Students march to Trenton to protest MSC tuition hikes

More than 70 MSC students marched in front of the Statehouse in Trenton this past Tuesday to protest tuition hikes at New Jersey state colleges.

While the protesters were marching outside, SGA President Mary Jane Linnehan, along with other members of the SGA Executive Board, went into the Statehouse to talk with state legislators and aides to Florio about alternatives to the 15 percent hike at MSC.

Demonstrators started gathering in front of the Student Center late Tuesday morning. By noon, there were more than 70 protesters, and they boarded buses supplied free by the SGA.

The SGA supplied five buses for the rally, but only two were filled, and a third had a handful of protesters on board. Demonstrators carrying picket signs and banners arrived in Trenton by 2:30 p.m., and marched for an hour and a half in front of the Statehouse.

Linnehan and the other members of the SGA Executive Board were in Trenton Tuesday through Thursday talking to various state officials about SG-sponsored alternatives to raising tuition 15 percent.

Among the people they talked to were Michael Myers, aide to New Jersey Chancellor of Higher Education T. Edward Hollander, and Tom Koorcan of the office of management and planning. They also spoke with several influential state senators and assemblymen.

Tuition raised 13% by Board of Trustees

By Steve Sukala
Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees Thursday night voted to raise tuition by $7 per credit, a 13% increase over last year, rather than the $8 per credit, 15% increase originally proposed.

The resolution for the $7 per credit increase, proposed by MSC President Irving Reid, passed with no discussion by the trustees. The one dollar reduction in the initial eight dollar hike was not explained.

Responding to the 4-3 vote adopting the resolution with one trustee abstaining and one absent, enragued students climbed on the stage shouting, "What do we want? Tuition freeze! When do we want it? Now!"

Campus security, absent from the theater during the public session, arrived promptly to keep the demonstrators away from the trustees. The protesters then sat down on the edge of the stage and continued chanting. The trustees, including Reid, left without further incident.

The trustees held an "open forum" at noon, for students wishing to voice their grievances about the proposed tuition hike. During last week's protest in College Hall, one of the demands made by the movement's leaders was a 'dialogue' between students and the trustees. However, the trustees refused to answer any student questions.

The tone and content of the students' speeches in the forum all conveyed the message that the students present would not stand for the tuition increase, and the hike would squeeze out minority student dreams," said Mike Houghton, a student speaker.

Occasionally, the students were highly emotional, and several speakers received standing ovations from the crowd of approximately 150 students.

Several students asked that their speeches "at least be considered" by the trustees. "I would like to know that everything I say will be heard, and listened to, with complete attention, and not faked interest," said Joshua Weighs.

The public session began at 4:30 in the Studio Theater, with only 40 students and a number of faculty and administration present. The tuition hike was the last item considered by the trustees and William Wimberly, a trustee, moved to postpone a decision on the tuition until the May 31, "I will turn down many minority student dreams,"said Mike Houghton, a student speaker.

Campus cops assault reporter during Clove Road altercation

By Maggie Cymbala and Michael Walsmey

A Montclarion staff writer was assaulted and his first amendment rights as a reporter were violated by MSC Campus Police when he attempted to photograph an incident involving the campus police at a Clove Road party on Saturday, May 5.

Anthony DiPasquale, 21, a junior, said he was assaulted and the film was ripped from his camera, when he attempted to document a clash taking place between campus police and Clove Road residents during a registered party. DiPasquale is filing a civil suit for damages.

He notified Sgt. John Krug, an officer on the scene, that he was photographing the policy. The officer responded, "F— k you and f—k your U.M."

DiPasquale said he confronted the police officers and asked, "Do you realize you are violating students' rights?"

He said he proceeded to explain to the police officer in charge, who would not reveal his name or badge number to DiPasquale, but was later discovered to be Krug, that officers do not have jurisdiction to threaten Clove Road residents or their guests with incarceration if they remain outdoors. DiPasquale said he told the officer that the Unit Manager would go on record reaffirming the policy. The officer responded, "F—k you and f—k your U.M."

DiPasquale said he got his camera to photograph the police officers knocking cups out of people's hands and entering students' apartments. DiPasquale said that when the police saw that he was photographing them, Krug attempted to apprehend him and he fled.

David Cardillo, 23, an MSC junior, said, "I saw the cops taking squeeze bottles and pouring them out indiscriminately. Anthony was taking pictures...a cop tried to grab him and Anthony took off and ran. I heard them (the police) say, 'We gotta get that guy.' Then they said if I didn't go inside they'd bust my ass. I was just standing there. They were telling people to go inside or leave."

DiPasquale said he ran to his apartment, pursued by officers. As he ran, he handed the camera to his friend, Andrew MacDonald, 20, a junior.

When police arrived at his apartment they then told him they would arrest him if he didn't give up the camera, said MacDonald. DiPasquale and MacDonald agreed to hand over the camera.

DiPasquale and MacDonald said an unidentified police officer broke the camera's battery compartment cover while destroying the film.

Brian Pray, a 19-year-old freshman said, "They were really forceful about the whole situation...one cop was using a lot of profanities."

No more music or amplification allowed in Student Center Mall

By R.A. Campos
Staff Writer

No amplified music of any kind will be allowed in the Student Center quad and the amplification of voices has been restricted, Edward Martin, dean of students, said, citing complaints from students and teachers after the April 19 Earth Day festivities.

According to an April 24 memo received by the SGA, and distributed to all Class I organizations by the SGA, voice amplification will be limited to the area directly in front of the Student Center. The method of amplification will be provided by the school.

All speakers are to be directed toward the Student Center and kept at a low volume as not to disturb classes in session, Martin said.

"On Earth Day they jackked-up the sound so badly, students couldn't study. The academic program at MSC is preeminent," he also said the SGA would keep the situation under control.

Kim Ferrera, president of The College Life Union Board, said the lack of amplification will seriously diminish the quality of programming in the area.

"Due to constraints that are put upon us, with the limited availability of facilities on campus, scheduling one or two events outside should not cause turmoil in our educational system," said Angel DiGregorio, treasurer of Class I Concerts.

CLUB: Class I Concerts and WMSC-Radio have begun circulating a petition to reverse the ruling.

MSC will be first N.J. College to offer molecular biology degree

By Belinda Diaz

MSC will be the first college in New Jersey to offer a Bachelor of Science degree in molecular biology this fall, according to Dr. Judith Schillcock of the biology department.

"We will be taking a biology course and a molecular biology lecture and lab, taught by a team of professors from the department.

A student must also take core biology courses and a molecular biology lecture and lab, according to Kim Ferrera of the College Life Union Board, who is preeminent.

"We have a tight budget for experiments, so students must do an internship," said Dr. Allan Stein, who will coordinate the program.

A student must also take core biology courses and a molecular biology lecture and lab, taught by a team of professors from the department.

Some internships will offer a salary, but others will not.

"We anticipate excellent career opportunities for our students," said Dr. Bonnie Lutgeman, another biology professor.

Large pharmaceutical companies often employ students with this degree, she added.

Instructors say molecular biology training fulfills today's needs in the "high-tech" field of biotechnology.

All Around The Campus

In your opinion, what was the most significant event that occurred over the 1989-90 school year?

by Peter S. Rebovich Jr.

Lena Sawyer
senior/anthropology

“The fight for tuition freeze. It was the first time in over fifteen years that students bound together and took a united stand. Regardless of the outcome, the most important thing is that we stood together.”

Richard T. Green
sophomore/English

“Without a doubt it would have to be the student protests in regard to tuition hikes. It was significant to me because it was the first time I ever saw the campus united for a single cause.”

Nancy Baeder
sophomore/communications studies

“I thought Meatloaf rocking the amphitheater last Sunday was @#$%-ing awesome! It was a great way to end the school year.”

Carl Monego
junior/English

“The tuition freeze and the teacher's strike represented a coming together of people, coinciding with the history making events around the world like the Chinese students, the Berlin-Wall and Lithuania.”

Lavita E. Johnson
freshman/undeclared

“The most significant thing that happened to me was participating in the O.S.A.U. march against racial discrimination in downtown Newark this March.”

Recycling takes a campus turn

By Anthony DiPasquale
Staff Writer

With all the attention paid to the tuition hike lately, issues that occupied our attention a few weeks ago seem to have gotten lost in the shuffle.

Take recycling, for example. The college literally throws away money every day by not recycling, although a small attempt has been made through a private contractor.

Joseph McGinty, the chief engineer in charge of maintenance, has been working at MSC for 30 years and for the last 15 has listened to talk about setting up a recycling program.

"Take recycling, for example. The college literally throws away money every day by not recycling, although a small attempt has been made through a private contractor."

"Recycling is a big headache. The campus community is not geared at recycling, but separate recycling containers all over campus, people still mix their garbage," he said.

"The campus community is not geared at recycling, but separate recycling containers all over campus, people still mix their garbage," he said.

"The campus community is just not geared at recycling, but if somebody could get something in motion, there would be money to be made by the college," he added.

The current recycling program works by departments filling out a request form to have it and then resells it.

"McGinty believes that if MSC could devise a circular system for recycling where all waste paper and other products could be recycled and reused on campus, enormous amounts of taxpayers money would be saved."

"Even if the system would only have to be implemented in one or two areas on campus, it would be worth the effort."

College president Irvin Reid is currently "unaware of a recycling program that exists at MSC," but feels if there was one it would be a good idea. Facilities such as the Richard-son Hall computer lab have had to limit their access to the student population because of insignificant funds available to buy enough paper and ink cartridges to accommodate everyone.

"The computer lab, which goes through 30 boxes of paper a semester, has begun to set aside boxes for recycling and is presently the only computer lab on campus which has attempted to recycle. Under the current system, however, it receives no return on the resources of reusable paper."

"Dr. Kenneth Wolff, chairman of the math and science department, feels that more needs to be done to recycle paper."

"It would be a good idea if a system could be implemented where each department's budget received an installment based on how much it is used," he said.

"Take recycling, for example. The college literally throws away money every day by not recycling, although a small attempt has been made through a private contractor."
Reporters agree journalism is unglamorous but satisfying

By Susan Keefe
Correspondent

Although the journalism profession is rarely glamorous, it often gives satisfaction. This was the consensus of two reporters who spoke to journalism students in their news reporting class last Wednesday morning in the Clarion Conference Center.

Amy Monaco, 20, and Ema Birrento, 21, both from The (Bergen) Record, explained some of the realities of reporting to about 25 students.

Duarte, a graduate of New York University, described some of the negative aspects of being a reporter as, “A lot of office politics, and abuse in the form of letters and phone calls after writing a story.” Duarte added that a lower-end pay scale is another drawback, although she makes approximately $34,000 a year with bonuses.

Chang, a graduate of the State University of New York-Albany, said that the hardest thing to do is “calling on people after their son or daughter has died.” He said he begins by asking, “How would you like your son/daughter to be remembered?” Duarte added that for some reporters, this “doesn’t get any easier with time.”

Duarte is a regional reporter, and recently covered the Teaneck police shooting. She said some more positive aspects concern how people and things get changed because of it. For example, her story about the Teaneck Police Force lagging in hiring black cops, “may change things in that area,” she said.

Chang, who has been with The Record for 2 1/2 years, is a reporter who has eaten and lived with homeless people. He said, “Writing can be doing something good like showing that the homeless are not just faces in a crowd, but real people.” He said it is an “ego trip” when someone reads your story.

Duarte, who has been at The Record for four years, described the realities of journalism today. “It’s a very competitive field,” she said. “Everyone out there is very bright and ambitious. This is not a field where you can just coast along.”

Local newspaper editors agreed. Leonard Fisher, city editor of The Star-Ledger, said, “There’s nothing (as far as reporters’ jobs) out there right now.” Lila Locksley, assistant to the editor of The Record, said, “The newspaper industry is cyclical, and right now there is very little hiring.”

When asked if they planned on remaining reporters, Duarte said she would like to be an editor and move on to the major league newspapers like The New York Times.” Chang said he could not see himself doing this 20-30 years from now.

When asked if there was ever a time when they couldn’t get the story, Duarte replied, “No, you always get the facts, no matter what it takes.”

Legal abortions save lives that could be lost in illegal ones

By Ann Daly
Staff Writer

Legal abortions in the U.S. will save women’s lives that would be lost in illegal abortions, a lecturer said Tuesday before presenting a film about women who have suffered and died from illegal abortions.

“Women will seek an abortion whether it’s legal or not,” said Lisa Ravaioni, a community health major and active member of The National Organization for Women, speaking to a group of women Tuesday on abortion rights.

“Anti-abortionists fight for the lives of the fetus, not the women,” she said.

The film, “Abortion For Survival,” states that 46 percent of all American women will have an abortion sometime in their life.

Amy Monaco, 20, and Ema Birrento, 21, both psychology majors, said they organized the meeting hoping that it would educate and raise consciousness among students.

“We are seriously thinking about starting an organization that will deal with women’s issues,” Monaco said.

Birrento said, “Students need to be made aware of the issues concerning women, and the film discusses those issues.”

Of major concern among the group was the possibility of the Roe vs. Wade decision being overturned and the consequences that would follow.

One student said, “It’s scary.” One another, “then abortion rights in America will be in serious jeopardy.”

Dr. Sharon Olson, director of the Women’s Center and a member of the psychology department, said that women today are almost in the same position as they were 25 years ago. “Instead of going forward, we seem to be going backward,” she said.

Ravaioni said that women need to be concerned with the Webster decision of the Supreme Court (which allows each state to decide whether or not abortion will be legal) and make sure it stays legal in every state.

Laws guaranteeing parents a role in the child’s decision to seek an abortion should be enforced, and women have to try and get the RU486 pill, which is only available in France, distributed in the U.S., she added.

The key to career success: Do best job first time

By Lorraine Landolfi
Correspondent

The key to success in business is to consistently try to do the best job you can the first time, a panel of executives agreed May 3 at a career forum in Kops Lounge.

“Climbing the Corporate Ladder to Success,” as Alpha Kappa Psi’s Business Day forum was billed, featured four panelists including Joe Toscano, the Continental Airlines Manhattan area sales manager who got his business degree at MSC just one year ago.

Before an assembly of about 25, they discussed issues of importance to students today—choosing a career after college, changing career paths, and how to succeed in the business world.

Toscano well understands the anxiety facing graduating seniors, and “It helps if you know what you want to do,” he said. “But if you don’t get a (good) job right away, don’t worry. There is something out there for you.”

The RU486 pill, which terminates pregnancy by simply swallowing it, has been kept from being distributed in the U.S. because of pressures from anti-abortion activists. “Our main goal is starting a unified women’s group on campus so that we can make students aware of these important issues and get them involved,” said Monaco.

ramifications (of the tuition hike),” said Wimberly. In response, Tamara Burke, student alternate to the Board, said, “We have had a month since the last meeting to consider alternatives.”

The motion came to a 3-3 tie, which chairman Dr. Robert Altman broke in favor of deciding the matter immediately. “My preference is to deal with the problem now,” said Altman.

Reid also supported immediate action on the tuition hike. SGA President Mary Jane Linnehan addressed the Board for 20 minutes, citing the concerns of the students of MSC. Linnehan had been in Trenton for the last several days talking with aides of Gov. Jim Florio.

Linnehan and SGA Treasurer Tim Nee proposed a three-point plan to cut $2.15 million from the current MSC budget, which would remove the need for a tuition hike. The plan calls for eliminating three new administration positions the SGA calls unnecessary and redundant, and scrapping plans for another parking lot on campus and a $900,000 phone system approved at the last trustees meeting.

Although the phone system contract is already underway, Thomas Auch, vice president of finance and administration, said, “I believe we could still stop it.” However, the trustees showed no interest in considering the student's proposal.

Reid’s proposed “revolving emergency loan fund,” to cover students who would be financially unable to attend MSC due to the tuition hike, would use surplus enrollment revenues that the college is supposed to return to the state.

Reid and several trustees were confident the state would let MSC keep the surplus revenues. Reid said he hopes “no student is deprived of the right to come here,” but questions arose as to the likelihood of the state allowing MSC to keep the surplus revenues.

“The state...is looking everywhere they can for their budget shortfall. (The loan fund) is very precarious,” Auch said.

Protesters’ insults and abusive tactics clouded their message

To the Editor:
I wanted to take a moment to express my gratitude and admiration (which I believe is shared by many students and faculty) for those student leaders who believed enough in the power of the student body to mobilize the protests against the tuition hike.

Being a campus and a generation often criticized for apathy, it took a group of real visionaries to believe that the students could unite and make their collective voice heard so strongly. I guess issues that hit closest to home are, and need to be, the starting point for fighting injustice.

Despite my overall positive opinion of the protest and strike actions, there were a couple of incidents that occurred which I believe hampered the effectiveness and unity of the protest.

First of all, I don’t believe that shouting curses at President Reid and other administrators is an intelligent or effective way of getting our point across. To verbally attack Reid is to take the focus off of the issue we are fighting, and to channel our energies against the person who we are trying to convince of the integrity and steadfast dedication to the cause of the tuition freeze. I don’t believe that shouting curses at Reid outside of his office motivated him to listen to our arguments.

Even more disturbing were the verbal attacks on other students who did not join the protest. Let students join because they see the conviction and dedication of other students to the cause—just as it is not fair to protest against the tuition freeze because of insults hurled at them.

After my involvement in the strike and protest on Tuesday, I found myself torn after I learned that a group of protesters had stormed through Freeman Hall Tuesday afternoon, hurling insults at the students in the Honors Program who live on the third floor, calling them elitists and “white fascist pigs.”

As the RA on that floor, I was personally appalled, and could not understand how prejudice against the Honors Program fit into a protest against the tuition hike, especially since at least half of the Honors students on the third floor of Freeman were involved in the protests.

Rather than being elitist, students in the Honors Program have shown continued concern for and service to the campus and community, being involved in such organizations as SGA, Residence Life, the Montclarion, and Habitat for Humanity, among only a few.

However, I decided that the group who stormed through Freeman Hall did not necessarily represent the feelings of the majority of protesters, and I continue to support the fight for a tuition freeze. But, if “the students united will never be defeated,” then the students divided will surely be defeated.

Let’s take our stand with integrity as a united student body!

What Freedom?

How important is it to ensure the freedom of the press? The press was powerful enough to force President Nixon to resign, and expose the horrors of Vietnam to the point where people demanded that our soldiers be brought home. The press has always served as a watchdog against injustices by exposing the truth to the majority of people. The right was taken away from this newspaper by our Campus Police.

A reporter who attempted to take pictures of campus police officers violating student rights at the Clove Rd. Apartments was assaulted, his camera broken and the film destroyed.

The crowd of students who witnessed the incident shouted “UNFAIR! FREEDOM OF THE PRESS!” but campus police, confident with their authority, did not care what the students saw and continued to harass and later arrest students at their whim.

Chasing after a reporter who has identified himself and destroying his camera with no fear of retribution is completely ludicrous. Just because a newspaper is run by students does not mean it is not endowed with the same press privileges other commercial papers possess.

The Montclarion has the same responsibility to its readers to expose any injustices that occur, and it will not stand by while any group or individual tries to deny that right. Justice will be served even if it requires bringing the officers involved to court for assault and property damage.

For now, no justice has been served, and campus police even refuse to acknowledge the incident. They feel that they can simply ignore the consequences of their actions—but they are sadly mistaken.

Dean Martin and President Reid, as well, are moving too slowly to help start the wheels of justice rolling. And if the investigation that Martin claims is ongoing does not materialize, they will just as quickly stifle the press as the officer who broke the camera.

A larger number of students witnessed the injustice than both campus police and administration think, and loss of faith in M.S.C. could be irreparable if the investigation fails to rectify the situation.

How can students recommend MSC to future students or be active alumni if the administration has done nothing to ensure their safety.

For now, the fate of justice lies in the hands of the administration, but if justice is not properly served here, that fate will be handed over to Little Falls Municipal Court.

Here’s wishing all MSC students a fun and safe summer vacation—and best of luck to the class of 1990!”

Signed, Maggie Cymbala and Sarah K. Wilt

Dear Magz, Thank god this is the last time we have to figure out how to fill up the blank space on our page. It’s been a great year. Love always, Sasano
SGA Execs look back on '89-'90 year

To the Campus:

Here we are with only eight days left of our 1989-90 year - and quite a year it has been.

Throughout this year we have gained a new college president, two vice presidents and have brought in the last decade of this millennium. We have experienced a near teachers' strike, a five million dollar deficit at MSC and have taken part in the first successful sit-in take over of College Hall in twenty years.

Student apathy is no longer synonymous with MSC. It is the student leadership who brought you one of the largest Homecoming and Carnival crowds, all the lectures, comedians and concerts. And it is your student who have facilitated the heightened awareness on campus and new wave of activism that has taken over our campus. Over this past year we saw students invest their time and protect the future rights of students. As a result, students gained voting membership on the upcoming All-College Senate, which give students a voice in a powerful body.

Very recently the unfortunate situation of a contested election process and a need for student organization budget cuts has been clouded with controversy. In an attempt to clarify the questionable procedures undertaken by the SGA, Inc., we would like to make it clear that all concerns brought to us are being addressed.

The three new SGA officers were sworn in on Thursday, May 3 and there will be an acting SGA Treasurer appointed on June 1, to be approved by the SGA Legislature in the Fall '90. In regards to the budgeting process, we see it the most prudent measure to balance the SGA budget so as to secure the financial security and longevity of SGA.

As the outgoing executive board of SGA for 1989-90, we have dedicated the past year to the students of MSC. Any situation in need of improvement has been undertaken. As our predecessors have upheld the SGA in the past, we look to future students to continue on. Throughout this past year we have gained a sense of pride of what MSC is. We have felt this pride and enthusiasm from the main force of this campus - the students.

Focus on Bill gave readers a bad Rush

To the Editor:

We are writing in response to the so called concert review, "No Longer a Rush" in the April 26, 1990, issue of the Montclarion.

A review is supposed to be informative; this was not. Instead the writer, R.A. Campos, panned Rush for not playing songs he liked, and talked more about his friend Bill than the concert. Who cares about Bill anyway?

He also made untrue statements about Rush's most recent album, Presto. Mr. Campos felt that there was no art, musical integrity, or poetic lyrics in this release. No, this is not just a lie, this is a travesty!

"No hero in your tragedy
No daring in your escape
No salute for your surrender
Nothing noble in your fate
Christ, what have you done?"

This is a verse from the song "The Pass" written by Neil Peart, which is about teen suicide. Do you, the reader/listener find this non-poetic or lacking in integrity? We do not.

We are not against Mr. Campos' opinions of the actual concert review, although his feelings about a predictable show were somewhat hazed by the fact that they performed "Xanadu" which was a surprise to us all.

We are, however, opposed to Mr. Campos' belief that there was a loss of integrity on the part of Geddy Lee, Alex Lifeson, and Neil Peart.

Next time Mr. Campos should research his facts to a fuller extent and concentrate on the actual "review" of the show, and spare us the details of Bill's view on life.

College Hall will always echo with the roar of student voices

To the Editor:

As a graduating senior, in my last year at MSC, I am immensely proud to say that I will never forget May 1, 1990. On this day I witnessed my fellow students unite and fight for a good cause - affordable education.

At the time however, I wondered whether I should become involved or not since the controversy tuition increase was not going to affect me. Soon enough, though, my mind was made up, and before I knew it, I was sitting among hundreds of fellow students in College Hall, chanting, "The Students United will never be defeated!," and singing our country's national anthem.

We were all so proud and full of tremendous energy. Our roaring voices were heard by everyone, near and far, and regardless whether this tuition hike remains, dissipated, or freezes, no one will forget that we students have opinions and a right to our own destinies.

No one, regardless of political or administrative stature, should continue to expect that they can infringe or manipulate these rights, without the slightest challenge from the students.

This country was built upon a revolution, which today allows all Americans freedom. Although our public protest was not by any means a revolution, it was surely an exercise of individual rights, vocalized loudly yet in a peaceful manner.

Hopefully, this dilemma of affordable education will resolve one day, and politicians will realize that education is a right, not a privilege.

I congratulate my fellow students for standing up for their rights, and implore others to do the same in the future. May the halls of College Hall always ring with our reminding echoes - the students united will never be defeated.

Nothing funny about Ryan

To the Editor:

On April 8, an innocent 18 year old boy died. He did nothing wrong to kill himself. He did not ask to die. His name was Ryan White and he died of AIDS.

On April 12, the Montclarion, published a cartoon by John Paul. The cartoon showed a picture of a doctor holding a piece of paper saying, "I'm sorry. Your disease is terminal. Now, if we could just go over the list of celebrities you want at your bedside..." The Montclarion has been known to publish things in bad taste, but this tops them all.

Ryan White did not ask to die. He did not ask to be a hemophiliac. He did not ask to have a blood transfusion. He did not ask to contract AIDS. Most importantly, he did not ask to die. He did not even ask to have Elton John at his bedside!

At the time of his death, Ryan didn't even know Elton John was there. John was a friend of the family from the time Ryan was in the midst of a court battle involving his disease and his school. Elton John wanted to be there. Ryan had other friends there too, but that never entered your minds, did it?

Our question is this: How could supposedly mature and presumably intelligent college students even think of creating such a disgusting cartoon? How could you make light of such a serious subject by putting it in a cartoon in the first place?

Letter from the Editor

Time Flies. Sure, it’s a rather mundane cliche, but it does express the feelings I have about this past year. So much has happened on campus. Too much to just let it go by, into a file of memories or the pages of the yearbook, without mention.

As a freshman, I felt rather unsure about my choice of college. Second year, I have to rethink it all.

Being an editor on the paper gives one a great overview of everything that goes on at MSC. It’s amazing what last year’s children can accomplish. We must only hold ourselves to standards for others in our grasps, but also the future of the planet.

I feel secure with the students at MSC. Especially with our recent upheaval. I remember sitting, with another member of the paper, in College Hall on the night 120 students slept over. Watching everyone, united by one common belief, gave me a high that I never before experienced. I turned to my friend and put my arm around his shoulder and took back every single word I ever said about the people here. He did too.

I forgot about how Residence Life proved to me just how fast time passes. Running through the halls piping in music and telling the student life is not quite average Joe students that I’ve seen. I’m talking a group of students that have their own style, and are going to make the necessary repairs, or fly! Murphy, Richard Pryor, and Redd Foxx tag team to save their swinging Harlem nightclub, the Club Sugar Ray, from the mob. Also stars Danny Aiello (“Do The Right Thing”), Jasmine Guy (“A Different World”), and late night mogul Arsenio Hall.

The latest in the misadventures of the Griswold clan features a hodgepodge of screwball relatives, explosive trees, a shocking cat, and more! Stars Chevy Chase, Beverly D’Angelo, Randy Quaid, William Hickey, and Mae Questel. Written and directed by John Hughes.

“Mermaids: Kiss of the Best” Rated R

Another exotic thriller from the Beauty and the Beast school of film. Set in nowadays Italy, it chronicles two young lovers who are doomed by an ancient curse and an evil twin brother’s lust and jealousy. Looks interesting! Stars “Twin Peaks” Sherilyn Fenn.

And if you need a little fine-tuning on your golf and Lambda, check out: “Jack Nicklas Shows You The Greatest 18 Holes Of Major Championship Golf!” ($19.95). The Great Bear personally guides you from the 12th hole at Augusta National to the 17th hole of St. Andrew’s in Scotland; and “How To Lambada” ($19.95). Presented by Columbia Pictures in conjunction with the release of “The Forbidden Dance,” the video features a 37-minute-by-step” explanation of the new dance craze sweeping the country (but only seems to show the dance itself).

Only one Screen Bean worth mentioning this week... “Major League,” the baseball hit where Cleveland won the American League East, will have a sequel. The movie will go into production in 1991 and rumors in Tinseltown are unclear if the movie will continue the playoff road in the American League, but will definitely include the World Series.

TV NEWS

“Twin Peaks” fans watch out! The sultry new soap has reached its peak, and is sliding down the mountainside, coming in at #45 in the TV ratings.

James Woods and John Lithgow will star in “The Boys,” an ABC telefilm slated for the new season. The drama will center on two lifelong friends and writing partners who are suddenly faced with the realization that one of them is terminally ill.

Barbara Walters will conduct an exclusive interview with Jiang Zemin, the highest presiding official of the People’s Republic of China on the June 1 edition of “20/20” on ABC.

On a sadder note, Hollywood lost an extremely talented actor, David Rappaport, last week. He died from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head. Close friends to Rappaport said he was fed up with being gay (he was slightly taller than four feet) and cited this as the reason he felt he wasn’t taken seriously in his roles. Some of his most notable roles were an attorney in “LA Law,” the lead character in the CBS series “The Winds of War” and Randall, the leader of a band of midget rogues in the movie “Time Bandits.” Discrimination and ridicule on and off set, in this case, it ended the life of a fine actor, a short timer and of Rappaport, “He was short in size, but not in spirit.” We’ll miss you, David.

Inside The Outsider

By Christine Roblof
Staff Writer

Dressed in grey, plain attire, these four men appear almost faceless. Yet, when they begin to sing, their faces take the shape of the music. This is precisely the experience The Outsider is trying to create for their audience, for at the time the first note is heard, the Outsider is trying to create for their audience, for at the time the audience is more inclined to concentrate on the music, rather than outside distractions.

At a time when music is becoming another big business, and money the number one priority, The Outsider remains fixed in their conviction that "it's not the singer, it's the song." According to lead vocalist and guitarist Ian Ainsworth, "Our music speaks for itself. We are just vehicles for conveying the message." This lack of egocentrism seems to explain why, when asked to describe the band, Ainsworth merely replied, "The band is four causian males, that's all you need to know. The rest comes through the music."
The members of The Outsider are Ian Ainsworth, lead vocals and guitar; Ivan "Elias" bass, Zonder Kennedy, guitar; and Robert Medici, drums and vocals.

Their message speaks to the reality of Earth 1990, and seems to be a response to the entrepreneurial attitude established in the 1980's. "We're not thinking about career, we're thinking about music. In fact, we'd rather have less money and more control over what we have to say, declares Ainsworth. Ainsworth, most of the people today choose the latter.

MTV, and other media channels, are often abused by artists who are more concerned with notoriety than quality. Yet, Ainsworth does not blame the media for the problems in music today, nor does he discourage the use of these channels. Rather, he discourages the misuse of them.

"If you know who you are and what you are trying to say, you can use the media to convey a message. When you're preoccupied with success and monetary gain, the media uses you."

However, success is not something that eludes The Outsider. On the contrary, the band has been playing the New York Club circuit and presently, is looking for a major record deal. Yet, the band's personal definition of success, according to Ainsworth, is not a "record deal," but a good gig. A good gig is one in which the audience confronts what is inside of themselves.

"Our audience walks away dazed, as if someone hit them over the head. We not only sing music and tell a story. The evening is one of music, storytelling and catharsis. Catharsis is what true entertainment is all about."

Ainsworth likens an Outsider show to the ancient times of the caverns who sat around the fire to exchange tales, singing and sharing.

A majority of what The Outsider shares could be considered the dark side of life. "Mother and Child (King of the Sleepless)," for instance, deals with the frightening and emotive experience of Earth 1990, and seems to confront what is inside of a wealthy Virginia farmer by his name of town! Cher was so pleased, she told everyone to take five while she and Camilletti went to her trailer. Well, five minutes turned into 120 as the singer reapereared two hours later.

Track does well vs. NJAC foes

By Michael Frasco
Sports Editor

The men's and women's track team each finished third in the NJAC championships on Saturday at Trenton State College. Leading the way on the men's side: in the 400-m relay, the team of Abdul Williams, Robert Piersanti, Mike Morales, and Anthony Williams, placed second, with a time of 43:0.

Turning to the pole vault, freshmen Jaime Diaz and Jerry Rosenfield had second and third place finishes, each vaulting 14'.

In the 100-m and 200-m events, sophomore Abdul Williams won a strong, finishing second with an 11.3 time in the 100-m and first in the 200-m, bolting to a 22.0 time.

On the women's side, senior Regina Ladson continued her consistency, taking first place in the 100-m with a 12.6 time and the same in the 200-m, dashing for a time of 26.0.

In the 1500-m, freshman Jennifer Welch placed third, completing the event with a 4:53.8 time.

Coach John Blanton said athletes finishing in the top three spots were selected to the All-Conference (NJAC) team.

For most players this was their last competition for the season, however Blanton said nine players qualified to run in the National Championships at North Central College in Naperville, Illinois May 23-26. Those players are: Regina Ladson, Abdul Williams, Robert Piersanti, Mike Morales, Anthony Williams, Brian Major, Kyronne Zahir, Jaime Diaz, and John Wilkerson.

What lies ahead for the 1990-91 season? Coach Blanton noted that all men are returning and just three women will be lost to graduation, therefore he is looking forward to next year.

As for this year, Blanton said the team goals for the most part were not accomplished, one of them being to win the NJAC championship. He added that the individual performances went well, stating that his players accomplished their personal goals. On a last note Blanton said, all in all, it was a long, enjoyable season.

Facing Trenton State was more of a challenge for the defending NJAC Champs. In the game against Ramapo, MSC seemed too anxious. They jumped on the first pitch often which resulted in easy pop-ups. The Trenton State game saw MSC settle down and play at the level to which they were capable. With great pitching from Johanna Tolomeo (17-6) and key hits from Kim Gardener and Chris Nixon, MSC had a 3-2 lead and was on the way to the finals.

Finishing the season with two victories over Scranton University, MSC had a winning momentum on their side before they entered the playoffs.

In the final double-header of the season, MSC took the first game from Scranton with a 3-2 victory, Johanna Tolomeo was the winning pitcher and raised her record to 16-6. The second game was more of the same, as MSC swept Scranton by winning 3-1. Behind the strong arm of Lois Fyfe (9-7), MSC collected its final victory of the regular season and began preparations for the NJAC Tournament. Despite losing to GSC in the NJAC Final, MSC had an excellent tournament. Three players were named to the NJAC All-Star team and coach Rucker was named Coach of the Year.

The three players who were named to the NJAC All-Star team were: third baseman Kim Wilson, outfielders Kelly Dockx and Donna Brooks.

Coach Rucker, who previously won her 200th victory this season, was honored as NJAC Coach of the Year. When asked what she felt about winning the award, Rucker modestly stated, "This is a team award and not a personal award. Whenever a coach wins such an award it's because he/she had a team that played their hearts out the entire season. By winning this award it's giving recognition not only to me but to my team." MSC finished the season with a 29-17 record.
Baseball wins; plays TSC next

It sounds like a broken record, but this time the tune sounds sweeter to the MSC baseball team. The Hawks have recorded two wins in the NJAC playoffs to bring them within one win of the conference title. The Hawks defeated William Paterson on Saturday 12-6 and Trenton State 7-0 yesterday to get to the championship game today, which will also be played against TSC, who beat Rutgers-Newark yesterday 10-4. The Red Hawks are undefeated in their last 13 games, thanks to a combination of strong pitching and timely hitting.

An NJAC crown for the Red Hawk baseball team would be their first conference championship since 1985.

The pitching staff, which includes Vinny Henrich, Paul DeSimone, Cory Poat, and Drew Ryan, continue to stifle the opposition while the MSC bats continue to produce runs. Currently the Red Hawks are batting .303 for the season, compared to .288 for the opposition.

The Hawks got a strong five-inning outing on the hill by Drew Ryan and the offense was paced by Elliot Morgan, who continues to swing the ball with each at bat. Morgan went 3-5 against WPC with a double and two solo home runs to up his average to .393 with eight home runs and 37 RBI.

Ryan (4-2) allowed two runs on four hits, walked eight, and struck out six. Jim Dumphy pitched the last four innings, getting roughed up in the eighth giving up four runs, but it was too little, too late for William Paterson.

The Hawks scored twice in the second and four times in the third sending WPC starter and eventual losing pitcher Bob Moyle (3-3) to the showers.

Morgan’s seventh homerun of the season started the four-run barrage and was later followed by a bases-loaded, base-clearing double by shortstop Brian Sasso. Brian Wilmott also pitched in going 3-5, which included his second homer of the year. Dom DiGirolomo went 3-3.

Lacrosse loses in ECAC final

The men’s lacrosse season ended in a hard fought loss to Kean College 15-11 on Saturday, May 5, in the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) final.

MSC was led by senior attackman Pete Zorich, who scored three goals and had two assists, and Bill Van Ness, Joe Petrone and Jack Belanger who had two goals apiece.

Kean held a 9-5 lead in the opening half, but MSC made a run to claw to within 11-9, led by Joe Petrone, who had two goals in MSC’s surge. MSC kept close the rest of the way, but could not put together a run to overcome the solid play of Kean.

In the semi-final game against Manhattanville, N.Y. on Friday, May 4, attackman Pete Zorich scored a school record 10 goals for MSC, leading the Red Hawks to an 18-14 victory.

Zorich scored MSC’s last seven goals, and by netting it all, he broke his previous record set in 1987 with eight.

Zorich was aided by Dave Durkin, Bill Van Ness and Jack Belanger, as they scored two goals each.

MSC finished the regular season with a 16-1 pounding of Kings Point, N.Y. on Thursday May 3.

Once again Pete Zorich le MSC, scoring five goals, an Dave Durkin scored three.

Softball loses to TSC in regional playoffs

The MSC women’s softball team dropped a 7-2 decision at the hands of Trenton State College on Saturday in the Mid-Atlantic Regional Final, ending their drive for the division 3 national championship.

MSC’s two runs came in the fourth inning when Lois Fyfe smacked a two-run homer. MSC defeated William Paterson College 7-3 in the first game on Saturday to get to the championship game.

Prior to the regionals, MSC suffered disappointing defeats to Glassboro State in the NJAC tournament in their quest to win back to back titles.

Before the two losses against GSC, MSC had been on a tear, winning 11 of their last 12 games. They seemed to be clear favorites for the NJAC title but upset-minded GSC had other ideas.

Johanna Tolomeo (17-7) was tabbed with the 6-2 loss because MSC was unable to generate any offense against GSC pitcher Barb Sbarra. She worked the corners of the plate and handcuffed MSC batters to only three hits.

The second game in the double elimination tournament was more closely fought. MSC starter Lois Fyle (10-8) and reliever Johanna Tolomeo forced GSC to scratch and claw for the lone two runs of the game. MSC hitters were held at bay once more by the GSC wonder, Barb Sbarra.

Coach Rucker said she was disappointed in losing to GSC, but she wasn’t disappointed in her team. She added that her team played well, but GSC just played a little bit better and that’s why they won.

MSC reached the NJAC Finals by defeating Ramapo College 5-0 and Trenton State 7-2. Lois Fyle (10-7) picked up the victory against Ramapo with some strong support from her offense. The team played well as a whole, getting key hits when needed.
