Students still housed in Bohn Hall lounge

By Anthony DiPasquale
Staff Writer

Residence life reported this week that it has still been unable to find permanent accommodations for two students living in the seventh floor lounge of Bohn Hall, but expects to have permanent room assignments for them when they return from winter break.

"There has been an increase in the demand for housing of the female triples," said Jeff Rhoads and Tom Mohr, who said that they feel they deserve some compensation.

The demand for housing exceeded capacity this year at MSC and the dorm lounges were used as emergency accommodations in addition to the tripling of freshmen rooms. Since that time, practically all students living in the lounges have been relocated, and many of the female triples have been de-tripled.

"There has been an increase in the demand for housing of males this year," said Dr. Ruth Lugo-Alvarez, director of Residence Life. "We might not be able to assign everyone a room because they wanted their lounge back," said Rhoads. "We were blamed for having guests not signed in when strangers came into our room late at night, mistaking it for a lounge. People didn't know we were always coming in here and typing their papers or something. We didn't want to be touched on."

Martin added that both students have been in the hall since then, Martin added. "We understand that they needed some place to go and work."

Many of the residents on the seventh floor of Bohn have grievances about not having a lounge on their floor.

"We didn't have a place of our own where we could go and do homework or have study groups, but I'm not blaming the resident advisors."

Haunted house arrests await filing of complaints

By Michelle Keery
Staff Writer

Campus Police Sgt. Debra Newcombe said yesterday that the arrests of several men alleged to have been involved in the sexual harassment of two women at the Stone Hall Halloween Haunted House will be made only if complaints are filed against the arrests.

Newcombe had said last week that校区 police and the Office of Residence Life will be notified of the alleged incident to campus police.

The alleged assault took place in Bohn Hall sometime around 5 a.m. on Dec. 1, Director of Campus Police Philip Calitre said last week.

According to both Calitre and Dean of Students Edward Martin, the young woman was acquainted with Cino before the alleged attack.

Calitre said that Cino did not have to bypass any form of security in the residence hall where the alleged attack occurred.

Neither Calitre nor Martin would comment on the circumstances of the alleged assault, or whether alcohol or drugs were used by either student.

Although the case was dismissed, Cino will not return as a resident in Bohn Hall this semester, according to Martin.

"It is my perception that he will not be in the dorm for the remainder of the semester," he said. Cino was expelled from all residence halls after his arrest, Ruth Lugo-Alvarez, director of Residence Life, said last week.

Martin added that both students have continued to attend classes following the alleged attack.

Sexual assault case dismissed after woman withdraws charges

The case against a 19-year-old Bohn Hall man arrested and charged with sexually assaulting a fellow Bohn resident in the dorm on Dec. 1 was dismissed yesterday in Clifton Municipal Court.

At a 10 a.m. probable cause hearing, Judge Harry Fengya said that after speaking with the prosecutor, the woman withdrew charges.

The alleged victim could not be reached for comment, but Campus Police Sgt. Debra Newcombe said that after speaking with the prosecutor, the woman withdrew charges "through a personal decision."

Karenga discusses African-American cultural holiday

Creator of Kwanzaa stresses value of African-American history

By Jolleen Newby

Dr. Maulana Karenga visited the Montclair State College campus on Dec. 1 and released from the Clifton police department $7,500 bail after an unidentified caller contacted campus police about the incident, Clifton Police Lt. John Burke said last week.

The alleged assault took place in Bohn Hall sometime around 5 a.m. on Dec. 1, Director of Campus Police Philip Calitre said last week.

According to both Calitre and Dean of Students Edward Martin, the young woman was acquainted with Cino before the alleged attack. Martin refused to characterize the incident as "date rape" however.

Calitre said that Cino did not have to bypass any form of security in the residence hall

Osau and the African-American Studies Department invited Karenga to enlighten those unaware of Kwanzaa and its purpose: to introduce and reinforce seven basic values of African culture in order to help rebuild a sense of community in African-American people.

The seven values practiced during Kwanzaa are respect—(Umoja, in Swahili), self-determination (Kujichagulia), collective work and responsibility (Ujima), cooperative economics (Ujamaa), purpose (in restoring greatness to our society—Nia), creativity (Kuumba), and faith (Imani).

There are five basic principles which are the basis in this time of celebration of the African-American culture, he said. Inathering is a time of coming together to re-affirm common bonds. Reverence—to the Creator—involves thanksgiving for good harvest, life, and the anticipated good future. Third is commemoration, or the remembrance of ancestors, paying homage to those who walked before us, and "remembering and respecting history and culture creations."

Recommitment—to humaistic cultural ideals like respect—for nature, the elderly, cooperativeness, and ethical values; and, finally, "celebration: rejoicing in our history, past, present, and future. Also celebration of the good life, what African-Americans have achieved and in hope of what we will achieve," he said.

Above all, said Karenga, who is chair and associate professor of the Department of Black Studies at California State University, Long Beach, is the Disabled students offered options with new handbook

By Mike Walmsley
Sports Editor

MSC's Department of Reading and Educational Media last week released a handbook for students needing assistance with academic work.

The handbook, "Guide to Tutorial and Student Assistance Services," is published on campus by The Division of Intra-collegiate Academic Programs and Services.

The process of teaching students with learning disabilities was once a major concern here, and at most other higher education facilities in the United States, according to Joy Stone, chairperson of MSC's Department of Reading and Educational Media.

Stone said she viewed the book with mixed emotions. "While there is no doubt that a formal, visible program for students with learning disabilities would be effective, many students are helped by using the resources currently available," she said.

"Several years ago I was a member of a faculty committee which discussed the problems of learning disabled students at MSC. A plan was drawn up to address the situation. Unfortunately, financial constraints prevented implementation of the plan, and it has lain dormant since then," Stone said.

The Department of Reading and Educational Media can be reached at 893-5183, for more information.

Karenja stresses value of African-American history

Karenga brought up critical points in his lecture. He supports the idea that Africans have been the innovators of knowledge and that this is the basis for human civilization. He said it is necessary for every culture group to make a stand and make known their own contributions to the world. African-Americans should feel the need to take responsibility for themselves and for making our history known to the world.

According to Karenga, African-American history can be divided into three parts: the Classical period, an age of intellectual inventions such as math and science; "The holocaust of enslavement"; and the 1960's or civil rights era, when "blacks developed the model used around the world" by people struggling against social injustice.

One student asked about his opinion on restitution for slaves' descendants. Karenga replied that it is the right thing, adding that he believes the Native American should be the first to receive some form of restitution.

Karenga will lecture next at P.S. 262 in Brooklyn, Macon St. and Malcolm X Blvd., Dec. 27 at 6:30 p.m. More information is available at (718) 398-1729.

Mentor Program will accept non-minorities

By Susan McCallen, Correspondent

The Minority Student Mentor Program has begun accepting non-minority students this semester, according to Susan Turner, a graduate student and coordinator of the program.

Turner said that the current program replaced the Big Brother/Big Sister program in spring, 1988 and will soon be dropping the word "minority" from its title. Turner said the program has been open to everyone...no one is turned away. "The mentor program is designed to help incoming freshmen adjust to college life and promote a sense of community," Turner said. "One of the biggest problems facing the program is making students aware of the program so they can take advantage of it. Turner also said that the mentors are beginning to run out of mentors. A mentor may be anyone from the faculty, administration or staff who is willing to spend time with a student and act as a role model or just give support. According to Turner, each mentor has an average of two to three mentees and lately there is an "abundance of mentors."

“Friends, countrymen, lend me your ears...”

A farewell to Dr. McGee

By Sharon Bonick
Correspondent

Dr. Morris McGee will teach his last class today, ending nearly 40 years at MSC as a student, athlete, professor and advisor. The professor of English will retire January 31, 1990.

To many in the MSC community, he has become more than an educator and colleague — he has become a friend who will be sorely missed.

Through his innovative limericks and inspirational speeches, McGee has motivated many from administration to alumni.

He enlisted in World War II where he served in a Marine Infantry Officer Corps Fighter Squadron in the Pacific. During the Korean War he was a Marine Infantry Officer.

McGee was a member of MSC’s first undefeated, untied, football team in 1947. In 1949 he graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English.

He received his Masters in Irish Literature from New York University and has continued there through his Doctorate in Higher Education and English.

He has taught many of the English courses offered here on both the graduate and undergraduate level — Shakespeare, Irish Literature, Creative Writing and Drama.

Although he spends much of his time in a wheelchair today, McGee is in no way hindered by his handicap. “He has been persistently cheerful over many years and he lives life to its fullest intensity,” says Dr. George Petty of the English department.

Over the years, the many committees he has headed, founded and served on illustrate his character and superior style.

McGee was founder of the College Foundation, now a $2-million organization. He has also served on numerous campus committees including the College Committee and the Athletic Committee. He was even an advisor to The Montclarion years ago, “when The Montclarion took advice,” he says.

He is a prominent member of the Richard III Society, for which he was founding Scholarship Chairman. He served one year as American Branch Chairman.

The Winter 1990 issue of ARM, the newsletter for retired faculty and students, “cont. on p. 8”

“Rape involves "young women who are trying to be nice and who care," she says. "Nobody asks for it and nobody deserves it. Don’t be afraid to be rude and don’t be afraid to make a scene."

Ellison also believes that rape stems from a "mistaken view of you get control back."

Herman agrees. "Try to separate the act from yourself as a person. It heals you to see other areas of your life where you’re effective, autonomous."

Talking about the situation may be as difficult as deciding cont. on p. 8 faculty, will be the last issue edited by McGee.

McGee is devoted to his students, who appear devoted to him as well; several take him over again for other courses.

Mary Bowman, a four-time student of McGee’s, says she appreciates his sense of humor. He is known by his numerous jokes and interoffice anecdotes, which usually end up on the president’s desk.

“He’s the kindest, nicest man I have ever met. Through his sense of humor, he makes learning fun. He’s one in a million,” she says.

“He has affected me more than any other professor,” says Patrick McGilloway, a two-time student of McGee.

“I am fond of my students, for they have kept me young,” the 65-year-old professor says.

Young and appreciated by all. “He is a very giving man. He gives his knowledge, time and love of literature because of his love of people,” Miller says.

After his retirement, McGee plans to read and travel.

Rape: counseling mixed emotions

to report it, however. “On college campuses, people tend to take sides. It splits friends, and nasty rumors start.

“It’s your decision to report it or not. The worst part is that the rapist thinks he can get away with it, or he comes back. How would that make you feel?” Ellison asks.

“It takes a lot for a woman to go after a guy and say, ‘You did this to me!’ ” Herman says.

“You’re saying you deserve righteous, this will happen. To think she means yes, go find someone else.”

Even Ellison remains realistic. “As long as there are women who tease and men who feel self-righteous, this will happen. To the guys — if she says no and you think she means yes, go find someone else.”

While rape for the most part is a crime against women, men are victims, too. Ellison recalls that the first rape she dealt with at MSC was in 1977 when a male was raped by other men on his way to an exam.

But men become victims in other ways. “It devastates them that someone can do something like that,” Ellison says. Male students approached her this week in class about the Bohn Hall incident they read about in the paper. “They were ashamed,” she says.

Even though Ellison says the criminal justice system has gotten much better in rape cases, Herman feels there is still a way to go.

“I don’t think the world is ready to accept this thing as a crime except in the extreme,” she says.

Even Ellison remains realistic. “As long as there are women who tease and men who feel self-righteous, this will happen. To the guys — if she says no and you think she means yes, go find someone else.”

Turn back the clock...
A past glance before 1990

By Toni McLaughlin

The countdown begins!
On Dec. 31, we will not only be celebrating the start of a new year, but also the beginning of a new decade.

Our generation, as well as those before us, has witnessed an entourage of events — political, economical, and social.
We have cheered the victories, and cried at the defeats of our appointed heroes, whether they be Phil Simms or Ronald Reagan.

As we enter 1990 with all of our resolutions and “fresh start” attitudes, let’s take a look at what events were taking place 10 years ago at the turn of the 70’s.

—U.S. population was approximately 226.5 million. It has risen 8% in the past 8 years to 244.6 million.
—At MSC, in-state tuition was $25.00 per credit. Out-of-state tuition was $45.00 per credit. Totals per credit including fees were $53.20 for an out-of-state student and $33.00 for an in-state student.
—Ronald W. Reagan and George Bush were elected as president and vice-president, defeating Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale.
—Two Soviet cosmonauts returned to Earth from the Salyut 6 space station after spending a record 184 days (6 months) in orbit.
—U.S. spacecraft Voyager I flew past the planet Saturn and made the first close study of Titan (Saturn’s largest moon), passing within 4,630 km of its surface. Six new moons were discovered on this voyage.
—The Museum of Modern Art in New York showed “Pablo Picasso: A Retrospective.” It is the first time the almost 1,000 items were exhibited together.
—Dan Rather was appointed by CBS-TV to succeed Walter Cronkite as chief anchorman, following Cronkite’s retirement in 1981.
—Mt. St. Helens, the volcano in Washington State, erupted and continued to erupt intermittently throughout the year.
—Sony Walkman I was the audio success of the year, the first of its kind to be introduced.
—John Lennon of the Beatles was assassinated by Mark David Chapman on Dec. 8, 1980. He was 40 years old.
—In sports, Genuine Risk became the second female horse in history to win the Kentucky Derby.
—The Pittsburg Steelers defeated the L. A. Rams 13 - 19 in Super Bowl XIV. The game was played at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.
—The Philadelphia Phillies won the World Series, defeating the Kansas City Royals.
—The Winter Olympics were held in Lake Placid, NY. First place: East Germany. Second U.S.S.R. Third: U.S.A.
—The Summer Olympics were held in Moscow. Several countries including the U.S. boycotted the games to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

“We are sure that this party will be a welcome relief from finals, and a great way to finish off the semester. Everyone is invited; it’s not solely for the weekend students,” she adds.

Whether you have weekend classes or you simply live on campus and sometimes need extra activities, the association offers many possibilities. Frustration aside, sometimes it’s better to take a chance and work for the weekend.

Don't the holidays always seem to show up at just the right time? The mad crunch of exams, papers, presentations and shopping are justly rewarded with presents and partying during the week of Christmas, Hanukkah and New Year's. Aaahhh, relaxation at last.

But while you're enjoying your well-earned break, keep in mind that partying hard can be costly. If you're caught driving drunk in New Jersey, they'll levy an extra $1,000 fine on you for just three years.

If you're caught driving drunk in New Jersey, they'll automatically pull your licence for six months, slap you with a $250.00 fine and make you pay an extra $1,000.00 on your insurance for three years. Can you afford to party that hard?

As we enter into the last month of 1989, we are guaranteed to be flooded with the annual "Year in ..." lists. You know what I mean. The Year in Music, the Year in Movies, and the Year in Sports, just to name a few.

Well, since we are also entering the holiest month of the year (December), I decided to spice up the "Year in ..." lists with my own. So here it is, the first annual Year in Religion list.

1. What better way to start off the Year in Religion than with religion in our own country. In 1989, Jim Bakker taught us that religion can be a commodity by defrauding his ministry of $3.7 million dollars. Bakker was a modern-day Rasputin, using his so-called connections with God to live the high life. Jim is presently doing time.

2. Also in the U.S. in '89, anti-Semitism increased drastically after the decrease over the last few years. White Christian supremacists showed us their artistic ability by attempting to spray paint as many different types of swastikas as they could on Jewish buildings and synagogues. I thought Jesus taught us to love our neighbor as ourselves, not to bequeath upon our children a heritage of hate.

3. In 1989, once again, Ireland became the battleground between the Catholics and the Protestants. With car bombs, fire bombs, stabbings, and shootouts, even the leprechauns have emigrated. So much for the luck of the Irish.

4. Ah yes, Lebanon. For 15 years, the undisputed chief battleground for the undeclared war between the Judeo-Christians and the Moslems. In 1989, the battle continued with Christian General Michael Aoun swearing never to leave the U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, resulting in his evacuation. Who's right? Who's wrong? Who cares?

5. In Poland this year, the Jews and the Catholics had a tasteless, shameful, and pathetic squabble over the site of a Catholic convent on the periphery of the Auschwitz death camp. Wouldn't it seem logical that the two groups of people who suffered the most in this camp could work out a peaceful solution? Of course not. Instead, Adolf got the last laugh.

6. The turmoil of religion even swept into literature in 1989. Writer Salman Rushdie deeply offended the Islamic faith in his book The Satanic Verses by saying that Mohammed has to stop and ask for directions on his flight from Mecca to Medina or something as equally blasphemous. What matters most, though, is that the Ayatollah Khomeini (God rest his soul...oops...I mean Allah rest his soul) wanted Rushdie's head served for dinner at the royal palace.

7. The Year in Religion closes this year with the pinnacle of holiness, the Israeli occupied territories. The Jews and the Arabs are presently involved in Round 300,000 with no sign of slowing down. Israel wants security land and The Palestians want a homeland. What happens when you combine the two? You get no Israeli security and no Palestinian homeland, but you do get an entry in the Year in Religion.

Well, that's folks "1989 - The Year in Religion". What more needs to be said? I hope you enjoyed it and I hope to see you all here next year when once again we look back on the ever-present, ever-powerful, and ever-dangerous phenomenon called the holiday season. Have a happy holiday and peace to everyone.

Wishing you all a safe & happy holiday season!! - Sarah & Maggie

If I catch you drinkin' and drivin', this lump of coal ain't just gonna goin' in your stocking, kiddo!
Lack of Funds Prohibits Program for Learning Disabled Students

To the Editor:

Your editorial of November 2 discussed a problem about which many faculty members at MSC have been concerned. Many of us agree that special help should be available on campus for students with learning disabilities. Several years ago I was a member of a faculty committee which discussed the problems of learning disabled students at MSC; a plan was drawn up to address this situation. Unfortunately, financial constraints prevented implementation of the plan, and it has lain dormant since then. Your editorial is a timely reminder that the problem remains. I would like to advise your readers that there is a handbook, Guide to Tutorial and Student Assistance Services, published by the Division of Intra-Collegiate Academic Programs, describing various programs and services on our campus for students requiring assistance with their academic work. While there is no doubt that a formal, visible, program for students with learning disabilities would be effective, many students are helped by using the resources currently available. I congratulate you on your editorial and hope that continued interest on the part of the student body will keep the issue before the administration so that appropriate measures can be taken soon.

Grad gives helpful hints

To the Editor:

Last night, as I attended the play at my Alma Mater, I came upon copies of the Montclarion. For old time’s sake, I took one home and read it. It certainly was enlightening. Things surely have changed since my day, when bus schedules were problems, not parking spaces! All in all, I did enjoy reading “what it’s all about today.” To my dismay, however, I found that the complacency regarding correct usage of our English language which we find all around us, has crept onto the editorial page of the college newspaper. That is surely the last place it should surface! If the writers are not grammarians, how about proofreaders? I am looking forward to reading more “good news.”

Opera Fan Speaks Out

To the Editor:

R. Campos’ piece in the December 8 issue on Pavarotti caught the eye of this fan of the tenor. I can’t help but respond. There are some people who like music in many, if not all, of its manifestations, even as opera. To intimate that these people are snobs or lushes is unfair and contrary to the open-mindedness which the author exhibited in attending Verdi’s Rigoletto in the first place. Congratulations to Mr. Campos in attempting to broaden his horizons beyond the local sports arenas – that’s what college is all about. And congratulations in bringing the experience to the Montclarion’s readership. Now Mr. Campos must take a further step and attempt to accept and understand it: the lure of the human voice in song; the power and drama of music; the thrilling experience of witnessing art executed by masters. That’s what the opera-goer is after. Not the social scene of the intermission.

Remember the intermission is planned that the artist may relax his instrument and the stage crew may change the sets. When Mr. Campos looks beneath the surface, I’m sure he will be rewarded with the joy of discovery. I hope he tries it again.

An interview...

A couple of hours before the concert, I was able to talk to Bad English guitarist Neil Schon.

□JN: How's it going so far?
□NS: So far it's going great! We just got back from Japan and we're starting to tour the U.S...We haven't gotten to all the major markets, like New York, yet, but we're playing around there and we're planning to come back to New York probably after Christmas. We might be doing a tour in Canada and Europe, too. Everything's up in the air right now.

□JN: What was it like working with the guys in Journey? What caused the split?
□NS: Well, you know. It was and then it wasn't. We made a lot of good music and a lot of good records. Then people started going in different directions after being together for 13 years...If you don't move together, then it's time to move on. That's more or less what happened. We sat down and some people said, "I wanna go here." Others said, "I wanna go here..." So we said, "See ya.

□JN: Was it a friendly split?
□NS: It was actually...I wasn't thrilled with the direction that the band was taking with the last album. The songs were good. I just didn't care for the production. They took all the guitar out of it for me and sort of, took the fun out of it. There were songs where I got to play a little blues and R&B, like "Til Be Alright Without You." I would've liked to do a whole album like that rather than mixing it up and not have the rock 'n' roll really rocking.

□JN: On your solo album, didn't you play a more bluesy style...is that you wanted?
□NS: I didn't play "ritual" blues. I didn't know exactly what I was doing when I did it. When I go into the studio, I start from scratch. I go in pretty unprepared and play what's off the top of my head...It turned out to be classical, concert-oriented blues material, sort of, Pink Floyd-ish.

□JN: What's the musical family tree?
□NS: John Waite, Jonathan Cain, and Ricky Phillips were all in the Babys. Then, Jon (Cain) joined Journey.

□JN: What brought all of you together?
□NS: It wasn't planned. John Waite and Jon Cain had spoken about putting a band together. Then, Rick Phillips came into the picture. They called me up because they were looking for a guitar player for some demo tapes...I co-wrote a few new songs.

I thought there was something there, but I wasn't finished with my solo album, and so I told them I needed a little more time. They wanted to put it together at that moment. They went to L.A. looking for guitarists and drummers. They called me back three weeks later...They hadn't found anyone yet and asked if I'd like to come down. I had met our drummer Deen (Castronovo) and asked if they still needed a drummer. I brought him down and we just jumped into it.

□JN: Is this a "legitimate" group? I mean, do you plan to stay together instead of making this a project piece, like Power Station?
□NS: We plan on being around for awhile because we really enjoy what we're doing together. We get along well, too, which is something you don't find.

□JN: In Journey, you said that everyone started to lose focus. Is it different here?
□NS: Yes, we're more focused in this band than we were in Journey. It was more or less what we were...We do one thing the best and that's sounding like Bad English.

□JN: To go back on a question and to another extreme, since you're not like Power Station, will you be like Fleetwood Mac, in which you'll record together, then go solo, then perform as a group again?
□NS: Not right now. Everyone's pretty well committed. This is like number one to me...and everyone else in the band. I could see people drifting off, maybe, and doing solo projects three years down the line when we get a break. But right now, we've been too busy...We want to be internationally known, and that's going to take a lot of work.

□JN: Where does the name come from?
□NS: We used to play pool in between takes in the studio...We were studying a book about right English (English is a back spin used put on a cue ball so the player can set up the next shot), left English, and right and wrong English. I just played with bad English. The ball would not get in the direction it was supposed to. They said, "You've got bad English" and it, sort of stuck.

□JN: When you heard yourselves, did you think, "Yeah, that's it"?
□NS: Yeah, to me. Relatives of mine had doubts about it because...it didn't sound like Journey...My mother was glad I proved her wrong...Otherwise, I wouldn't be here...I would've put my own band together instead.

□JN: How do you feel about the seemingly mandatory video that must accompany a single?
□NS: They're not the most fun thing to make because it's a lot of "hurry up and wait." I enjoy making them and watching them when they're done. It's a must these days. It's much broader than radio.

I thanked Mr. Schon for the interview and wished him good luck for both MSC's performance and the future. I later realized that the talent surpassed the need for any luck.

Bad is better the second time around

This sleepy, little, suitcase college got just what it deserved on December 12, a good dose of R'n'R (Rock & Roll). Bad English and Saraya slammed into MSC like Hurricane Hugo into the Carolinas.

Saraya opened with a show that was somewhat impressive. Reminiscent of old Heart, Joan Jett, and Vixen (with more talent), Saraya put on a show that was raw and aggressive. If you watch closely, the female lead singer moves like Aerosmith's Steve Tyler. With another album or two under their belt, Saraya will soon be headlining, and judging from Tuesday's performance, that may be real soon.

Bad English's "Best of What I Got" stands as both the concert and album opener, and they gave the sold-out crowd just that. John Waite and the boys played music that was straight forward rock and roll. The audience was on their feet throughout most of the night.

Waite surprised the crowd by performing "Missing You," his chart topper from 1984, acoustically with Neil Schon and Jonathan Cain.

As people filed from the auditorium, no complaints were heard, meaning that a good time was had by all. It seems that everything Class One Concerts does lately is bad. First, Big Audio Dynamite (B.A.D.) and, most recently, Bad English. But bad, in this case, means pretty good. Keep up the work!

BARRY DRAKE'S multimedia presentation of "60's Rock: When The Music Mattered" gave MSC students a chance to reflect on the various movements of rock in the '60's. It was held on Wednesday, December 6th, in the Student Center Ballroom, and was free.

Slides, incense, and taped music accompanied Drake's animated talk to enhance the audience experience. The most popular songs of the decade were played, such as "The Doo Run" by the Animals, "Hey, Hey, My My" by Alice Cooper, "Good To Be Wild" by Wilson Pickett, "I Got You, Babe," the Doors, "Light My Fire," the Monkees "Daydream Believer," and "Proud Mary" by Creedence Clearwater Revival.

Especially important to the ideologies of the era were "Peace and Love," as well as the folk/rock festivals fostering an increased awareness of the history of music and society. The most powerful were played, such as "The Doo Run" by the Animals, "Hey, Hey, My My" by Alice Cooper, "Good To Be Wild" by Wilson Pickett, "I Got You, Babe," the Doors, "Light My Fire," the Monkees "Daydream Believer," and "Proud Mary" by Creedence Clearwater Revival.

Correction: Due to an act of God, in last week's Pavarotti review -"The Art of the Voice," we mentioned that the opera diva would be performing at the Overture Center in Milwaukee. The opera house has since canceled the performance due to weather conditions. We apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused.

Rent actually...
The Bottom Line

Mark Langston, five years - 16 million. Mark Davis, four years - 13 million. Bryn Smith, three years - 6.4 million. Bryn who? Pascaual Perez, three years - over 5 million. Are you serious? Did these guys die and go to heaven?

Free agency is fine. Hey, there is really nothing wrong with it if you think about it. After all, it makes a good player rich and a great player disgustingly rich.

Was Langston really worth over $3 million a year guaranteed? Wasn't this the same guy who was traded to Montreal in hopes of winning a pennant and didn't meet up to those expectations? If I'm not mistaken, the Expos and Langston did fine for a while, then they faded like a pig in a foot race with Carl Lewis. This is not an effort to take anything away from Langston, but a guy who will start about 35 games per year worth 3 million dollars annually?

How about Mark Davis? Give him and his agent credit, he is getting more money from the Royals than Langston is from California. The Royals better hope that his .44 saves in 1989 was no fluke — otherwise, the Davis deal is a royal bust! Davis is a good reliever, but one tremendous year shouldn't establish a player as the premier, all-around threat in baseball, that he will sell hot dogs, beer, yearbooks, and scorecards on the following year.

The only way Davis should have gotten that $3 million annually. The only way Davis should be on the phone with his agent negotiating for a new contract calling for over $3 million annually. The only way is if Davis had given to the ... Game (2-0) early on.

Coach Cunniff should continue to work his team as usual, but should emphasize that good teams work their way out of slumps. By doing this, teams become teams. They grow together through the tough times and work for the more successful times. When this success is reached, that's where you find team character, not just by putting people on the ice and saying, "This is our team and this is how we win." No, it doesn't work that way.

First Solution: Continue to go with the players and system that's seen you lose 5 of 6 games. Stay with Burke in net and believe he'll work it out and regain some much needed confidence. We know he has the ability.

The most encouraging factor to consider in this solution is that the Devils playing well enough to win these games? And the answer is yes, but the results say no.

The Devils are outplaying, outshooting, and checking most of the teams that they're losing to, with one exception in the loss to Hartford (7-3) this past Saturday night. They led that game (2-0) early on.

Second Solution: Give Sean Burke a slight break. Don't take him out of the games completely, but give Terreri a few starts or better yet, bring Rolie "The Goalie" Melanson up from the minor leagues and be ready if you lose 5 of 6 games.

That's the answer, right?

Don't start to lose hope in this Devils team yet. The season is young, and every team has to endure a slump at one point in the long season. Let's hope that this terrible stretch of losing, the Devils and Sean Burke are experiencing, will turn around soon.

I've been trying to contemplate some logical solutions to this losing slide. And I compiled a few:

I've been trying to contemplate some logical solutions to this losing slide. And I compiled a few:

First Solution: Continue to go with the players and system that's seen you lose 5 of 6 games. Stay with Burke in net and believe he'll work it out and regain some much needed confidence. We know he has the ability.

Second Solution: Give Sean Burke a slight break. Don't take him out of the games completely, but give Terreri a few starts or better yet, bring Rolie "The Goalie" Melanson up from the minor leagues and be ready if you lose 5 of 6 games.

Don't start to lose hope in this Devils team yet. The season is young, and every team has to endure a slump at one point in the long season. Let's hope that this terrible stretch of losing, the Devils and Sean Burke are experiencing, will turn around soon.

MSC NEWS

With all fairness to MSC basketball Coach Ollie Gelston, an article published in the Friday, December 8 issue criticized Gelston's lack of good recruiting. We, at the sports department of The Montclarion, want to retract this unresearched comment. We now realize that Coach Gelston's recruiting standards are much more beneficial to the student athlete in general. And not just geared towards winning basketball games. We humbly apologize and want Coach Gelston to know that we were hasty in our observation concerning recruiting; education over wins is welcomed.

BASKETBALL ACTION

There was a shoot-out at Panzer Gym on December 11th, a three-point shoot-out sponsored by Campus Recreation and the Student Intramural and Leisure Council. Thirty participants tried to sink 25 shots from around the three-point circle. After the first round, the top 10 scorers progressed to the finals, with cumulative baskets scored determining the winner.

A score of eleven in the first round was needed to progress to the finals. The top five scorers received prizes. Fifth Place: Rich Kirschinski, 28th Place: Kevin Barnet, 3rd Place: Craig Herbert, 1st Place: Paul Doran 33, Second Place: Scott Shepherd, 34, and in First Place: Craig Herbert with 35 points.

The top score in one round was twenty points, achieved by Craig Herbert in the first round. Following him was Paul Doran, with 19 points in the finals round.

FREE THROW CONTEST

A free throw contest was held in conjunction with the shoot-out, with participants attempting 10 shots from the free throw line. Anyone scoring 7 or more out of ten in the first round progressed to round two. Five players were alive after round two; Scott Shepherd, Mark Silverman, Craig Herbert, Keith Herbert, and Jason Cupo. In the finals round, both Scott Shepherd and Craig Herbert made 10 out of 10 to force a shoot-out. Scott Shepherd won this, 5 baskets to 4.

Congratulations to all hoosiers.

VOLLEYBALL ACTION

December 6, 1989.

In a tense and action-packed final match, The Zoo beat Penthouse Pose to win the SILC Volleyball Intramurals Championship. The final match was best out of 5 competition, with Penthouse coming on strong and winning the first game. The Zoo won games two and three, with the fourth game going to Penthouse. The fifth and final game was won by the Zoo, 15 to 13. Hot competition! Congratulations to The Zoo Cohesion, Derrick, Doug Fresh, Junior, Dan Rob, Julio, Spatch, Snatch, and Zippy.

December 4, 1989.

In Co-Rec Volleyball action, The Trainers captured the title after defeating SILC in the championship match on December 4, 1989. The Trainers won the best of 3 match. Congratulations to Nip, Penny, John Davis, Al, Mike, Tee, and Chris.

The MSC women's basketball team continued their fine play this week with three more overpowering victories. Obviously complacency wasn't a problem after winning the Dial Classic two weeks ago. Against Stockton State, MSC won in a low-scoring affair 41-27. The low scoring of Stockton State could be attributed to their inability to rebound as MSC controlled the boards, 52-31. MSC's Carolyn Savio and Kim Wilson combined for 29 rebounds alone, with 16 and 13 respectively.

On the offensive side, it was Savio and Wilson as well, each scoring 10 points apiece as The Red Hawks displayed a well-balanced offensive attack with Lori Patrick chipping in with six points for the winners also.

Stockton State was led by Linda Long as she played a fine all-around game, scoring 10 points, adding seven rebounds and seven steals.

On Saturday, MSC traveled to play Rutgers-Camden and came away with a 54-40 victory. Once again, the Red Hawks were well balanced on the scoring end. The two forwards, Savio and Wilson, posted their usual solid numbers. Savio's line read 11 points, 18 rebounds. Wilson hit for 12 points and grabbed eight boards to help add to the victory.

Although led by the dynamic duo, MSC's depth and ability to play as a team has given them the extra edge they needed to stay competitive. In this game, it was shown by center Cathy Made- lone as she netted 10 points, and Lori Patrick scored eight to aid the cause. Trudy Mofatt gave a fine all-around performance, scoring eight points to go with four rebounds and four steals.

The Red Hawks' next prey was Jersey City State College as JCS visited Panzer Gym on Tuesday night. MSC exploded for an 80-53 win.

This game was over in the first half as MSC went into the locker room with a 36-12 edge. The story of this game was Kim Wilson. Wilson dominated both ends of the floor as she scored 28 points on 11-21 shooting and swiped 19 rebounds, 12 on the offensive end. Add four blocks and five steals, and it can be safely said Wilson had a "career night," which for her seems to be commonplace this year.

Carolyn Savio had a 15-point, 16-rebound performance, putting new meaning into the word consistent, as she and Wilson continue to terrorize their opponents on both ends of the court. Lori Patrick scored 14 points of her own to continue MSC's offensive assault of JCS.

MSC's record now stands at 8-1 after a perfect 3-0 week, but will face a tough William Paterson College team at WPC on Saturday at 2:00. MSC will be fighting for first place in the conference, as WPC is undefeated and atop the NJAC.
