Devils, Nets (as little as possible), and the Mets. Why are you (Sports Channel), showing us this garbage? Don't you think we (subscribers) pay for that? Sports Channel, getting the TV schedule that includes the full game. The TV broadcast team of Peter McNab and Gary Thorne call the Devils games on TV for Sports Channel. Don't touch that broadcast team, they are too informative. Nice job of keeping the fans informed and entertained. Sports Channel, don't do what The Mets did and release Thorne, one of the better play by play men in sports broadcasting.

The Devils record, just to get you up to date, is 11-10-3. At least no other choice was available to watch the games. I must tell you that the Devils beat the Winnipeg Jets. It would be asking too much of Sports Channel to transmit the game back to the New Jersey area. Instead, Sports Channel choose to broadcast a soccer game from somewhere in Europe. Who cares to watch some drunk fans from England trample each other? I'm not interested in watching that. If I wanted to watch soccer, all that I had to do is turn my dial to one of the remote foreign country channels; where soccer is the main event. It's not that I don't appreciate the game. I'm very proud that our U.S. soccer team has qualified for the World Cup (The first time in 40 years). But, I'll view the World Wide of Sports for free. Fifteen teams competed in this fall's flag football league sponsored by the Student Intramural and Leisure Council. The campus championship game, held on November 9 on Sprague Field, saw the Bushmen versus The Birds. In a close and exciting game, the Birds were victorious, with a 26 to 19 win.

Dan Walsh led the team in rushing with 1370 yards in 258 carries. He also was one of the leading tacklers with 137 tackles to lead the defense. Walsh was an 82 yard touchdown pass in the second quarter, setting up the final drive of the game for the Redhawks. Walsh was named the Most Valuable Player of the game for the Redhawks.

The Redhawks were held to just 2 first downs and (-54) yards rushing enroute to a 45-6 loss at the hands of the Union College Dutchman.

MSC was hampered by the early loss of QB Ed Baffige due to an injury. The only highlight of the game for the Redhawks was an 82 yard touchdown pass from Leon Kisowski to Amod Field. The defense was overwhelmed, giving up 506 yards in total offense to Union College.

Dan Walsh led the MSC offense with 24 yards rushing on 9 carries. Leon Kisowski threw for 114 yards and a touchdown. While the final game of the season was the dark spot of the year for MSC, the Redhawks played inspired football up to that point.

How many times do you remember seeing Paul Cioffi on the sidelines cheering the team on? How about Ed Baffige coming up big in the clutch, when Dan Walsh went down against Trenton State, Baffige fired as Amod Field went deep and everyone gasped in anticipation.

Dan Walsh was the ultimate warrior. Running around, and when necessary, over defenders. Walsh led the team in rushing with 1370 yards in 258 carries. He also was one of the leading scorers in the state with 16 touchdowns. These numbers are even more amazing considering that Dan missed two games due to an arm injury.

Jeff McGregor was the class of the team, making so many key blocks and receptions and getting very little credit for his hard work. Jeff provided two key runs against TSC that led to MSC's go ahead score.

Dan Walsh, gone but not forgotten
