MSC may hike tuition

By Liz Daly

Tuition costs at MSC could increase by 15 percent this Fall semester due to an 11 percent reduction in state funding, said Thomas Auch, the college's vice president of administration and finance.

The proposed tuition and fees increase, which will be voted on by the Board of Trustees May 10, is one of four ways the administration hopes to compensate for Gov. James Florio's $105 million funding cut in state higher education in the 1990-91 budget.

Other possible steps MSC will attempt to take to cope with the budget cut include hiring freezes and delays, use of the college's emergency reserves, and reductions in other operating costs.

Auch said he does not anticipate any major program cutbacks here due to the budget shortfall. He did say that although existing programs at MSC will not be discontinued, "we do not anticipate a good deal of growth" of new programs and improvements on campus next year.

A campus lighting upgrade program, devised to provide a more secure working and learning environment, and additional computers for the economics lab, were two of the anticipated programs cut due to the state cutbacks.

Dr. Catherine Becker, president of AFT Local 1904 and faculty union representative, said she does not anticipate faculty layoffs here as a result of cutbacks. "The faculty is the most important resource for the student," Becker said.

At a recent meeting with Auch and other college administrators, SGA President Mary Jane Linnehan said that although students can no longer remain silent in issues affecting them, "we do not want to be adversaries with the administration." Linnehan suggested that administration and students work together toward a possible solution.

The current tuition for a New Jersey resident undergraduate is $53 per credit. The proposed increase would raise that to $61 per credit. An out-of-state undergraduate, now paying $80 per credit, would pay $92 per credit.

Reid inaugural a colorful gala celebration

Vowing to take Montclair State College on a "breath taking journey into the 21st century," Dr. Irvin D. Reid was sworn in as the seventh president of the college last Friday.

"The challenge of higher education today is to help our citizens understand those forces which are changing their lives but not necessarily altering their hearts," Montclair we accept this challenge through offering the highest quality undergraduate education," said Reid.

The two day festivities surrounding the inauguration were capped by a procession which consisted of Montclair State faculty and staff as well as 200 delegates, representing colleges and universities from across the country.

The tone displayed by the audience, guests, and especially Dr. Reid was positive as can be seen as Reed stated, "Blessed with a superb faculty, a choice location, one of the most comprehensive undergraduate programs in the region and graduate programs which are growing in both quantity and quality, Montclair is poised on the threshold of excellence."

Reid holds a Ph.D. and master's degree in business and applied economics from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He earned a bachelor's degree and another master's, both in experimental psychology, from Howard University. He also studied at Howard's University Institute for Educational Management, conducted for senior university administrators by the Graduate Schools of Education and Business.

When asked about how Reid felt about the inaugural ceremony he said, "This was a perfect ending to a truly wonderful inauguration. The symposium, which took place April 5, had an academic tone followed by a night of international music, mime and mixed media which brought out the talent of the faculty and students involved."

The proposed 11 percent budget cut by the state was also addressed by Reid as he said, "The state budget suggests to some that we should trim our sails yet to drop anchor and dwell in a seemingly safe harbor world be a grave error."

The tone of world opinion on events in South Africa and Lithuania. Global education is a practical necessity."

Graduate students' increase next year would result in $122 per credit. Out-of-state graduate students currently pay $133 per credit. Next year, the proposed increase will result in $153 per credit, if the measure is passed by the board.

50 MSC students march against racism

By Carl Chase
News Editor

With banners and loud chants, 50 MSC students Sunday joined a march of 1,000 through Newark to protest New Jersey’s rising rate of bias violence and to remember Dr. Martin Luther King 22 years after his death.

Members of MSC’s predominantly black United Greek Council and Students Toward A New Direction (STAND) assembled before the Student Center and then drove to join MSC’s other protestors downtown, there forming a loose motorcade of 100 people to the Newark school district’s multi-cultural curriculum improvement.

“The United States is built on racial violence, from the Native American and African slaves to white indentured servants. Hitler’s Nazi racial laws were adapted from the black codes of the South, directly," he said. "Our foreign policy on Nicaragua, Grenada... makes the role models for these (bias crimes) like the one in Bensonhurst (New York).”

Monteclair’s branch of the Rainbow Coalition, a national private group of political activists, led the campaign to elect Jesse Jackson in 1984 and 1988. Chanting slogans and waving placards and banners, the marchers then filled the east-bound lane of Market Street, picking up pedestrians along the way. After turning onto Broad Street about 4:30, they found the City Hall auditorium closed to them and decided to rally there until dark.

Later, organizers said it was Newark Mayor Sharpe James’ decision that the demonstration was a political group and therefore use of the City Hall auditorium would be inappropriate. The rally that followed featured Amiri (Ahi) Baraka Jr. and other college students, Newark Councilman Donald Tucker, several Rainbow Coalition members and other activists.

There, with students from Rutgers-Newark, Duke University and half a dozen other schools, MSC students rallied to the address of Amiri Baraka, a poet and author, who said that in order to stop racist violence, “We must stop anti-semitic and anti-black media, and curricula taught throughout the United States.” Baraka was recently hired as a consultant for the Newark school district’s multicultural curriculum improvement.

“The United States is built on racial violence, from the Native American and African slaves to white indentured servants. Hitler’s Nazi racial laws were adapted from the black codes of the South, directly,” he said. “Our foreign policy on Nicaragua, Grenada... makes the role models for these (bias crimes) like the one in Bensonhurst (New York).”

CPR mobilizes march participants

Racism forum occurs before march

By Caroline Ignoniello
Correspondent

The Coalition for People’s Rights sponsored a racism forum Wednesday, April 4, to mobilize participants for the Rainbow Coalition’s anti-racism march on Sunday, April 8, in Newark.

CPR also used the forum to address political issues and racism existing on campus. The student-based social awareness group is best known for its "racist and imperialist activities." The two-hour forum began at 7 p.m. in Russ Hall’s Kops Lounge with a large audience.

 Talks were conducted by three speakers followed by a question/answer and discussion period. CPR member Angel Mosso served as moderator.

Rich Ariza, a postal worker from the Socialist Worker’s Party, discussed Malcolm X’s struggle and the Cuban Revolution as they tied in with today.

Kinoy cited an anti-affirmative action decision made by the Supreme Court in June 1989 as an example of this. In the decision, plaintiffs claiming discrimination in the workplace must prove that the employers planned to discriminate.

In the open discussion that followed, an audience member asked the speakers if the struggles of blacks and women were a "hollow victory."

In response Ariza said, “The 60’s freedom struggle smashed the Jim Crow system. The victories aren’t hollow, just limited.”

We are in the midst of betrayal in this country of our most elementary rights,” he said.

Kinoy likened existing politics to those during the Reconstruction following the Civil War.

Stevens said he believes that racism can not be eliminated.

He said that racism can not be conquered until capitalism is eliminated.

“Nationalism is a dead end for the working class,” Stevens said.

Arthur Kinoy, a civil rights lawyer and professor at Rutgers Law School, discussed the regressiveness of recent Supreme Court decisions.

Kinoy likened existing policies to those during the Reconstruction following the Civil War.

As an editor, McEnery works between 50 and 60 hours a week and makes $50,000 a year. Recognizing the difficulty that college graduates entering the business face, she said reporters have to start working for small papers and gradually work their way up. “It is difficult to move from a very small paper to a very large paper,” she said.

McEnery also warned that “salaries are disappointing.”

McEnery stressed that there is room to move up in the business and those who enter journalism should be prepared to move from one publication to another.

Cutbacks raise tuition

By John Friberg
Correspondent

The SGA was addressed yesterday concerning what may be imminent tuition hikes for New Jersey state college students.

Tom Auch, vice president for Administration and Finance at MSC, detailed proposed state education cutbacks, most of which will probably be absorbed by students.

Auch said that Gov. Jim Florio’s $12 billion budget includes a 10.7 percent reduction in state funds for higher education. MSC will receive $34.1 million as opposed to the $38.5 million the college received for fiscal 1990.

Meanwhile, salaries and operating expenses are certain to increase, leaving MSC with a budget deficit of over $5 million, according to Auch. Although a percentage of this deficit will be absorbed by increasing certain state revenues, such as sales tax, the lottery, and the so-called “sin taxes” on tobacco and alcohol, most of the deficit will become the student’s responsibility.

For in-state undergrads, this will amount to a tuition hike of about 15 percent, said Auch. The 15 percent figure also applies to graduate students, both in-state and out. Students who commute and take 30 credits over the course of the school year will pay up to $250 more per year. For undergrads living on campus, the increase will be up to $475.

The SGA passed a resolution to do everything in its power to prevent tuition hikes.

In other SGA news, the Italian American Student Organization was recognized for 1990-92. Also, the Lambda Tau Omega sorority, a class II organization, was recognized for 1990-92. The Muslim Student Organization and Phi Alpha Delta, a pre-law Greek organization, were also recognized for 1990-92 by the SGA.

The Agricultural Society will have to wait at least one more week for its approval as a class III organization in the SGA. The SGA argued about the club’s stipulation that members must live on at least one and a half acres of land and/or be able to milk a certain number of cows in a certain amount of time.

Lecture examines network women

By Tara Jankowski
Correspondent

MSC's Women's Center presented Women on Network News Tuesday in the Student Center. Dr. Richard Bartone spoke on the behalf of women's representation in network news programs and magazines.

Bartone was introduced by Sharon Olson, Director of Women's Center at MSC. The presentation started after 2 p.m. and included clips from television news stories. He decided to speak at MSC because he always wants to re-evaluate and rethink his views on women. He speaks from the feedback and received from his audiences and said he re-evaluates his speeches based on feedback.

Bartone, an Assistant Professor at William Paterson College, is involved in research of women portrayed in fictional and non-fictional television. The T.V. clips he used in his presentation were from 1940 to the present. "We can look at sitcoms of the 1950's for reinforcing the containment of women," said Bartone.

He discussed how women in T.V. sitcoms were the objects of laughter when they stepped out of certain roles. Bartone said that if the mass media sets standards in front of her 13 year old son in the video. Cher's interview was not questioning her as an individual, but as a woman.

Bartone then moved on to the CBS program, 60 Minutes, and said that of 1800 shows only 213 have been about women. This was after the show hired women producers that women in business and politics have been portrayed.

Bartone said that broadcasting is a sexist industry. He feels women are paid less compared to their male colleagues. When asked if he considered himself a feminist Bartone said "I am only a feminist in my consciousness." He says he is aware of all issues for humans.

Three arrested for 1/2 ounce

□ Three MSC students were discovered with possession of marijuana on April 10 at 11:30 p.m. in Blanton Hall. Campus police were alerted due to a heavy odor coming from the room. The arrest was made by a police officer at the door of a Blanton Hall room that was occupied by two residents and a guest. When campus police arrived one of the residents handed over a bag of half an ounce of marijuana which resulted in the arrest of all three students for possession of controlled substances. These three individuals will be appearing in court.

Prof. Hubey develops 7 economic equations

By Frank Kisselman

An MSC professor of computer science has developed seven equations that can predict the economy in any economic system. He will present his research to an international conference in West Germany this Summer.

Haci-Murat Hubey, an assistant professor, is invited to attend the Fifth International Conference on System Research in Baden-Baden, West Germany, August 6 to 12 and present his paper, "Differential Equations, Time-dependent Production Functions and Growth."

The paper is a study of macroeconomic equations, their principle and their significance. His equations are unique in that they use time as a factor to predict economic conditions, he said.

This is the first time Hubey has been invited to such a conference. "When I received their letter, I was so happy, I quit smoking," said Hubey.

The conference will combine reports on current systems research by educators, in the humanities, sciences and engineering fields.

Hubey is chairman of MSC's Computer Science Committee, which develops new courses. During his seven years at MSC, he has personally introduced and taught three new courses; "Data Communications," "Local Area Networks," and "Fourth Generation and Beyond."

The Austrian-born scientist came to the United States when he was 12 years old. He holds a B.A. in mechanical engineering and a M.A. degrees earned in New Jersey, and a Ph.D. in Electromagnetics from the University of New Hampshire.

Hubey has also served in the community as a member of the Clifton Chamber of Commerce Hi-Tech Committee in 1986, and as a member of the City Council Ad Hoc Committee on Rent Control in Paterson in 1984-85.

Local YMCA’s recycling gives students jobs and garbage life

By Audrey Regan
Staff Writer

Remember the “garbage barge” from a few years ago, sludging pathetically to find somewhere to unload its heap of trash? The sight of it in the news everyday stirred the question in everyone’s mind: “What do we do with our garbage?”

Well, the Frost Valley Y.M.C.A., headquartered right here in Montclair, knows what it will do with its garbage, and it’s looking for some MSC students to help in a program which could be implemented in every institution (perhaps even the college) by the end of the decade.

“For years we buried our garbage in a landfill. Then we trucked it out, but that wasn’t solving the real problem,” explains Peter Swain, who directs Frost Valley’s Catskill summer camp.

To solve the real problem, Swain says, the Resource Recovery Center, a plant located in Frost Valley, will sort the camp’s solid waste into recyclable, non-recyclable, and contaminated trash.

Substances like paper and glass will be recycled, plastics and toxics will be trucked away, and the leftovers (food waste) will be converted into topsoil. This soil will then be stored in greenhouse areas and will be available to the community.

Swain hopes this will all be in full swing by the summer, but he has additional plans for the program. The main inhabitants of this camp, namely children, will learn how to incorporate healthy environmental habits into their lives.

“Every kid who comes to the camp leaves with the objective of keeping the environment clean,” he says.

With the help of teaching manuals and any interested students from MSC, the children will learn how the same food they see in the dining halls is changed into topsoil, which produces more food which reappears in the dining halls...and so on like the food chain.

Besides being unique in that this process will be taught to children, the program’s potential also sets it apart. “The plant will serve as a model of what camp and camp-like organizations can do with their own solid waste material,” Swain says.

Mr. D. Halbe Brown, executive director of Frost Valley Y.M.C.A., goes one step further and explains that although this is not yet being done on a private level, the system has “great potential to be replicated.”

Could this mean the start of personal Resource Recovery Centers for all public and private enterprises? “Prison systems are already interested,” says Brown, who takes environmental awareness one step further.

“This is a new approach to teaching everyone environmental sensitivity — but with the plant as part of the process,” he says.

One thing is certain, especially as Earth Day draws near — environment is the new issue. Frost Valley, who researched this project with Cornell University, started building the plant a year ago and is still looking ahead. They are now working with the Department of the Interior and Congress on other issues as well, such as acid rain.

Think you’re qualified to be a teacher or counselor at this camp? Perhaps just for the summer? For more information head down Valley Road to the Frost Valley Y.M.C.A. or call 744-3488.

Ten years ago this month, construction had begun on what was to become Blanton Hall and the $33 million Student Center Arms, and the Montclarion featured these stories:

April 10, 1980

“Freeman fires phony”

Dean of Housing Ray Stover banned alcohol delivery on the campus, except at the Rathskellar, which then had a liquor license. The administration decided to put a hold on implementing the rule until it could be further reviewed.

“Alcohol policy staggered”

Freeman Hall was the site of all the fire alarm action — the dorm averaged up to five alarms a week, with three on one day welcoming students back from spring break. The false alarms were due to defective smoke detectors “overly sensitive to air temperature change” that had been installed over winter break.

Five years ago, spring break was first extended in the campus mall...

“Spring Weekend ’85 plans to make campus a carnival”

The first annual Spring Week “Party Under the Sun” preparations were underway, with SGA-chartered organizations scheduling various events and a carnival for April 24-28 in order to boost the low student morale.

SGA’s party a blast of awareness for the campus

By George Olschewski
Asst. Features Editor

Many students on campus see flyers, posters, and banners tacked to bulletin boards and walls from College Hall to the Student Center for everything from the SGA to Weekend College.

Many students also have no idea what these organizations do, where they are, or how their presence on campus will benefit them.

In order to solve this dilemma, the Public Relations Committee of the SGA put together an evening which would answer any questions an inquiring mind might want to know and plans to hold other such events in the future.

Questions such as “What does O.S.A.U. stand for?” (Organization of Students for African Unity) “What is the difference between a Class One and a Class Four organization?” (a Class One is SGA-funded, while a Class Four raises its own funds, for example), were in the air and answered at the Organization Reception, held in the Rathskellar on April 3.

However, this was only the beginning of the SGA’s effort to dispell any sense of apathy on campus, especially among the organizations.

Representatives from Class One organizations such as WMSC-FM, The Montclarion, and Class One Concerts attended, as well as many of the other Class I-V organizations. Refreshments were served and a disc jockey entertained everyone present.

“The MSC campus is considered apathetic by most people, students and administrators alike,” said SGA Executive Secretary Helen Archontou. “The reception on April 3 showed that we aren’t that bad off.”

“Representatives from most of the campus organizations were there to give information on their groups. We ate, socialized, had fun, and it was very informative,” said SGA Public Relations Committee chairperson Michele Costanzo, adding that the reception went smoothly.

In fact, because of its success, the SGA is planning future receptions to give more exposure to the various on-campus groups.

Costanzo perhaps best summarized the SGA’s future aim. “Organizations shouldn’t be just posters on the wall,” she said.

“Freeman fires phony”

Dean of Housing Ray Stover banned alcohol delivery on the campus, except at the Rathskellar, which then had a liquor license. The administration decided to put a hold on implementing the rule until it could be further reviewed.

“Alcohol policy staggered”

Freeman Hall was the site of all the fire alarm action — the dorm averaged up to five alarms a week, with three on one day welcoming students back from spring break. The false alarms were due to defective smoke detectors “overly sensitive to air temperature change” that had been installed over winter break.

Five years ago, spring break was first extended in the campus mall...

“Spring Weekend ’85 plans to make campus a carnival”

The first annual Spring Week “Party Under the Sun” preparations were underway, with SGA-chartered organizations scheduling various events and a carnival for April 24-28 in order to boost the low student morale.

SGA’s party a blast of awareness for the campus

By George Olschewski
Asst. Features Editor

Many students on campus see flyers, posters, and banners tacked to bulletin boards and walls from College Hall to the Student Center for everything from the SGA to Weekend College.

Many students also have no idea what these organizations do, where they are, or how their presence on campus will benefit them.

In order to solve this dilemma, the Public Relations Committee of the SGA put together an evening which would answer any questions an inquiring mind might want to know and plans to hold other such events in the future.

Questions such as “What does O.S.A.U. stand for?” (Organization of Students for African Unity) “What is the difference between a Class One and a Class Four organization?” (a Class One is SGA-funded, while a Class Four raises its own funds, for example), were in the air and answered at the Organization Reception, held in the Rathskellar on April 3.

However, this was only the beginning of the SGA’s effort to dispell any sense of apathy on campus, especially among the organizations.

Representatives from Class One organizations such as WMSC-FM, The Montclarion, and Class One Concerts attended, as well as many of the other Class I-V organizations. Refreshments were served and a disc jockey entertained everyone present.

Freeman complaints stir administrative response

By Barbara DiMaria

Responding to residents’ complaints about maintenance, a long term goal is being developed to have qualified civil service maintenance workers available for repairs at all times, according to Doug Cooper, maintenance director of residence life.

But Freeman Hall residents continue to air concerns about the way maintenance and repairs are handled in their building. Students who sought interviews related similar cases of delayed responses to serious repair situations and inability to reach weekend maintenance and repair workers.

One Freeman Hall resident, junior Jolyn DeSantis, Freeman resident for the last six consecutive semesters, related an incident of a weekend during the spring of 1989. The room directly above hers flooded, and the shower curtain in the bathroom became water damaged, as she was unable to contact qualified help that weekend.

“I’m not happy about the lack of access to maintenance personnel just because it’s a weekend,” DeSantis said.

Another Freeman Hall student, Jessica Bieri, said she and her suitemates were surprised to find maintenance personnel behind their door at 7:30 a.m. to change heat sensors in the room while the girls were trying to prepare for a 9:00 a.m. class. According to the Residence Life residents contract, “except in cases of emergency, prior notice is to be given.”

Because no notice was given, the women said, they were disrupted and the maintenance process delayed.

“I’m concerned mainly because the maintenance department would schedule work to be done at a time when students are clearly trying to prepare for classes — after all, we are here for an education," Bieri said.

Cooper explained why Bieri and her suitemates were not given prior notice. “These men were outside contractors who won a bid to upgrade existing heat sensors with sensors that give quicker response to heating problems. However, these contractors not following the policy does not negate my responsibility to be sure prior notice was given. I will see to it that future cases of the like are properly handled and clearly made known,” he said.

A maintenance mechanic’s scheduled hours are between 7:00 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, according to Amy Knight, three-year resident assistant, who serves at Freeman Hall. She said a new beeper system to contact Student Facilities assistants expedites contacting them.

“The system for contacting the student assistant for facilities is more accessible and organized this year than the past,” Amy said. However, she explained, it does not expedite the response to such calls.

Cooper said his civil service staff members are few and, on the average, at least an hour away. Most are dependent on public transportation also.

“I would love to see a rotation shift so that this on-call schedule is divided up fairly among the civil service staff members, and that they could be given the truck for transportation. And when called between the hours of midnight and 7 a.m., they could be given a reduced rate for coming out on the job,” he said.

Cooper said the calls per night average 10 to 12, and there is only one student assistant hired to be on call for all the resident dormitories, including Clove Rd. Apts. These students have to prioritize the calls according to severity, he said.

Cooper said that the residence life members and the student facilities assistants are given qualified training in diverse skills, from changing a light bulb to detecting the cause of a black out. But they sometimes require aid from licensed civil servants, he said.

Education not elitism

A topic churning up great controversy on our campus lately is whether the English department should create an English Honors Program. Such a program would provide exceptional students within the major the opportunity to take on a greater academic challenge. The controversy lies in whether this type of program would promote elitism within the institution, then voting down a program which would promote academic advancement would be to abandon this ideal.

Boycotts should go all the way

by George Olschewski

Contribution Columnist

Ah, what a wonderful thing, the Bill of Rights. It allows the American people to create such things as demonstrations, protests, and...boycotts. And what better country to utilize boycotts than in one where one does not get locked up for voicing one's opinion? Don't get me wrong. I do think it is a wonderful thing. The problem lies in what many disputes turn into small, year-over-year, ongoing battles.

Boycotts are not the first to be taken to the extreme. It was preceded by the AIDS debate, the supposed heavy metal/satiation connection, and racial issues. They have, however, become just a little bit ridiculous.

We boycotted Exxon because of a drunken captain's incompetence, and executives who approved of his hire. We boycotted anything not made in the United States because we buy a foreign-made product, we put just so many Americans out of work per item. The list goes on and on and on.

This is all well and good, and I am sure that deep down, the persons who start the boycott chain think they are doing some good for somebody. What these people don't realize is that many of these companies manufacture items we could not live without. "Boycott General Electric! They manufacture parts for nuclear weapons!" Okay. Let's ban all light bulbs, fuses, circuit breakers, and other electrical products that they make. Got a GE television? Better chuck it. That goes for you GE refrigerator, hair dryer, microwave, and appliances. Westinghouse? They make stuff for the government, too.

Boycott AT&T. They donate money to Planned Parenthood, that evil bastion of birth control and...no, dare I say it? Abortion? Ooo...Okay, let's boycott AT&T. Better call and have your phone disconnected. After all, they ARE your phone company. Rip that phone off your wall. Cut up your calling card.

Sounds silly? Ridiculous? Preposterous? Not at all. It is simply a matter of "putting your money where your mouth is." So to speak. Of course, we wouldn't boycott phones. How can we call that foxy babe in Blanton Hall? Or order pizza? Or call the SGA office to find out if the faculty is striking? Or call work to let our boss know we can't come into work because we are sick?

And we wouldn't boycott GE. No sir-e-bob. No TV, no vaops, no Monday Night Football. No refrigerators, no cold Coke, no milk for our Frosted Flakes, and (gasp!) no cold pizza.

So what's my point? Simple. Either go whole-hog on the thing, or don't do it! If you're going to boycott GE, you had better put all of your GE products on the line, and be willing to go without to support your decision. No fair in just hiding them in your closet until you get what you want. Smash them! Burn them in the street, like they did with those "satanic" rock albums.

If the companies you are boycotting have subsidiaries, boycott them too! Coca-Cola has ties to South Africa. So, boycott Coca-Cola, Minute Maid products, etc. Boycott Hormel's Spam (labor strife). Fine. There go all the Hormel cold cuts, too. Is it silly? Sure it is. Boycotting isn't. If used properly, it is a very powerful force. But if you want to do it, don't pull punches. Partial boycotting is like partial circumcision. Either do it all the way, or forget it.

To sum up my thoughts, here is a quote from the April 16, 1990 issue of "U.S. News and World Report's" article on boycotting, written by Kenneth Sheets: "If boycotts are a headache for a business, they can drive shoppers up the wall, too. Consider the plight of a politically aware working mother who wants to feed her children a quick supper. Carry-out is out: both Burger King and Pizza Hut allegedly use meat from blacklisted Hormel, while Domino's Pizza anti-abortion chief Thomas Monaghan is under fire from feminists. The car is low on fuel, but the only nearby gas stations are Shell (South Africa) and Exxon (Alaskan oil spill). A sandwich, perhaps? Not with cold cuts from Hormel, which are on the union hit list. So are Dole pineapples. It's enough to drive a poor parent to drink—just as long as it isn't Coors Beer."

Touche, M'sieu pasycat.

Peace.
Victim deserves second chance

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter written last week by Kathy DeGraaff, a "former" Freeman Hall resident who was denied housing for the rest of the semester because of her suicide attempt.

I am a freshman here at MSC and enjoy the friendliness of everyone on campus, including staff members, administration and fellow students. However, after reading Kathy's letter, I am appalled at those whose responsibility it was to evict her. I understand that precautions must be taken for the safety of the student body, but what I do not understand is how trying to kill oneself is a threat to others.

Most people who try to kill themselves want to do just that, hurt themselves, not others. First of all, Kathy has shown a major step to recovery by admitting that what she had done was stupid and irrational. Secondly, she openly agreed to seek psychiatric care to prevent another such episode.

Personally, I agree with Kathy 100% about the administration being concerned solely with hiding its "secrets." MSC is not a perfect institution, nor is any other college. The authorities cannot continue to shelter its students from reality.

Suicide is a very real and a very serious situation. Instead of ignoring it, they should make known the dangers of it and explain that if one is successful in such an act, there is no turning back for second chances.

Judging from her letter, it seems to me that Kathy has come to terms with this fact. She is willing to accept her life and wants a second chance and work out her problems. She seems sincere in wanting to become part of MSC again, as well as continuing her involvement with the CHEERS programming committee.

I hope this letter will give the administration some incentive to reconsider their decision to evict Kathy DeGraaff. If they fail to do so, then it is admitting to the public that they are more concerned with the reputation of their school than they are with saving an innocent victim's life. Kathy was a victim...not a criminal!!

Women are disturbed

Dear Editor,

We are highly disturbed by the issue of March 22nd, 1990 in which there is an article about recyclable trash versus non-recyclable trash. There was a picture of garbage and other waste juxtaposed to a picture of the actress and feminist, Jane Fonda. We feel that it is distasteful, rude, obnoxious, and degrading - not only to women, but to humans in general. This issue will not be taken lightly. It will exceed higher authorities, as well as Equal Rights for women and affiliate groups.

Grateful Dead in the Colliseum parking lot

By R. A. Campos

Staff Writer

"...why are you here?"

The question took me by surprise. I thought it was quite obvious why I was in the parking lot at Nassau Colliseum wearing a tie-dye shirt and playing hackey-sack. I was here to see the Grateful Dead, so I relayed my thought to the scruffy old man who proposed the question.

"No, I mean, why do you listen to the Grateful Dead."

Was that alcohol or ether on his breath? A wave suddenly hit me. Something grabbed hold of all my senses at once and jumbled them. This was a dis-surge. I thought it was quite obvious why I was in the park. I had completely forgot what he said. I replied with the first thing that came into my head.

"The explosive P-36 space modulator is missing!"

The old man looked confused. The wave subsided. It was now time to gather up all the marbles I had been saving up since I was a kid. They were stored in the attic. I had to climb over trunks and boxes to get them, then search for tape. I didn't want one of these little hueggers to escape when high tide came in so I taped them all together and put them in a safe place. What the old man said came back to me as I was stacking my marbles.

The second question was as odd as the first. This man was searching for a light far beyond my own sight. But since arguing about absolutely nothing is one of my specialties and I might accidently help this man in his search for the Tao of Deadheads, I decided to respond to his inquiry.

I told him that the reason for the Dead's music being radically unique is that they are still writing the same music they did over 20 years ago. The Grateful Dead also never repeat a concert due to the fact that they have never gone on stage with a set list.

"Yes, I know that but...."

Another wave hit me. Flashes of Bugs Bunny cartoons flew through my mind, but I kept control. The tape was holding.

"...look around you. Look at all these people. Many people here give up their jobs to follow this group. Their lives and whereabouts rely on the decisions of this group."

He still hadn't achieved a point to his argument, which was good because I was keeping up well. However, I was getting bored so I pressed him for a reason for his questions.

"What I want to know is why do these people follow the Dead instead of leading normal lives?" "Normal lives as opposed to what?", I replied.

"You know what I mean."

I did know what he meant but to reply the way I did is such a normal reaction for me that I had to say it. I then began to tell him that I could not speak for everyone there, but I came to see the concert because I could get away for a few hours. I didn't have to worry about life and responsibility. It is like a vacation for one night. On top of that I love the music.

Being a part of this sub-culture is like saying to society, 'Hey, maybe what the majority thinks isn't that important to some of us.' Unfortunately the Grateful Dead has become an accepted 'fad.' It is no longer considered rebellious to drop everything to go off and see the Dead, it's almost fashionable.

Since the release of the In the Dark album, the Grateful Dead have had an overwhelming number of younger followers. This doesn't bother me. The only thing that bothers me about their sudden popularity is that sometimes it's a real pain in the ass to get tickets.

"But what about the drug scene?"

"Rather than wallow in the mothers milk of conformity, some would rather stumble forward in a blind rage of induced innovation, but this is always better than just standing there looking stupid," was my response.

Did I really say that? At this point another wave took me. I gasped for air, floundered for awhile, then I was completely overtaken by the tide. I think a crabb must've found the marbles and cut open the tape. Every now and then I still find a marble or two in a corner of my attic.

The old man decided it was time to split.

"Thanks alot," and he was off.

The last thing I remember is the old man going up to someone else and saying, "Excuse me..."
Illustrator Mark Penberthy speaks at Calcia

By Steve Sukala
Assistant Arts Editor

The Art Forum lecture series this week presented Mark Penberthy, an illustrator who has worked for major newspapers, magazines, and book publishers.

Penberthy spoke briefly about his background as an Art History major at a Massachusetts college, and his early years as an illustrator. He explained the problems starting out as an unknown illustrator, but said that getting work was easier after being published several times because "you do work for one magazine, and another one sees it, and the effect snowballs."

He started out in L.A., but found that it was "too conservative of an outlet" for his creativity. Penberthy later moved to New York, where his style met with greater acceptance.

Penberthy's advice to illustrators just starting out was to assemble a portfolio with a diversity of drawings and show it around to prospective clients, and to "be aggressive." In his beginning years as an illustrator, in the early 80s, Penberthy was constantly changing his portfolio, adding and deleting drawings to present a variety of styles to his clients.

A slide presentation on a number of Penberthy's illustrations was given with the lecture, and he explained the story or idea behind specific drawings, and why some seemed to work better than others.

The three main types of illustration are editorial, advertisement, and book covers, and Penberthy explained the differences inherent in each. "Editors(illustrations) can be somewhat critical," while illustrations for an advertisement must necessarily be favorable to put a product "in the best possible light."

Penberthy said he likes to illustrate for fiction "to break drawing for the same kinds of companies. I have maybe fifteen ideas for a certain subject, but then I may get 20 to 30 calls, and this sort of work begins to get dry."

Speaking about his style of illustration, Penberthy maintained "that it is most important to control what the images are. Concepts can be put in illustration...using traditional scenes." He also stressed the need to "keep them fairly simple."

Penberthy went on to say that the most effective illustrations "evoke some sort of mood, some sort of atmosphere, some sort of feeling."

NJ's alternative to Broadway:

Legal Tender

By Richard E. Buckley Jr.

Broadway, the theater capital of the world, easily accessible for North Jerseyans. Take Route 4 to the G.W. Bridge. On the way there, theatergoers are passing by The American Stage Company (ASC), off of Route 4 in Teaneck.

The ASC has been trying to achieve a name for itself since 1986. Rather than compete with original Broadway productions, the ASC premieres original shows. Other People's Money by Jerry Sterner just opened in Chicago where it received rave reviews. It is scheduled to open in other theaters across the U.S., and there is talk of making it into a movie starring Dustin Hoffman.

The ASC has recently run the successful comedy Legal Tender. This comedy takes place at a motel located across from Teterboro airport. Arthur Wallace, played by Michael Eilich, is a successful divorce lawyer in love with his ex-wife Janis, but a divorced lawyer.

Between appointments and PTA meetings for their son Daniel, they rendezvous at the motel. "Hey, I'm a divorce lawyer," says Arthur. "And you are an ex-wife."

At the end of the play we find all three characters returning to the successful comedy Legal Tender. This comedy takes place at a motel located across from Teterboro airport. The Bottom Line

by Matt Wintner

This week it is time to give equal time to take a look at how the National League shapes up for the 1990 season.

When you take a look at the NL East, there is little doubt that the New York Mets have the best pitching staff in baseball. Gooden, Viola, Cone, Darling, and Fernandez give opposing teams all they can handle. While some teams have crossed their fingers after their top two, the Mets are only capable of producing six runs in Frank Viola's first four starts.

The Mets' worries lie in their ability to produce runs and how well new starters respond to the pressure of playing everyday in the Big Apple. The teams that have a starting job until further notice are: Mike Marshall (1B), Keith Miller (CF), and Barry Lyons (C).

The remaining lineup for Davey Johnson is solid. The infield of Marshall, Jeffries, Elster, and Johnson are sound and experienced. Even though Jeffries is only playing in his second full season, he grew up a lot last year and that will help him tremendously this year. He can easily hit over .300 and drive in 75 runs, and hit .280 if he stays healthy and can keep his cool.

A stable Kevin McReynolds will play left field with Miller in center, and a new Darryl Strawberry in right. If this team can play up to their expectations, the Mets and their fans are looking at a 100-win season.

The Mets will have to battle for the top spot with the St. Louis Cardinals and last year's NL East Champion Chicago Cubs.

There is no doubt that the White Rat has a squad loaded with speed and offensive punch. Leadoff hitter Vince Coleman is an ace at committing highway robbery on the basepaths with centerfielder Willie McCray hitting second. McCray, who is coming off an injury-rided season, hopes to turn it around this season and show his all-star form. Other muscle in the Cards lineup includes: Tom Brunansky (RF), Terry Pendleton (3B), and Pedro Guerrero (1B).

Pitching is a big question mark for Herzog. Bryn Smith (10-11) was acquired in the off-season from Montreal and will join a staff loaded with pitchers that spent much time on the DL last year. The Redbird staff includes Joe Magrane, John Tudor, Danny Cox, and Jose De Leon.

The Redbird's pitching will make or break their season.

Turning to the Windy City, the Cubs are legitimate contenders and are loaded with talent. Mark Grace, Ryne Sanberg, Shawon Dunston, Jerome Walston, and Dwight Smith will look to bring back the magic to a city starving for a World Series appearance.

Mike Biskin (43-75) and Greg Maddux are the aces of the pitching staff. With pitcher Rick Sutcliffe out with a shoulder injury, "The Thrill" look to Jeff Pico and Mike Harkey to fill the void. The Cubs set up man is Les Lannyn, who is starting here in last year's success with Mitch "Wild Thing" Williams as the closer.

Here is the projected NL East final 1) Mets, 2) Cubs, 3) Cards, 4) Pirates, 5) Phillies, 6) Expos.

Looking at the NL West, the teams who call California their home should battle it out for the invite to the post-season party.

The Dodgers are stronger than ever, especially with the addition of Hubie Brooks, who joins a veteran lineup of Juan Uribe, Hiram Bocachica, Davey Lopes, Raul Mondesi, Steve Montejo, and Glenn Burke in goal with rookie net minder Chris Terreri.

The Padres will have to battle for the top spot with the St. Louis Cardinals and last year's NL West Champion San Francisco Giants.

The Giants could use another addition of Hubie Brooks, who joins a veteran lineup of Juan Uribe, Hiram Bocachica, Davey Lopes, Raul Mondesi, Steve Montejo, and Glenn Burke in goal with rookie net minder Chris Terreri.

The Giants' top starter, with the top spot with the St. Louis Cardinals and last year's NL West Champion San Francisco Giants.

Women’s Tennis

Montclair State's Women's Tennis got off to a great start on April 4 with a win over Centenary College of Hacketstown. Newcomers Kim Barnes, Jacoie Maziekien, and Beth Polito have joined forces with the returning fall squad. Coach Brian McLaughlin said he feels that the opening team is actually stronger than the fall team since Maziekien and Polito have moved into the no. 3 and 4 singles positions for the Lady Redhawks. McLaughlin said, “These additions have greatly strengthened a team that already has two returning all NJAC selections in Barri Pollner and Aina Wilczynski.”

Senior Shannon Loines and freshman Katie Morita are playing extremely well this spring at the no. 5 and 6 spots. This duo wasted no time in registering wins over their first spring opponents.

Men’s Tennis

MSC Men’s tennis is now 2-2, after losing to Trenton State on Saturday.

Baseball

The game against Adelphi University has been rescheduled to Wednesday, May 2 at 3:30 p.m. It is to be played at Adelphi.

Discount Tickets

The Department of Campus Recreation is selling discount tickets to Great Adventure this spring and summer. Adult combination tickets are available for purchase at a cost of $17.00 each. Anyone interested in purchasing tickets may do so by calling the Department of Campus Recreation at 893-7494.

Softball loses in tourney final

By Michael Frasco
Sports Editor

The women’s softball team hosted the Montclair State College Top 20 Classic last weekend and came up one win short of capturing the championship, which it lost to Trenton State 2-0.

Trenton, ranked second in Division 3, jumped on MSC in the bottom of the first 1-0, and never looked back.

MSC did put together a rally in the third inning. With two out and runners on second and third on a two-bagger by Donna Brooks, and a single by Cindy Dorman, Kim Gardenier lined a grounder to right field. But TSC right fielder Lori Lubieski threw Gardenier out at first and TSC had its shutout. In the fifth, it was Lubieski again, this time with the bat, driving in an insurance run on a double to complete the scoring.

To get to the championship, MSC won three games, all on Friday. The three other teams competing were: Wilkes University, Cortland State, and NJAC rival Trenton State.

In the game against Wilkes, Donna Brooks stole home in the first inning and Kim Wilson singled in a run to gain a 2-0 lead. “Kim Wilson is doing a good job at the plate,” coach Willie Rucker said. Brooks, a senior centerfielder, doubled in two runs in the fourth to shut the door on Wilkes, but it was the strong pitching of sophomore righthander Lois Fyfe that denied Wilkes from making any threat, as she hurled a four-hitter.

In the next game, it was a different team, similar story. Cortland State, although scoring three runs, was held to just four hits by Lois Fyfe, as MSC won 4-3.

Amy Dilks, MSC’s sophomore catcher, drove in Kim Wilson from third on a groundout in the fifth and broke a 3-3 tie. Dilks also singled in the third inning, driving in a run.

Fyfe’s second four-hitter in as many games prompted coach Rucker to say, “Lois Fyfe pitched excellent for us.”

MSC’s last victory came against TSC, 5-4. The Redhawks went out to a 5-1 lead on a fourth inning double by Kim Gardenier, which drove in Cindy Dormann, who had reached on an error.

Winning pitcher Johnna Tolumo (0-2) got the win, as she allowed just five hits. Coach Rucker said, “Johnna pitched a really good game.”

When asked about the success of the team, Rucker said, “The hitters are coming through.” Kim Wilson, Donna Brooks, and Kelly Docc have been hitting especially well. Wilson, who is hitting .367, is doing a “good job at the plates” Rucker noted.

As for captain Donna Brooks, coach Rucker said that she was doing outstanding, considering that she is a leadoff hitter and already has 9 RBIs.

Docx, the team’s leading hitter at .418, has 16 RBIs, which Rucker said was “incredible.”

MSC is currently ranked sixth in Division 3 college softball with a 13-6 (2-0, NJAC) record.
