Hacker causes computer chaos

By Renee McDonell

The MSC computer network system was broken into by a hacker on an outside terminal who deleted user accounts and created files that displayed obscenities on terminals.

The Sun system of Richardson Hall and the computer center's mini computer were broken into between July 15 and Aug. 12. No arrests have been made and the incident is still under investigation.

Lynn Truesdell, assistant vice-president for information services, said that all the files that were deleted were retrieved and the vulgarities removed.

Ten computer staff members, with the help of AT&T and Internet, shut down the system in order to modify 3000 accounts, examine all log-in procedures and make changes restricting access of certain accounts.

The computer network was back to normal operation procedures on Sept. 20 after an overall review and correction of the computer security system.

The repairs were made at no expense to MSC, as staff members received no extra pay for overtime and weekends, and AT&T and Internet were under contract.

Truesdell said that he thinks that there was no criminal motive behind the break-in because "most hackers do it for fun and the challenge and not for illegal purposes."

"The hacker was able to get into the system by looking through system authorization files. Once he found an account with a password that he could guess easily, he had a place to start looking for ways to get into the system further."

Extra security has been placed in all of the systems to prevent future break-ins.

Truesdell said that to get into each account, users will have to know both the account number and password. All the accounts now have less potential access, but students, faculty, and administrators will still have access to what they need and want.

Truesdell also said that the best precaution for users to protect their accounts is to keep passwords and account numbers to themselves and to create passwords that aren't easy to guess.

MSC to spend $40 million on campus construction

By Jennifer Thees
Correspondent

Construction on a $40 million facility addition and renovation plan will begin in fall 1991 and last approximately one and a half years.

According to Jerome Quinn, director of MSC facilities and planning, the funding of this plan is mostly coming from the Jobs, Education and Competitiveness Bond Act, a state bond designed for such ideas. Last year's tuition increase will pay for what the bond does not cover.

The improvements planned for the 220-acre campus are:

□ An $8.6 million addition to Sprague Library. The south and east sides will have a 40,000 square foot increase.

□ A $1.3 million addition and renovation is planned for the music building.

□ An addition to the maintenance receiving department, next to the football field, as well as the construction of a facility across the street for Campus Police.

□ A 90,000 square foot academic building for the School of Humanities and Social Sciences will be constructed on lot 13.

Quinn said that no additional parking accommodations will be made to compensate for the loss of lot 13.

"Surveys indicate that there are available spaces in the lower lots. People will just have to park in the northern lot and walk a little further," said Quinn.

Quinn also said that construction of the parking garage has been delayed until later years.

"These facilities are desperately needed by our college. We have the lowest square foot-per student ratios among the nine state schools. These facilities will go a long way to relieve the shortage," said Quinn.

C1C subsidized $3300

By Richard E. Buckley, Jr.
Staff Writer

Tony Susco, SGA president, defended Class One Concerts (C1C) after $3,300 was lost in subsidizing Tuesday night’s rap concert promoted by C1C.

Tickets for the show were $3 for students and $5 for non-students but no tickets were purchased prior to the concert. On Tuesday at 8:05 p.m. Susco and members of C1C decided to open the concert to everyone free of charge.

“If C1C charged $3 a person and 30 people showed the SGA would have had to subsidize the rest ($3,290) and that would have been around $110 a person. By opening the doors, 250 students showed and the SGA subsidized the concert for $13 a student,” said Susco.

Susco justified the action by explaining that it served the “greatest good for the greatest many.” “They did their best to produce a show and they publicized it as best they could. I’m pleased with how things turned out,” he said.

Several legislators argued that the electronic bulletin board in the Student Center Cafeteria was a waste of money because no one looked at it. After a heated debate, the SGA decided to keep the message board for now, said Susco.

STAND was appropriated $175 to pay for half of the air fare for Philip Agee, an ex-CIA agent who will be lecturing at MSC on Oct. 2.

There were appropriations of $750 to be used for alcohol awareness week in October, and $1,500 to the SGA for two busses to a leadership conference.

Cheria Dubin was voted in by the SGA as freshman representative. The Math Club was granted a class II charter.

Guess What...

Part-time MSC student Ingrid A. Saez of Paterson, a 27-year-old paralegal secretary, recently won $50,000 in the Pick-6 Lotto Bonus Million Game.

Saez, the second prize winner (the $1 million first prize was won by a North Plainfield resident), was one of 305 finalists chosen for a spot in the drawing by matching, in exact order, the five-digit Bonus Million Game number picked on Mondays and Thursdays during the Pick-6 Lotto game. Saez, a sophomore, plans to use the money for tuition and clothes.

Robert Dellaume, a 1990 graduate, is the first MSC student to be accepted to the master’s degree program in marketing.

Dellaume was a student of Paul Scipione of the marketing department.

About 40 students from Montclair are expected to attend the New Jersey Student Conference for Educational Rights which will be held Oct. 6-7 at Rutgers University, New Brunswick.

The students will join their peers from Rutgers, William Paterson College, and Essex County College to discuss plans for a rally in Trenton to protest tuition hikes. Invitations were also sent to Glassboro and Trenton state colleges.

Angel Mossucco, president of Students Toward a New Direction (STAND) at MSC and a legislator of the SGA, will be attending the conference. “We are organizing to show Trenton that we want a tuition freeze and will not accept another hike,” she said.

Master plan for expansion

By Monica Stipanov
Correspondent

The master plan for the expansion and renovation of facilities on campus was introduced by the MSC administration at a presentation on Monday in the Student Center.

Administration officials and the plan’s architects described the renovations and new construction that will begin next spring on the $40 million project.

President Reid said that MSC owed thanks to “the citizens of New Jersey (who) showed their support for higher education by voting for the Jobs, Education and Competitiveness Bond Act (JEC).”

Thomas H. Auch, Vice President for Administration and Finance said that money from the bond act can only go towards funding improvements of campus facilities. The funds cannot go to other college costs, such as salaries. For every dollar the state gives MSC, the college must contribute fifty cents.

Additional funding will be provided by the state, college reserves, contributions and $2 per credit of the proposed tuition hike.

Last May, the master plan committee hired H2L2, a Philadelphia-based architectural firm, to oversee the expansion and renovation of a number of campus facilities.

The H2L2 architects stressed their plan to blend the new construction with the existing buildings. They said they didn’t want to “just drop stuff in,” but they would borrow building styles already on campus in an attempt to “unify the campus.”

They have completed projects at 10 colleges and universities, said Reid.

Another firm, Furnstahl & Simon, will be handling the work on the Calcia Fine Arts building.

Once approval is given by the Board of Trustees, MSC will advertise for bids next summer. Construction on campus should be finished in 1993.

Students organize statewide in response to rising tuition

An article from The Daily Targum in Rutgers New Brunswick

By Lisa Tozzi
Targum Correspondent

In response to the increasing cost of higher education in the state, New Jersey college students have organized a Student Rights Coalition.

The Coalition - comprised of student leaders from Rutgers, as well as state colleges such as William Paterson, Trenton State and Glassboro State - is patterned after an active student lobby organization in the City University of New York system. Last year, the CUNY group was successful in forcing New York to rescind a tuition increase.

The New Jersey coalition will meet at Busch campus Oct. 6 & 7. The meeting will mark the first time students of state schools have formally joined forces to work for student rights.

"It's the first time New Jersey has ever organized a front of student leaders," said Melissa Spirt, Rutgers College Governing Association president. "The CUNY system has had wonderful success. New Jersey has been slow to set up something like this," she said.

Spirt said that group's focus has been to prepare for the National Week of Action for Students' Rights Bill.

There are three main components of the bill:

- Allowing student governments to control the allocation of student fees.
- Guaranteeing the organization of a state student union.
- Granting students of state colleges a referendum vote, giving them the right to fund independent not-for-profit organizations on term bills.

Rutgers already has two of the three provisions, according to Wendyann Vodak, Douglas College Government Association student affairs committee chairperson.

"We're lucky in comparison to the other state schools," she said. "Our student governments already have control over student activity fees and we already have a referendum vote for organizations like (New Jersey Public Interest Research Group), but we have to work for all state schools."

According to the William Paterson College representative to the coalition, Darrin Fedder, the passage of the bill would allow the group to become a powerful lobbying force in New Jersey since the student fees would be used to fund the student union.

"We would be able to hire a staff that could devote time to organizing students," he said. "Right now, we're not organized so we have no real say in Trenton."

Fedder said the key to success is mobilizing the entire campus of each school.

"An alliance must be set up between the student activists and the rest of the student body," he said. "You have to show students this affects all of them. Someone would have to be insane not to want to see lower tuition."

Livingston College Governing Association vice president Carolyn Wheeler agreed: "I've been to a lot of these meetings. The only way this one will be successful is if you can mobilize the entire campus."

"Rutgers students tend to use the same tactics over and over again. We have to show students how this affects them," she said. "Anyone can go to this meeting in October - it's not just for student leaders. Anyone who is concerned with rising tuition costs should go. This is a crucial time in education - this is something we should all care about," said Wheeler.

Ten years ago this week, students were cutting classes for a cause, while five years ago one of the professors was hoping he wouldn't be cut out...

□ "Strike to kill TAG bill"
In response to the state's efforts to reallocate approximately $5 million originally intended for state colleges, MSC student leaders called for a boycott of Friday and Monday classes. According to state officials, this money, collected over the summer via a $2-per-credit tuition increase, would be reallocated to diminish the TAG (Tuition Aid Grant) program. Several other state colleges followed MSC's example.

□ "Students out in the cold"
Freeman Hall residents were outraged when they learned they would be evicted over winter break to make room for winter session students. Those students who were staying for the session were required to purchase a meal plan that cost an additional $11 per week.

Sept. 25, 1980

□ "MacConnell must return money or face possible dismissal"
Scott MacConnell, an MSC professor and producer of the summer fun program, was instructed by the Board of Trustees to make a full restitution of the program's money and property (estimated at $75,000) that he allegedly stole. The college filed charges which would result in his suspension and ultimate dismissal if the matter was left unresolved.

Don't start the fire: Prevention Week is coming

Causes of fatal home fires

Statistics from 1988

- All Other Causes 15.4%
- Electrical Distribution 9.6%
- Child Playing 8.8%
- Cooking 7.7%
- Incendiary or suspicious 13.6%
- Heating 16.8%
- Smoking 28.9%

Chart provided by the National Fire Protection Association

Contributed by Domenick DiSimone
Fire Safety Officer

Each year 80 per cent of all fire fatalities in the U. S. occur in homes. Nearly 5,000 people died in home fires in this country in 1988, the most recent year for statistics.

This year Fire Prevention Week is October 7 to October 13. Both on and off campus, people are encouraged to hunt for fire hazards, and to make their homes (or dorms) as safe as possible.

Fire Prevention Week is sponsored each year to focus attention on the need for fire prevention education. It was first proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, which killed 250 people and left 10,000 homeless.

On campus, fire drills will be conducted in all buildings during the week. They will be unannounced, and students and faculty are encouraged to take the alarms seriously.

Here's what you can do to prevent fire hazards:
Don't use any open matches, candles or incense.
If anyone smokes, make sure there are large ashtrays available that won't tip over. Never smoke in bed.
Don't leave appliances such as irons and curling irons on for long periods of time. Make sure all appliances are in good working condition. They should have a sticker a (from UL laboratories, for example) showing that the product is tested and safe.
Check for electrical cords and plugs that are cracked, worn or frayed, and for overloaded electrical outlets. If you must use extension cords, plug only one appliance into each cord and don't run extension cords under rugs, furniture, or across doorways or heavy traffic areas. Replace worn cords and seek help from an electrician if you are unsure.
Dispose of unnecessary trash that could cause a fire. Also, lamps get hot. Never store any clothes, curtains, and papers too close to the lamp or heater.
Never leave cooking unattended. Wear short or close-fitting sleeves when cooking, and keep pot handles turned inward so that pots can't be pulled or knocked off the stove. Keep appliances clean. Remember, to extinguish a grease fire, turn off the burner and cover the fire with a large lid.
Keep all exits clear. Check that all doors and at least one window in each room are not blocked by clothes, shoes, books, furniture, and other items. Make sure windows open easily, and know at least two ways out of each room.
Finally, always respond to fire drills, and stay away from the building once you are outside. A little inconvenience might one day save your life.

Recycle plans (Finally!)

MSC has finally begun to make plans to join the world and start recycling. The plans for spending 2,000 dollars on new trash receptacles for aluminum cans is a step in the right direction, but it is far from being enough.

Other state schools, like Rutgers, take recycling very seriously, and have effective programs for recycling. Up until now, MSC's only attempt to ease the burden on New Jersey landfills was allowing a private contractor to place a dumpster on campus for recyclable material.

The private garbage hauler keeps all of the money made from our college's untapped resource. It is time that the administrators realize the value of reusable garbage. The school spends incredible amounts of money on paper products, and decided to find a creative way of not paying them back.

Now, suddenly, many groups are using the crisis in the Gulf to try to rally support for whatever cause is fashionable this week—most recently, supporters of Lyndon LaRouche.

My problem here is not what "The Montclarion" reported, but rather what it failed to report. In the article, Mr. Ham and Mr. Olshewski both failed to note the "peace-loving" LaRouche happens to be a fascist (can't imagine why the guy's in jail).

Basically, for those who slept through sociology, that means he 'do' like no black, yellow, red, or brown people, NO! NO! NO! Shocking I know. (Hey, I'm still trying to figure out what this guy's plans for peace entail).

Secondly, as far as being "lied to by the Government" is concerned, I stood for 10 minutes as Mr. Ham lied to me about how pulling troops out of the Midwest would solve everything from the budget to the environment. (I'm sorry, but I don't think a U.S. withdrawal will solve the homeless problem).

In fact, withdrawal seems to be, for a lot of people, a cure-all. The most vehement argument is that "The Arab people want us out." Which Arab people are these? The Arab-Americans don't want us out. The Egyptians, Turks, and Syrians don't (and if you asked Kuwaiti refugees what they wanted, guess what they'd say). So who are these Arab people who want us out? (Hang on, that'll floor ya). The Iraqi people.

Something else which should be addressed is a naive which Saddam Hussein has played well against the American people about the U.S. involvement. This is not (NOT) the U.S. vs. Iraq, rather it is the United Nations standing in unity against Iraq.

So right there you've shot down 90% of the anti-American arguments. And frankly, I've become tired of groups like "LaRouche for Justice and "STAND" to name two insulting my intelligence with poorly thought-out propaganda.

Somewhere STAND tried to connect the Gulf crisis with Florio's tax increase. (I couldn't figure it out either). I went to their "Open Forum", and knew I was in trouble when someone said "All governments are bad, we need to rise up!" (Cheque please!)

As I put it in a speech to STAND: Feelings like these are not uncommon. Just a half a century ago, when a house painter came into power of an aggressive European nation, many said "We have no business interfering in the business of other nations." On this premise the nations of the world failed to act as Adolf Hitler's Germany gobbed up much of Europe and North Africa and slaughtered millions of innocent people.

After the end of the bloodiest periods in the history of civilized man, the nations of the world realized the importance of acting quickly against those who feel they have the right to dictate their will upon others.

Just over a month ago a radio broadcast cried out, "To all kings, presidents, and nations of the world, Kuwait is pleading to the world for help!" Ask yourself this: if you were walking down the street and you came across someone who had fallen and couldn't get up, and they asked you for help, could you walk by?

In this day of moral disintegration, it would be criminal to stand by while a large aggressive militant country took personal gain by invading a small weak country.

Luckily, the nations of the world have acted in unity, to peacefully stand against Iraq.

NOW let's be honest, when Kuwait asked the world for help, the first to respond were England and France. It was not until Saudi Arabia asked for military and/or economic support to Saudi-Arabia, including Germany, Japan, South Korea, Egypt, Syria, Morocco, Australia, the United Arab Emirates, Turkey, Belgium, the Netherlands (The Netherlands? Who knew they had a navy?) and many more-including the Soviet Union (Who has a flag and troops in the gulf "just in case").

Let's face it, no one wants war, last of all me. My father is a Colonel in the Marines, my oldest brother is a Lieutenant in the Marines, and I'm not the youngest, so if war breaks out, I'll probably lose 3/4 of my family.

However, STAND would have you believe that the U.S alone is trying to use the crisis for "imperialism" in the region. Anyone with an ounce of intelligence can see this is nothing more than a self-serving view of the small-minded. This propaganda made me want to think twice.

Yes, it is an issue, but it is not the main issue (not even close). The main issue is that during the Iran/Iraq war, Kuwait lent Iraq billions of dollars. After another shot (by a leader who cares more about the $1200 per month somehow doesn't in on Sept. 5th, with 3 long months in a Box, and the American way!)

Did maintenance forget Clove Road Apartments?

Picture the scene: We almost vomited from the stench of old urine. Disgust and revulsion set in as we looked on in dismay at the graffiti, hardened egg and crusty toothpaste that so eloquently decorated the walls. Surely, this description is not uncommon for a subway station in the worst part of NYC. Unfortunately for the residents of 108A, the above scene describes their Clove Road apartment.

The former resident of the apartment apparently left it in this state. However, they graduated on May 25th. We moved in on Sept. 5th, with 3 long months in between. Go figure. And that's not all - The maintenance man doesn't seem worth it when every shower is icy cold, the refrigerator freezes everything, and the sinks spray water in every direction.

Is the light fixture with wires exposed dangling dangerously from the kitchen ceiling a fire hazard? And what are we to do for heat as winter approaches, since the radiators are all broken? "Use the stove" you might say. Well, we would if THAT weren't broken too.

Since "unsafe" to live here because the window is shattered, we have been so graciously given a room in the dorms.

You've all heard of tripling. Well, a new term has emerged - it's called quadrupling. Sounds fun, huh? Well it's not; we've been as pleasant as possible and have personally met with the head maintenance man. Nothing. So we went to the coordinator. Still nothing. Then to the director - Whoa! We managed to get the place carpeted & painted. Then nothing again. Now, after an entire month of school has lapsed, still nothing.

So can you blame us for becoming slightly bitter? It's just that we're starting to get cabin fever. This is no longer just a cry for help, it's a cry for truth, justice, and the American way!

We truly sympathize with all you who are having problems in your apartments, and we urge you to take action. You're all familiar with the saying "The buck stops here." Well guys, the buck has to start somewhere first.

Track coach defended

The paper was eager to bring this controversial letter, but when it came to the cross-country meet last week, we received a one-sentence article while all of the other sports received substantial articles.

It was never mentioned that Jennifer Welch placed sixth in 19:55 improving her time by 52 seconds from last year. Kathy Papke placed thirteenth in 20:40 which was 19 seconds better than last season. Alicia Hennessy placed twenty-fifth in 21:07 which was 56 seconds better than last year. Carla Roberts, Danielle DeRose and Michelle Marowechek ran the course for the first time all ran well and contributed to the teams sixth place finish.

We would just like to see our coach's name cleared because he did not knowingly falsify any records. We would also like to see more positive publicity toward our program and less negative publicity. If there are any controversial issues involving our program in the future we would like to be confronted before the paper prints an article in order to defend ourselves.

When Coach Blanton arrived at MSC the men's record book was mysteriously missing. An official spokesman for the athletic department said that Coach Blanton was told those times mentioned in last weeks article were to be accepted as records until the missing record book was found. Since there was no way to know what the records were since he did not have a record book to refer to.

Not only did Dr. Schleede negatively publicize Coach Blanton, she also unnecessarily mentions the athletes' names to which these records were accredited.

Operating within a Narrow Margin

Christian Rogers

How much trouble can two people get into onboard a train speeding through the Canadian wilderness? If you’re a deputy district attorney protecting a murder witness from hired killers the answer is: Quite a bit. That is the basis of Peter Hyams’ new suspense thriller Narrow Margin.

As the movie opens we are introduced to Carol Hunnicut, played by Anne Archer, who in the first ten minutes of the film witnesses the murder of her blind date in his hotel room. Fearing for her safety and the safety of her witnesses, she flees to the Canadian wilderness and hides out in a remote cabin.

Enter Robert Caufield, played by Gene Hackman, a Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney who is obsessed with putting the mafia boss responsible for the killing behind bars. Caufield goes to the cabin to retrieve Hunnicut, who is more than reluctant to testify about the top level mob slaying to which she was the only witness. In the process of locating his witness Caufield exposes Hunnicut’s whereabouts to hit men sent to silence her.

Hunnicut and Caufield escape amid a flurry of machine gun fire to a Vancouver-bound train only to discover that the killers have boarded with them. Rather than being the attorney-turned-protection, Caufield is an ordinary man put into a situation which thrusts him into an extraordinary situation.

Anne Archer on the other hand plays the reluctant murder witness who despises Caufield for exposing her to further danger by insisting that she testify. Anne Archer is wasted in this film, her character is very two dimensional and much of her dialogue is flat and phoney. Is the audience meant to like Carol Hunnicut because she was exceedingly nasty and unlikable and her attitude about self preservation as opposed to doing what is right? It must be very frightening being threatened with death by a couple of mafioso killers but there is a moment when common sense must take over, but for Carol that moment never seems to come.

The high points of this film are the tense and exciting moments at the film’s climax occur mostly while the main characters dangle outside the moving train. Since the train is in such a remote area and the communications have been cut there is really nowhere for Robert Caufield and Carol Hunnicut to go until there is nowhere left to run inside the train. The two fugitives are then forced to make a final escape attempt to escape the hit men by climbing onto the top of the train. Followed closely by their hunters, a desperate and thrilling struggle ensues and makes for an extremely exciting sequence that finds the audience wincing. In some ways the film reminded me of a Road Runner cartoon. The train speeding down the tracks and the Coyote seeing the tunnel just a few seconds too late.

Overall Narrow Margin slips in just under the wire for an enjoyable night at the movies. For what the plot lacks in the way of originality and surprise the acting and breathtaking sequences, off and on hanging outside the speeding train more than make up for it. I recommend this film to those people who enjoy a good action/adventure film and don’t mind that the plot twists are a little obvious.

To maintain clarity, each book recommended below will be described as follows: title, creators, short general description, a direct quote from a recent issue, the publisher and the price. The order selected is totally random. Due to space limitations, I’ve omitted a number of books of comparable quality. So it goes. You may note that there is not one damned turkey in the bunch. That is intentional.

*"Beautiful Stories for Ugly Children, written by Dave Louapre, drawn by Dan Sweetman. Picture Hans Christian Andersen dropping acid and going on a mental trip. Hold your breath, twist it into a mobius strip, and you’ll have a vague inkling of what to expect...."Debbie didn’t want to be anyone that no one could ever remember her name, and everyone called her Elizabeth. Well, both Ronnie and Sandra disappeared into the rush of blood and, and when the tram finally came, we went inside without them."

Greetings and Salutations, MSC. I would like to send out a thanks and a "bless you" to all who have supported me. In this, I mean compliments, put-downs, criticisms, ideas, and dedication. Without you, I am nothing. Anyhow, the drama is over. Now back to our regularly scheduled program...

Campus Inspirations: Our 1st single this week goes out to all you fearless partygoers. You have all braved the "front-line" of Clove Road. Your dedication was allowed its people a great deal of creativity freedom lately and it shows.

When is the last time you picked up a comic book? Ten years ago, perhaps? Well, they’ve changed. First of all they cost more than they used to. Second, in the past decade, the medium has exploded. The variety of product now available is astonishing.

A rash of false starts during the past half-century, publishers have finally realized that they need not pander exclusively to children and anal-retentive adults. Although, they still manage to keep their marketing efforts as wide as television and movies do. There are now comics genuinely targeted to a mature and literate readership. I’m not referring to the schlock filled with gratuitous sex and violence that consistently surface whenever “adult” comics are mentioned, not that they don’t have their place, but to titles that show a real fondness for the form and respect for the reader.

Granted, you may still have a sense of nostalgia for the characters you knew as children (I’ll grudgingly admit to reading a few of these). But, let’s face it, Superman is still strong, Peter Parker and Spiderman is still a wimp, and Buffy’s fondness for dressing young ladies in skimpy, brightly-colored outfits. These are “factory”-produced funnyines. The best (and worst) work usually comes from smaller, independent publishers, although, to be fair, D.C. Comics has been allowing its people a great deal of creative freedom lately and it shows.

and our continued existence rather pointless. And they would occasionally make casual contact with us..."She took me, there in the wood, in the mill, while the wind and the thunder roared and ripped through the darkness outside. Underfed, slightly ill, carefully, with fingers that could have crushed coal into diamonds, kissed and caressed me with lips that could suck the heart from a star." — Eclipse Comics, $2.00.

3) "The Saviour", written by Mark Millar, drawn by Nigel Kitching. Say hello to the Antichrist. He's a media darling and super-hero that everyone assumes is the second coming. The reborn Christ on the other hand is a derviet with doubts..."Saints will lie naked and butchered on the white shores of heaven, angels hanging black-faced from trees. Heaven will burn and the sky will bleed forever. Oh God. Oh dear God, I don't want to die again. All because you were lonely." - Trident Comics, $1.55.

4) "Hate", written and drawn by Peter Bagge. This book is a "Archie" as "Twin Peaks" is to "Dynasty". Mr. Bagge makes us laugh at the social, sexual, and alcoholic misadventures of typical young adult Buddy Bradley...."Look at that I'm fallin' apart! I look and feel like an old geezer! Look at that posture! It's no wonder my trousers ache all the time....I need new underwear too...this pair is shot." — Fantagraphics Books, $2.00.

5) "Hellblazer", written by Jamie Delano. Vicious artists. The incredibly dark and depressing life of a British post-punk anthero. From all outward appearances totally amoral, John Constantine nevertheless habitually finds himself saving the world, and therefore his own skin, from an assortment of demons. When he's not having a nervous breakdown...."I keep trying to kill it, but it just won't die. All my life it's been simmering in me, sending me scrabbling under stones, sifting through cess-pits and middens...looking for something worse than itself. And each ghastliness it led me to, would claim a sacrifice in place of me." — D.C., $1.50.

6) "Yummy Fur", written and drawn by Chester Brown. A strike issues of sexual politics and back-ups featuring adaptations of the New Testament. In more current issues, the lead feature has shifted to autobiography, which is even stranger..."Said he to me May 25, 1975. Chester Brown has just abandoned his first Playboy magazine under this old board in this empty open field near the Brown's home." — Vortex Comics, $2.50.(Adults Only).

7) "Badger", written by Mike Baron, various artists. I'll let Mr. Baron describe this book in his own words: "Badger, a self-styled crime fighter, metes out bloody justice to jaywalkers, ticket scalpers, indifferent teenagers fast-food clerks-in fact any damn body he feels like, because he's crazy." — First Publishing, $2.25.

8) "The Sandman", written by Neil Gaiman, various artists. This incredibly dark and depressing life of a British post-punk anthero. From all outward appearances totally amoral, John Constantine nevertheless habitually finds himself saving the world, and therefore his own skin, from an assortment of demons. When he's not

Gamblers 13 Banshees 4

This game was a pitcher's duel between the Banshees' Ferris and the Gambler's John Fiore. The score was 3 to 3 until the 6th inning when the Gamblers exploded for 10 runs against the defending champs. Leading the way for the Gamblers was Steve Mulhearn, who hit a 3 run home run. Vinnie Vollero provided the big bat for ZBT with 2 home runs and 3 RBI's.

Gamblers 16 ZBT 8

After coming off of a big victory against the Mid-Digs, ZBT ran into a tough and better rested Gambler team. The Gambler's bats exploded for 6 home runs. Leading the way for the Gamblers was Carl Buffalo, who went 3 for 5 with 2 home runs and 3 RBI's.

Get Fresh Crew 13 Tokers 5

Jeff Kovalchuk showed a strong performance at the plate with 2 HR's and 7 RBI to lead the Get Fresh Crew to victory against a respectable Tokers team. Leading the Tokers was shortstop & 7 RBI to lead the Get Fresh Crew to victory for the YELLOW MEN!!!!

PRP...Mid-Dig catcher Carl DiMagio may have saved his team a few runs with his loud mouth. Against ZBT, his humorous comments to several batters caused some distractions and on one occasion, a strikeout.

Player of the Week

Former MJC baseball player, Dave Barbassa had three throwing errors while playing shortstop for the Mid-Digs. His last throwing error came 2 feet away from hitting the third base coach on the lower field.

It's hard to say and even harder to swallow. The Mets, a team with 2 million subscribers from cancelling the season by the Pirates for over three months. Unfortunately for the Mets and their fans, the Pirates have not been phased by it all. Jimmy Leyland's Three Rivers Crew has now run away with it yet, but they really are in this, or does the team get make that TOO MANY opportunities to infuriate the Yankee front office. Not surprising but it is just another example of how the Yankees have raised the bar in the American League East's basement, but things are looking up. When will the Mets do their fans a favor and stop the bleeding from the souls of their fans? With the Pirate knife rested in their chests, it turns a little bit more each day as the blood stains their couches and Lay-Z-Boys. Please will someone end them their last rites and get it over with.

How about a round of applause for the Yankees. They may be tucked away in the American League East's basement, but things are looking up. First it was King George that was bid a fond farewell, Tears of joy were shed by the fans as King George was exiled to baseball's Easter Island.

Now comes word from the Bronx that there is no time for "Prime Time" in New York. Perhaps the biggest man to ever don the pinstripes was released earlier in the week by General Manager Gene Michaels.

Prime Time Deion Sanders and his amazing .155 batting average is no longer wanted by the Yankees and its about time someone put their foot down and brought him down to reality. This is the same guy who was on the verge of signing a 1 year deal worth about $2 million. The deal would have made Sanders a full-time baseball player. However, in George's last days as managing partner, he came to his senses and pulled the offer off the table.

It is obvious that "Prime Time"'s presence both on the field and in the clubhouse was nothing more than another unneeded distraction. Just because he was the second active football-baseball athlete was why a roster space was opened for him. Check around the Majors and see how many of the 26 teams carry a player batting .155 Deion was a crybaby. Whenever the thought of being sent to Columbus came about, Sanders would conveniently mention to the media that he was leaning more towards playing football and scraping the baseball career. This had to infuriate the Yankee front office. Not even the true Yankee greats like Reggie Jackson and Dave Winfield were able to or even attempted to play with the front office like Deion did.

So now life for the time being is simple for Sanders in Atlanta showing occasional flashes of brilliance defensively and returning punts. However, you had the chance to see him play baseball during his short stay in New York or watched him try to tackle Brent Jones on Sunday, you know that Deion is a not ready for prime time player.

On paper, Monday night's matchup between the undefeated Cincinnati Bengals and the winning Seattle Seahawks looks like another Bengal cake-walk. However, the key is games are won on the field and not on paper. The Bengals taunted, pasted, and mauled the Patriots 41-7 at Riverfront Stadium while the Seahawks lost a heartbreaking 34-31 overtime contest with the Broncos in Denver. It was the first time during the young season that the Seahawks showed signs of being a real NFL team.

Everyone who watches football knows all about the Bengals. Quarterback Boomer Esiason and his supporting cast of James Brooks, Tim McGee, and Rodney Holman combines to create the best offensively minded team in the AFC thus far. However, the Bengal defense is vulnerable to the pass even with All-Pro David Fulcher anchoring the secondary. The Bengal run defense is also questionable and suspect.

Jet quarterback Ken O'Brien and Charger QB Mark Vlasic showed the Bengals that if given time to throw any quarterback can exploit the middle of the Bengals defense as well as the secondary.

The Seahawks are like a heart attack; Seattle's Dave Kreig will be looking to go when he puts the ball into the air. In two of their previous three games, the Cincy secondary was not able to stop receivers Al Toon and Charger wide-out Anthony Miller. The next challenger will be Seattle's Brian Blades who had five 100 yard receiving games last year, tops among AFC pass catchers.

The Seahawk running game got some added punch with running back David Fenner who carried 22 times for 144 yards and 3 touchdowns against Denver. Fenner along with backfield mate John L. Williams makes for a solid and unbalanced backfield. Williams is a solid runner but does his best work catching passes out of the backfield.

"Ramapo is young, aggressive, and making their best bid to win the NJAC. Considering the fact that they haven't beaten us for 10 years, I don't foresee this one getting away from us. Although we can't live in the past, we must regain our composure and simply spank them because it's all on the line."

WHAT COUNTS

"Ramapo has talked about a good ballgame for a month but when it comes to it, its won on the field. The little battles on the field don't matter. It's the outcome of the war that matters."

GRANTED

"James Grant is the inspiration and focal point of their team. Ramapo lives and dies with Grant. Therefore if we stop Grant, we know what happens to Ramapo." P.C.

Regional All-American, and Roger Anderson and Melissa Moyle have quickly fit in to Ballway's system and earned the confidence of the coaches with her heady, aggressive play. Two super frosh goalie Lisa Fardella has two losses.

Greg Harris rumbled into the end zone for his second TD of the game to give Wagner a 22-7 edge with the addition of the Lopez extra point.

MSC's next two possessions ended in a fumble and another interception. Stil, early in the fourth quarter the Hawks switched to a no huddle offense and found some success through the air. Banas, who completed 15 of 30 passes

Even though MSC was unable to make the conversion, both the team and their fans started to smell the scent of a comeback in the air. Wagner's next possession would be crucial in the game because on a third down and long, the Hawk defense stopped Wagner cold, but was hit with an unsportmanlike penalty.

The Mens soccer team improved its record to 7-1 this week, defeating Jersey City 3-0 and Stockton 2-1. Gus Moramarco, Pedro Aguilar, and John Rubinetti provided the scoring against Jersey City while Carlos Arboleda and Lewis Ken-kwofie had goals against Stockton. The Red Hawks outshot Jersey City State 26-2 to provide an easy day for goalie George Zavala.

Coach Dave Masur praised the hard work of his team and issued a warning to the rest of his opponents, adding that his team is still improving. "We are a young team with no seniors. We get better with every game. This system allows for Tom Estes to use his natural scoring abilities. Tom is currently the state's leader in goals (10) and points (23). Coach Masur also attributes some of the teams' success this year to the great help he gets from his assistants, Rob Chesney, a graduate assistant and former Regional All-American, and Roger Rubinetti, a fifth-year senior. "This is my fourth year here," Coach Masur said, "and before this year I had no one here every day to help me. They make it much easier to run this organizational program."

One thing Coach Masur really enjoyed about this game against the Red Hawks was the tremendous fan support. The team has been getting this all along, and hopes it will continue.

Field Hockey blanked, 1-0

By Paul Donefsky

Tuesday night at Sprague Field, the Red Hawks lost the first game of a four game homestand to conference rival Kean 1-0. The loss to Kean dropped Montclair to 2-3 on the season and 0-2 in the NJAC. The Red Hawks are in the midst of a three game tailspin and have scored only once in their last four contests. Despite the slide, first-year coach Deb Ballway remains optimistic and believes that her club is a team on the rise.

The team's record has dropped below the .500 mark, after opening the season with wins against Delaware Valley and FDU-Madison. Coach Ballway had seen a dramatic turnaround in practice and had pronounced her team ready for the challenge. The ten day layoff, their chance to eat away the clock.

The Hawk defense with their "Never say die" style of play stiffened and forced Wagner to try for another field goal. The field goal was blocked and MSC took possession and sensed an upset in the making.

With 5:58 left in the 3rd quarter, MSC's highly rated defense was stunned by a 65-yard touchdown by Greg Harris, who shared MVP honors with Montclair State defensive end Paul Cioffi.

Until that run MSC had not allowed a touchdown in 11 quarters of play. MSC's offense continued to struggle and was forced into punting situations throughout most of the game. Late in the third quarter MSC fumbled on a punt and Wagner recovered on the MSC 2 yard line. MSC's defense, which had been dominant throughout the season, was now forced to try to hold Wagner's surgining offense to at least a field goal. With things going their way, Wagner's for 153 yards, and 4 interceptions, started to gain some confidence and the mighty Hawks were on the march again.

Banas connected with Ernie Harris for a 35 yard pass and then threw another 10 yard strike to Steve Pecchinni.

The Hawks, after starting deep in their own territory, now found themselves on the Wagner 3 yard line.

With Glassboro, William Paterson and Trenton lining up for a six day assault on Sprague Field, the team has regrouped and is ready to take advantage of their home field. After the homestand, the Red Hawks will have to contend with three straight road foes, adding more importance to the following games.
